EDITOR'S NOTE

THE present Cambridge Edition of Mr. Lowell's poems contains, substantially in the order established by the author, the poems included by him not long before his death in the definitive Riverside Edition of his writings, and in addition the small group contained in the Last Poems, collected by his literary executor, Mr. Charles Eliot Norton. In the brief Prefatory Note to the four volumes of his Poems in the Riverside Edition, Mr. Lowell said:—

"There are a great many pieces in these volumes, especially in the first of them, which I would gladly suppress or put into the Coventry of smaller print in an appendix. But 'ilka mon maun dree his weird,' and the avenging litera scripta manet is that of the over-hasty author. Owing to the unjust distinction made by the law between literary and other property, most of what I published prematurely has lost the protection of copyright, and is reprinted by others against my will. I cannot shake off the burthen of my early indiscretions if I would. The best way, perhaps, is to accept with silent contrition the consequences of one's own mistakes, and I have, after much hesitation, consented to the reprinting of the old editions without excision.

"I must confess, however, that I have attained this pitch of self-sacrifice only by compulsion, and should have greatly preferred to increase the value of this collection by lessening its bulk. The judicious reader will, I fear, distinguish only too easily what I should wish, in parliamentary phrase, 'to be taken as read.' As we grow older, we grow the more willing to say, as Petrarca in Landor's Pentameron says to Boccaccio, 'We neither of us are such poets as we thought ourselves when we were younger.'"

The Editor of this volume has not felt at liberty either to add poems left by the author in the deepening obscurity of old magazines, or to follow the probable judgment of Mr. Lowell in reducing any of his collected verse to the lower terms of an appendix.

The method followed in the other volumes of the Cambridge series has been observed in this. The head-notes are occupied mainly with the history of the several poems; criticism has been given only when the author himself was the critic. The Publishers and Editor desire to make acknowledgment to Mr. Norton, the editor, and Messrs. Harper & Brothers, the publishers, for their courtesy in allowing a liberal use to be made of Letters of James Russell Lowell, and special thanks are due Mr. Norton for the valuable aid which he has given the editor in the preparation of the volume.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

ABOUT half a mile from the Craigie House in Cambridge, Massachusetts, on the road leading to the old town of Watertown, is Elmwood, a spacious square house set amongst lilac and syringa bushes, and overtopped by elms. Pleasant fields are on either side, and from the windows one may look out on the Charles River winding its way among the marshes. The house itself is one of a group which before the war for independence belonged to Boston merchants and officers of the crown, most of whom refused to take the side of the revolutionary party. Tory Row was the name given to the broad winding road on which the houses stood. Large farms and gardens were attached to them, and some sign of their roomy ease still remains. The estates fell into the hands of various persons after the war, and in process of time Longfellow came to occupy and later to own Craigie House. Elmwood at that time was the property of the Reverend Charles Lowell, minister of the West Church in Boston; and when Longfellow thus became his neighbor, James Russell Lowell was a junior in Harvard College. He was born at Elmwood February 22, 1819; he died at the same place August 12, 1891.

He was named for his father's maternal grandfather, and was the youngest of a family of five, two daughters and three sons. His father at the time of Lowell's birth was thirty-seven years old and lived till 1861. His son has drawn his portrait in a letter to C. F. Briggs, written in 1844: "He is Dr. Primrose in a comparative degree, the very simplest and charmingest of sexagenarians, and not without a great deal of the truest magnanimity." It was characteristic of Lowell thus to find a prototype of his father in literature. The Lowells traced their descent from Percival Lowell, — a name which survives in the family, — of Bristol, England, who settled in Newbury, Massachusetts, in 1639. The great-grandfather of James Russell Lowell was a minister in Newburyport, one of those, as Dr. Hale says, "who preached sermons when young men went out to fight the French, and preached sermons again in memory of their death, when they had been slain in battle." The grandfather was John Lowell, a member of the Constitutional Convention of Massachusetts in 1780. It was he who introduced into the Bill of Rights a phrase from the Bill of Rights of Virginia, "All men are created free and equal," with the purpose which it effected of setting free every man then held as a slave in Massachusetts. A son of John Lowell and half-brother of the Rev. Charles Lowell was Francis Cabot Lowell, who gave a great impetus to New England manufactures, and from whom the city of Lowell took its name. Another son, and thus also an uncle of the poet, was John Lowell, Jr., whose wise and far-sighted provision gave his native city that important centre of intellectual influence, the Lowell Institute.

The mother of the poet, Mrs. Harriet Spence Lowell, a native of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, was of Scotch origin. She is described as having "a great memory, an extraordinary aptitude for language, and a passionate fondness for ancient songs and ballads." It pleased her to fancy herself descended from the hero of one of the most famous ballads, Sir Patrick Spens. In a letter to his mother, written in 1837, Lowell says: "I am engaged in several poetical effusions, one of which I have dedicated to you, who have always been the patron and encourager of my youthful muse." The Russell in his name seems to intimate a strain of Jewish ancestry; at any rate Lowell took pride in the name on this account, for he was not slow to recognize the intellectual power of the Hebrew race. An older brother of the poet who outlived him a short time, was the Rev. Robert Traill Spence Lowell, who wrote some poems, a story of school-boy life, and a novel, The New Priest in Conception Bay, which contains a delightful study of a Yankee and striking sketches of life in Newfoundland, where its author was for a while a missionary. A sister, Mrs. Anna Lowell Putnam, will be remembered among older lovers of literature for a group of singularly fine and thoughtful studies under the title Records of an Obscure Life.

Not long before his death, Lowell wrote to an English friend a description of Elmwood; and as he was very fond of the house in which he lived and died, it is agreeable to read words which strove to set it before the eyes of one who had never seen it. "It is a pleasant old house, just about twice as old as I am, four miles from Boston, in what was once the country and is now a populous suburb. But it still has some ten acres of open about it, and some fine old trees. When the worst comes to the worst (if I live so long) I shall still have four and a half acres left with the house, the rest belonging to my brothers and sisters or their heirs. It is a square house, with four rooms on a floor, like some houses of the Georgian era I have seen in English provincial towns, only they are of brick, and this is of wood. But it is solid with its heavy oaken beams, the spaces between which in the four outer walls are filled in with brick, though you must n't fancy a brick-and-timber house, for outwardly it is sheathed with wood. Inside there is much wainscot (of deal), painted white in the fashion of the time when it was built. It is very sunny, the sun rising so as to shine (at an acute angle to be sure) through the northern windows, and going round the other three sides in the course of the day. There is a pretty staircase with the quaint old twisted banisters, — which they call balusters now; but mine are banisters. My library occupies two rooms opening into each other by arches at the sides of the ample chimneys. The trees I look out on are the earliest things I remember. There you have me in my new-old quarters. But you must not fancy a large house — rooms sixteen feet square, and on the ground floor, nine high. It was large, as things went here, when it was built, and has a certain air of amplitude about it as from some inward sense of dignity." In an earlier letter he wrote: "Here I am in my garret. I slept here when I was a little curly-headed boy, and used to see visions between me and the ceiling, and dream the so often recurring dream of having the earth put into my hand like an orange. In it I used to be shut up without a lamp, — my mother saying that none of her children should be afraid of the dark, — to hide my head under the pillow, and then not be able to shut out the shapeless monsters that thronged around me, minted in my brain. . . . In winter my view is a wide one, taking in a part of Boston. I can see one long curve of the Charles and the wide fields between me and Cambridge, and the flat marshes beyond the river, smooth and silent with glittering snow. As the spring advances and one after another of our trees puts forth, the landscape is cut off from me piece by piece, till, by the end of May, I am closeted in a cool and rustling privacy of leaves."

Elmwood in the days of Lowell's boyhood was in a more distinctly rural neighborhood than now, and until lately had the charm of seclusion. In his papers "My Garden Acquaintance" and "A Good Word for Winter," in many of his poems, such as "An Indian-Summer Reverie," "To the Dandelion," "Under the Willows," "Al Fresco," and in many passages in his letters, he bears witness to the intimacy which he enjoyed with that phase of nature which we may call homely and friendly. He once expressed to me his delight in Poussin's landscapes, not because of their homeliness, for they have nothing of this quality, but because of their stately, classical scenery, and the beauty of their composition ; but in his descriptive poetry it is noticeable that the large, solemn, or expansive scenes of nature make no such appeal to his interest as those nearer vistas which come close to human life and connect themselves with the familiar experience of home-keeping wits. His lively paper "Cambridge Thirty Years Ago" contains many reminiscences of his early life and associations.

Lowell's school days were spent in his own neighborhood. Mr. William Wells, an Englishman and at one time a publisher, opened a classical school in one of the spacious Tory Row houses near Elmwood, and, bringing with him English public school thoroughness and severity, gave the boy a drilling in Latin which his quick appropriation of strong influences turned into a familiar possession, to judge by the ease with which he handled it afterward in mock heroics. Possibly the heavy hand of the schoolmaster, by its repression, gave greater buoyancy to the spirit of the student when the comparative freedom of college followed. Lowell was in his sixteenth year when he entered Harvard College with the class which graduated in 1838. He lived at his father's house, more than a mile away from the college yard ; but this could have been no great privation to him, for he had the freedom of his friends' rooms, and he loved the open air. The Rev. Edward Everett Hale has given a sketch of their common life in college. "He was a little older than I," he says, "and was one class in advance of me. My older brother, with whom I lived in college, and he were most intimate friends. He had no room within the college walls [he had for a time a room close by on Church Street], and was a great deal with us. The fashion of Cambridge was then literary. Now the fashion of Cambridge runs to social problems, but then we were interested in literature. We read Byron and Shelley and Keats, and we began to read Tennyson and Browning. I first heard of Tennyson from Lowell, who had borrowed from Mr. Emerson the little first volume of Tennyson. We actually passed about Tennyson's poems in manuscript. Carlyle's essays were being printed at the time, and his French Revolution. In such a community — not two hundred and fifty students all told — literary effort was, as I say, the fashion, and literary men, among whom Lowell was recognized from the very first, were special favorites. Indeed, there was that in him which made him a favorite everywhere."

Lowell was a reader, as so many of his fellows were, and the letters which he wrote shortly after leaving college show how intent he had been on making acquaintance with the best things in literature. He began also to scribble verse, and he wrote both poems and essays for college magazines, and literary societies. His class chose him their poet for Class Day, and he wrote his poem ; but he was careless about conforming to college regulations respecting attendance at morning prayers ; and for this was suspended from college the last term of his last year, and not allowed to come back to deliver his poem. He was sent to Concord for his rustication, and so passed a few weeks of his youth among scenes dear to every lover of American history and letters.

In "An Indian-Summer Reverie" Lowell says : —

"Though lightly prized the ribboned parchments three,
Yet collegisse juvat, I am glad That here what colleging was mine I had, — It linked another tie, dear native town, with thee !"

Whether or no there had been a reaction from the discipline of school days, it is certain that the independence which characterized Lowell throughout his life found expression in his college days, not in insubordination, but in a frank pursuit of those courses of study and lines of reading to which he was led by his own likings and which the tolerable equipment of the college and home library put it in his power to follow. "Never," says Lowell in his essay, "A Great Public Character," when speaking of college life, — "Never were we ourselves so capable of the various great things we have never done ;" and however much he may have been generalizing for college youth, he recalled well his own spiritual experience ; with an impulse which outwardly was wayward, he obeyed that law of his being which his growing consciousness of intellectual power disclosed to him. In his penetrating discrimination between talent and genius, he says profoundly : "The man of talents possesses them like so many tools, does his job with them, and there an end ; but the man of genius is possessed by it, and it makes him into a book or a life according to its whim. Talent takes the existing moulds and makes its castings, better or worse, of richer or baser metal, according to knack and opportunity ; but genius is always shaping new ones and runs the man in them, so that there is always that human feel in the results which give us a kindred thrill. What it will make, we can only conjecture, contented always with knowing the infinite balance of possibility against which it can draw at pleasure." His was a singularly self-centred nature, and he was always true to those large ideals which he drew from history and literature ; but so various were his intellectual interests and so abundant his capacities, that the precise direction was uncertain in which his genius would at any time take him.

It is interesting to observe this self-centred nature in its early struggle after equipoise. After his graduation he set about the study of law, and for a short time even was a clerk in a counting-room ; but his bent was strongly toward literature. His vacillation of mind regarding his vocation, his apparent fickleness of purpose, the conflict going on between his nature craving expression and the world with its imperious demands, the stirring within him of large designs, and the happy contentment in the pleasures of the day, all seek outlet in his natural yet uneasy letters. He was finding himself in these early days, as many another young man, and there are glimpses all through Lowell's letters of this restlessness, this subtle sense of one's self which in weaker natures hardens into a morbid self-consciousness. Now and then he turns upon himself in a sort of mingled pride and shame, as if at once aware of his power and angry that he has it not wholly at his beck. But for the most part one is aware of a nature singularly at one with life, and finding its greatest satisfaction in getting at the world through the reflection of the world in literature. No one would deny that Lowell was eminently a man of books, but it would be a wholly inadequate phrase which described him as a bookish man. That he was at home in a library his early letters show ; but they show also how even then he read through his books into life, and interpreted history and literature by means of an innate spiritual faculty which was independent of intellectual authority. It is this criticism at first hand, this swift, direct penetration of the reality, which mark emphatically what I have characterized as Lowell's self-centred nature. He has told us that his brain required a long brooding time ere it could hatch anything. He was speaking of the matter of expression ; but the phrase is a fit one for his habitual temper. The superficial charge of indolence could apply only to his apparent disregard of bustling activity. His nature was of the sort that knows the power of stillness, and though he upbraids himself in his letters for his unproductiveness at times, he had plainly the instinct which waits on opportunity. His faculty of observation was very strong, but it was no stronger than his power of assimilation ; and thus it was that when opportunity came he had not hurriedly to adjust himself to the situation.

It was while he was engaged with his books and his friends, professing law but practising literature in the way of poetical and prose contributions to the magazines, that he was roused out of his dreams by the prick of necessity in the sudden loss by his father of much of his property, and by the impulse given to his own moral force by the coming into his life of Maria White. He became engaged to this lady in the fall of 1840, and the next twelve years of his life were profoundly affected by her influence. Herself a poet of delicate power, she brought an intelligent sympathy with his work; it was, however, her strong moral enthusiasm, her lofty conception of purity and justice, which kindled his spirit and gave force and direction to a character which was ready to respond and yet might otherwise have delayed active expression. They were not married until 1844, but they were not far apart in their homes, and during these years Lowell was making those early ventures in literature, and first raids upon political and moral evil, which foretold the direction of his later work, and gave some hint of its abundance.

In 1841 he collected the poems which he had written and sometimes contributed to periodicals into a volume entitled A Year's Life, and inscribed in a veiled dedication to his future wife. In hopes of bettering his fortune, and in obedience to the instinct which most young men of letters have, he undertook with Robert Carter the publication of a literary journal, The Pioneer, which died under their inexperienced hands with the third number, but in those had printed contributions by Lowell, Hawthorne, Whittier, Story, Poe, and Dr. Parsons, — a group which it would be hard to match in any of the little magazines that hop across the world's path to-day. He began also to turn his studies in dramatic and early poetic literature to account, and, after printing a portion of them in Nathan Hale's Miscellany, published, in 1844, Conversations on some of the Old Poets. He did not keep this book alive; but it is interesting as marking the enthusiasm of a young scholar treading a way then almost wholly neglected in America, and indicating a line of thought and study in which he afterwards made most noteworthy venture. In the same year he again collected his poetic work into a volume of Poems. The difference between the two volumes of poems, though separated by three years only, is marked. Few of the verses from A Year's Life are included in the poet's final collection of his writings, few are omitted from Poems. One poem in the earlier volume, Irené, is conspicuous as a poetic portrait of the figure of peace which had come into his somewhat turbulent spiritual life; but the volume as a whole is characterized by vague sentimentalism and restless beating of half-grown wings. Three years later, some of this same immaturity is discoverable, but along with the poems which wander in somewhat unmeaning ways are those spirited adventures like "Rhæcus," "The Shepherd of King Admetus," and "Prometheus," which denote the growing consciousness of positive poetic power, and also those stirring Sonnets to Wendell Phillips and J. R. Giddings, and the lines entitled "A Glance behind the Curtain," which disclose a new passion leaping up as the champion of truth and righteousness. It is noticeable, too, that in the first volume there is no trace of humor and scarcely any singular felicity of phrase; in the second, wit and humor begin to play a little on the surface. In Conversations, where the familiar form gives freer scope, there is a gayety of speech which intimates the spontaneity of the man and anticipates the rich fruitage of later years. In all these books, however, there is good evidence of the rapid growth which was taking place in Lowell's intellectual and moral life, a coming to his own which it would take only some strong occasion to make sure.

This occasion was the Mexican War, with the greater contest which flamed up with it over the encroachments of slavery. Lowell and his wife, who brought a fervid anti-slavery temper as part of her marriage portion, were both contributors to the Liberty Bell, and Lowell was a frequent contributor to the Antislavery Standard, and was indeed for a while a corresponding editor; but in June, 1846, there appeared one day in the Boston Courier a letter purporting to be from Mr. Ezekiel Biglow of Jalaam to the Hon. Joseph T. Buckingham, editor of the Boston Courier, enclosing a poem of his son, Mr. Hosea Biglow. It was no new thing to seek to arrest the public attention with the vernacular applied to public affairs. Major Jack Downing and Sam Slick had been notable examples, and they had many imitators; but the reader who laughed over the racy narrative of the lettered Ezekiel, and then took up Hosea's poem and caught the gust of Yankee wrath and humor blown fresh in his face, knew that he was in with the appearance of something new in American literature. A score of years afterward, when introducing the Second Series of The Biglow Papers, Lowell confessed that when he wrote this letter and poem he had no definite plan, and no intention of ever writing another. It was struck out from him by the revolt of his nature at the iniquity of slavery and the war into which slavery was dragging the nation. But he adds, "The success of my experiment soon began not only to astonish me, but to make me feel the responsibility of knowing that I held in my hand a weapon, instead of the mere fencing stick I had supposed. . . . If I put on the cap and bells, and made myself one of the court fools of King Demos, it was less to make his Majesty laugh than to win a passage to his royal ears for certain serious things which I had deeply at heart."

The Biglow Papers not only gave Lowell to himself and opened the flood gates of his patriotism and his noble indignation; they gave him a public, and thus furnished the complement which every author demands. "Very far," he says, in the same Introduction, "from being a popular author under my own name, so far, indeed, as to be almost unread, I found the verses of my pseudonym copied everywhere; I saw them pinned up in workshops; I heard them quoted and their authorship debated." The force which he displayed in these satires made his book at once a powerful ally of a sentiment which heretofore had been ridiculed; it turned the tables and put Antislavery, which had been fighting sturdily on foot with pikes, into the saddle, and gave it a flashing sabre. For Lowell himself it won an accolade from King Demos. He rose up a knight, and thenceforth possessed a freedom which was a freedom of nature, not a simple badge of service in a single cause. His patriotism and moral fervor found other vents in later life, and he never laid down the sword which he then took up, but it is significant of the stability of his genius that he was not misled by the sudden distinction which came to him into a limitation of his powers. It was shortly after this that he wrote, in one of those poetic absences from his every-day life, which were to overtake him more than once afterward, his Vision of Sir Launfal; and the exuberance of his nature, together with his keen power of criticism, found expression about the same time in his witty Fable for Critics, in which he hit off, with a rough and ready wit, the characteristics of the writers of the day, not forgetting himself in these lines:—

There is Lowell, who 's striving Parnassus to climb
 With a whole bale of isms tied together with rhyme;
 He might get on alone, spite of brambles and boulders,
 But he can't with that bundle he has on his shoulders;
 The top of the hill he will ne'er come nigh reaching Till he learns the distinction 'twixt singing and preaching;
 His lyre has some chords that would ring pretty well,
 But he 'd rather by half make a drum of the shell,
 And rattle away till he 's old as Methusalem,
 At the head of a march to the last new Jerusalem.

This, of course, is but a half serious portrait of himself, and it touches but a single feature. A third volume of Poems appeared in the same year, 1848, as the last named.

A year in Europe, 1851-52, with his wife, whose health was then precarious, stimulated his scholarly interests, and gave substance to his study of Dante and Italian literature. In October, 1853, his wife died; she had borne him four children: the first-born, Blanche, died in infancy, as did the second, Rose; the third, Walter, also died young; the fourth, a daughter, Mrs. Burnett, survived her parents. In 1855 he was chosen successor to Mr. Longfellow as Smith Professor of the French and Spanish Languages and Literatures, and Professor of Belles Lettres in Harvard College. He spent two years in Europe in further preparation for the duties of his office, and in 1857 was again established in Cambridge and installed in his academic chair. He married also at this time his second wife, Miss Frances Dunlap, of Portland, Maine.

Lowell was now in his thirty-ninth year. As a scholar, in his professional work, he had acquired a knowledge of the Romance languages and was an adept in Old French and Provençal poetry; he had given a course of twelve lectures on English Poetry before the Lowell Institute in Boston which had made a strong impression on the community; and his work on the series of British Poets in connection with Professor Child, especially his biographical sketch of Keats, had been recognized as of a high order. In poetry he had published the volumes already mentioned. In general literature he had printed in magazines the papers which he afterward collected into his volume Fireside Travels. Not long after he entered on his college duties The Atlantic Monthly was started, and the editorship given to him. For the details of the office he had little aptitude, although he looked keenly after nice points of literary finish in the proof-reading; he was relieved of much of the detail by his active assistant, Mr. F. H. Underwood, to whom the inception of the magazine was largely due. But the Atlantic afforded a good outlet for his literary production, and though he held the editorship but a little more than two years he stamped the magazine with the impress of his high ideals in literature and criticism; his selection of articles was judicious, his own contributions and criticism were full of life, and he was most generous in his critical aid to contributors. In 1862 he was associated with Mr. Charles Eliot Norton in the conduct of The North American Review, and continued in this charge for ten years. Much of his prose was contributed to this periodical.

These twenty years, from 1857 to 1877, were the most productive period of Lowell's literary activity. He was in the maturity of his mental power, he held a convenient position in University life, his home relations were congenial and stimulating, and his collegiate work, as well as his editorial charge successively of the Atlantic and North American, gave him a needed impulse to literary effort. During this period appeared the most of that body of literary history and criticism which marks him as the most distinguished of American critics. Any one reading the titles of the papers which comprise the volumes of his prose writings will readily see how much literature, and especially poetic literature, occupied his attention. Shakespeare, Dryden, Lessing, Rousseau, Dante, Spenser, Wordsworth, Milton, Keats, Carlyle, Percival, Thoreau, Swinburne, Chaucer, Emerson, Pope, Gray, — these are the principal subjects of his prose, and the range of topics indicates the catholicity of his taste. These papers are the rich deposit of a mind at once sympathetic and discriminating, capable of enjoying to the full the varied manifestations of life in literature, and combining judicial fairness with keen critical insight.

While this broad stream of literary criticism was flowing, there was another expression of Lowell's nature, never divorced from this love of letters, — a criticism of life, especially as it took form in contemporaneous American history. The period which I have named covered the preparation for the war for the Union, that war itself, and the reconstruction era afterward, and the expression of Lowell's nature in its attitude toward the whole period was manifold. The volume of Political Essays contains the incisive papers which stung the irresolute and time-serving, and inspired the ardent lovers of truth and liberty. It is impossible to read these papers now without admiration for the political sagacity of the writer, — a sagacity before the event, not after. Every page bears witness to the sanity with which he regarded contemporaneous affairs, when madness seemed the most natural temper in the world, and his insight of human nature was that of a poet who did not regard his power of vision as excluding the necessity of paying taxes. History has been supplying foot-notes to these pages, with the result, not of correcting the text, but of confirming it.

In this same period also he wrote and published the Second Series of The Biglow Papers, and used his satire and his moral indignation with a depth of feeling which surpassed that shown in the first series, a little to the detriment thereby, it may be, of the gaiety of the humor. In truth, strong as was Lowell's power of invective, his passion of patriotism found this vent too narrow; there was a large, constructive imagination at work on the great theme of national life, which found fuller expression in the Odes which the Centennial and Commemorative occasions called out. Lowell seized these occasions with a spirit which scarcely needed them, and merely employed them as fit opportunities for casting in large moulds the great thoughts and feelings which rose out of the life of a man conscious of his inheritance in a noble patrimony.

It was at the close of this period, in which he had done incalculable service to the Republic, that Lowell was called on to represent the country, first at Madrid, where he was sent by President Hayes in 1877, and afterwards at London, to which he was transferred in 1880. He had a good knowledge of Spanish language and literature when he went to Spain, but he at once took pains to make his knowledge fuller and his accent more perfect, so that he could have intimate relations with the best Spanish men of the time. In England he was at once a most welcome guest, and a most effective public speaker. Eight years were thus spent by him in the foreign service of the country. His sole participation in practical politics, as the term is, up to this time had been to attend a national convention once as delegate, and to have his name used as Presidential Elector. To the minds of many of his countrymen he seemed doubtless a dilettante in politics. Special preparation in diplomacy he had not, but he had what was more fundamental, a large nature enriched by a familiar intercourse with great minds, and so sane, so sound in its judgment, that whether he was engaged in determining a reading in an Elizabethan dramatist or in deciding to which country an Irish colossus belonged, he was bringing his whole nature to the bench. No one can read Lowell's despatches from Madrid and London without being struck by his sagacity, his readiness in emergencies, his interest in and quick perception of the political situation in the country where he was resident, and his unerring knowledge as a man of the world. Nor could Lowell lay aside in his official communications the art and the wit which were native to him. "I asked Lord Lyons," he writes in one letter, "whether he did not think suzerainty might be defined as 'leaving to a man the privilege of carrying the saddle and bridle after you have stolen his horse.' He assented."

But though Lowell's studies and experience had given him a preparation for dealing with diplomatic questions, the firmness with which he held his political faith afforded as sure a preparation for that more significant embassy which he bore from the American people to the English. Not long after his return he published a little volume containing the more important speeches which he had made while in England. Most of them had to do with literature, but the title-address in the volume, Democracy, was an epigrammatic confession of political faith as hopeful as it was wise and keen. A few years later he gave another address to his own countrymen on "The Place of the Independent in Politics." It was a noble apologia, not without a trace of discouragement at the apparently sluggish movement of the recent years, but with that faith in the substance of his countrymen which gave him the right to use words of honest scorn and warning. What impresses one especially in reading this address, remembering the thoughtless gibes which had been flung at this patriot, is the perfect self-respect with which he defines his position, the entire absence of petty retaliation upon his aspersers, the kindness of nature, the charity, in a word, which is the finest outcome of a strong political faith. It must have been galling to Lowell to find himself taunted with being un-American. He could afford to meet such a charge with silence, but he answered it with something better than silence when he reprinted in a volume his scattered political essays.

The public life of Mr. Lowell made him more of a figure before the world. He received honors from societies and universities; he was decorated by the highest honors which Harvard could pay officially, and Oxford and Cambridge, St. Andrews and Edinburgh, and Bologna, gave gowns. He established warm personal relations with Englishmen, and after his release from public office he made several visits to England. There, too, was buried his wife, who died in 1885. The closing years of his life in his own country, though touched with domestic loneliness and diminished by growing physical infirmities that predicted his death, were rich also with the continued expression of his large personality. He delivered the public address in commemoration of the 250th anniversary of the founding of Harvard University, he gave a course of lectures on the Old English Dramatists before the Lowell Institute, he collected a volume of his poems, he spoke and wrote on public affairs, and the year before his death revised, rearranged, and carefully edited a definitive series of his writings in ten volumes. Since his death three small volumes have been added to his collected writings, and Mr. Norton has published Letters of James Russell Lowell in two volumes.

For anything like an adequate apprehension of Lowell's rich nature, the reader unacquainted with him during his lifetime, needs to read these Letters and the whole body of his prose and poetry; a nature at once so spontaneous and so lavish of its best gifts is not to be bounded by the arbitrary limits of a biography, brief or extended. Yet the poems alone as contained in this volume do much to reveal to the attentive reader the personality of their author. He was the most companionable of men, and shared his large gifts with chance acquaintance so freely that one sometimes wondered what he saved for more intimate friends; and yet his fine reserve was apparent even to those who knew him best. The humor which underlies so much even of his stately verse was a constant quantity in his temperament, closely allied with shrewd sagacity; the sentiment and fancy which find expression sometimes in an entire poem, more often in phrase and line, played about his conversation in familiar intercourse; but as his verse when read in its fulness is charged with noble passion and with an imagination in which human experience and personal emotion are fused in a high ideal, so no one could long be with the poet without recognizing that he was in the presence of a character which combined the unflinching earnestness of the Puritan with the mellowness of a man of the great world.

EARLIER POEMS

THE first book of poetry issued by Lowell, if we except the pamphlet containing his Class Poem, was A Year's Life, published in 1841 by C. C. Little and J. Brown, Boston. It contained thirty-two poems and songs and thirty-five sonnets, besides a l'envoi headed "Goe, Little Booke," and a dedication addressed, though not formally, to Miss Maria White, to whom he had become engaged in the fall of 1840.

The gentle Una I have loved,
The snowy maiden, pure and mild, Since ever by her side I roved Through ventures strange, a wondering child, In fantasy a Red Cross Knight Burning for her dear sake to fight.

If there be one who can, like her,
Make sunshine in life's shady places,
One in whose holy bosom stir
As many gentle household graces, — And such I think there needs must be, — Will she accept this book from me?

The poems which filled the volume had appeared in The Knickerbocker, The Southern Literary Messenger, and some of the Boston newspapers. How little value the author set upon the contents of this first volume is evident when one discovers that on making his first general collection of poems in 1849, he retained but seven of those printed in A Year's Life. He continued to contribute to the magazines of his time, especially to The Democratic Review, Graham's Magazine, The Boston Miscellany, and The Pioneer, the last named being a very short-lived magazine which he conducted in company with Mr. Robert Carter, and in 1843 he issued a second volume of Poems, in which he gathered the product of the intervening time, whether printed or in manuscript. The division Earlier Poems, first used in the collection dated 1877, contains but seven of the poems, two of them being sonnets included in A Year's Life. Of the thirty-five poems and thirty-seven sonnets printed in the 1843 volume of Poems, seven poems and thirteen sonnets were silently dropped from later collections, and the poems included in the two volumes were distributed mainly between the two divisions Earlier Poems and Miscellaneous Poems.

THRENODIA

As first printed in The Knickerbocker magazine for May, 1839, this poem bore the title Threnodia on an Infant, and was signed H. P., the initials for Hugh Perceval, a pseudonym which Lowell used occasionally at the outset of his career. In a letter to G. B. Loring, upon the appearance of the poem, Lowell says that his brother Robert animadverted on the irregular metre of the Threnodia; "but as I think," he adds, "very unphilosophically and without much perception of the true rules of poetry. In my opinion no verse ought to be longer than the writer can sensibly make it. It has been this senseless stretching of verses to make them octo- or deka-syllabic or what not, that has brought such an abundance of useless epithets on the shoulders of poor English verse."

GONE, gone from us ! and shall we see Those sibyl-leaves of destiny, Those calm eyes, nevermore ?

Those deep, dark eyes so warm and bright, Wherein the fortunes of the man Lay slumbering in prophetic light, In characters a child might scan ?
So bright, and gone forth utterly !
Oh stern word — Nevermore !

The stars of those two gentle eyes Will shine no more on earth; Quenched are the hopes that had their birth,
As we watched them slowly rise,
Stars of a mother's fate;
And she would read them o'er and o'er, Pondering, as she sate,
Over their dear astrology,
Which she had conned and conned before, Deeming she needs must read aright
What was writ so passing bright.
And yet, alas ! she knew not why,
Her voice would falter in its song,

And tears would slide from out her eye, Silent, as they were doing wrong.
 Oh stern word — Nevermore !

The tongue that scarce had learned to claim

An entrance to a mother's heart
 By that dear talisman, a mother's name, Sleeps all forgetful of its art !
 I loved to see the infant soul (How mighty in the weakness Of its untutored meekness !) Peep timidly from out its nest, His lips, the while,
 Fluttering with half-fledged words,
 Or hushing to a smile
 That more than words expressed,
 When his glad mother on him stole And snatched him to her breast !
 Oh, thoughts were brooding in those eyes,
 That would have soared like strong-winged birds

Far, far into the skies, Gladding the earth with song,
 And gushing harmonies,
 Had he but tarried with us long !
 Oh stern word — Nevermore !

How peacefully they rest, Crossfolded there
 Upon his little breast, Those small, white hands that ne'er were still before,
 But ever sported with his mother's hair, Or the plain cross that on her breast she wore !

Her heart no more will beat
 To feel the touch of that soft palm,
 That ever seemed a new surprise Sending glad thoughts up to her eyes To bless him with their holy calm, — Sweet thoughts ! they made her eyes as sweet.

How quiet are the hands
 That wove those pleasant bands !
 But that they do not rise and sink With his calm breathing, I should think That he were dropped asleep.
 Alas ! too deep, too deep Is this his slumber !
 Time scarce can number
 The years ere he shall wake again.
 Oh, may we see his eyelids open then !
 Oh stern word — Nevermore !

As the airy gossamere, Floating in the sunlight clear, Where'er it toucheth clingeth tightly Round glossy leaf or stump unsightly.
 So from his spirit wandered out Tendrils spreading all about,
 Knitting all things to its thrall With a perfect love of all:
 Oh stern word — Nevermore !

He did but float a little way
 Adown the stream of time,
 With dreamy eyes watching the ripple play,
 Or hearkening their fairy chime;
 His slender sail
 Ne'er felt the gale;
 He did but float a little way,
 And, putting to the shore
 While yet 't was early day, Went calmly on his way,
 To dwell with us no more !
 No jarring did he feel,
 No grating on his shallop's keel;
 A strip of silver sand Mingled the waters with the land Where he was seen no more:
 Oh stern word — Nevermore !

Full short his journey was; no dust
 Of earth unto his sandals clave;
 The weary weight that old men must,
 He bore not to the grave.
 He seemed a cherub who had lost his way
 And wandered hither, so his stay With us was short, and 't was most meet That he should be no delver in earth's clod, Nor need to pause and cleanse his feet
 To stand before his God:
 Oh blest word — Evermore !

THE SIRENS

This poem in A Year's Life is dated Nantasket, July, 1840.

THE sea is lonely, the sea is dreary,
 The sea is restless and uneasy;
 Thou seekest quiet, thou art weary, Wandering thou knowest not whither; — Our little isle is green and breezy, Come and rest thee ! Oh come hither, Come to this peaceful home of ours,
 Where evermore

The low west-wind creeps panting up the shore

To be at rest among the flowers;
Full of rest, the green moss lifts,

As the dark waves of the sea Draw in and out of rocky rifts, Calling solemnly to thee

With voices deep and hollow, —
"To the shore

Follow! Oh, follow!

To be at rest forevermore!
Forevermore!"

Look how the gray old Ocean
From the depth of his heart rejoices, Heaving with a gentle motion,
When he hears our restful voices;
List how he sings in an undertone, Chiming with our melody;
And all sweet sounds of earth and air Melt into one low voice alone,
That murmurs over the weary sea,
And seems to sing from everywhere, —
"Here mayst thou harbor peacefully, Here mayst thou rest from the aching oar;

Turn thy curvèd prow ashore,
And in our green isle rest forevermore!
Forevermore!"

And Echo half wakes in the wooded hill,
And, to her heart so calm and deep,
Murmurs over in her sleep, Doubtfully pausing and murmuring still,
"Evermore!"

Thus, on Life's weary sea, Heareth the marinere
Voices sweet, from far and near,
Ever singing low and clear,
Ever singing longingly.

It is not better here to be,
Than to be toiling late and soon?
In the dreary night to see Nothing but the blood-red moon Go up and down into the sea;
Or, in the loneliness of day,

To see the still seals only Solemnly lift their faces gray, Making it yet more lonely?

Is it not better than to hear Only the sliding of the wave Beneath the plank, and feel so near A cold and lonely grave,
A restless grave, where thou shalt lie Even in death unquietly?
Look down beneath thy wave-worn bark,

Lean over the side and see The leaden eye of the sidelong shark

Upturnèd patiently,

Ever waiting there for thee:

Look down and see those shapeless forms,
Which ever keep their dreamless sleep

Far down within the gloomy deep,
And only stir themselves in storms, Rising like islands from beneath,
And snorting through the angry spray,
As the frail vessel perisheth
In the whirls of their unwieldy play;

Look down! Look down!

Upon the seaweed, slimy and dark,
That waves its arms so lank and brown, Beckoning for thee!

Look down beneath thy wave-worn bark
Into the cold depth of the sea!

Look down! Look down!

Thus, on Life's lonely sea,
Heareth the marinere
Voices sad, from far and near,
Ever singing full of fear,
Ever singing dreadfully.

Here all is pleasant as a dream;
The wind scarce shaketh down the dew,
The green grass floweth like a stream Into the ocean's blue;

Listen! Oh, listen!

Here is a gush of many streams,
A song of many birds,
And every wish and longing seems Lulled to a numbered flow of words, —

Listen! Oh, listen!

Here ever hum the golden bees Underneath full-blossomed trees, At once with glowing fruit and flowers crowned; —

So smooth the sand, the yellow sand, That thy keel will not grate as it touches the land;

All around with a slumberous sound,
The singing waves slide up the strand,
And there, where the smooth, wet pebbles be The waters gurgle longingly,
As if they fain would seek the shore,
To be at rest from the ceaseless roar,
To be at rest forevermore, —

Forevermore.

Thus, on Life's gloomy sea,
Heareth the marinere
Voices sweet, from far and near,
Ever singing in his ear,

"Here is rest and peace for thee!"

IRENÉ

The indirect as well as direct references to Maria White are frequent in these early poems. Lowell, in a letter to G. B. Loring shortly after this poem appeared, wrote: "Maria fills my ideal and I satisfy hers, and I mean to live as one beloved by such a woman should live. She is every way noble. People have called Irené a beautiful piece of poetry. And so it is. It owes all its beauty to her."

HERS is a spirit deep, and crystal-clear; Calmly beneath her earnest face it lies, Free without boldness, meek without a fear,
Quicker to look than speak its sympathies;
Far down into her large and patient eyes
I gaze, deep-drinking of the infinite,
As, in the mid-watch of a clear, still night,
I look into the fathomless blue skies.

So circled lives she with Love's holy
light,
That from the shade of self she walketh free;
The garden of her soul still keepeth she An Eden where the snake did never enter;
She hath a natural, wise sincerity, A simple truthfulness, and these have lent her
A dignity as moveless as the centre;
So that no influence of our earth can stir Her steadfast courage, nor can take away The holy peacefulness, which night and
day,
Unto her queenly soul doth minister.

Most gentle is she; her large charity (An all unwitting, childlike gift in her) Not freer is to give than meek to bear;
And, though herself not unacquaint with care, Hath in her heart wide room for all that be, —
Her heart that hath no secrets of its own,
But open is as eglantine full blown.
Cloudless forever is her brow serene, Speaking calm hope and trust within her,
whence Welleth a noiseless spring of patience,
That keepeth all her life so fresh, so green And full of holiness, that every look,
The greatness of her woman's soul revealing,

Unto me bringeth blessing, and a feeling
As when I read in God's own holy book.

A graciousness in giving that doth make The small'st gift greatest, and a sense most meek
Of worthiness, that doth not fear to take From others, but which always fears to speak
Its thanks in utterance, for the giver's sake; —
The deep religion of a thankful heart, Which rests instinctively in Heaven's clear law
With a full peace, that never can depart From its own steadfastness; — a holy awe For holy things, — not those which men call holy,
But such as are revealed to the eyes Of a true woman's soul bent down and lowly Before the face of daily mysteries; — A love that blossoms soon, but ripens slowly
To the full goldenness of fruitful prime, Enduring with a firmness that defies All shallow tricks of circumstance and time,
By a sure insight knowing where to cling,
And where it clingeth never withering; —
These are Irené's dowry, which no fate Can shake from their serene, deep-built state.

In-seeing sympathy is hers, which chasteneth
No less than loveth, scorning to be bound With fear of blame, and yet which ever hasteneth
To pour the balm of kind looks on the wound,
If they be wounds which such sweet teaching makes,
Giving itself a pang for others' sakes;
No want of faith, that chills with sidelong
eye,
Hath she; no jealousy, no Levite pride That passeth by upon the other side;
For in her soul there never dwelt a lie.
Right from the hand of God her spirit came Unstained, and she hath ne'er forgotten
whence
It came, nor wandered far from thence,
But laboreth to keep her still the same,

Near to her place of birth, that she may not Soil her white raiment with an earthly spot.

Yet sets she not her soul so steadily Above, that she forgets her ties to earth, But her whole thought would almost seem to be

How to make glad one lowly human hearth;

For with a gentle courage she doth strive In thought and word and feeling so to live As to make earth next heaven; and her heart

Herein doth show its most exceeding worth,
That, bearing in our frailty her just part,
She hath not shrunk from evils of this life,
But hath gone calmly forth into the strife,
And all its sins and sorrows hath withstood With lofty strength of patient womanhood: For this I love her great soul more than all,

That, being bound, like us, with earthly thrall,

She walks so bright and heaven-like there-
in, —

Too wise, too meek, too womanly, to sin.

Like a lone star through riven storm-clouds seen

By sailors, tempest-tost upon the sea, Telling of rest and peaceful heavens nigh, Unto my soul her star-like soul hath been,
Her sight as full of hope and calm to
me; —

For she unto herself hath builded high
A home serene, wherein to lay her head, Earth's noblest thing, a Woman perfected.

SERENADE

From the close-shut windows gleams no spark,

The night is chilly, the night is dark,
The poplars shiver, the pine-trees moan,
My hair by the autumn breeze is blown,
Under thy window I sing alone,
Alone, alone, ah woe ! alone !

The darkness is pressing coldly around,
The windows shake with a lonely sound,
The stars are hid and the night is drear,
The heart of silence throbs in thine ear.

In thy chamber thou sittest alone,
Alone, alone, ah woe ! alone !

The world is happy, the world is wide, Kind hearts are beating on every side;
Ah, why should we lie so coldly curled Alone in the shell of this great world ?
Why should we any more be alone ?
Alone, alone, ah woe ! alone !

Oh, 't is a bitter and dreary word,
The saddest by man's ear ever heard !
We each are young, we each have a heart,
Why stand we ever coldly apart ?
Must we forever, then, be alone ?
Alone, alone, ah woe ! alone !

WITH A PRESSED FLOWER

THIS little blossom from afar Hath come from other lands to thine;
For, once, its white and drooping star Could see its shadow in the Rhine.

Perchance some fair-haired German maid Hath plucked one from the selfsame stalk,
And numbered over, half afraid,
Its petals in her evening walk.

"He loves me, loves me not," she cries;
"He loves me more than earth or heaven !"
And then glad tears have filled her eyes
To find the number was uneven.

And thou must count its petals well, Because it is a gift from me;
And the last one of all shall tell Something I've often told to thee.

But here at home, where we were born,
Thou wilt find blossoms just as true,
Down-bending every summer morn,
With freshness of New England dew.

For Nature, ever kind to love,
Hath granted them the same sweet tongue, Whether with German skies above, Or here our granite rocks among.

THE BEGGAR

A BEGGAR through the world am I, From place to place I wander by.

Fill up my pilgrim's scrip for me,
For Christ's sweet sake and charity !

A little of thy steadfastness, Rounded with leafy gracefulness, Old oak, give me,
That the world's blasts may round me blow,
And I yield gently to and fro, While my stout-hearted trunk below And firm-set roots unshaken be.

Some of thy stern, unyielding might,
Enduring still through day and night Rude tempest-shock and withering blight, That I may keep at bay
The changeful April sky of chance And the strong tide of circumstance, — Give me, old granite gray.

Some of thy pensiveness serene,
Some of thy never-dying green,
Put in this scrip of mine,
That griefs may fall like snow-flakes light,
And deck me in a robe of white,
Ready to be an angel bright, O sweetly mournful pine.

A little of thy merriment,
Of thy sparkling, light content,
Give me, my cheerful brook,
That I may still be full of glee And gladness, where'er I be, Though fickle fate hath prisoned me
In some neglected nook.

Ye have been very kind and good To me, since I've been in the wood;
Ye have gone nigh to fill my heart;
But good-by, kind friends, every one,
I've far to go ere set of sun;
Of all good things I would have part,
The day was high ere I could start,
And so my journey's scarce begun.

Heaven help me ! how could I forget To beg of thee, dear violet !
Some of thy modesty,
That blossoms here as well, unseen,
As if before the world thou 'dst been,
Oh, give, to strengthen me.

MY LOVE

NOT as all other women are Is she that to my soul is dear;

Her glorious fancies come from far,
Beneath the silver evening-star,
And yet her heart is ever near.

Great feelings hath she of her own,
Which lesser souls may never know;
God giveth them to her alone,
And sweet they are as any tone
Wherewith the wind may choose to blow.

Yet in herself she dwelleth not,
Although no home were half so fair;
No simplest duty is forgot, Life hath no dim and lowly spot
That doth not in her sunshine share.

She doeth little kindnesses,
Which most leave undone, or despise:
For naught that sets one heart at ease,
And giveth happiness or peace,
Is low-esteemed in her eyes.

She hath no scorn of common things,
And, though she seem of other birth, Round us her heart intwines and clings,
And patiently she folds her wings
To tread the humble paths of earth.

Blessing she is : God made her so,
And deeds of week-day holiness Fall from her noiseless as the snow, Nor hath she ever chanced to know That aught were easier than to bless.

She is most fair, and thereunto Her life doth rightly harmonize;
Feeling or thought that was not true Ne'er made less beautiful the blue Unclouded heaven of her eyes.

She is a woman: one in whom The spring-time of her childish years Hath never lost its fresh perfume, Though knowing well that life hath room
For many blights and many tears.

I love her with a love as still As a broad river's peaceful might,
Which, by high tower and lowly mill, Seems following its own wayward will,
And yet doth ever flow aright.

And, on its full, deep breast serene,
Like quiet isles my duties lie;
It flows around them and between,

And makes them fresh and fair and green, Sweet homes wherein to live and die.

SUMMER STORM

UNTREMULOUS in the river clear, Toward the sky's image, hangs the imaged bridge;
So still the air that I can hear
The slender clarion of the unseen midge; Out of the stillness, with a gathering creep,
Like rising wind in leaves, which now decreases, Now lulls, now swells, and all the while increases,
The huddling trample of a drove of sheep
Tilts the loose planks, and then as gradually ceases
In dust on the other side; life's emblem deep,
A confused noise between two silences, Finding at last in dust precarious peace.
On the wide marsh the purple-blossomed grasses Soak up the sunshine; sleeps the brimming tide, Save when the wedge-shaped wake in silence passes
Of some slow water-rat, whose sinuous glide Wavers the sedge's emerald shade from side to side;
But up the west, like a rock-shivered surge, Climbs a great cloud edged with sunwhitened spray;
Huge whirls of foam boil toppling o'er its verge,
And falling still it seems, and yet it climbs away.

Suddenly all the sky is hid
As with the shutting of a lid,
One by one great drops are falling Doubtful and slow, Down the pane they are crookedly crawl-
ing,
And the wind breathes low;
Slowly the circles widen on the river,
Widen and mingle, one and all;
Here and there the slenderer flowers shiver, Struck by an icy rain-drop's fall.

Now on the hills I hear the thunder mutter,
The wind is gathering in the west;
The upturned leaves first whiten and flutter,
Then droop to a fitful rest;
Up from the stream with sluggish flap Struggles the gull and floats away; Nearer and nearer rolls the thunder-clap, —
We shall not see the sun go down to-day:
Now leaps the wind on the sleepy marsh,
And tramples the grass with terrified feet,
The startled river turns leaden and harsh, You can hear the quick heart of the tempest beat.

Look! look! that livid flash!
And instantly follows the rattling thunder,
As if some cloud-crag, split asunder, Fell, splintering with a ruinous crash,
On the Earth, which crouches in silence under;
And now a solid gray wall of rain Shuts off the landscape, mile by mile;
For a breath's space I see the blue wood
again,
And ere the next heart-beat, the wind-hurled pile,
That seemed but now a league aloof, Bursts crackling o'er the sun-parched roof;
Against the windows the storm comes dash-
ing,
Through tattered foliage the hail tears crashing,
The blue lightning flashes,
The rapid hail clashes,
The white waves are tumbling,
And, in one baffled roar,
Like the toothless sea mumbling A rock-bristled shore,
The thunder is rumbling
And crashing and crumbling, —
Will silence return nevermore?

Hush! Still as death,
The tempest holds his breath
As from a sudden will;
The rain stops short, but from the eaves You see it drop, and hear it from the leaves,
All is so bodingly still;
Again, now, now, again Plashes the rain in heavy gouts,
The crinkled lightning Seems ever brightening,
And loud and long

Again the thunder shouts His battle-song, —
 One quivering flash,
 One wildering crash,
 Followed by silence dead and dull,
 As if the cloud, let go,
 Leapt bodily below
 To whelm the earth in one mad overthrow,
 And then a total lull.

Gone, gone, so soon !
 No more my half-dazed fancy there,
 Can shape a giant in the air,
 No more I see his streaming hair,
 The writhing portent of his form; —
 The pale and quiet moon Makes her calm forehead bare,
 And the last fragments of the storm,
 Like shattered rigging from a fight at sea, Silent and few, are drifting over me.

LOVE

TRUE Love is but a humble, low-born thing,
 And hath its food served up in earthen ware;
 It is a thing to walk with, hand in hand, Through the everydayness of this workday world,
 Baring its tender feet to every flint, Yet letting not one heart-beat go astray From Beauty's law of plainness and content;
 A simple, fireside thing, whose quiet smile
 Can warm earth's poorest hovel to a home;
 Which, when our autumn cometh, as it must,
 And life in the chill wind shivers bare and leafless, Shall still be blest with Indian-summer youth In bleak November, and, with thankful
 heart,
 Smile on its ample stores of garnered fruit,
 As full of sunshine to our aged eyes As when it nursed the blossoms of our spring.
 Such is true Love, which steals into the
 heart
 With feet as silent as the lightsome dawn That kisses smooth the rough brows of the dark,

And hath its will through blissful gentleness,
 Not like a rocket, which, with passionate glare, Whirs suddenly up, then bursts, and leaves the night Painfully quivering on the dazed eyes;
 A love that gives and takes, that seeth faults,
 Not with flaw-seeking eyes like needle points,
 But loving-kindly ever looks them down With the o'ercoming faith that still forgives;
 A love that shall be new and fresh each hour,
 As is the sunset's golden mystery,
 Or the sweet coming of the evening-star, Alike, and yet most unlike, every day,
 And seeming ever best and fairest now;
 A love that doth not kneel for what it seeks.
 But faces Truth and Beauty as their peer, Showing its worthiness of noble thoughts
 By a clear sense of inward nobleness;
 A love that in its object findeth not All grace and beauty, and enough to sate Its thirst of blessing, but, in all of good Found there, sees but the Heaven-implanted types
 Of good and beauty in the soul of man,
 And traces, in the simplest heart that beats,
 A family-likeness to its chosen one,
 That claims of it the rights of brotherhood.
 For love is blind but with the fleshly eye,
 That so its inner sight may be more clear;
 And outward shows of beauty only so Are needful at the first, as is a hand To guide and to uphold an infant's steps:
 Fine natures need them not: their earnest look Pierces the body's mask of thin disguise,
 And beauty ever is to them revealed, Behind the unshapeliest, meanest lump of clay,
 With arms outstretched and eager face ablaze, Yearning to be but understood and loved.

TO PERDITA, SINGING

THY voice is like a fountain, Leaping up in clear moonshine:
 Silver, silver, ever mounting,

Ever sinking,
Without thinking,
To that brimful heart of thine.
Every sad and happy feeling,
Thou hast had in bygone years,
Through thy lips comes stealing, stealing, Clear and low;
All thy smiles and all thy tears
In thy voice awaken,
And sweetness, wove of joy and woe,
From their teaching it hath taken:
Feeling and music move together,
Like a swan and shadow ever Floating on a sky-blue river
In a day of cloudless weather.

It hath caught a touch of sadness,
Yet it is not sad;
It hath tones of clearest gladness,
Yet it is not glad;
A dim, sweet twilight voice it is Where to-day's accustomed blue Is over-grayed with memories, With starry feelings quivered through.

Leaping up in sunshine bright,
And I never weary counting Its clear droppings, lone and single,
Or when in one full gush they mingle, Shooting in melodious light.

Thine is music such as yields Feelings of old brooks and fields,
And, around this pent-up room,
Sheds a woodland, free perfume;
Oh, thus forever sing to me!
Oh, thus forever!

The green, bright grass of childhood bring to me,

Flowing like an emerald river,
And the bright blue skies above!
Oh, sing them back, as fresh as ever,
Into the bosom of my love,—
The sunshine and the merriment,
The unsought, evergreen content,
Of that never cold time,

The joy, that, like a clear breeze, went Through and through the old time!

Peace sits within thine eyes,
With white hands crossed in joyful rest, While, through thy lips and face, arise
The melodies from out thy breast;
She sits and sings,

With folded wings
And white arms crost,
"Weep not for bygone things,
They are not lost:
The beauty which the summer time
O'er thine opening spirit shed,
The forest oracles sublime
That filled thy soul with joyous dread,
The scent of every smallest flower That made thy heart sweet for an hour, Yea, every holy influence, Flowing to thee, thou knewest not whence,
In thine eyes to-day is seen, Fresh as it hath ever been;
Promptings of Nature, beckonings sweet, Whatever led thy childish feet,
Still will linger unawares
The guiders of thy silver hairs;
Every look and every word Which thou givest forth to-day, Tell of the singing of the bird Whose music stilled thy boyish play."

Thy voice is like a fountain,
Twinkling up in sharp starlight,
When the moon behind the mountain Dims the low East with faintest white,

Ever darkling,
Ever sparkling,

We know not if 't is dark or bright;
But, when the great moon hath rolled round,
And, sudden-slow, its solemn power Grows from behind its black, clear-edged bound,

No spot of dark the fountain keepeth,
But, swift as opening eyelids, leapeth Into a waving silver flower.

THE MOON

My soul was like the sea,
Before the moon was made, Moaning in vague immensity,
Of its own strength afraid, Unrestful and unstaid.
Through every rift it foamed in vain,
About its earthly prison,
Seeking some unknown thing in pain,
And sinking restless back again,
For yet no moon had risen:
Its only voice a vast dumb moan,
Of utterless anguish speaking,
It lay unhopefully alone,
And lived but in an aimless seeking.

So was my soul; but when 't was full Of unrest to o'erloading,
A voice of something beautiful Whispered a dim foreboding,
And yet so soft, so sweet, so low,
It had not more of joy than woe;

And, as the sea doth oft lie still,
Making its waters meet,
As if by an unconscious will,
For the moon's silver feet,
So lay my soul within mine eyes
When thou, its guardian moon, didst rise.

And now, howe'er its waves above
May toss and seem unceasing, One strong, eternal law of Love,
With guidance sure and peaceful,
As calm and natural as breath,
Moves its great deeps through life and death.

REMEMBERED MUSIC

A FRAGMENT

THICK-RUSHING, like an ocean vast Of bisons the far prairie shaking,
The notes crowd heavily and fast
As surfs, one plunging while the last Draws seaward from its foamy breaking.

Or in low murmurs they began, Rising and rising momentarily,
As o'er a harp Æolian A fitful breeze, until they ran Up to a sudden ecstasy.

And then, like minute-drops of rain Ringing in water silverly, They lingering dropped and dropped again, Till it was almost like a pain
To listen when the next would be.

SONG

TO M. L.

A LILY thou wast when I saw thee first,
A lily-bud not opened quite,
That hourly grew more pure and white,
By morning, and noontide, and evening nursed:
In all of nature thou hadst thy share;

Thou wast waited on By the wind and sun;
The rain and the dew for thee took care;
It seemed thou never couldst be more fair.

A lily thou wast when I saw thee first,
A lily-bud; but oh, how strange,
How full of wonder was the change, When, ripe with all sweetness, thy full bloom burst!

How did the tears to my glad eyes start,
When the woman-flower Reached its blossoming hour, And I saw the warm deeps of thy golden
heart!

Glad death may pluck thee, but never before
The gold dust of thy bloom divine Hath dropped from thy heart into mine,
To quicken its faint germs of heavenly lore;
For no breeze comes nigh thee but carries away

Some impulses bright
Of fragrance and light, Which fall upon souls that are lone and astray,
To plant fruitful hopes of the flower of day.

ALLEGRA

I WOULD more natures were like thine,
That never casts a glance before, Thou Hebe, who thy heart's bright wine
So lavishly to all dost pour,
That we who drink forget to pine,
And can but dream of bliss in store.

Thou canst not see a shade in life;
With sunward instinct thou dost rise,
And, leaving clouds below at strife, Gazest undazzled at the skies,
With all their blazing splendors rife,
A songful lark with eagle's eyes.

Thou wast some foundling whom the Hours Nursed, laughing, with the milk of Mirth;
Some influence more gay than ours Hath ruled thy nature from its birth,
As if thy natal stars were flowers That shook their seeds round thee on earth.

And thou, to lull thine infant rest, Wast cradled like an Indian child;
 All pleasant winds from south and west
 With lullabies thine ears beguiled, Rocking thee in thine oriole's nest,
 Till Nature looked at thee and smiled.

Thine every fancy seems to borrow A sunlight from thy childish years, Making a golden cloud of sorrow,
 A hope-lit rainbow out of tears, —
 Thy heart is certain of to-morrow, Though 'yond to-day it never peers.

I would more natures were like thine,
 So innocently wild and free,
 Whose sad thoughts, even, leap and shine,
 Like sunny wavelets in the sea,
 Making us mindless of the brine,
 In gazing on the brilliancy.

THE FOUNTAIN

INTO the sunshine, Full of the light, Leaping and flashing
 From morn till night;

Into the moonlight, Whiter than snow,
 Waving so flower-like
 When the winds blow;

Into the starlight Rushing in spray, Happy at midnight,
 Happy by day;

Ever in motion,
 Blithesome and cheery,
 Still climbing heavenward, Never weary;

Glad of all weathers,
 Still seeming best,
 Upward or downward,
 Motion thy rest;

Full of a nature
 Nothing can tame, Changed every moment, Ever the same;

Ceaseless aspiring,
 Ceaseless content,

Darkness or sunshine Thy element;

Glorious fountain, Let my heart be Fresh, changeful, constant, Upward, like thee!

ODE

IN the old days of awe and keen-eyed wonder,

The Poet's song with blood-warm truth was rife;

He saw the mysteries which circle under The outward shell and skin of daily life.
 Nothing to him were fleeting time and fashion,

His soul was led by the eternal law;
 There was in him no hope of fame, no passion,

But with calm, godlike eyes he only saw.
 He did not sigh o'er heroes dead and buried,

Chief - mourner at the Golden Age's hearse,
 Nor deem that souls whom Charon grim had ferried

Alone were fitting themes of epic verse:
 He could believe the promise of to-morrow, And feel the wondrous meaning of to-
 day;

He had a deeper faith in holy sorrow Than the world's seeming loss could take away.

To know the heart of all things was his duty,

All things did sing to him to make him
 wise,

And, with a sorrowful and conquering beauty,

The soul of all looked grandly from his eyes.

He gazed on all within him and without him,

He watched the flowing of Time's steady
 tide,

And shapes of glory floated all about him And whispered to him, and he prophesied.

Than all men he more fearless was and freer.

And all his brethren cried with one accord,—
 "Behold the holy man ! Behold the Seer !
 Him who hath spoken with the unseen
 Lord !"
 He to his heart with large embrace had taken
 The universal sorrow of mankind,
 And, from that root, a shelter never shaken,
 The tree of wisdom grew with sturdy rand.
 He could interpret well the wondrous voices Which to the calm and silent spirit come;
 He knew that the One Soul no more rejoices In the star's anthem than the insect's hum.
 He in his heart was ever meek and humble,
 And yet with kingly pomp his numbers ran,
 As he foresaw how all things false should crumble
 Before the free, uplifted soul of man:
 And, when he was made full to overflowing With all the loveliness of heaven and
 earth,
 Out rushed his song, like molten iron glow-
 ing,
 To show God sitting by the humblest
 hearth.
 With calmest courage he was ever ready To teach that action was the truth of
 thought,
 And, with strong arm and purpose firm and steady,
 An anchor for the drifting world he wrought.
 So did he make the meanest man partaker Of all his brother-gods unto him gave;
 All souls did reverence him and name him
 Maker,
 And when he died heaped temples on his grave.
 And still his deathless words of light are swimming Serene throughout the great deep infinite
 Of human soul, unwaning and undimming, To cheer and guide the mariner at night.

II

But now the Poet is an empty rhymer Who lies with idle elbow on the grass,
 And fits his singing, like a cunning timer,
 To all men's prides and fancies as they pass.

Not his the song, which, in its metre holy, Chimes with the music of the eternal stars,
 Humbling the tyrant, lifting up the lowly,
 And sending sun through the soul's prison-bars.
 Maker no more, — oh no ! unmaker rather,
 For he unmakes who doth not all put forth
 The power given freely by our loving Father To show the body's dross, the spirit's worth.
 Awake ! great spirit of the ages olden !
 Shiver the mists that hide thy starry lyre,
 And let man's soul be yet again beholden
 To thee for wings to soar to her desire.
 Oh, prophesy no more to-morrow's splendor, Be no more shamefaced to speak out for Truth,
 Lay on her altar all the gushings tender, The hope, the fire, the loving faith of
 youth !
 Oh, prophesy no more the Maker's coming, Say not his onward footsteps thou canst hear
 In the dim void, like to the awful humming Of the great wings of some new-lighted sphere !
 Oh, prophesy no more, but be the Poet !
 This longing was but granted unto thee That, when all beauty thou couldst feel and know it,
 That beauty in its highest thou shouldst
 be.
 O thou who moanest tost with sealike long ings,
 Who dimly hearest voices call on thee, Whose soul is overfilled with mighty throng
 ings
 Of love, and fear, and glorious agony, Thou of the toil-strung hands and iron sinews And soul by Mother Earth with freedom fed,
 In whom the hero-spirit yet continues,
 The old free nature is not chained or dead,
 Arouse ! let thy soul break in music-thunder,
 Let loose the ocean that is in thee pent, Pour forth thy hope, thy fear, thy love, thy wonder,
 And tell the age what all its signs have meant.
 Where'er thy wildered crowd of brethren jostles,

Where'er there lingers but a shadow of
 wrong,
 There still is need of martyrs and apostles,
 There still are texts for never-dying song:
 From age to age man's still aspiring spirit Finds wider scope and sees with clearer
 eyes,
 And thou in larger measure dost inherit What made thy great forerunners free and wise.
 Sit thou enthroned where the Poet's mountain
 Above the thunder lifts its silent peak, And roll thy songs down like a gathering fountain,
 They all may drink and find the rest they seek.
 Sing! there shall silence grow in earth and heaven,
 A silence of deep awe and wondering;
 For, listening gladly, bend the angels, even,
 To hear a mortal like an angel sing.

III

Among the toil-worn poor my soul is seeking
 For who shall bring the Maker's name to
 light,
 To be the voice of that almighty speaking Which every age demands to do it right.
 Proprieties our silken bards environ;
 He who would be the tongue of this wide land
 Must string his harp with chords of sturdy iron
 And strike it with a toil-imbrown'd hand; One who hath dwelt with Nature well attended,
 Who hath learnt wisdom from her mystic books,
 Whose soul with all her countless lives hath blended,
 So that all beauty awes us in his looks;
 Who not with body's waste his soul hath pampered,
 Who as the clear northwestern wind is free,
 Who walks with Form's observances un-hampered,
 And follows the One Will obediently; Whose eyes, like windows on a breezy summit,
 Control a lovely prospect every way;

Who doth not sound God's sea with earthly plummet,
 And find a bottom still of worthless clay; Who heeds not how the lower gusts are working,
 Knowing that one sure wind blows on above,
 And sees, beneath the foulest faces lurking, One God-built shrine of reverence and
 love;
 Who sees all stars that wheel their shining marches Around the centre fixed of Destiny, Where the encircling soul serene o'erarches
 The moving globe of being like a sky;
 Who feels that God and Heaven's great deeps are nearer Him to whose heart his fellow-man is nigh,
 Who doth not hold his soul's own freedom dearer
 Than that of all his brethren, low or high;
 Who to the Right can feel himself the truer
 For being gently patient with the wrong,
 Who sees a brother in the evil-doer, And finds in Love the heart's-blood of his
 song;—
 This, this is he for whom the world is waiting
 To sing the beatings of its mighty heart, Too long hath it been patient with the grat-
 ing
 Of scannel-pipes, and heard it misnamed Art.
 To him the smiling soul of man shall listen, Laying awhile its crown of thorns aside,
 And once again in every eye shall glisten
 The glory of a nature satisfied.
 His verse shall have a great commanding motion,
 Heaving and swelling with a melody
 L learnt of the sky, the river, and the ocean,
 And all the pure, majestic things that be.
 Awake, then, thou! we pine for thy great presence
 To make us feel the soul once more sublime,
 We are of far too infinite an essence
 To rest contented with the lies of Time.
 Speak out! and lo! a hush of deepest wonder
 Shall sink o'er all this many-voic'd scene, As when a sudden burst of rattling thunder Shatters the blueness of a sky serene.

THE FATHERLAND

WHERE is the true man's fatherland ?
 Is it where he by chance is born ?
 Doth not the yearning spirit scorn
 In such scant borders to be spanned ?
 Oh yes ! his fatherland must be
 As the blue heaven wide and free !

Is it alone where freedom is,
 Where God is God and man is man ?
 Doth he not claim a broader span
 For the soul's love of home than this ?
 Oh yes ! his fatherland must be
 As the blue heaven wide and free !

Where'er a human heart doth wear Joy's myrtle-wreath or sorrow's gyves, Where'er a human spirit strives After a life more true and fair,
 There is the true man's birthplace grand,
 His is a world-wide fatherland !

Where'er a single slave doth pine, Where'er one man may help another, — Thank God for such a birthright, brother, — That spot of earth is thine and mine !
 There is the true man's birthplace grand,
 His is a world-wide fatherland !

THE FORLORN

THE night is dark, the stinging sleet, Swept by the bitter gusts of air, Drives whistling down the lonely street,
 And glazes on the pavement bare.

The street-lamps flare and struggle dim Through the gray sleet-clouds as they pass,
 Or, governed by a boisterous whim,
 Drop down and rustle on the glass.

One poor, heart-broken, outcast girl Faces the east-wind's searching flaws,
 And, as about her heart they whirl,
 Her tattered cloak more tightly draws.

The flat brick walls look cold and bleak,
 Her bare feet to the sidewalk freeze;
 Yet dares she not a shelter seek,
 Though faint with hunger and disease.

The sharp storm cuts her forehead bare,
 And, piercing through her garments thin, Beats on her shrunken breast, and there Makes colder the cold heart within.

She lingers where a ruddy glow Streams outward through an open shutter, Adding more bitterness to woe, More loneliness to desertion utter.

One half the cold she had not felt Until she saw this gush of light Spread warmly forth, and seem to melt Its slow way through the deadening night.

She hears a woman's voice within,
 Singing sweet words her childhood knew,
 And years of misery and sin Furl off, and leave her heaven blue.

Her freezing heart, like one who sinks Outwearied in the drifting snow, Drowns to deadly sleep and thinks
 No longer of its hopeless woe:

Old fields, and clear blue summer days,
 Old meadows, green with grass, and trees That shimmer through the trembling haze
 And whiten in the western breeze,

Old faces, all the friendly past Rises within her heart again,
 And sunshine from her childhood cast Makes summer of the icy rain.

Enhaloed by a mild, warm glow,
 From man's humanity apart,
 She hears old footsteps wandering slow Through the lone chambers of the heart.

Outside the porch before the door,
 Her cheek upon the cold, hard stone,
 She lies, no longer foul and poor,
 No longer dreary and alone.

Next morning something heavily Against the opening door did weigh,
 And there, from sin and sorrow free,
 A woman on the threshold lay.

A smile upon the wan lips told That she had found a calm release,
 And that, from out the want and cold,
 The song had borne her soul in peace.

For, whom the heart of man shuts out, Sometimes the heart of God takes in,
 And fences them all round about With silence mid the world's loud din;

And one of his great charities
 Is Music, and it doth not scorn
 To close the lids upon the eyes Of the polluted and forlorn;

Far was she from her childhood's home, Farther in guilt had wandered thence,
 Yet thither it had bid her come To die in maiden innocence.

MIDNIGHT

THE moon shines white and silent
 On the mist, which, like a tide
 Of some enchanted ocean, O'er the wide marsh doth glide, Spreading its ghost-like billows Silently far and wide.

A vague and starry magic Makes all things mysteries, And lures the earth's dumb spirit
 Up to the longing skies;
 I seem to hear dim whispers,
 And tremulous replies.

The fireflies o'er the meadow
 In pulses come and go;
 The elm-trees' heavy shadow Weighs on the grass below;
 And faintly from the distance
 The dreaming cock doth crow.

All things look strange and mystic,
 The very bushes well
 And take wild shapes and motions,
 As if beneath a spell;
 They seem not the same lilacs
 From childhood known so well.

The snow of deepest silence O'er everything doth fall,
 So beautiful and quiet,
 And yet so like a pall;
 As if all life were ended,
 And rest were come to all.

O wild and wondrous midnight,
 There is a might in thee

To make the charm'd body Almost like spirit be,
 And give it some faint glimpses Of immortality!

A PRAYER

GOD! do not let my loved one die, But rather wait until the time
 That I am grown in purity Enough to enter thy pure clime, Then take me, I will gladly go,
 So that my love remain below!

Oh, let her stay! She is by birth What I through death must learn to be;
 We need her more on our poor earth Than thou canst need in heaven with thee:
 She hath her wings already, I Must burst this earth-shell ere I fly.

Then, God, take me! We shall be near,
 More near than ever, each to each:
 Her angel ears will find more clear
 My heavenly than my earthly speech;
 And still, as I draw nigh to thee, Her soul and mine shall closer be.

THE HERITAGE

THE rich man's son inherits lands,
 And piles of brick and stone, and gold,
 And he inherits soft white hands,
 And tender flesh that fears the cold, Nor dares to wear a garment old;
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

The rich man's son inherits cares;
 The bank may break, the factory burn,
 A breath may burst his bubble shares,
 And soft white hands could hardly earn A living that would serve his turn;
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

The rich man's son inherits wants,
 His stomach craves for dainty fare;
 With sated heart, he hears the pants Of toiling hinds with brown arms bare,
 And wearies in his easy-chair;
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit ?
 Stout muscles and a sinewy heart,
 A hardy frame, a hardier spirit;
 King of two hands, he does his part In every useful toil and art;
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 A king might wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit ?
 Wishes o'erjoyed with humble things,
 A rank adjudged by toil-won merit,
 Content that from employment springs,
 A heart that in his labor sings;
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 A king might wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit ?
 A patience learned of being poor, Courage, if sorrow come, to bear it,
 A fellow-feeling that is sure To make the outcast bless his door;
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 A king might wish to hold in fee.

O rich man's son ! there is a toil
 That with all others level stands;
 Large charity doth never soil,
 But only whiten, soft white hands;
 This is the best crop from thy lands,
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 Worth being rich to hold in fee.

O poor man's son ! scorn not thy state;
 There is worse weariness than thine,
 In merely being rich and great;
 Toil only gives the soul to shine,
 And makes rest fragrant and benign;
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 Worth being poor to hold in fee.

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod,
 Are equal in the earth at last;
 Both, children of the same dear God, Prove title to your heirship vast By record of a well-filled past;
 A heritage, it seems to me,
 Well worth a life to hold in fee.

THE ROSE: A BALLAD

In his tower sat the poet
 Gazing on the roaring sea,

"Take this rose," he sighed, "and throw it Where there's none that loveth me.
 On the rock the billow bursteth
 And sinks back into the seas,
 But in vain my spirit thirsteth
 So to burst and be at ease.
 Take, O sea ! the tender blossom That hath lain against my breast;
 On thy black and angry bosom
 It will find a surer rest.
 Life is vain, and love is hollow, Ugly death stands there behind, Hate and scorn and hunger follow Him that toileth for his kind."
 Forth into the night he hurled it,
 And with bitter smile did mark
 How the surly tempest whirled it Swift into the hungry dark.
 Foam and spray drive back to leeward,
 And the gale, with dreary moan, Drifts the helpless blossom seaward,
 Through the breakers all alone.

Stands a maiden, on the morrow, Musing by the wave-beat strand,
 Half in hope and half in sorrow, Tracing words upon the sand:
 "Shall I ever then behold him Who hath been my life so long,
 Ever to this sick heart fold him,
 Be the spirit of his song ?
 Touch not, sea, the blessed letters
 I have traced upon thy shore, Spare his name whose spirit fetters Mine with love forevermore !"
 Swells the tide and overflows it,
 But, with omen pure and meet, Brings a little rose, and throws it Humbly at the maiden's feet.
 Full of bliss she takes the token,
 And, upon her snowy breast, Soothes the ruffled petals broken With the ocean's fierce unrest.
 "Love is thine, O heart ! and surely Peace shall also be thine own, For the heart that trusteth purely Never long can pine alone."

In his tower sits the poet,
 Bliss new and strange to him Fill his heart and overflow it With a wonder sweet and dim.

Up the beach the ocean slideth
 With a whisper of delight,
 And the moon in silence glideth Through the peaceful blue of night.
 Rippling o'er the poet's shoulder Flows a maiden's golden hair, Maiden lips, with love grown bolder, Kiss his moon-lit forehead bare.
 "Life is joy, and love is power, Death all fetters doth unbind,
 Strength and wisdom only flower
 When we toil for all our kind.
 Hope is truth, — the future giveth
 More than present takes away,
 And the soul forever liveth Nearer God from day to day."
 Not a word the maiden uttered, Fullest hearts are slow to speak,
 But a withered rose-leaf fluttered Down upon the poet's cheek.

VIOLET! sweet violet!
 Thine eyes are full of tears;
 Are they wet
 Even yet
 With the thought of other years?
 Or with gladness are they full,
 For the night so beautiful,
 And longing for those far-off spheres?

Loved one of my youth thou wast,
 Of my merry youth,
 And I see,
 Tearfully,
 All the fair and sunny past,
 All its openness and truth,
 Ever fresh and green in thee
 As the moss is in the sea.

Thy little heart, that hath with love Grown colored like the sky above, On which thou lookest ever, — Can it know
 All the woe
 Of hope for what returneth never,
 All the sorrow and the longing
 To these hearts of ours belonging?

Out on it! no foolish pining For the sky
 Dims thine eye,
 Or for the stars so calmly shining;

Like thee let this soul of mine
 Take hue from that wherefor I long, Self-stayed and high, serene and strong,
 Not satisfied with hoping — but divine.

Violet! dear violet!

Thy blue eyes are only wet
 With joy and love of Him who sent thee,
 And for the fulfilling sense
 Of that glad obedience Which made thee all that Nature meant thee!

ROSALINE

THOU look'dst on me all yesternight, Thine eyes were blue, thy hair was bright As when we murmured our troth-plight Beneath the thick stars, Rosaline!
 Thy hair was braided on thy head,
 As on the day we two were wed,
 Mine eyes scarce knew if thou wert dead,
 But my shrunk heart knew, Rosaline!

The death-watch ticked behind the wall,
 The blackness rustled like a pall,
 The moaning wind did rise and fall
 Among the bleak pines, Rosaline!
 My heart beat thickly in mine ears:
 The lids may shut out fleshly fears,
 But still the spirit sees and hears,
 Its eyes are lidless, Rosaline!

A wildness rushing suddenly,
 A knowing some ill shape is nigh,
 A wish for death, a fear to die,
 Is not this vengeance, Rosaline?
 A loneliness that is not lone,
 A love quite withered up and gone,
 A strong soul ousted from its throne,
 What wouldst thou further, Rosaline?

'Tis drear such moonless nights as these,
 Strange sounds are out upon the breeze,
 And the leaves shiver in the trees,
 And then thou comest, Rosaline!
 I seem to hear the mourners go,
 With long black garments trailing slow,
 And plumes anodding to and fro,
 As once I heard them, Rosaline!

Thy shroud is all of snowy white,
 And, in the middle of the night,
 Thou standest moveless and upright, Gazing upon me, Rosaline!

There is no sorrow in thine eyes,
But evermore that meek surprise, — O God ! thy gentle spirit tries To deem me guiltless, Rosaline !

Above thy grave the robin sings,
And swarms of bright and happy things Flit all about with sunlit wings,
But I am cheerless, Rosaline !
The violets in the hillock toss,
The gravestone is o'ergrown with moss;
For nature feels not any loss,
But I am cheerless, Rosaline !

I did not know when thou wast dead;
A blackbird whistling overhead Thrilled through my brain; I would have fled,

But dared not leave thee, Rosaline !
The sun rolled down, and very soon,
Like a great fire, the awful moon Rose, stained with blood, and then a swoon Crept chillily o'er me, Rosaline !

The stars came out; and, one by one,
Each angel from his silver throne Looked down and saw what I had done:
I dared not hide me, Rosaline !
I crouched; I feared thy corpse would cry Against me to God's silent sky, I thought I saw the blue lips try To utter something, Rosaline !

I waited with a maddened grin
To hear that voice all icy thin Slide forth and tell my deadly sin To hell and heaven, Rosaline !
But no voice came, and then it seemed,
That, if the very corpse had screamed,
The sound like sunshine glad had streamed Through that dark stillness, Rosaline !

And then, amid the silent night,
I screamed with horrible delight,
And in my brain an awful light Did seem to crackle, Rosaline !
It is my curse ! sweet memories fall From me like snow, and only all Of that one night, like cold worms, crawl My doomed heart over, Rosaline !

Why wilt thou haunt me with thine eyes, Wherein such blessed memories,
Such pitying forgiveness lies,
Than hate more bitter, Rosaline !

Woe's me ! I know that love so high As thine, true soul, could never die,
And with mean clay in churchyard lie, —
Would it might be so, Rosaline !

A REQUIEM

AY, pale and silent maiden, Cold as thou liest there, Thine was the sunniest nature
That ever drew the air;
The wildest and most wayward,
And yet so gently kind,
Thou seemdst but to body
A breath of summer wind.

Into the eternal shadow That girds our life around,
Into the infinite silence Wherewith Death's shore is bound, Thou hast gone forth, beloved !
And I were mean to weep,
That thou hast left Life's shallows,
And dost possess the Deep.

Thou liest low and silent, Thy heart is cold and still,
Thine eyes are shut forever,
And Death hath had his will;
He loved and would have taken,
I loved and would have kept,
We strove, — and he was stronger,
And I have never wept.

Let him possess thy body,
Thy soul is still with me, More sunny and more glad some Than it was wont to be:
Thy body was a fetter
That bound me to the flesh, Thank God that it is broken,
And now I live afresh !

Now I can see thee clearly;
The dusky cloud of clay,
That hid thy starry spirit,
Is rent and blown away:
To earth I give thy body,
Thy spirit to the sky,
I saw its bright wings growing,
And knew that thou must fly.

Now I can love thee truly, For nothing comes between

The senses and the spirit,
 The seen and the unseen;
 Lifts the eternal shadow,
 The silence bursts apart,
 And the soul's boundless future Is present in my heart.

A PARABLE

WORN and footsore was the Prophet,
 When he gained the holy hill;
 "God has left the earth," he murmured,
 "Here his presence lingers still.

"God of all the olden prophets, Wilt thou speak with men no more?
 Have I not as truly served thee
 As thy chosen ones of yore?"

"Hear me, guider of my fathers, Lo! a humble heart is mine;
 By thy mercy I beseech thee Grant thy servant but a sign!"

Bowing then his head, he listened For an answer to his prayer;
 No loud burst of thunder followed,
 Not a murmur stirred the air:

But the tuft of moss before him Opened while he waited yet,
 And, from out the rock's hard bosom, Sprang a tender violet.

"God! I thank thee," said the Prophet;
 "Hard of heart and blind was I,
 Looking to the holy mountain
 For the gift of prophecy.

"Still thou speakest with thy children Freely as in eld sublime;
 Humbleness, and love, and patience, Still give empire over time.

"Had I trusted in my nature,
 And had faith in lowly things,
 Thou thyself wouldst then have sought me,
 And set free my spirit's wings.

"But I looked for signs and wonders, That o'er men should give me sway; Thirsting to be more than mortal,
 I was even less than clay.

"Ere I entered on my journey,
 As I girt my loins to start,
 Ran to me my little daughter,
 The beloved of my heart;

"In her hand she held a flower,
 Like to this as like may be,
 Which, beside my very threshold,
 She had plucked and brought to me."

SONG

O MOONLIGHT deep and tender,
 A year and more ago,
 Your mist of golden splendor Round my betrothal shone!

O elm-leaves dark and dewy,
 The very same ye seem,
 The low wind trembles through ye,
 Ye murmur in my dream!

O river, dim with distance, Flow thus forever by,
 A part of my existence Within your heart doth lie!

O stars, ye saw our meeting,
 Two beings and one soul,
 Two hearts so madly beating
 To mingle and be whole!

O happy night, deliver Her kisses back to me,
 Or keep them all, and give her A blissful dream of me!

SONNETS

TO A. C. L.

A. C. L. was Mrs. Anna Cabot Lowell (Mrs. Charles Lowell), the wife of the eldest brother of the poet, and mother of those gallant brothers, Charles and James, who fell in the war for the union, and to whom Lowell refers in the tenth of the second series of Biglow Papers.

THROUGH suffering and sorrow thou hast passed
 To show us what a woman true may be:
 They have not taken sympathy from thee,
 Nor made thee any other than thou wast,

Save as some tree, which, in a sudden blast, Sheddeth those blossoms, that are weakly grown,
Upon the air, but keepeth every one Whose strength gives warrant of good fruit at last:
So thou hast shed some blooms of gayety,
But never one of steadfast cheerfulness;
Nor hath thy knowledge of adversity Robbed thee of any faith in happiness,
But rather cleared thine inner eyes to see How many simple ways there are to bless.

II

WHAT were I, Love, if I were stripped of
thee,
If thine eyes shut me out whereby I live, Thou, who unto my calmer soul dost give Knowledge, and Truth, and holy Mystery, Wherein Truth mainly lies for those who see Beyond the earthly and the fugitive,
Who in the grandeur of the soul believe,
And only in the Infinite are free?
Without thee I were naked, bleak, and bare
As yon dead cedar on the sea-cliff's brow;
And Nature's teachings, which come to me
now,
Common and beautiful as light and air,
Would be as fruitless as a stream which still Slips through the wheel of some old ruined mill.

I WOULD not have this perfect love of ours Grow from a single root, a single stem, Bearing no goodly fruit, but only flowers That idly hide life's iron diadem:
It should grow away like that Eastern tree
Whose limbs take root and spread forth constantly;
That love for one, from which there doth not spring
Wide love for all, is but a worthless thing.
Not in another world, as poets prate, Dwell we apart above the tide of things, High floating o'er earth's clouds on faery
wings;
But our pure love doth ever elevate Into a holy bond of brotherhood All earthly things, making them pure and good.

IV

"FOR this true nobleness I seek in vain, In woman and in man I find it not;
I almost weary of my earthly lot,
My life-springs are dried up with burning pain."
Thou find'st it not? I pray thee look
again,
Look inward through the depths of thine own soul.
How is it with thee? Art thou sound and whole?
Doth narrow search show thee no earthly stain?
BE NOBLE! and the nobleness that lies In other men, sleeping, but never dead,
Will rise in majesty to meet thine own;
Then wilt thou see it gleam in many eyes, Then will pure light around thy path be shed,
And thou wilt nevermore be sad and lone.

TO THE SPIRIT OF KEATS

GREAT soul, thou sittest with me in my room,
Uplifting me with thy vast, quiet eyes,
On whose full orbs, with kindly lustre, lies The twilight warmth of ruddy ember-gloom:
Thy clear, strong tones will oft bring sudden bloom
Of hope secure, to him who lonely cries, Wrestling with the young poet's agonies, Neglect and scorn, which seem a certain doom:
Yes! the few words which, like great thunder-drops,
Thy large heart down to earth shook doubt-fully,
Thrilled by the inward lightning of its might,
Serene and pure, like gushing joy of light,
Shall track the eternal chords of Destiny, After the moon-led pulse of ocean stops.

VI

GREAT Truths are portions of the soul of
man;
Great souls are portions of Eternity; Each drop of blood that e'er through true heart ran
With lofty message, ran for thee and me;

For God's law, since the starry song began, Hath been, and still forevermore must be,
That every deed which shall outlast Time's span

Must spur the soul to be erect and free; Slave is no word of deathless lineage sprung;

Too many noble souls have thought and died,

Too many mighty poets lived and sung,
And our good Saxon, from lips purified With martyr-fire, throughout the world hath rung

Too long to have God's holy cause denied.

I ASK not for those thoughts, that sudden leap

From being's sea, like the isle-seeming Kraken,

With whose great rise the ocean all is shaken

And a heart-tremble quivers through the deep;

Give me that growth which some perchance deem sleep,

Wherewith the steadfast coral-stems uprise,
Which, by the toil of gathering energies, Their upward way into clear sunshine keep,

Until, by Heaven's sweetest influences, Slowly and slowly spreads a speck of green
Into a pleasant island in the seas,

Where, mid tall palms, the cane-roofed home is seen,

And wearied men shall sit at sunset's hour, Hearing the leaves and loving God's dear power.

VIII

TO M. W., ON HER BIRTHDAY

MAIDEN, when such a soul as thine is born, The morning-stars their ancient music make,

And, joyful, once again their song awake, Long silent now with melancholy scorn;
And thou, not mindless of so blest a morn,
By no least deed its harmony shalt break, But shalt to that high chime thy footsteps take,

Through life's most darksome passes un-forlorn;

Therefore from thy pure faith thou shalt not fall,

Therefore shalt thou be ever fair and free,
And in thine every motion musical As summer air, majestic as the sea,
A mystery to those who creep and crawl Through Time, and part it from Eternity.

IX

MY Love, I have no fear that thou shouldst die;

Albeit I ask no fairer life than this, Whose numbering-clock is still thy gentle kiss,

While Time and Peace with hands enlock'd fly;

Yet care I not where in Eternity
We live and love, well knowing that there is No backward step for those who feel the bliss

Of Faith as their most lofty yearnings
high:

Love hath so purified my being's core, Meseems I scarcely should be startled, even,

To find, some morn, that thou hadst gone before;

Since, with thy love, this knowledge too was given,

Which each calm day doth strengthen more and more,

That they who love are but one step from Heaven.

X

I CANNOT think that thou shouldst pass
away,

Whose life to mine is an eternal law,
A piece of nature that can have no flaw,
A new and certain sunrise every day;

But, if thou art to be another ray About the Sun of Life, and art to live

Free from what part of thee was fugitive,
The debt of Love I will more fully pay,

Not downcast with the thought of thee so high,

But rather raised to be a nobler man,
And more divine in my humanity, As knowing that the waiting eyes which scan

My life are lighted by a purer being,
And ask high, calm-browed deeds, with it agreeing.

XI

THERE never yet was flower fair in vain, Let classic poets rhyme it as they will;

The seasons toil that it may blow again,

And summer's heart doth feel its every ill;
 Nor is a true soul ever born for naught;
 Wherever any such hath lived and died,
 There hath been something for true freedom wrought,
 Some bulwark levelled on the evil side:
 Toil on, then, Greatness! thou art in the right, However narrow souls may call thee wrong;
 Be as thou wouldst be in thine own clear sight,
 And so thou shalt be in the world's erelong;
 For worldlings cannot, struggle as they may,
 From man's great soul one great thought hide away.

SUB PONDERE CRESCIT

THE hope of Truth grows stronger, day by day;
 I hear the soul of Man around me waking,
 Like a great sea, its frozen fetters breaking,
 And flinging up to heaven its sunlit spray, Tossing huge continents in scornful play,
 And crushing them, with din of grinding thunder,
 That makes old emptinesses stare in wonder;
 The memory of a glory passed away Lingers in every heart, as, in the shell, Resounds the bygone freedom of the sea,
 And every hour new signs of promise tell,
 That the great soul shall once again be free,
 For high, and yet more high, the murmurs swell
 Of inward strife for truth and liberty.

XIII

BELOVED, in the noisy city here,
 The thought of thee can make all turmoil cease; Around my spirit, folds thy spirit clear Its still, soft arms, and circles it with peace;
 There is no room for any doubt or fear
 In souls so overfilled with love's increase,
 There is no memory of the bygone year
 But growth in heart's and spirit's perfect ease:
 How hath our love, half nebulous at first,

Rounded itself into a full-orbed sun!
 How have our lives and wills (as haply erst They were, ere this forgetfulness begun)
 Through all their earthly distances outburst,
 And melted, like two rays of light in one!

XIV

ON READING WORDSWORTH'S SONNETS IN DEFENCE OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

These sonnets, XIV-XIX, when printed in The Democratic Review for May, 1842, bore merely the title Sonnets.

As the broad ocean endlessly upheaveth,
 With the majestic beating of his heart,
 The mighty tides, whereof its rightful part Each sea-wide bay and little weed receiveth, So, through his soul who earnestly believeth, Life from the universal Heart doth flow, Whereby some conquest of the eternal Woe,
 By instinct of God's nature, he achieveth:
 A fuller pulse of this all-powerful beauty
 Into the poet's gulf-like heart doth tide,
 And he more keenly feels the glorious duty Of serving Truth, despised and crucified,— Happy, unknowing sect or creed, to rest,
 And feel God flow forever through his breast.

ONCE hardly in a cycle blossometh
 A flower-like soul ripe with the seeds of song,
 A spirit foreordained to cope with wrong,
 Whose divine thoughts are natural as breath,
 Who the old Darkness thickly scattereth With starry words, that shoot prevailing light Into the deeps, and wither, with the blight
 Of serene Truth, the coward heart of Death:
 Woe, if such spirit thwart its errand high,
 And mock with lies the longing soul of man!
 Yet one age longer must true Culture lie, Soothing her bitter fetters as she can,
 Until new messages of love outstart
 At the next beating of the infinite Heart

THE love of all things springs from love of one;

Wider the soul's horizon hourly grows,
And over it with fuller glory flows
The sky-like spirit of God; a hope begun In doubt and darkness 'neath a fairer sun Cometh to fruition, if it be of Truth;
And to the law of meekness, faith, and ruth,

By inward sympathy, shall all be won:
This thou shouldst know, who, from the painted feature Of shifting Fashion, couldst thy brethren turn

Unto the love of ever-youthful Nature,
And of a beauty fadeless and eterne;
And always 't is the saddest sight to see An old man faithless in Humanity.

A POET cannot strive for despotism; His harp falls shattered; for it still must be The instinct of great spirits to be free,
And the sworn foes of cunning barbarism:
He who has deepest searched the wide abyss

Of that life-giving Soul which men call fate, Knows that to put more faith in lies and hate

Than truth and love is the true atheism:
Upward the soul forever turns her eyes:
The next hour always shames the hour before;

One beauty, at its highest, prophesies
That by whose side it shall seem mean and poor;

No Godlike thing knows aught of less and less,
But widens to the boundless Perfectness.

THEREFORE think not the Past is wise alone,

For Yesterday knows nothing of the Best,
And thou shalt love it only as the nest Whence glory-winged things to Heaven have flown:

To the great Soul only are all things known;

Present and future are to her as past,
While she in glorious madness doth forecast

That perfect bud, which seems a flower full-blown

To each new Prophet, and yet always opes Fuller and fuller with each day and hour, Heartening the soul with odor of fresh hopes,

And longings high, and gushings of wide power,

Yet never is or shall be fully blown Save in the forethought of the Eternal One.

THE SAME CONCLUDED

FAR 'yond this narrow parapet of Time,
With eyes uplift, the poet's soul should look

Into the Endless Promise, nor should brook
One prying doubt to shake his faith sublime;

To him the earth is ever in her prime And dewiness of morning; he can see Good lying hid, from all eternity, Within the teeming womb of sin and crime;

His soul should not be cramped by any bar,
His nobleness should be so Godlike high,
That his least deed is perfect as a star,
His common look majestic as the sky,
And all o'erflooded with a light from far, Undimmed by clouds of weak mortality.

TO M. O. S.

Mary Orne Story, sister to William Wetmore Story, afterward married to George Ticknor Curtis.

MARY, since first I knew thee, to this hour,
My love hath deepened, with my wiser sense

Of what in Woman is to reverence;
Thy clear heart, fresh as e'er was forest-flower,

Still opens more to me its beauteous dower; —

But let praise hush, — Love asks no evidence

To prove itself well-placed; we know not whence

It gleans the straws that thatch its humble bower:

We can but say we found it in the heart, Spring of all sweetest thoughts, arch foe of blame,

Sower of flowers in the dusty mart, Pure vestal of the poet's holy flame, —
This is enough, and we have done our part
If we but keep it spotless as it came.

XXI

Our love is not a fading, earthly flower:
Its winged seed dropped down from Paradise,

And, nursed by day and night, by sun and shower,

Doth momentarily to fresher beauty rise:
To us the leafless autumn is not bare, Nor winter's rattling boughs lack lusty
green.

Our summer hearts make summer's ful-ness, where

No leaf, or bud, or blossom may be seen:
For nature's life in love's deep life doth lie, Love, — whose forgetfulness is beauty's
death,

Whose mystic key these cells of Thou and I
Into the infinite freedom openeth, And makes the body's dark and narrow gate

The wide-flung leaves of Heaven's own palace-gate.

IN ABSENCE

THESE rugged, wintry days I scarce could bear,

Did I not know that, in the early spring, When wild March winds upon their errands sing,

Thou wouldst return, bursting on this still
air,

Like those same winds, when, startled from their lair,

They hunt up violets, and free swift brooks From icy cares, even as thy clear looks

Bid my heart bloom, and sing, and break all care:

When drops with welcome rain the April
day,

My flowers shall find their April in thine
eyes,

Save there the rain in dreamy clouds doth stay.

As loath to fall out of those happy skies; Yet sure, my love, thou art most like to May,

That comes with steady sun when April dies.

WENDELL PHILLIPS

He stood upon the world's broad threshold; wide

The din of battle and of slaughter rose;
He saw God stand upon the weaker side,
That sank in seeming loss before its foes:
Many there were who made great haste and sold

Unto the cunning enemy their swords, He scorned their gifts of fame, and power,
and gold,

And, underneath their soft and flowery
words,

Heard the cold serpent hiss; therefore he went

And humbly joined him to the weaker part,

Fanatic named, and fool, yet well content
So he could be the nearer to God's heart,
And feel its solemn pulses sending blood Through all the widespread veins of endless good.

THEY pass me by like shadows, crowds on crowds,

Dim ghosts of men, that hover to and fro, Hugging their bodies round them like thin shrouds

Wherein their souls were buried long ago:
They trampled on their youth, and faith,
and love,

They cast their hope of human-kind away,
With Heaven's clear messages they madly strove,

And conquered, — and their spirits turned to clay:

Lo! how they wander round the world, their grave,

Whose ever-gaping maw by such is fed, Gibbering at living men, and idly rave,
"We only truly live, but ye are dead."
Alas! poor fools, the anointed eye may trace

A dead soul's epitaph in every face!

I GRIEVE not that ripe Knowledge takes
 away
 The charm that Nature to my childhood
 wore,
 For, with that insight, cometh, day by day,
 A greater bliss than wonder was before;
 The real doth not clip the poet's wings, —
 To win the secret of a weed's plain heart Reveals some clue to spiritual things, And stumbling guess becomes firm-footed
 art:
 Flowers are not flowers unto the poet's
 eyes,
 Their beauty thrills him by an inward
 sense;
 He knows that outward seemings are but lies,
 Or, at the most, but earthly shadows,
 whence
 The soul that looks within for truth may guess
 The presence of some wondrous heavenliness.

XXVI

TO J. R. GIDDINGS

GIDDINGS, far rougher names than thine have grown Smoother than honey on the lips of men;
 And thou shalt aye be honorably known,
 As one who bravely used his tongue and pen, As best befits a freeman, — even for those To whom our Law's unblushing front denies
 A right to plead against the lifelong woes Which are the Negro's glimpse of Freedom's skies:
 Fear nothing, and hope all things, as the Right
 Alone may do securely; every hour
 The thrones of Ignorance and ancient Night
 Lose somewhat of their long-usurp'd
 power,
 And Freedom's lightest word can make them shiver
 With a base dread that clings to them forever.

XXVII

I THOUGHT our love at full, but I did err; Joy's wreath drooped o'er mine eyes; I could not see

That sorrow in our happy world must be Love's deepest spokesman and interpreter;
 But, as a mother feels her child first stir Under her heart, so felt I instantly Deep in my soul another bond to thee Thrill with that life we saw depart from
 her;
 O mother of our angel child! twice dear!
 Death knits as well as parts, and still, I wis,
 Her tender radiance shall infold us here,
 Even as the light, borne up by inward bliss, Threads the void glooms of space without a fear,
 To print on farthest stars her pitying kiss.

L'ENVOI

WHETHER my heart hath wiser grown or
 not,
 In these three years, since I to thee inscribed,
 Mine own betrothed, the firstlings of my muse, —
 Poor windfalls of unripe experience, Young buds plucked hastily by childish hands
 Not patient to await more full-blown flowers, —
 At least it hath seen more of life and men, And pondered more, and grown a shade more sad;
 Yet with no loss of hope or settled trust In the benignness of that Providence Which shapes from out our elements awry
 The grace and order that we wonder at,
 The mystic harmony of right and wrong, Both working out His wisdom and our
 good:
 A trust, Beloved, chiefly learned of thee,
 Who hast that gift of patient tenderness,
 The instinctive wisdom of a woman's heart.

They tell us that our land was made for
 song,
 With its huge rivers and sky-piercing peaks,
 Its sealike lakes and mighty cataracts,
 Its forests vast and hoar, and prairies wide,
 And mounds that tell of wondrous tribes extinct.
 But Poesy springs not from rocks and woods;
 Her womb and cradle are the human heart.

And she can find a nobler theme for song In the most loathsome man that blasts the sight

Than in the broad expanse of sea and shore
Between the frozen deserts of the poles.
All nations have their message from on high,

Each the messiah of some central thought,
For the fulfilment and delight of Man:
One has to teach that labor is divine;
Another Freedom; and another Mind;
And all, that God is open-eyed and just,
The happy centre and calm heart of all.

Are, then, our woods, our mountains, and our streams,

Needful to teach our poets how to sing?
O maiden rare, far other thoughts were ours, When we have sat by ocean's foaming
marge,

And watched the waves leap roaring on the rocks,

Than young Leander and his Hero had, Gazing from Sestos to the other shore.

The moon looks down and ocean worships
her,

Stars rise and set, and seasons come and go Even as they did in Homer's elder time,
But we behold them not with Grecian eyes: Then they were types of beauty and of strength,

But now of freedom, unconfined and pure, Subject alone to Order's higher law.

What cares the Russian serf or Southern slave

Though we should speak as man spake never yet

Of gleaming Hudson's broad magnificence, Or green Niagara's never-ending roar?

Our country hath a gospel of her own To preach and practise before all the world, —

The freedom and divinity of man,
The glorious claims of human brotherhood, —

Which to pay nobly, as a freeman should, Gains the sole wealth that will not fly
away, —

And the soul's fealty to none but God.
These are realities, which make the shows Of outward Nature, be they ne'er so grand, Seem small, and worthless, and contemptible.

These are the mountain-summits for our bards,

Which stretch far upward into heaven itself,

And give such widespread and exulting view

Of hope, and faith, and onward destiny, That shrunk Parnassus to a molehill dwindles.

Our new Atlantis, like a morning-star, Silvers the mirk face of slow-yielding
Night,

The herald of a fuller truth than yet Hath gleamed upon the upraised face of
Man

Since the earth glittered in her stainless prime, —

Of a more glorious sunrise than of old Drew wondrous melodies from Memnon huge,

Yea, draws them still, though now he sit waist-deep

In the engulfing flood of whirling sand,
And look across the wastes of endless gray, Sole wreck, where once his hundred-gated Thebes

Pained with her mighty hum the calm, blue heaven:

Shall the dull stone pay grateful orisons,
And we till noonday bar the splendor out, Lest it reproach and chide our sluggish hearts,

Warm-nestled in the down of Prejudice,
And be content, though clad with angel-
wings,

Close-clipped, to hop about from perch to perch,

In paltry cages of dead men's dead thoughts?

Oh, rather, like the skylark, soar and sing,
And let our gushing songs befit the dawn
And sunrise, and the yet unshaken dew Brimming the chalice of each full-blown hope,

Whose blithe front turns to greet the growing day!

Never had poets such high call before,
Never can poets hope for higher one,
And, if they be but faithful to their trust, Earth will remember them with love and joy,
And oh, far better, God will not forget.
For he who settles Freedom's principles Writes the death-warrant of all tyranny; Who speaks the truth stabs Falsehood to the heart,

And his mere word makes despots tremble
more

Than ever Brutus with his dagger could.
 Wait for no hints from waterfalls or
 woods,
 Nor dream that tales of red men, brute and fierce,
 Repay the finding of this Western World, Or needed half the globe to give them
 birth:

Spirit supreme of Freedom ! not for this Did great Columbus tame his eagle soul To jostle with the daws that perch in courts;

Not for this, friendless, on an unknown sea, Coping with mad waves and more mutinous spirits,

Battled he with the dreadful ache at heart Which tempts, with devilish subtleties of doubt,

The hermit of that loneliest solitude,
 The silent desert of a great New Thought; Though loud Niagara were to-day struck dumb,

Yet would this cataract of boiling life
 Rush plunging on and on to endless deeps, And utter thunder till the world shall cease, —

A thunder worthy of the poet's song,
 And which alone can fill it with true life.
 The high evangel to our country granted

Could make apostles, yea, with tongues of fire,
 Of hearts half-darkened back again to clay !
 'T is the soul only that is national,
 And he who pays true loyalty to that Alone can claim the wreath of patriotism.

Beloved ! if I wander far and oft From that which I believe, and feel, and know, Thou wilt forgive, not with a sorrowing
 heart,
 But with a strengthened hope of better
 things;

Knowing that I, though often blind and false

To those I love, and oh, more false than all

Unto myself, have been most true to thee, And that whoso in one thing hath been true

Can be as true in all. Therefore thy hope May yet not prove unfruitful, and thy love Meet, day by day, with less unworthy thanks,

Whether, as now, we journey hand in hand,
 Or, parted in the body, yet are one In spirit and the love of holy things.

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS

WHEN Lowell published his second volume, Poems, in 1843, he opened it with A Legend of Brittany, and dedicated it in the following letter to the painter, William Page : —

MY DEAR FRIEND, —

The love between us, which can now look back upon happy years of still enlarging confidence, and forward, with a sure trust in its own prophecy of yet deeper and tenderer sympathies, as long as life shall remain to us, stands in no need, I am well aware, of so poor a voucher as an Epistle Dedicatory. True, it is one of Love's chiefest charms, that it must still take special pains to be superfluous in seeking out ways to declare itself, — but for these it demands no publicity, and wishes no acknowledgment. But the admiration which one soul feels for another loses half its worth, if it let slip any opportunity of making itself heard and felt by that strange Abbot of Un-reason which we call the World. For the humblest man's true admiration is no uncertain oracle of the verdict of Posterity, — the unerring tribunal where Genius is at last allowed the right of trial by its peers, and to which none but sincere and real Greatness can appeal with an unwavering heart. There the false witnesses of to-day will be unable to appear, being fled to some hospitable Texas in the realms of Limbo, beyond the sphere of its jurisdiction and the summons of its apparitors.

I have never seen the works of the Great Masters of your Art, but I have studied their lives, and sure I am that no nobler, gentler, or purer spirit than yours was ever anointed by the Eternal Beauty to bear that part of her divine message which it belongs to the Great Painter to reveal. The sympathy of sister pursuits, of an agreeing artistic faith, and, yet more, of a common hope for the final destiny of man, has not been wanting to us, and now you will forgive the pride I feel in having this advantage over you, namely, of telling that admiration in public which I have never stinted to utter in private. You will believe, that, as your winning that fadeless laurel, which you deserve, and which will one day surely be yours, can never heighten my judgment of you, so nothing that is not in your own control will ever lower it, and that I shall think as simply of you when the World's opinion has overtaken my own, as now.

As the swiftly diverging channels of Life bear wider and wider apart from us the friends who hoisted sail with us as fellow-mariners, when we cast off for the voyage, and as some,

A LEGEND OF BRITTANY

Lowell was in high spirits when he was at work on A Legend of Brittany. "I am now at work," he writes to G. B. Loring, under date of June 15, 1843, "on a still longer poem [than Prometheus] in the ottava rima, to be the first in my forthcoming volume. I feel more and more assured every day that I shall yet do something that will keep my name (and perhaps my body) alive. My wings were never so light and strong as now."

A Legend of Brittany and most of the other poems in the volume which it opened belong in the category referred to by him in his Prefatory Note, of pieces which he "would gladly suppress or put into the Coventry of smaller print in an appendix." Their value is chiefly in the record they contain of his poetic development and his temperament.

PART FIRST

FAIR as a summer dream was Margaret,
Such dream as in a poet's soul might start,

Musing of old loves while the moon doth set:

Her hair was not more sunny than her heart,

Though like a natural golden coronet

It circled her dear head with careless art,

Mocking the sunshine, that would fain have lent

To its frank grace a richer ornament.

II

His loved one's eyes could poet ever speak, So kind, so dewy, and so deep were hers, —

But, while he strives, the choicest phrase, too weak,

Their glad reflection in his spirit blurs;

even, who are yet side by side with us, no longer send back to us an answering cheer, we are drawn the more closely to those that remain, and I would fain hope that this joining of our names will always be one of our not least happy memories.

And so, with all best wishes,

I remain always your friend,

J. R. LOWELL.

CAMBRIDGE, December 15, 1843.

As one may see a dream dissolve and break

Out of his grasp when he to tell it stirs, Like that sad Dryad doomed no more to bless

The mortal who revealed her loveliness.

She dwelt forever in a region bright,

Peopled with living fancies of her own,
Where naught could come but visions of delight,

Far, far aloof from earth's eternal moan:
A summer cloud thrilled through with rosy light,

Floating beneath the blue sky all alone,
Her spirit wandered by itself, and won A golden edge from some unsetting sun.

The heart grows richer that its lot is poor, God blesses want with larger sympathies,

Love enters gladliest at the humble door,
And makes the cot a palace with his eyes;

So Margaret's heart a softer beauty wore,
And grew in gentleness and patience wise,

For she was but a simple herdsman's child,
A lily chance-sown in the rugged wild.

There was no beauty of the wood or field

But she its fragrant bosom-secret knew, Nor any but to her would freely yield

Some grace that in her soul took root and grew:

Nature to her shone as but now revealed,
All rosy-fresh with innocent morning dew,

And looked into her heart with dim, sweet eyes

That left it full of sylvan memories.

Oh, what a face was hers to brighten light,
 And give back sunshine with an added glow,
 To wile each moment with a fresh delight, And part of memory's best contentment grow !
 Oh, how her voice, as with an inmate's
 right,
 Into the strangest heart would welcome go,
 And make it sweet, and ready to become Of white and gracious thoughts the chosen home !

None looked upon her but he straightway
 thought
 Of all the greenest depths of country
 cheer,
 And into each one's heart was freshly brought What was to him the sweetest time of year,
 So was her every look and motion fraught With out-of-door delights and forest lere;
 Not the first violet on a woodland lea Seemed a more visible gift of Spring than she.

Is love learned only out of poets' books ?
 Is there not somewhat in the dropping flood,
 And in the nunneries of silent nooks,
 And in the murmured longing of the wood,
 That could make Margaret dream of lovelorn looks,
 And stir a thrilling mystery in her blood More trembly secret than Aurora's tear Shed in the bosom of an eglare ?

Full many a sweet forewarning hath the
 mind,
 Full many a whispering of vague desire,
 Ere comes the nature destined to unbind Its virgin zone, and all its deeps inspire,—
 Low stirrings in the leaves, before the wind Wake all the green strings of the forest lyre,

Faint heatings in the calyx, ere the rose Its warm voluptuous breast doth all un-close.

Long in its dim recesses pines the spirit, Wildered and dark, despairingly alone; Though many a shape of beauty wander near it,
 And many a wild and half-remembered tone
 Tremble from the divine abyss to cheer it, Yet still it knows that there is only one Before whom it can kneel and tribute bring,
 At once a happy vassal and a king.

To feel a want, yet scarce know what it is,
 To seek one nature that is always new,
 Whose glance is warmer than another's
 kiss,
 Whom we can bare our inmost beauty to,
 Nor feel deserted afterwards,—for this But with our destined co-mate we can do,— Such longing instinct fills the mighty scope Of the young soul with one mysterious hope.

XII

So Margaret's heart grew brimming with the lore
 Of love's enticing secrets; and although She had found none to cast it down before, Yet oft to Fancy's chapel she would go To pay her vows—and count the rosary o'er
 Of her love's promised graces:—haply
 so Miranda's hope had pictured Ferdinand Long ere the gaunt wave tossed him on the strand.

A new-made star that swims the lonely
 gloom,
 Unwedded yet and longing for the sun, Whose beams, the bride-gifts of the lavish groom,
 Blithely to crown the virgin planet run,
 Her being was, watching to see the bloom Of love's fresh sunrise roofing one by one
 Its clouds with gold, a triumph-arch to be
 For him who came to hold her heart in fee.

Not far from Margaret's cottage dwelt a knight
 Of the proud Templars, a sworn celibate, Whose heart in secret fed upon the light And dew of her ripe beauty, through the grate Of his close vow catching what gleams he might
 Of the free heaven, and cursing all too late The cruel faith whose black walls hemmed him in And turned life's crowning bliss to deadly sin.

XV

For he had met her in the wood by chance,
 And, having drunk her beauty's wildering spell,
 His heart shook like the pennon of a lance That quivers in a breeze's sudden swell,
 And thenceforth, in a close-infolded trance,
 From mistily golden deep to deep he fell;
 Till earth did waver and fade far away Beneath the hope in whose warm arms he lay.

A dark, proud man he was, whose half-blown youth Had shed its blossoms even in opening, Leaving a few that with more winning ruth Trembling around grave manhood's stern might cling,
 More sad than cheery, making, in good sooth,
 Like the fringed gentian, a late autumn spring:
 A twilight nature, braided light and gloom,
 A youth half-smiling by an open tomb.

Fair as an angel, who yet inly wore A wrinkled heart foreboding his near fall;
 Who saw him always wished to know him more,
 As if he were some fate's defiant thrall
 And nursed a dreaded secret at his core;
 Little he loved, but power the most of all,
 And that he seemed to scorn, as one who knew
 By what foul paths men choose to crawl thereto.

XVIII

He had been noble, but some great deceit Had turned his better instinct to a vice:
 He strove to think the world was all a cheat,
 That power and fame were cheap at any price,
 That the sure way of being shortly great Was even to play life's game with loaded dice, Since he had tried the honest play and found That vice and virtue differed but in sound.

Yet Margaret's sight redeemed him for a space From his own thralldom; man could never be A hypocrite when first such maiden grace Smiled in upon his heart; the agony Of wearing all day long a lying face Fell lightly from him, and, a moment free, Erect with wakened faith his spirit stood
 And scorned the weakness of his demon-mood.

XX

Like a sweet wind-harp to him was her thought, Which would not let the common air come near,
 Till from its dim enchantment it had caught A musical tenderness that brimmed his ear With sweetness more ethereal than aught Save silver-dropping snatches that whilere Rained down from some sad angel's faithful harp
 To cool her fallen lover's anguish sharp.

Deep in the forest was a little dell High overarched with the leafy sweep Of a broad oak, through whose gnarled roots there fell A slender rill that sung itself to sleep, Where its continuous toil had scooped a well To please the fairy folk; breathlessly deep The stillness was, save when the dreaming brook
 From its small urn a drizzly murmur shook

The wooded hills sloped upward all around With gradual rise, and made an even rim, So that it seemed a mighty casque unbound

From some huge Titan's brow to lighten
 him,
 Ages ago, and left upon the ground, Where the slow soil had mossed it to the brim,
 Till after countless centuries it grew Into this dell, the haunt of noontide dew.

Dim vistas, sprinkled o'er with sun-flecked
 green,
 Wound through the thickset trunks on every side,
 And, toward the west, in fancy might be seen
 A Gothic window in its blazing pride, When the low sun, two arching elms between,
 Lit up the leaves beyond, which, autumn-dyed
 With lavish hues, would into splendor start, Shaming the labored panes of richest art.

Here, leaning once against the old oak's trunk, Mordred, for such was the young Templar's name,
 Saw Margaret come; unseen, the falcon shrunk
 From the meek dove; sharp thrills of tingling flame Made him forget that he was vowed a monk,
 And all the outworks of his pride o'er-
 came:
 Flooded he seemed with bright delicious
 pain,
 As if a star had burst within his brain.

Such power hath beauty and frank innocence:
 A flower bloomed forth, that sunshine glad to bless,
 Even from his love's long leafless stem;
 the sense Of elf from Hope's happy realm grew less,

And thoughts of childish peace, he knew not whence,
 Thronged round his heart with many an old caress,
 Melting the frost there into pearly dew That mirrored back his nature's morning-blue.

XXVI

She turned and saw him, but she felt no dread,
 Her purity, like adamant mail,
 Did so encircle her; and yet her head She drooped, and made her golden hair her veil,
 Through which a glow of rosiest lustre spread,
 Then faded, and anon she stood all pale,
 As snow o'er which a blush of northern-light Suddenly reddens, and as soon grows white.

XXVII

She thought of Tristrem and of Lancilot, Of all her dreams, and of kind fairies'
 night,
 And how that dell was deemed a haunted
 spot,
 Until there grew a mist before her sight,
 And where the present was she half forgot, Borne backward through the realms of old delight,— Then, starting up awake, she would have gone,
 Yet almost wished it might not be alone.

XXVIII

How they went home together through the wood,
 And how all life seemed focussed into one Thought-dazzling spot that set ablaze the blood,
 What need to tell? Fit language there is none
 For the heart's deepest things. Who ever wooed
 As in his boyish hope he would have done?
 For, when the soul is fullest, the hushed tongue
 Voicelessly trembles like a lute unstrung.

XXIX

But all things carry the heart's messages And know it not, nor doth the heart well
 know,

But Nature hath her will; even as the bees,

Blithe go-betweens, fly singing to and fro With the fruit-quickening pollen; — hard if these

Found not some all unthought-of way to show

Their secret each to each; and so they did,
And one heart's flower-dust into the other slid.

XXX

Young hearts are free; the selfish world it is

That turns them miserly and cold as stone,

And makes them clutch their fingers on the bliss

Which but in giving truly is their own; —

She had no dreams of barter, asked not his,

But gave hers freely as she would have thrown

A rose to him, or as that rose gives forth Its generous fragrance, thoughtless of its worth.

XXXI

Her summer nature felt a need to bless,

And a like longing to be blest again;

So, from her sky-like spirit, gentleness

Dropt ever like a sunlit fall of rain,

And his beneath drank in the bright caress

As thirstily as would a parched plain,

That long hath watched the showers of sloping gray

For ever, ever, falling far away.

XXXII

How should she dream of ill? the heart filled quite

With sunshine, like the shepherd's-clock at noon,

Closes its leaves around its warm delight;

Whate'er in life is harsh or out of tune

Is all shut out, no boding shade of blight

Can pierce the opiate ether of its swoon:

Love is but blind as thoughtful justice is,

But naught can be so wanton-blind as bliss.

XXXIII

All beauty and all life he was to her;

She questioned not his love, she only knew

That she loved him, and not a pulse could stir

In her whole frame but quivered through and through

With this glad thought, and was a minister

To do him fealty and service true,

Like golden ripples hasting to the land

To wreck their freight of sunshine on the strand.

XXXIV

O dewy dawn of love! O hopes that are Hung high, like the cliff-swallow's perilous nest,

Most like to fall when fullest, and that jar

With every heavier billow! O unrest Than balmiest deeps of quiet sweeter far!

How did ye triumph now in Margaret's breast,

Making it readier to shrink and start Than quivering gold of the pond-lily's heart!

XXXV

Here let us pause: oh, would the soul might ever

Achieve its immortality in youth,

When nothing yet hath damped its high endeavor

After the starry energy of truth!

Here let us pause, and for a moment sever

This gleam of sunshine from the sad unruth

That sometime comes to all, for it is good To lengthen to the last a sunny mood.

PART SECOND

As one who, from the sunshine and the
green,

Enters the solid darkness of a cave,

Nor knows what precipice or pit unseen

May yawn before him with its sudden
grave,

And, with hushed breath, doth often forward lean,

Dreaming he hears the plashing of a wave

Dimly below, or feels a damper air From out some dreary chasm, he knows not where;

II

So, from the sunshine and the green of love,

We enter on our story's darker part;
And, though the horror of it well may move

An impulse of repugnance in the heart, Yet let us think, that, as there's naught above

The all-embracing atmosphere of Art,
So also there is naught that falls below
Her generous reach, though grimed with guilt and woe.

Her fittest triumph is to show that good Lurks in the heart of evil evermore, That love, though scorned, and outcast, and withstood,

Can without end forgive, and yet have store;
God's love and man's are of the selfsame blood,

And He can see that always at the door Of foulest hearts the angel-nature yet Knocks to return and cancel all its debt.

It ever is weak falsehood's destiny
That her thick mask turns crystal to let through

The unsuspicious eyes of honesty; But Margaret's heart was too sincere and true

Aught but plain truth and faithfulness to see,

And Mordred's for a time a little grew To be like hers, won by the mild reproof
Of those kind eyes that kept all doubt aloof.

Full oft they met, as dawn and twilight meet

In northern climes; she full of growing day

As he of darkness, which before her feet Shrank gradual, and faded quite away, Soon to return; for power had made love sweet

To him, and, when his will had gained full sway,

The taste began to pall; for never power Can sate the hungry soul beyond an hour.

He fell as doth the tempter ever fall, Even in the gaining of his loathsome end;

God doth not work as man works, but makes all

The crooked paths of ill to goodness tend;

Let him judge Margaret! If to be the thrall

Of love, and faith too generous to defend Its very life from him she loved, be sin,
What hope of grace may the seducer win?

Grim-hearted world, that look'st with Le-vite eyes

On those poor fallen by too much faith in man,

She that upon thy freezing threshold lies,
Starved to more sinning by thy savage ban,

Seeking that refuge because foulest vice More godlike than thy virtue is, whose span

Shuts out the wretched only, is more free To enter heaven than thou shalt ever be!

Thou wilt not let her wash thy dainty feet
With such salt things as tears, or with rude hair

Dry them, soft Pharisee, that sit'st at meat
With him who made her such, and speak'st him fair,

Leaving God's wandering lamb the while to bleat

Unheeded, shivering in the pitiless air:
Thou hast made prisoned virtue show more wan

And haggard than a vice to look upon.

Now many months flew by, and weary grew

To Margaret the sight of happy things; Blight fell on all her flowers, instead of dew;

Shut round her heart were now the joyous wings

Wherewith it wont to soar; yet not untrue,

Though tempted much, her woman's nature clings

To its first pure belief, and with sad eyes Looks backward o'er the gate of Paradise.

And so, though altered Mordred came less oft,

And winter frowned where spring had laughed before

In his strange eyes, yet half her sadness doffed,

And in her silent patience loved him
more:

Sorrow had made her soft heart yet more soft,

And a new life within her own she bore Which made her tenderer, as she felt it move

Beneath her breast, a refuge for her love.

XI

This babe, she thought, would surely bring him back,

And be a bond forever them between;
Before its eyes the sullen tempest-rack

Would fade, and leave the face of heaven serene;

And love's return doth more than fill the lack,

Which in his absence withered the heart's
green:

And yet a dim foreboding still would flit Between her and her hope to darken it.

She could not figure forth a happy fate,

Even for this life from heaven so newly come;

The earth must needs be doubly desolate To him scarce parted from a fairer
home:

Such boding heavier on her bosom sate

One night, as, standing in the twilight
gloom,

She strained her eyes beyond that dizzy verge

At whose foot faintly breaks the future's surge.

Poor little spirit ! naught but shame and woe Nurse the sick heart whose lifeblood nurses thine:

Yet not those only ; love hath triumphed so,
As for thy sake makes sorrow more divine:

And yet, though thou be pure, the world is foe

To purity, if born in such a shrine;
And, having trampled it for struggling thence,

Smiles to itself, and calls it Providence.

As thus she mused, a shadow seemed to rise

From out her thought, and turn to dreari-
ness

All blissful hopes and sunny memories,
And the quick blood would curdle up and press

About her heart, which seemed to shut its
eyes

And hush itself, as who with shuddering guess

Harks through the gloom and dreads e'er now to feel

Through his hot breast the icy slide of steel.

But, at that heart-beat, while in dread sh-was,

In the low wind the honeysuckles gleam

A dewy thrill flits through the heav-
grass,

And, looking forth, she saw, as in a dream,

Within the wood the moonlight's shadowy mass:

Night's starry heart yearning to her doth seem,

And the deep sky, full-hearted with the moon,

Folds round her all the happiness of June

XVI

What fear could face a heaven and earth like this ?

What silveriest cloud could hang 'neath such a sky ?

A tide of wondrous and unwonted bliss Rolls back through all her pulses suddenly,

As if some seraph, who had learned to kiss

From the fair daughters of the world gone by,

Had wedded so his fallen light with hers, Such sweet, strange joy through soul and body stirs.

XVII

Now seek we Mordred: he who did not fear
The crime, yet fears the latent consequence:

If it should reach a brother Templar's ear,
It haply might be made a good pretence
To cheat him of the hope he held most dear;

For he had spared no thought's or deed's expense,
That by and by might help his wish to clip
Its darling bride, — the high grandmaster-ship.

The apathy, ere a crime resolved is done,
Is scarce less dreadful than remorse for crime;

By no allurement can the soul be won From brooding o'er the weary creep of time:

Mordred stole forth into the happy sun,
Striving to hum a scrap of Breton rhyme,

But the sky struck him speechless, and he tried

In vain to summon up his callous pride.

In the courtyard a fountain leaped alway, A Triton blowing jewels through his shell

Into the sunshine; Mordred turned away, Weary because the stone face did not tell Of weariness, nor could he bear to-day,

Heartsick, to hear the patient sink and swell

Of winds among the leaves, or golden bees Drowsily humming in the orange-trees.

All happy sights and sounds now came to him

Like a reproach: he wandered far and wide,

Following the lead of his unquiet whim,
But still there went a something at his side

That made the cool breeze hot, the sunshine dim;

It would not flee, it could not be defied,
He could not see it, but he felt it there,
By the damp chill that crept among his hair.

Day wore at last; the evening-star arose,
And throbbing in the sky grew red and set;

Then with a guilty, wavering step he goes To the hid nook where they so oft had met

In happier season, for his heart well knows That he is sure to find poor Margaret Watching and waiting there with love-lorn breast

Around her young dream's rudely scattered nest.

Why follow here that grim old chronicle
Which counts the dagger-strokes and drops of blood?

Enough that Margaret by his mad steel fell,

Unmoved by murder from her trusting mood,

Smiling on him as Heaven smiles on Hell,
With a sad love, remembering when he stood

Not fallen yet, the unsealer of her heart,
Of all her holy dreams the holiest part.

His crime complete, scarce knowing what he did,

(So goes the tale,) beneath the altar there

In the high church the stiffening corpse he hid,

And then, to 'scape that suffocating air,
Like a scared ghoul out of the porch he slid;

But his strained eyes saw blood-spots everywhere,

And ghastly faces thrust themselves between

His soul and hopes of peace with blasting mien.

His heart went out within him like a spark Dropt in the sea; wherever he made bold

To turn his eyes, he saw, all stiff and stark, Pale Margaret lying dead; the lavish gold

Of her loose hair seemed in the cloudy dark
To spread a glory, and a thousand-fold

More strangely pale and beautiful she grew:
Her silence stabbed his conscience through and through.

Or visions of past days, — a mother's eyes That smiled down on the fair boy at her knee,
Whose happy upturned face to hers replies, —
He saw sometimes: or Margaret mournfully Gazed on him full of doubt, as one who tries To crush belief that does love injury;
Then she would wring her hands, but soon
again Love's patience glimmered out through cloudy pain.

Meanwhile he dared not go and steal away
The silent, dead-cold witness of his sin;
He had not feared the life, but that dull
clay,
Those open eyes that showed the death within,
Would surely stare him mad; yet all the
day
A dreadful impulse, whence his will could win
No refuge, made him linger in the aisle, Freezing with his wan look each greeting smile.

XXVII

Now, on the second day there was to be A festival in church: from far and near Came flocking in the sunburnt peasantry, And knights and dames with stately antique cheer,
Blazing with pomp, as if all faërie Had emptied her quaint halls, or, as it were,
The illuminated marge of some old book, While we were gazing, life and motion took.

XXVIII

When all were entered, and the roving eyes Of all were stayed, some upon faces bright,
Some on the priests, some on the traceries That decked the slumber of a marble knight,

And all the rustlings over that arise From recognizing tokens of delight, When friendly glances meet, — then silent ease
Spread o'er the multitude by slow degrees.

Then swelled the organ: up through choir and nave
The music trembled with an inward thrill Of bliss at its own grandeur: wave on wave Its flood of mellow thunder rose, until The hushed air shivered with the throb it gave,
Then, poising for a moment, it stood still,
And sank and rose again, to burst in spray
That wandered into silence far away.

Like to a mighty heart the music seemed,
That yearns with melodies it cannot
speak,
Until, in grand despair of what it dreamed,
In the agony of effort it doth break, Yet triumphs breaking; on it rushed and streamed
And waned in its might, as when a lake, Long pent among the mountains, bursts its walls
And in one crowding gush leaps forth and falls.

XXXI

Deeper and deeper shudders shook the air;
As the huge bass kept gathering heavily;
Like thunder when it rouses in its lair,
And with its hoarse growl shakes the low-hung sky,
It grew up like a darkness everywhere,
Filling the vast cathedral; — suddenly,
From the dense mass a boy's clear treble broke Like lightning, and the full-toned choir awoke.

Through gorgeous windows shone the sun aslant, Brimming the church with gold and purple mist,
Meet atmosphere to bosom that rich chant Where fifty voices in one strand did twine Their varicolored tones, and left no want To the delighted soul, which sank abyssed

In the warm music cloud, while, far below,
The organ heaved its surges to and fro.

XXXIII

As if a lark should suddenly drop dead
While the blue air yet trembled with its song,
So snapped at once that music's golden thread, Struck by a nameless fear that leapt along From heart to heart, and like a shadow spread With instantaneous shiver through the throng, So that some glanced behind, as half aware
A hideous shape of dread were standing there.

As when a crowd of pale men gather round, Watching an eddy in the leaden deep,
From which they deem the body of one drowned Will be cast forth, from face to face doth creep An eager dread that holds all tongues fast bound Until the horror, with a ghastly leap, Starts up, its dead blue arms stretched aimlessly, Heaved with the swinging of the careless sea, —

XXXV

So in the faces of all these there grew,
As by one impulse, a dark, freezing awe, Which with a fearful fascination drew All eyes toward the altar; damp and raw
The air grew suddenly, and no man knew Whether perchance his silent neighbor saw The dreadful thing which all were sure would rise
To scare the strained lids wider from their eyes.

XXXVI

The incense trembled as it upward sent Its slow, uncertain thread of wandering blue,
As 't were the only living element In all the church, so deep the stillness grew;

It seemed one might have heard it, as it went,
Give out an audible rustle, curling through The midnight silence of that awestruck air, More hushed than death, though so much life was there.

XXXVII

Nothing they saw, but a low voice was heard Threading the ominous silence of that fear, Gentle and terrorless as if a bird, Wakened by some volcano's glare, should cheer
The murk air with his song; yet every word In the cathedral's farthest arch seemed near,
As if it spoke to every one apart,
Like the clear voice of conscience in each heart.

XXXVIII

"O Rest, to weary hearts thou art most dear!
O Silence, after life's bewildering din, Thou art most welcome, whether in the sear Days of our age thou comest, or we win Thy poppy-wreath in youth! then wherefore here Linger I yet, once free to enter in At that wished gate which gentle Death doth ope,
Into the boundless realm of strength and hope?

XXXIX

"Think not in death my love could ever cease;
If thou wast false, more need there is for me Still to be true; that slumber were not peace,
If 't were unvisited with dreams of thee:
And thou hadst never heard such words as these, Save that in heaven I must forever be Most comfortless and wretched, seeing this Our unbaptized babe shut out from bliss.

XL

"This little spirit with imploring eyes Wanders alone the dreary wild of space;

The shadow of his pain forever lies Upon my soul in this new dwelling-
 place;
 His loneliness makes me in Paradise
 More lonely, and, unless I see his face, Even here for grief could I lie down and
 die,
 Save for my curse of immortality.

XLI

"World after world he sees around him swim Crowded with happy souls, that take no heed
 Of the sad eyes that from the night's faint rim Gaze sick with longing on them as they speed
 With golden gates, that only shut on him;
 And shapes sometimes from hell's abysses freed
 Flap darkly by him, with enormous sweep Of wings that roughen wide the pitchy deep.

XLII

"I am a mother,—spirits do not shake This much of earth from them,—and I must pine Till I can feel his little hands, and take His weary head upon this heart of mine;
 And, might it be, full gladly for his sake Would I this solitude of bliss resign And be shut out of heaven to dwell with
 him
 Forever in that silence drear and dim.

XLIII

"I strove to hush my soul, and would not speak
 At first, for thy dear sake; a woman's love Is mighty, but a mother's heart is weak,
 And by its weakness overcomes; I strove To smother bitter thoughts with patience meek,
 But still in the abyss my soul would rove, Seeking my child, and drove me here to claim
 The rite that gives him peace in Christ's dear name.

XLIV

"I sit and weep while blessed spirits sing;
 I can but long and pine the while they praise,

And, leaning o'er the wall of heaven, fling
 My voice to where I deem my infant strays,
 Like a robbed bird that cries in vain bring Her nestlings back beneath her win-embrace;
 But still he answers not, and I but know That heaven and earth are both alike woe."

XLV

Then the pale priests, with ceremony due Baptized the child within its dread tomb Beneath that mother's heart, whose insti-
 true Star-like had battled down the tri-
 gloom
 Of sorrow, love, and death: young maids too, Strewed the pale corpse with many milkwhite bloom,
 And parted the bright hair, and on breast
 Crossed the unconscious hands in sign rest.

XLVI

Some said, that, when the priest I sprinkled o'er
 The consecrated drops, they seemed bear
 A sigh, as of some heart from travail so-Released, and then two voices sing-clear, Misereatur Deus, more and more Fading far upward, and their ghast-
 fear
 Fell from them with that sound, as bod-fall
 From souls upspringing to celestial hall.

PROMETHEUS

In a letter to G. B. Loring, dated June 1843, Lowell writes: "I have been very hap-for the last day or two in writing a long poem in blank verse on Prometheus, the Greek arch-type of St. Simeon Stylites, the first reformer and locofoco of the Greek Mythology. It may be quite worth your while to read it when it is printed. I hope to see it in the July number of the Democratic Review, but fear it was late, having only been sent on this morning. It is the longest and best poem I have ever written, and overrunning with true radicalism and antislavery. I think that it will open the eyes of some folk and make them think that I am a poet, whatever they may say."

After the appearance of the poem, he regrets the absence of any public notice, and acknowledges thus an appreciative letter from his friend Charles F. Briggs: "Although such great names as Goethe, Byron, and Shelley have all handled the subject in modern times, you will find that I have looked at it from a somewhat new point of view. I have made it radical, and I believe that no poet in this age can write much that is good unless he give himself up to this tendency. For radicalism has now for the first time taken a distinctive and acknowledged shape of its own. So much of its spirit as poets in former ages have attained (and from their purer organization they could not fail of some) was by instinct rather than by reason. It has never till now been seen to be one of the two great wings that upbear the universe."

ONE after one the stars have risen and set,
Sparkling upon the hoarfrost on my chain:
The Bear, that prowled all night about the fold
Of the North-star, hath shrunk into his den, Scared by the blithesome footsteps of the Dawn,
Whose blushing smile floods all the Orient;
And now bright Lucifer grows less and less,
Into the heaven's blue quiet deep-withdrawn.
Sunless and starless all, the desert sky Arches above me, empty as this heart For ages hath been empty of all joy, Except to brood upon its silent hope,
As o'er its hope of day the sky doth now.
All night have I heard voices: deeper yet
The deep low breathing of the silence grew, While all about, muffled in awe, there stood Shadows, or forms, or both, clear-felt at
heart,
But, when I turned to front them, far along Only a shudder through the midnight ran,
And the dense stillness walled me closer round.
But still I heard them wander up and down That solitude, and flappings of dusk wings Did mingle with them, whether of those hags
Let slip upon me once from Hades deep,

Or of yet direr torments, if such be,
I could but guess; and then toward me

A shape as of a woman: very pale
It was, and calm; its cold eyes did not move,

And mine moved not, but only stared on them.

Their fixed awe went through my brain like ice;

A skeleton hand seemed clutching at my
heart,

And a sharp chill, as if a dank night fog Suddenly closed me in, was all I felt:

And then, methought, I heard a freezing sigh,

A long, deep, shivering sigh, as from blue lips

Stiffening in death, close to mine ear. I
thought

Some doom was close upon me, and I looked And saw the red moon through the heavy mist,

Just setting, and it seemed as it were falling,

Or reeling to its fall, so dim and dead And palsy-struck it looked. Then all sounds merged

Into the rising surges of the pines, Which, leagues below me, clothing the gaunt loins

Of ancient Caucasus with hairy strength, Sent up a murmur in the morning wind, Sad as the wail that from the populous
earth

All day and night to high Olympus soars, Fit incense to thy wicked throne, O Jove!

Thy hated name is tossed once more in scorn

From off my lips, for I will tell thy doom.
And are these tears? Nay, do not triumph, Jove!

They are wrung from me but by the agonies

Of prophecy, like those sparse drops which fall

From clouds in travail of the lightning, when

The great wave of the storm high-curved and black

Rolls steadily onward to its thunderous break.

Why art thou made a god of, thou poor type

Of anger, and revenge, and cunning force ?
 True Power was never born of brutish
 Strength,
 Nor sweet Truth suckled at the shaggy dugs
 Of that old she-wolf. Are thy thunderbolts,
 That quell the darkness for a space, so strong
 As the prevailing patience of meek Light, Who, with the invincible tenderness of peace,
 Wins it to be a portion of herself ?
 Why art thou made a god of, thou, who hast
 The never-sleeping terror at thy heart,
 That birthright of all tyrants, worse to bear Than this thy ravening bird on which I smile ?
 Thou swear'st to free me, if I will unfold
 What kind of doom it is whose omen flits Across thy heart, as o'er a troop of doves The fearful shadow of the kite. What need To know that truth whose knowledge cannot save ?
 Evil its errand hath, as well as Good ;
 When thine is finished, thou art known no
 more :
 There is a higher purity than thou,
 And higher purity is greater strength ;
 Thy nature is thy doom, at which thy heart Trembles behind the thick wall of thy night.
 Let man but hope, and thou art straightway chilled
 With thought of that drear silence and deep
 night
 Which, like a dream, shall swallow thee and thine :
 Let man but will, and thou art god no
 more,
 More capable of ruin than the gold And ivory that image thee on earth.
 He who hurled down the monstrous Titanbrood Blinded with lightnings, with rough thunders stunned,
 Is weaker than a simple human thought.
 My slender voice can shake thee, as the breeze,
 That seems but apt to stir a maiden's hair, Sways huge Oceanus from pole to pole ;
 For I am still Prometheus, and foreknow In my wise heart the end and doom of all.

Yes, I am still Prometheus, wiser grown By years of solitude, — that holds apart
 The past and future, giving the soul room
 To search into itself, — and long communed
 With this eternal silence ; — more a god,
 In my long-suffering and strength to meet With equal front the direst shafts of fate Than thou in thy faint-hearted despotism Girt with thy baby-toys of force and wrath Yes, I am that Prometheus who brought down
 The light to man, which thou, in selfish
 fear, Hadst to thyself usurped, — his by so
 right,
 For Man hath right to all save Tyranny,
 And which shall free him yet from thy firm throne.
 Tyrants are but the spawn of Ignorance, Begotten by the slaves they trample on,
 Who, could they win a glimmer of the
 light,
 And see that Tyranny is always weakness
 Or Fear with its own bosom ill at ease, Would laugh away in scorn the sand-worchain
 Which their own blindness feigned for ad-mant.
 Wrong ever builds on quicksands, but the Right
 To the firm centre lays its moveless base
 The tyrant trembles, if the air but stir
 The innocent ringlets of a child's free hair And crouches, when the thought of some great spirit,
 With world-wide murmur, like a rising gale,
 Over men's hearts, as over standing corn Rushes, and bends them to its own storm will.
 So shall some thought of mine yet circle
 earth,
 And puff away thy crumbling altars, Jove And, wouldst thou know of my supreme revenge,
 Poor tyrant, even now dethroned in heart Realmless in soul, as tyrants ever are,
 Listen ! and tell me if this bitter peak, This never-glutted vulture, and the chains
 Shrink not before it ; for it shall befit
 A sorrow-taught, unconquered Titan-head Men, when their death is on them, seem stand

On a precipitous crag that overhangs
The abyss of doom, and in that depth to see,
As in a glass, the features dim and vast Of things to come, the shadows, as it seems,

Of what have been. Death ever fronts the wise;

Not fearfully, but with clear promises Of larger life, on whose broad vans up-borne,

Their outlook widens, and they see beyond
The horizon of the Present and the Past,
Even to the very source and end of things.
Such am I now: immortal woe hath made My heart a seer, and my soul a judge Between the substance and the shadow of Truth.

The sure supremeness of the Beautiful,
By all the martyrdoms made doubly sure Of such as I am, this is my revenge, Which of my wrongs builds a triumphal arch,

Through which I see a sceptre and a throne.

The pipings of glad shepherds on the hills, Tending the flocks no more to bleed for
thee;

The songs of maidens pressing with white feet

The vintage on thine altars poured no more;
The murmurous bliss of lovers underneath Dim grapevine bowers whose rosy bunches press

Not half so closely their warm cheeks, un-paled

By thoughts of thy brute lust; the hive-like hum

Of peaceful commonwealths, where sunburnt Toil

Reaps for itself the rich earth made its own By its own labor, lightened with glad hymns

To an omnipotence which thy mad bolts Would cope with as a spark with the vast sea, —

Even the spirit of free love and peace, Duty's sure recompense through life and death, —

These are such harvests as all master-spirits

Reap, haply not on earth, but reap no less Because the sheaves are bound by hands not theirs;

These are the bloodless daggers wherewithal

They stab fallen tyrants, this their high revenge:

For their best part of life on earth is when, Long after death, prisoned and pent no
more,

Their thoughts, their wild dreams even, have become

Part of the necessary air men breathe:

When, like the moon, herself behind a cloud,

They shed down light before us on life's
sea,

That cheers us to steer onward still in hope.

Earth with her twining memories ivies o'er Their holy sepulchres; the chainless sea, In tempest or wide calm, repeats their thoughts;

The lightning and the thunder, all free
things,

Have legends of them for the ears of men.
All other glories are as falling stars,
But universal Nature watches theirs:

Such strength is won by love of humankind.

Not that I feel that hunger after fame, Which souls of a half-greatness are beset with;

But that the memory of noble deeds

Cries shame upon the idle and the vile,

And keeps the heart of Man forever up

To the heroic level of old time.

To be forgot at first is little pain

To a heart conscious of such high intent

As must be deathless on the lips of men;

But, having been a name, to sink and be

A something which the world can do without,

Which, having been or not, would never change

The lightest pulse of fate, — this is indeed

A cup of bitterness the worst to taste,

And this thy heart shall empty to the dregs.

Endless despair shall be thy Caucasus,

And memory thy vulture; thou wilt find

Oblivion far lonelier than this peak.

Behold thy destiny! Thou think'st it much

That I should brave thee, miserable god!

But I have braved a mightier than thou,

Even the sharp tempting of this soaring
heart,

Which might have made me, scarcely less than thou.

A god among my brethren weak and blind, Scarce less than thou, a pitiable thing
 To be down-trodden into darkness soon.
 But now I am above thee, for thou art The bungling workmanship of fear, the block

That awes the swart Barbarian; but I Am what myself have made, — a nature

With finding in itself the types of all,
 With watching from the dim verge of the time

What things to be are visible in the gleams Thrown forward on them from the luminous past,

Wise with the history of its own frail
 heart,

With reverence and with sorrow, and with love,

Broad as the world, for freedom and for
 man.

Thou and all strength shall crumble, except Love,

By whom, and for whose glory, ye shall cease:

And, when thou 'rt but a weary moaning heard

From out the pitiless gloom of Chaos, I Shall be a power and a memory,
 A name to fright all tyrants with, a light Unsetting as the pole-star, a great voice Heard in the breathless pauses of the fight

By truth and freedom ever waged with
 wrong,

Clear as a silver trumpet, to awake Far echoes that from age to age live on In kindred spirits, giving them a sense Of boundless power from boundless suffering wrung:

And many a glazing eye shall smile to see The memory of my triumph (for to meet Wrong with endurance, and to overcome
 The present with a heart that looks beyond, Are triumph), like a prophet eagle, perch Upon the sacred banner of the Right.
 Evil springs up, and flowers, and bears no seed,

And feeds the green earth with its swift decay,

Leaving it richer for the growth of truth;
 But Good, once put in action or in thought, Like a strong oak, doth from its boughs shed down

The ripe germs of a forest. Thou, weak
 god,

Shalt fade and be forgotten ! but this soul,
 Fresh-living still in the serene abyss,
 In every heaving shall partake, that grows From heart to heart among the sons of men, —

As the ominous hum before the earthquake runs

Far through the Ægean from roused isle to isle, —

Foreboding wreck to palaces and shrines, And mighty rents in many a cavernous error

That darkens the free light to man: — This
 heart,

Unscarred by thy grim vulture, as the truth Grows but more lovely 'neath the beaks and claws

Of Harpies blind that fain would soil it, shall

In all the throbbing exultations share That wait on freedom's triumphs, and in all

The glorious agonies of martyr-spirits, Sharp lightning-throes to split the jagged clouds

That veil the future, showing them the end,

Pain's thorny crown for constancy and
 truth,

Girding the temples like a wreath of stars.
 This is a thought, that, like the fabled laurel,

Makes my faith thunder-proof; and thy dread bolts

Fall on me like the silent flakes of snow
 On the hoar brows of aged Caucasus:

But, oh, thought far more blissful, they can read

This cloud of flesh, and make my soul a star !

Unleash thy crouching thunders now, O
 Jove !

Free this high heart, which, a poor captive
 long,

Doth knock to be let forth, this heart which still,

In its invincible manhood, overtops Thy puny godship, as this mountain doth The pines that moss its roots. Oh, even
 now,

While from my peak of suffering I look
 down,

Beholding with a far-spread gush of hope
The sunrise of that Beauty, in whose face, Shone all around with love, no man shall look

But straightway like a god he be uplift Unto the throne long empty for his sake, And clearly oft foreshadowed in brave dreams

By his free inward nature, which nor thou, Nor any anarchy after thee, can bind From working its great doom, — now, now set free

This essence, not to die, but to become Part of that awful Presence which doth haunt

The palaces of tyrants, to scare off,
With its grim eyes and fearful whisperings
And hideous sense of utter loneliness,
All hope of safety, all desire of peace,
All but the loathed forefeeling of blank
death, —

Part of that spirit which doth ever brood
In patient calm on the unpilfered nest Of man's deep heart, till mighty thoughts grow fledged

To sail with darkening shadow o'er the
world,

Filling with dread such souls as dare not trust

In the unfailing energy of Good, Until they swoop, and their pale quarry
make

Of some o'erblasted wrong, — that spirit which

Scatters great hopes in the seed-field of
man,

Like acorns among grain, to grow and be A roof for freedom in all coming time !

But no, this cannot be; for ages yet,
In solitude unbroke, shall I hear The angry Caspian to the Euxine shout,
And Euxine answer with a muffled roar,
On either side storming the giant walls Of Caucasus with leagues of climbing foam (Less, from my height, than flakes of downy snow),

That draw back baffled but to hurl again,
Snatched up in wrath and horrible turmoil, Mountain on mountain, as the Titans erst,
My brethren, scaling the high seat of Jove, Heaved Pelion upon Ossa's shoulders broad

In vain emprise. The moon will come and go

With her monotonous vicissitude;
Once beautiful, when I was free to walk Among my fellows, and to interchange
The influence benign of loving eyes, But now by aged use grown wearisome; — False thought ! most false ! for how could I endure

These crawling centuries of lonely woe Unshamed by weak complaining, but for
thee,

Loneliest, save me, of all created things, Mild-eyed Astarte, my best comforter,
With thy pale smile of sad benignity ?

Year after year will pass away and seem To me, in mine eternal agony, But as the shadows of dumb summer
clouds,

Which I have watched so often darkening o'er

The vast Sarmatian plain, league-wide at first,

But, with still swiftness, lessening on and on

Till cloud and shadow meet and mingle where

The gray horizon fades into the sky, Far, far to northward. Yes, for ages yet Must I lie here upon my altar huge,
A sacrifice for man. Sorrow will be,
As it hath been, his portion; endless doom, While the immortal with the mortal linked Dreams of its wings and pines for what it
dreams,

With upward yearn unceasing. Better
so:

For wisdom is stern sorrow's patient child,
And empire over self, and all the deep Strong charities that make men seem like gods;

And love, that makes them be gods, from her breasts

Sucks in the milk that makes mankind one
blood.

Good never comes unmixed, or so it seems,
Having two faces, as some images Are carved, of foolish gods; one face is ill;

But one heart lies beneath, and that is
good,

As are all hearts, when we explore their depths.

Therefore, great heart, bear up ! thou art but type

Of what all lofty spirits endure, that fain

Would win men back to strength and peace through love:
 Each hath his lonely peak, and on each
 heart
 Envy, or scorn, or hatred, tears lifelong With vulture beak; yet the high soul is left;
 And faith, which is but hope grown wise,
 and love
 And patience which at last shall overcome.

THE SHEPHERD OF KING ADMETUS

THERE came a youth upon the earth,
 Some thousand years ago,
 Whose slender hands were nothing worth,
 Whether to plough, or reap, or sow.

Upon an empty tortoise-shell
 He stretched some chords, and drew Music that made men's bosoms swell Fearless, or brimmed their eyes with dew.

Then King Admetus, one who had Pure taste by right divine, Decried his singing not too bad
 To hear between the cups of wine:

And so, well pleased with being soothed
 Into a sweet half-sleep,
 Three times his kingly beard he smoothed,
 And made him viceroy o'er his sheep.

His words were simple words enough,
 And yet he used them so,
 That what in other mouths was rough
 In his seemed musical and low.

Men called him but a shiftless youth,
 In whom no good they saw;
 And yet, unwittingly, in truth,
 They made his careless words their law.

They knew not how he learned at all,
 For idly, hour by hour,
 He sat and watched the dead leaves fall,
 Or mused upon a common flower.

It seemed the loveliness of things Did teach him all their use, For, in mere weeds, and stones, and springs,
 He found a healing power profuse.

Men granted that his speech was wise,
 But, when a glance they caught
 Of his slim grace and woman's eyes, They laughed, and called him good-for-naught.

Yet after he was dead and gone,
 And e'en his memory dim,
 Earth seemed more sweet to live upon,
 More full of love, because of him.

And day by day more holy grew Each spot where he had trod, Till after-poets only knew Their first-born brother as a god.

THE TOKEN

It is a mere wild rosebud,
 Quite sallow now, and dry,
 Yet there's something wondrous in it,
 Some gleams of days gone by,
 Dear sights and sounds that are to me
 The very moons of memory,
 And stir my heart's blood far below
 Its short-lived waves of joy and woe.

Lips must fade and roses wither,
 All sweet times be o'er;
 They only smile, and, murmuring
 "Thither!"

Stay with us no more:
 And yet ofttimes a look or smile, Forgotten in a kiss's while,
 Years after from the dark will start,
 And flash across the trembling heart.

Thou hast given me many roses,
 But never one, like this,
 O'erfloods both sense and spirit
 With such a deep, wild bliss;
 We must have instincts that glean up Sparse drops of this life in the cup, Whose taste shall give us all that we Can prove of immortality.

Earth's stablest things are shadows,
 And, in the life to come,
 Haply some chance-saved trifle
 May tell of this old home:
 As now sometimes we seem to find,
 In a dark crevice of the mind,
 Some relic, which, long pondered o'er,
 Hints faintly at a life before.

AN INCIDENT IN A RAILROAD CAR

HE spoke of Burns: men rude and rough Pressed round to hear the praise of one Whose heart was made of manly, simple stuff.

As homespun as their own.

And, when he read, they forward leaned,
 Drinking, with thirsty hearts and ears, His brook-like songs whom glory never weaned
 From humble smiles and tears.

Slowly there grew a tender awe, Sun-like, o'er faces brown and hard,
 As if in him who read they felt and saw Some presence of the bard.

It was a sight for sin and wrong
 And slavish tyranny to see, A sight to make our faith more pure and strong
 In high humanity.

I thought, these men will carry hence Promptings their former life above,
 And something of a finer reverence For beauty, truth, and love.

God scatters love on every side Freely among his children all,
 And always hearts are lying open wide, Wherein some grains may fall.

There is no wind but soweth seeds
 Of a more true and open life, Which burst, unlooked for, into high-souled deeds,
 With wayside beauty rife.

We find within these souls of ours
 Some wild germs of a higher birth,
 Which in the poet's tropic heart bear flowers Whose fragrance fills the earth.

Within the hearts of all men lie
 These promises of wider bliss,
 Which blossom into hopes that cannot die,
 In sunny hours like this.

All that hath been majestic
 In life or death, since time began,

Is native in the simple heart of all,
 The angel heart of man.

And thus, among the untaught poor,
 Great deeds and feelings find a home,
 That cast in shadow all the golden lore Of classic Greece and Rome.

O mighty brother-soul of man, Where'er thou art, in low or high,
 Thy skyey arches with exulting span O'er-roof infinity!

All thoughts that mould the age begin Deep down within the primitive soul,
 And from the many slowly upward win
 To one who grasps the whole:

In his wide brain the feeling deep That struggled on the many's tongue Swells to a tide of thought, whose surges leap
 O'er the weak thrones of wrong.

All thought begins in feeling, — wide
 In the great mass its base is hid, And, narrowing up to thought, stands glorified,
 A moveless pyramid.

Nor is he far astray, who deems That every hope, which rises and grows broad
 In the world's heart, by ordered impulse streams
 From the great heart of God.

God wills, man hopes: in common souls Hope is but vague and undefined, Till from the poet's tongue the message rolls
 A blessing to his kind.

Never did Poesy appear So full of heaven to me, as when I saw how it would pierce through pride and fear
 To the lives of coarsest men.

It may be glorious to write Thoughts that shall glad the two or three High souls, like those far stars that come in sight
 Once in a century;—

But better far it is to speak
One simple word, which now and then Shall waken their free nature in the weak And friendless sons of men;

To write some earnest verse or line,
Which, seeking not the praise of art, Shall make a clearer faith and manhood shine
In the untutored heart.

He who doth this, in verse or prose,
May be forgotten in his day, But surely shall be crowned at last with those Who live and speak for aye.

RHÆCUS

God sends his teachers unto every age,
To every clime, and every race of men,
With revelations fitted to their growth And shape of mind, nor gives the realm of Truth
Into the selfish rule of one sole race:
Therefore each form of worship that hath swayed
The life of man, and given it to grasp
The master-key of knowledge, reverence, Infolds some germs of goodness and of
right;
Else never had the eager soul, which loathes
The slothful down of pampered ignorance, Found in it even a moment's fitful rest.

There is an instinct in the human heart Which makes that all the fables it hath coined,

To justify the reign of its belief
And strengthen it by beauty's right divine, Veil in their inner cells a mystic gift, Which, like the hazel twig, in faithful
hands,

Points surely to the hidden springs of truth.

For, as in nature naught is made in vain, But all things have within their hull of use

A wisdom and a meaning which may speak Of spiritual secrets to the ear Of spirit; so, in whatso'er the heart Hath fashioned for a solace to itself,
To make its inspirations suit its creed,

And from the niggard hands of falsehood wring

Its needful food of truth, there ever is A sympathy with Nature, which reveals, Not less than her own works, pure gleams of light

And earnest parables of inward lore.

Hear now this fairy legend of old Greece, As full of gracious youth, and beauty still As the immortal freshness of that grace Carved for all ages on some Attic frieze.

A youth named Rhæcus, wandering in the wood,
Saw an old oak just trembling to its fall,
And, feeling pity of so fair a tree, He propped its gray trunk with admiring care,
And with a thoughtless footstep loitered
on.

But, as he turned, he heard a voice behind That murmured "Rhæcus!" 'T was as if the leaves,

Stirred by a passing breath, had murmured
it,

And, while he paused bewildered, yet again It murmured "Rhæcus!" softer than a breeze.

He started and beheld with dizzy eyes What seemed the substance of a happy
dream

Stand there before him, spreading a warm glow

Within the green glooms of the shadowy oak.

It seemed a woman's shape, yet far too fair
To be a woman, and with eyes too meek For any that were wont to mate with gods.

All naked like a goddess stood she there,
And like a goddess all too beautiful
To feel the guilt-born earthliness of shame.

"Rhæcus, I am the Dryad of this tree," Thus she began, dropping her low-toned
words

Serene, and full, and clear, as drops of dew,
"And with it I am doomed to live and die;

The rain and sunshine are my caterers,
Nor have I other bliss than simple life;
Now ask me what thou wilt, that I can give,

And with a thankful joy it shall be thine."

Then Rhæcus, with a flutter at the heart, Yet by the prompting of such beauty bold, Answered: "What is there that can satisfy

The endless craving of the soul but love ?
Give me thy love, or but the hope of that Which must be evermore my nature's goal."

After a little pause she said again,
But with a glimpse of sadness in her tone,
"I give it, Rhæcus, though a perilous gift;
An hour before the sunset meet me here."
And straightway there was nothing he could see

But the green glooms beneath the shadowy oak,

And not a sound came to his straining ears
But the low trickling rustle of the leaves,
And far away upon an emerald slope
The falter of an idle shepherd's pipe.

Now, in those days of simpleness and faith,
Men did not think that happy things were
dreams

Because they overstepped the narrow bourn Of likelihood, but reverently deemed Nothing too wondrous or too beautiful To be the guerdon of a daring heart.
So Rhæcus made no doubt that he was blest,

And all along unto the city's gate Earth seemed to spring beneath him as he walked,

The clear, broad sky looked bluer than its wont,

And he could scarce believe he had not
wings,

Such sunshine seemed to glitter through his veins

Instead of blood, so light he felt and strange.

Young Rhæcus had a faithful heart
enough,

But one that in the present dwelt too much,

And, taking with blithe welcome whatsoe'er

Chance gave of joy, was wholly bound in that,

Like the contented peasant of a vale, Deemed it the world, and never looked beyond.

So, haply meeting in the afternoon Some comrades who were playing at the dice,

He joined them, and forgot all else beside.

The dice were rattling at the merriest,
And Rhæcus, who had met but sorry luck,
Just laughed in triumph at a happy throw, When through the room there hummed a yellow bee

That buzzed about his ear with down-dropped legs

As if to light. And Rhæcus laughed and said,

Feeling how red and flushed he was with loss,

"By Venus! does he take me for a rose?"
And brushed him off with rough, impatient hand.

But still the bee came back, and thrice
again

Rhæcus did beat him off with growing wrath.

Then through the window flew the wounded
bee,

And Rhæcus, tracking him with angry
eyes,

Saw a sharp mountain-peak of Thessaly Against the red disk of the setting sun,— And instantly the blood sank from his
heart,

As if its very walls had caved away.

Without a word he turned, and, rushing
forth,

Ran madly through the city and the gate,
And o'er the plain, which now the wood's long shade,

By the low sun thrown forward broad and dim,

Darkened wellnigh unto the city's wall.

Quite spent and out of breath he reached the tree,

And, listening fearfully, he heard once
more

The low voice murmur "Rhæcus!" close at hand:

Whereat he looked around him, but could
see

Naught but the deepening glooms beneath the oak.

Then sighed the voice, "O Rhæcus! never-
more

Shalt thou behold me or by day or night, Me, who would fain have blessed thee with a love

More ripe and bounteous than ever yet Filled up with nectar any mortal heart:

But thou didst scorn my humble messenger,

And sent'st him back to me with bruised wings.

We spirits only show to gentle eyes,
We ever ask an undivided love,
And he who scorns the least of Nature's works

Is thenceforth exiled and shut out from all.
Farewell! for thou canst never see me more."

Then Rhœus beat his breast, and groaned aloud,
And cried, "Be pitiful! forgive me yet This once, and I shall never need it more!"

"Alas!" the voice returned, "'t is thou art blind,

Not I unmerciful; I can forgive,
But have no skill to heal thy spirit's eyes;
Only the soul hath power o'er itself."
With that again there murmured "Nevermore!"

And Rhœus after heard no other sound, Except the rattling of the oak's crisp leaves,

Like the long surf upon a distant shore, Raking the sea-worn pebbles up and down.
The night had gathered round him: o'er the plain

The city sparkled with its thousand lights,
And sounds of revel fell upon his ear Harshly and like a curse; above, the sky,
With all its bright sublimity of stars, Deepened, and on his forehead smote the breeze:

Beauty was all around him and delight,
But from that eve he was alone on earth.

THE FALCON

I KNOW a falcon swift and peerless
As e'er was cradled in the pine;
No bird had ever eye so fearless,
Or wing so strong as this of mine.

The winds not better love to pilot
A cloud with molten gold o'errun, Than him, a little burning islet,
A star above the coming sun.

For with a lark's heart he doth tower,
By a glorious upward instinct drawn;
No bee nestles deeper in the flower Than he in the bursting rose of dawn.

No harmless dove, no bird that singeth, Shudders to see him overhead;
The rush of his fierce swooping bringeth
To innocent hearts no thrill of dread.

Let fraud and wrong and baseness shiver,
For still between them and the sky
The falcon Truth hangs poised forever And marks them with his vengeful eye.

TRIAL

WHETHER the idle prisoner through his grate

Watches the waving of the grass-tuft small,
Which, having colonized its rift i' th' wall, Accepts God's dole of good or evil fate,
And from the sky's just helmet draws its lot

Daily of shower or sunshine, cold or hot; — Whether the closer captive of a creed, Cooped up from birth to grind out endless chaff,

Sees through his treadmill-bars the noonday laugh,

And feels in vain his crumpled pinions breed; —

Whether the Georgian slave look up and mark,

With bellying sails puffed full, the tall cloud-bark

Sink northward slowly, — thou alone seem'st good,

Fair only thou, O Freedom, whose desire Can light in muddiest souls quick seeds of fire,

And strain life's chords to the old heroic mood.

II

Yet are there other gifts more fair than thine,

Nor can I count him happiest who has never Been forced with his own hand his chains to sever,

And for himself find out the way divine;
He never knew the aspirer's glorious pains,
He never earned the struggle's priceless gains.

Oh, block by block, with sore and sharp endeavor,

Lifelong we build these human natures up Into a temple fit for Freedom's shrine,

And Trial ever consecrates the cup Wherefrom we pour her sacrificial wine.

A GLANCE BEHIND THE CURTAIN

This poem, printed in The Democratic Review for September, 1843, is most probably the one to which Lowell refers in a letter to C. F. Briggs, already quoted in the head-note to Prometheus: "I have sent another poem to O'Sullivan, still more radical than Prometheus, and in some respects better, though, from its subject, incapable of so high a strain as that." Elsewhere in this letter he appears to give it the title Cromwell.

It is interesting to turn back five years to the summer of Lowell's graduation and listen to what he says to G. B. Loring: "A plan has been running in my head for some time, of writing a sort of dramatic poem on the subject of Cromwell. Those old Roundheads have never had justice done them. They have only been held up as canting, psalm-singing, hypocritical rascals; as a sort of foil for the open-hearted Cavalier. But it were a strange thing, indeed, if there were not somewhat in such men as Milton, Sidney, Hampden, Selden, and Pym. It always struck me that there was more true poetry in those old fiery-eyed, buff-belted warriors, with their deep, holy enthusiasm for liberty and democracy, political and religious; with their glorious trust in the arm of the Lord in battle — than in the dashing, ranting Cavaliers, who wished to restore their king that they might give vent to their passions, and go to sleep again in the laps of their mistresses, deaf to the cries of the poor and the oppressed."

WE see but half the causes of our deeds, Seeking them wholly in the outer life,
And heedless of the encircling spirit-world,
Which, though unseen, is felt, and sows in us

All germs of pure and world-wide purposes.
From one stage of our being to the next
We pass unconscious o'er a slender bridge,
The momentary work of unseen hands,
Which crumbles down behind us; looking back,

We see the other shore, the gulf between,
And, marvelling how we won to where we stand,

Content ourselves to call the builder Chance.
We trace the wisdom to the apple's fall,
Not to the birth-throes of a mighty Truth Which, for long ages in blank Chaos dumb,

Yet yearned to be incarnate, and had found At last a spirit meet to be the womb
From which it might be born to bless mankind, —

Not to the soul of Newton, ripe with all The hoarded thoughtfulness of earnest years,

And waiting but one ray of sunlight more To blossom fully.

But whence came that ray?

We call our sorrows Destiny, but ought Rather to name our high successes so.
Only the instincts of great souls are Fate,
And have predestined sway: all other things,

Except by leave of us, could never be.
For Destiny is but the breath of God Still moving in us, the last fragment left Of our unfallen nature, waking oft Within our thought, to beckon us beyond
The narrow circle of the seen and known,
And always tending to a noble end,
As all things must that overrule the soul,
And for a space unseat the helmsman, Will.
The fate of England and of freedom once Seemed wavering in the heart of one plain man:

One step of his, and the great dial-hand,
That marks the destined progress of the world

In the eternal round from wisdom on To higher wisdom, had been made to pause A hundred years. That step he did not take, —

He knew not why, nor we, but only God, —
And lived to make his simple oaken chair
More terrible and soberly august,
More full of majesty than any throne,
Before or after, of a British king.

Upon the pier stood two stern-visaged men,

Looking to where a little craft lay moored, Swayed by the lazy current of the Thames,
Which weltered by in muddy listlessness.
Grave men they were, and battlings of fierce thought

Had trampled out all softness from their brows,

And ploughed rough furrows there before their time,

For other crop than such as homebred Peace

Sows broadcast in the willing soil of Youth

Care, not of self, but for the common-weal, Had robbed their eyes of youth, and left instead

A look of patient power and iron will,
And something fiercer, too, that gave broad hint

Of the plain weapons girded at their sides.
The younger had an aspect of command,— Not such as trickles down, a slender stream,

In the shrunk channel of a great descent, But such as lies entowered in heart and head,

And an arm prompt to do the 'bests of both.

His was a brow where gold were out of place,

And yet it seemed right worthy of a crown (Though he despised such), were it only made

Of iron, or some serviceable stuff That would have matched his brownly rugged face.

The elder, although such he hardly seemed (Care makes so little of some five short years),

Had a clear, honest face, whose rough-hewn strength

Was mildened by the scholar's wiser heart To sober courage, such as best befits

The unsullied temper of a well-taught
mind,

Yet so remained that one could plainly guess

The hushed volcano smouldering underneath.

He spoke: the other, hearing, kept his gaze

Still fixed, as on some problem in the sky.

“O CROMWELL, we are fallen on evil times!

There was a day when England had wide room

For honest men as well as foolish kings:

But now the uneasy stomach of the time Turns squeamish at them both. Therefore let us

Seek out that savage clime, where men as yet

Are free: there sleeps the vessel on the tide,
Her languid canvas drooping for the wind;

Give us but that, and what need we to fear This Order of the Council? The free waves

Will not say No to please a wayward king, Nor will the winds turn traitors at his beck:

All things are fitly cared for, and the Lord Will watch as kindly o'er the exodus
Of us his servants now, as in old time.

We have no cloud or fire, and haply we May not pass dry-shod through the ocean-
stream;

But, saved or lost, all things are in His hand.”

So spake he, and meantime the other stood With wide gray eyes still reading the blank
air,

As if upon the sky's blue wall he saw Some mystic sentence, written by a hand, Such as of old made pale the Assyrian king,

Girt with his satraps in the blazing feast.

“HAMPDEN! a moment since, my purpose was

To fly with thee,— for I will call it flight, Nor flatter it with any smother name,—
But something in me bids me not to go;

And I am one, thou knowest, who, unmoved

By what the weak deem omens, yet give heed

And reverence due to whatsoe'er my soul Whispers of warning to the inner ear.

Moreover, as I know that God brings
round

His purposes in ways undreamed by us,
And makes the wicked but his instruments

To hasten their own swift and sudden fall,
I see the beauty of his providence

In the King's order: blind, he will not let His doom part from him, but must bid it

As 't were a cricket, whose enlivening chirp

He loved to hear beneath his very hearth.
Why should we fly? Nay, why not rather

And rear again our Zion's crumbled walls, Not, as of old the walls of Thebes were built,

By minstrel twanging, but, if need should

be,
With the more potent music of our swords?

Think'st thou that score of men beyond the sea

Claim more God's care than all of England
here?

No: when He moves His arm, it is to aid Whole peoples, heedless if a few be crushed,

As some are ever, when the destiny Of man takes one stride onward nearer
home.

Believe me, 't is the mass of men He loves;

And, where there is most sorrow and most want,

Where the high heart of man is trodden
down

The most, 't is not because He hides His face

From them in wrath, as purblind teachers prate:

Not so: there most is He, for there is He Most needed. Men who seek for Fate abroad

Are not so near His heart as they who dare Frankly to face her where she faces them, On their own threshold, where their souls are strong

To grapple with and throw her; as I once, Being yet a boy, did cast this puny king, Who now has grown so dotard as to deem That he can wrestle with an angry realm, And throw the brawned Antæus of men's rights.

No, Hampden! they have half-way conquered Fate

Who go half-way to meet her, — as will I.
Freedom hath yet a work for me to do;
So speaks that inward voice which never yet Spake falsely, when it urged the spirit on To noble emprise for country and mankind.
And, for success, I ask no more than this, —

To bear unflinching witness to the truth.
All true whole men succeed; for what is worth

Success's name, unless it be the thought,
The inward surety, to have carried out A noble purpose to a noble end, Although it be the gallows or the block?

'T is only Falsehood that doth ever need These outward shows of gain to bolster her.
Be it we prove the weaker with our swords;
Truth only needs to be for once spoke out, And there's such music in her, such strange rhythm,

As makes men's memories her joyous slaves,

And clings around the soul, as the sky clings

Round the mute earth, forever beautiful,
And, if o'erclouded, only to burst forth
More all-embracingly divine and clear: Get but the truth once uttered, and 't is like

A star new-born, that drops into its place,
And which, once circling in its placid
round,

Not all the tumult of the earth can shake.

"What should we do in that small colony Of pinched fanatics, who would rather choose

Freedom to clip an inch more from their hair,

Than the great chance of setting England
free?

Not there, amid the stormy wilderness, Should we learn wisdom; or if learned, what room

To put it into act, — else worse than naught?

We learn our souls more, tossing for an hour

Upon this huge and ever-vexed sea Of human thought, where kingdoms go to wreck

Like fragile bubbles yonder in the stream, Than in a cycle of New England sloth, Broke only by a petty Indian war,
Or quarrel for a letter more or less

In some hard word, which, spelt in either way,

Not their most learned clerks can understand.

New times demand new measures and new
men;

The world advances, and in time outgrows
The laws that in our fathers' day were best;

And, doubtless, after us, some purer scheme

Will be shaped out by wiser men than we,
Made wiser by the steady growth of truth.
We cannot hale Utopia on by force;

But better, almost, be at work in sin,
Than in a brute inaction browse and sleep.
No man is born into the world whose work
Is not born with him; there is always work, And tools to work withal, for those who
will;

And blessed are the horny hands of toil!
The busy world shoves angrily aside
The man who stands with arms akimbo set, Until occasion tells him what to do;

And he who waits to have his task marked
 out
 Shall die and leave his errand unfulfilled.
 Our time is one that calls for earnest deeds: Reason and Government, like two broad
 seas,
 Yearn for each other with outstretch'd arms
 Across this narrow isthmus of the throne,
 And roll their white surf higher every day.
 One age moves onward, and the next builds up Cities and gorgeous palaces, where stood The rude log-huts of those who tamed the wild,
 Rearing from out the forests they had felled
 The goodly framework of a fairer state;
 The builder's trowel and the settler's axe Are seldom wielded by the selfsame hand; Ours is the harder task, yet not the less Shall we receive the blessing for our toil
 From the choice spirits of the aftertime.
 My soul is not a palace of the past, Where outworn creeds, like Rome's gray senate, quake,
 Hearing afar the Vandal's trumpet hoarse,
 That shakes old systems with a thunder-fit.
 The time is ripe, and rotten-ripe, for change;
 Then let it come: I have no dread of what Is called for by the instinct of mankind; Nor think I that God's world will fall apart
 Because we tear a parchment more or less.
 Truth is eternal, but her effluence,
 With endless change, is fitted to the hour;
 Her mirror is turned forward to reflect The promise of the future, not the past.
 He who would win the name of truly great Must understand his own age and the next,
 And make the present ready to fulfil Its prophecy, and with the future merge Gently and peacefully, as wave with wave.
 The future works out great men's purposes;
 The present is enough for common souls,
 Who, never looking forward, are indeed Mere clay, wherein the footprints of their age
 Are petrified forever: better those Who lead the blind old giant by the hand From out the pathless desert where he gropes,
 And set him onward in his darksome way.

I do not fear to follow out the truth, Albeit along the precipice's edge.
 Let us speak plain: there is more force in names
 Than most men dream of; and a lie may keep
 Its throne a whole age longer, if it skulk Behind the shield of some fair-seeming name.
 Let us call tyrants tyrants, and maintain That only freedom comes by grace of God, And all that comes not by His grace must
 fall;
 For men in earnest have no time to waste
 In patching fig-leaves for the naked truth.

"I will have one more grapple with the
 man
 Charles Stuart: whom the boy o'ercame, The man stands not in awe of. I, perchance,
 Am one raised up by the Almighty arm To witness some great truth to all the world.
 Souls destined to o'erleap the vulgar lot,
 And mould the world unto the scheme of God,
 Have a fore-consciousness of their high
 doom,
 As men are known to shiver at the heart
 When the cold shadow of some coming ill Creeps slowly o'er their spirits unawares.
 Hath God less power of prophecy than
 I?
 How else could men whom God hath called to sway
 Earth's rudder, and to steer the bark of Truth,
 Beating against the tempest tow'rd her port,
 Bear all the mean and buzzing grievances, The petty martyrdoms, wherewith Sin strives
 To weary out the tethered hope of Faith?
 The sneers, the unrecognized look of friends,
 Who worship the dead corpse of old king Custom, Where it doth lie in state within the Church,
 Striving to cover up the mighty ocean With a man's palm, and making even the
 truth
 Lie for them, holding up the glass reversed,
 To make the hope of man seem farther off?"

My God ! when I read o'er the bitter lives Of men whose eager hearts were quite too great
 To beat beneath the cramped mode of the
 day,
 And see them mocked at by the world they
 love,
 Hagglng with prejudice for pennyworths Of that reform which their hard toil will make
 The common birthright of the age to
 come, —
 When I see this, spite of my faith in God,
 I marvel how their hearts bear up so long;
 Nor could they but for this same prophecy,
 This inward feeling of the glorious end.

“Deem me not fond; but in my warmer
 youth,
 Ere my heart's bloom was soiled and brushed
 away,
 I had great dreams of mighty things to
 come;
 Of conquest, whether by the sword or pen I knew not; but some conquest I would have,
 Or else swift death: now wiser grown in
 years,
 I find youth's dreams are but the flutterings Of those strong wings whereon the soul shall soar
 In after time to win a starry throne;
 And so I cherish them, for they were lots,
 Which I, a boy, cast in the helm of Fate.
 Now will I draw them, since a man's right
 hand,
 A right hand guided by an earnest soul,
 With a true instinct, takes the golden prize From out a thousand blanks. What men call luck
 Is the prerogative of valiant souls,
 The fealty life pays its rightful kings.
 The helm is shaking now, and I will stay To pluck my lot forth; it were sin to flee!”

So they two turned together; one to die, Fighting for freedom on the bloody field;
 The other, far more happy, to become A name earth wears forever next her heart;
 One of the few that have a right to rank With the true Makers: for his spirit
 wrought
 Order from Chaos; proved that right divine

Dwelt only in the excellence of truth;
 And far within old Darkness' hostile lines Advanced and pitched the shining tents of Light.
 Nor shall the grateful Muse forget to tell,
 That — not the least among his many claims To deathless honor — he was MILTON's friend,
 A man not second among those who lived To show us that the poet's lyre demands An arm of tougher sinew than the sword.

A CHIPPEWA LEGEND

ἀλγεῖνὰ μὲν μοι καὶ λέγειν ἔστιν τάδε, ἄλγος δὲ σιγᾶν.

ÆSCHYLUS, Prom. Vinc. 197, 198.

For the leading incidents in this tale I am indebted to the very valuable Algon Researches of Henry R. Schoolcraft, Esq. J. R. L.

THE old Chief, feeling now wellnigh his end,
 Called his two eldest children to his side,
 And gave them, in few words, his parting charge!
 “My son and daughter, me ye see no more;
 The happy hunting-grounds await me,
 green
 With change of spring and summer through the year:
 But, for remembrance, after I am gone,
 Be kind to little Sheemah for my sake: Weaking he is and young, and knows not yet
 To set the trap, or draw the seasoned bow; Therefore of both your loves he hath more
 need,
 And he, who needeth love, to love hath
 right;
 It is not like our furs and stores of corn, Whereto we claim sole title by our toil,
 But the Great Spirit plants it in our hearts, And waters it, and gives it sun, to be The common stock and heritage of all: Therefore be kind to Sheemah, that yourselves
 May not be left deserted in your need.”

Alone, beside a lake, their wigwam stood,
 Far from the other dwellings of their tribe;
 And, after many moons, the loneliness Wearied the elder brother, and he said,

"Why should I dwell here far from men, shut out

From the free, natural joys that fit my age ?
Lo, I am tall and strong, well skilled to hunt,

Patient of toil and hunger, and not yet Have seen the danger which I dared not look

Full in the face; what hinders me to be A mighty Brave and Chief among my kin ?"

So, taking up his arrows and his bow,
As if to hunt, he journeyed swiftly on,
Until he gained the wigwams of his tribe,
Where, choosing out a bride, he soon forgot,

In all the fret and bustle of new life,
The little Sheemah and his father's charge.

Now when the sister found her brother
gone,

And that, for many days, he came not back,
She wept for Sheemah more than for herself;

For Love bides longest in a woman's heart,
And flutters many times before he flies,
And then doth perch so nearly, that a word May lure him back to his accustomed nest;
And Duty lingers even when Love is gone, Oft looking out in hope of his return;
And, after Duty hath been driven forth, Then Selfishness creeps in the last of all, Warming her lean hands at the lonely
hearth,

And crouching o'er the embers, to shut out Whatever paltry warmth and light are left,
With avaricious greed, from all beside.

So, for long months, the sister hunted wide,
And cared for little Sheemah tenderly;
But, daily more and more, the loneliness Grew wearisome, and to herself she sighed,
"Am I not fair ? at least the glassy pool, That hath no cause to flatter, tells me so;
But, oh, how flat and meaningless the tale, Unless it tremble on a lover's tongue !
Beauty hath no true glass, except it be In the sweet privacy of loving eyes."

Thus deemed she idly, and forgot the lore Which she had learned of nature and the woods,

That beauty's chief reward is to itself,
And that Love's mirror holds no image
long

Save of the inward fairness, blurred and lost

Unless kept clear and white by Duty's care.
So she went forth and sought the haunts of
men,

And, being wedded, in her household cares, Soon, like the elder brother, quite forgot
The little Sheemah and her father's charge.

But Sheemah, left alone within the lodge, Waited and waited, with a shrinking heart, Thinking each rustle was his sister's step, Till hope grew less and less, and then went
out,

And every sound was changed from hope to fear.

Few sounds there were:—the dropping of a nut,

The squirrel's chirrup, and the jay's harsh scream,

Autumn's sad remnants of blithe Summer's
cheer,

Heard at long intervals, seemed but to make

The dreadful void of silence silenter.

Soon what small store his sister left was
gone,

And, through the Autumn, he made shift to live

On roots and berries, gathered in much
fear

Of wolves, whose ghastly howl he heard ofttimes,

Hollow and hungry, at the dead of night.

But Winter came at last, and, when the snow,

Thick-heaped for gleaming leagues o'er hill and plain,

Spread its unbroken silence over all,

Made bold by hunger, he was fain to glean (More sick at heart than Ruth, and all alone)

After the harvest of the merciless wolf,

Grim Boaz, who, sharp-ribbed and gaunt, yet feared

A thing more wild and starving than himself;

Till, by degrees, the wolf and he grew
friends,

And shared together all the winter through.

Late in the Spring, when all the ice was
gone,

The elder brother, fishing in the lake, Upon whose edge his father's wigwam stood.

Heard a low moaning noise upon the shore:
Half like a child it seemed, half like a wolf,

And straightway there was something in his heart

That said, "It is thy brother Sheemah's voice."

So, paddling swiftly to the bank, he saw,
Within a little thicket close at hand, A child that seemed fast changing to a wolf,

From the neck downward, gray with shaggy hair,

That still crept on and upward as he looked.

The face was turned away, but well he knew

That it was Sheemah's, even his brother's face.

Then with his trembling hands he hid his
eyes,

And bowed his head, so that he might not
see

The first look of his brother's eyes, and cried,

"O Sheemah! O my brother, speak to
me!

Dost thou not know me, that I am thy brother?

Come to me, little Sheemah, thou shalt dwell

With me henceforth, and know no care or want!"

Sheemah was silent for a space, as if 'T were hard to summon up a human voice,

And, when he spake, the voice was as a wolf's:

"I know thee not, nor art thou what thou say'st;

I have none other brethren than the wolves,

And, till thy heart be changed from what it is,

Thou art not worthy to be called their
kin."

Then groaned the other, with a choking
tongue,

"Alas! my heart is changed right bitterly;
'T is shrunk and parched within me even
now!"

And, looking upward fearfully, he saw Only a wolf that shrank away and ran,

Ugly and fierce, to hide among the woods.

STANZAS ON FREEDOM

MEN! whose boast it is that ye Come of fathers brave and free,
If there breathe on earth a slave,
Are ye truly free and brave?
If ye do not feel the chain,
When it works a brother's pain,
Are ye not base slaves indeed, Slaves unworthy to be freed?

Women! who shall one day bear Sons to breathe New England air,
If ye hear, without a blush, Deeds to make the roused blood rush Like red lava through your veins, For your sisters now in chains,— Answer! are ye fit to be Mothers of the brave and free?

Is true Freedom but to break Fetters for our own dear sake,
And, with leathern hearts, forget That we owe mankind a debt?
No! true freedom is to share
All the chains our brothers wear, And, with heart and hand, to be Earnest to make others free!

They are slaves who fear to speak For the fallen and the weak;
They are slaves who will not choose Hatred, scoffing, and abuse, Rather than in silence shrink
From the truth they needs must think;
They are slaves who dare not be In the right with two or three.

COLUMBUS

I have partly written a poem on Columbus to match with Prometheus and Cromwell. I like it better than either in point of artistic merit.
J. R. L. to C. F. Briggs, September 18, 1844.

THE cordage creaks and rattles in the wind,
With whiffs of sudden hush; the reeling
sea Now thumps like solid rock beneath the stern,
Now leaps with clumsy wrath, strikes short, and, falling

Crumbled to whispery foam, slips rustling
down
The broad backs of the waves, which jostle and crowd
To fling themselves upon that unknown shore,
Their used familiar since the dawn of
time,
Whether this foredoomed life is guided on To sway on triumph's hushed, aspiring poise
One glittering moment, then to break fulfilled.

How lonely is the sea's perpetual swing,
The melancholy wash of endless waves,
The sigh of some grim monster undeseried, Fear-painted on the canvas of the dark, Shifting on his uneasy pillow of brine !
Yet night brings more companions than the
day
To this drear waste; new constellations burn,
And fairer stars, with whose calm height my soul
Finds nearer sympathy than with my herd Of earthen souls, whose vision's scanty ring Makes me its prisoner to beat my wings Against the cold bars of their unbelief, Knowing in vain my own free heaven beyond.
O God ! this world, so crammed with eager life,
That comes and goes and wanders back to silence
Like the idle wind, which yet man's shaping mind
Can make his drudge to swell the longing sails
Of highest endeavor, — this mad, unthrift
world,
Which, every hour, throws life enough
away
To make her deserts kind and hospitable, Lets her great destinies be waved aside
By smooth, lip-reverent, formal infidels, Who weigh the God they not believe with
gold,
And find no spot in Judas, save that he,
Driving a duller bargain than he ought,
Saddled his guild with too cheap precedent.
O Faith ! if thou art strong, thine opposite Is mighty also, and the dull fool's sneer Hath ofttimes shot chill palsy through the arm

Just lifted to achieve its crowning deed, And made the firm-based heart, that would have quailed
The rack or fagot, shudder like a leaf Wrinkled with frost, and loose upon its stem.
The wicked and the weak, by some dark
law,
Have a strange power to shut and rivet
down
Their own horizon round us, to unwing
Our heaven-aspiring visions, and to blur With surly clouds the Future's gleaming
peaks,
Far seen across the brine of thankless
years.
If the chosen soul could never be alone
In deep mid-silence, open-doored to God, No greatness ever had been dreamed or done;
Among dull hearts a prophet never grew;
The nurse of full-grown souls is solitude.
The old world is effete; there man with
man
Jostles, and, in the brawl for means to live, Life is trod underfoot, — Life, the one block
Of marble that's vouchsafed wherefrom to carve
Our great thoughts, white and godlike, to shine down
The future, Life, the irredeemable block, Which one o'er-hasty chisel-dint oft mars, Scanting our room to cut the features out Of our full hope, so forcing us to crown With a mean head the perfect limbs, or leave
The god's face glowing o'er a satyr's trunk, Failure's brief epitaph.

Yes, Europe's world Reels on to judgment; there the common
need,
Losing God's sacred use, to be a bond
'Twixt Me and Thee, sets each one scowlingly
O'er his own selfish hoard at bay; no state, Knit strongly with eternal fibres up Of all men's separate and united weals, Self-poised and sole as stars, yet one as
light,
Holds up a shape of large Humanity
To which by natural instinct every man Pays loyalty exulting, by which all

Mould their own lives, and feel their pulses filled

With the red, fiery blood of the general
life,

Making them mighty in peace, as now in war

They are, even in the flush of victory,
weak,

Conquering that manhood which should them subdue.

And what gift bring I to this untried
world?

Shall the same tragedy be played anew,
And the same lurid curtain drop at last
On one dread desolation, one fierce crash
Of that recoil which on its makers God Lets Ignorance and Sin and Hunger make, Early or late? Or shall that commonwealth

Whose potent unity and concentric force Can draw these scattered joints and parts of men

Into a whole ideal man once more,
Which sucks not from its limbs the life
away,

But sends it flood-tide and creates itself
Over again in every citizen, Be there built up? For me, I have no choice;

I might turn back to other destinies,
For one sincere key opens all Fortune's doors;
But whoso answers not God's earliest call Forfeits or dulls that faculty supreme Of lying open to his genius Which makes the wise heart certain of its ends.

Here am I; for what end God knows, not I;
Westward still points the inexorable soul:
Here am I, with no friend but the sad sea,
The beating heart of this great enterprise,
Which, without me, would stiffen in swift
death;

This have I mused on, since mine eye could first

Among the stars distinguish and with joy Rest on that God-fed Pharos of the north,
On some blue promontory of heaven lighted That juts far out into the upper sea;
To this one hope my heart hath clung for
years,

As would a foundling to the talisman Hung round his neck by hands he knew not whose;

A poor, vile thing and dross to all beside,

Yet he therein can feel a virtue left By the sad pressure of a mother's hand,
And unto him it still is tremulous
With palpitating haste and wet with tears,
The key to him of hope and humanness,
The coarse shell of life's pearl, Expectancy.
This hope hath been to me for love and fame,

Hath made me wholly lonely on the earth,
Building me up as in a thick-ribbed tower, Wherewith enwalled my watching spirit burned,

Conquering its little island from the Dark, Sole as a scholar's lamp, and heard men's steps,

In the far hurry of the outward world, Pass dimly forth and back, sounds heard in
dream.

As Ganymede by the eagle was snatched up

From the gross sod to be Jove's cup-bearer,
So was I lifted by my great design:

And who hath trod Olympus, from his eye Fades not that broader outlook of the gods;
His life's low valleys overbrow earth's clouds,

And that Olympian spectre of the past Looms towering up in sovereign memory, Beckoning his soul from meaner heights of doom.

Had but the shadow of the Thunderer's bird,

Flashing athwart my spirit, made of me
A swift-betraying vision's Ganymede, Yet to have greatly dreamed precludes low
ends;

Great days have ever such a morning-red,
On such a base great futures are built up,
And aspiration, though not put in act,
Comes back to ask its plighted troth again, Still watches round its grave the unlaied ghost

Of a dead virtue, and makes other hopes, Save that implacable one, seem thin and bleak

As shadows of bare trees upon the snow, Bound freezing there by the un pitying
moon.

While other youths perplexed their mandolins,

Praying that Thetis would her fingers twine

In the loose glories of her lover's hair,
And wile another kiss to keep back day,

I, stretched beneath the many-centuried shade
 Of some withered oak, the wood's Laocoön, Did of my hope a dryad mistress make,
 Whom I would woo to meet me privily, Or underneath the stars, or when the moon Flecked all the forest floor with scattered pearls.
 O days whose memory tames to fawning
 down
 The surly fell of Ocean's bristled neck !

I know not when this hope enthralled me
 first,

But from my boyhood up I loved to hear The tall pine-forests of the Apennine Murmur their hoary legends of the sea, Which hearing, I in vision clear beheld
 The sudden dark of tropic night shut down O'er the huge whisper of great watery wastes,

The while a pair of herons trailingy Flapped inland, where some league-wide river hurled

The yellow spoil of un conjectured realms Far through a gulf's green silence, never scarred

By any but the North-wind's hurrying keels.

And not the pines alone; all sights and sounds

To my world-seeking heart paid fealty,
 And catered for it as the Cretan bees Brought honey to the baby Jupiter, Who in his soft hand crushed a violet, Godlike foremusng the rough thunder's gripe;

Then did I entertain the poet's song,
 My great Idea's guest, and, passing o'er That iron bridge the Tuscan built to hell, I heard Ulysses tell of mountain-chains Whose adamantine links, his manacles,
 The western main shook growling, and still gnawed.

I brooded on the wise Athenian's tale Of happy Atlantis, and heard Björne's keel

Crunch the gray pebbles of the Vinland
 shore:

I listened, musing, to the prophecy
 Of Nero's tutor-victim; lo, the birds Sing darkling, conscious of the climbing dawn.

And I believed the poets; it is they

Who utter wisdom from the central deep,
 And, listening to the inner flow of things, Speak to the age out of eternity.

Ah me ! old hermits sought for solitude
 In caves and desert places of the earth, Where their own heart-beat was the only
 stir

Of living thing that comforted the year;
 But the bald pillar-top of Simeon, In midnight's blankest waste, were populous,

Matched with the isolation drear and deep Of him who pines among the swarm of
 men,

At once a new thought's king and prisoner,

Feeling the truer life within his life,
 The fountain of his spirit's prophecy, Sinking away and wasting, drop by drop,
 In the ungrateful sands of sceptic ears.
 He in the palace-aisles of untrod woods Doth walk a king; for him the pent-up cell

Widens beyond the circles of the stars,
 And all the sceptred spirits of the past Come thronging in to greet him as their peer:

But in the market-place's glare and throng
 He sits apart, an exile, and his brow Aches with the mocking memory of its crown.

Yet to the spirit select there is no choice;
 He cannot say, This will I do, or that,
 For the cheap means putting Heaven's ends in pawn,

And bartering his bleak rocks, the freehold stern

Of destiny's first-born, for smoother fields That yield no crop of self-denying will;
 A hand is stretched to him from out the dark,

Which grasping without question, he is led Where there is work that he must do for God.

The trial still is the strength's complement,
 And the uncertain, dizzy path that scales
 The sheer heights of supremest purposes Is steeper to the angel than the child.

Chances have laws as fixed as planets have,
 And disappointment's dry and bitter root, Envy's harsh berries, and the choking pool

Of the world's scorn, are the right mother-milk

To the tough hearts that pioneer their
kind,
And break a pathway to those unknown realms
That in the earth's broad shadow lie enthrall'd;
Endurance is the crowning quality,
And patience all the passion of great
hearts;
These are their stay, and when the leaden
world
Sets its hard face against their fateful
thought,
And brute strength, like the Gaulish conqueror, Clangs his huge glaive down in the other scale,
The inspired soul but flings his patience
in,
And slowly that outweighs the ponderous globe, —
One faith against a whole earth's unbelief,
One soul against the flesh of all mankind.

Thus ever seems it when my soul can hear The voice that errs not; then my triumph gleams, O'er the blank ocean beckoning, and all
night
My heart flies on before me as I sail;
Far on I see my lifelong enterprise, That rose like Ganges mid the freezing snows
Of a world's solitude, sweep broadening
down,
And, gathering to itself a thousand streams,
Grow sacred ere it mingle with the sea;
I see the ungated wall of chaos old,
With blocks Cyclopean hewn of solid night, Fade like a wreath of unreturning mist Before the irreversible feet of light; —
And lo, with what clear omen in the east On day's gray threshold stands the eager
dawn,
Like young Leander rosy from the sea Glowing at Hero's lattice !

One day more These muttering shoalbrains leave the helm to me:
God, let me not in their dull ooze be stranded;
Let not this one frail bark, to hollow which I have dug out the pith and sinewy heart Of my aspiring life's fair trunk, be so Cast up to warp and blacken in the sun, Just as the opposing wind 'gins whistle off His cheek-swollen pack, and from the leaning mast

Fortune's full sail strains forward !

One poor day ! —
Remember whose and not how short it is !
It is God's day, it is Columbus's.
A lavish day ! One day, with life and
heart,
Is more than time enough to find a world.

AN INCIDENT OF THE FIRE AT HAMBURG

THE tower of old Saint Nicholas soared upward to the skies, Like some huge piece of Nature's make, the growth of centuries;
You could not deem its crowding spires a work of human art, They seemed to struggle lightward from a sturdy living heart.

Not Nature's self more freely speaks in crystal or in oak,
Than, through the pious builder's hand, in that gray pile she spoke;
And as from acorn springs the oak, so, freely and alone,
Sprang from his heart this hymn to God, sung in obedient stone.

It seemed a wondrous freak of chance, so perfect, yet so rough, A whim of Nature crystallized slowly in granite tough;
The thick spires yearned towards the sky in quaint harmonious lines, And in broad sunlight basked and slept, like a grove of blasted pines.

Never did rock or stream or tree lay claim with better right
To all the adorning sympathies of shadow and of light;
And, in that forest petrified, as forester there dwells Stout Herman, the old sacristan, sole lord of all its bells.

Surge leaping after surge, the fire roared onward red as blood, Till half of Hamburg lay engulfed beneath the eddying flood;
 For miles away the fiery spray poured down its deadly rain, And back and forth the billows sucked, and paused, and burst again.

From square to square with tiger leaps panted the lustful fire,
 The air to leeward shuddered with the gasps of its desire;
 And church and palace, which even now stood whelmed but to the knee, Lift their black roofs like breakers lone amid the whirling sea.

Up in his tower old Herman sat and watched with quiet look;
 His soul had trusted God too long to be at last forsook;
 He could not fear, for surely God a pathway would unfold
 Through this red sea for faithful hearts, as once He did of old.

But scarcely can he cross himself, or on his good saint call,
 Before the sacrilegious flood o'erleaped the church-yard wall;
 And, ere a pater half was said, mid smoke and crackling glare, His island tower scarce juts its head above the wide despair.

Upon the peril's desperate peak his heart stood up sublime;
 His first thought was for God above, his next was for his chime;
 "Sing now and make your voices heard in hymns of praise," cried he,
 "As did the Israelites of old, safe walking through the sea !

"Through this red sea our God hath made the pathway safe to shore;
 Our promised land stands full in sight;
 shout now as ne'er before !"
 And as the tower came crashing down, the bells, in clear accord, Pealed forth the grand old German hymn, —"All good souls, praise the Lord !"

THE SOWER

I SAW a Sower walking slow
 Across the earth, from east to west;
 His hair was white as mountain snow,
 His head drooped forward on his breast.

With shrivelled hands he flung his seed, Nor ever turned to look behind;
 Of sight or sound he took no heed;
 It seemed he was both deaf and blind.

His dim face showed no soul beneath, Yet in my heart I felt a stir,
 As if I looked upon the sheath,
 That once had held Excalibur.

I heard, as still the seed he cast,
 How, crooning to himself, he sung,
 "I sow again the holy Past,
 The happy days when I was young.

"Then all was wheat without a tare, Then all was righteous, fair, and true;
 And I am he whose thoughtful care Shall plant the Old World in the New.

"The fruitful germs I scatter free,
 With busy hand, while all men sleep;
 In Europe now, from sea to sea,
 The nations bless me as they reap."

Then I looked back along his path,
 And heard the clash of steel on steel,
 Where man faced man, in deadly wrath,
 While clanged the tocsin's hurrying peal.

The sky with burning towns flared red, Nearer the noise of fighting rolled,
 And brothers' blood, by brothers shed, Crept curdling over pavements cold.

Then marked I how each germ of truth Which through the dotard's fingers ran Was mated with a dragon's tooth Whence there sprang up an armed mar.

I shouted, but he could not hear;
 Made signs, but these he could not see;
 And still, without a doubt or fear, Broadcast he scattered anarchy.

Long to my straining ears the blast Brought faintly back the words he sung:

"I sow again the holy Past,
The happy days when I was young."

HUNGER AND COLD

SISTERS two, all praise to you,
With your faces pinched and blue;
To the poor man you've been true
From of old:
You can speak the keenest word,
You are sure of being heard,
From the point you're never stirred,
Hunger and Cold!

Let sleek statesmen temporize;
Palsied are their shifts and lies When they meet your bloodshot eyes, Grim and bold;
Policy you set at naught,
In their traps you'll not be caught, You're too honest to be bought,
Hunger and Cold!

Bolt and bar the palace door;
While the mass of men are poor, Naked truth grows more and more Uncontrolled;
You had never yet, I guess,
Any praise for bashfulness,
You can visit sans court-dress,
Hunger and Cold!

While the music fell and rose,
And the dance reeled to its close,
Where her round of costly woes Fashion strolled,
I beheld with shuddering fear Wolves' eyes through the windows peer; Little dream they you are near,
Hunger and Cold!

When the toiler's heart you clutch, Conscience is not valued much,
He reckes not a bloody smutch
On his gold:
Everything to you defers,
You are potent reasoners,
At your whisper Treason stirs,
Hunger and Cold!

Rude comparisons you draw.
Words refuse to sate your maw,
Your gaunt limbs the cobweb law Cannot hold:

You're not clogged with foolish pride,
But can seize a right denied:
Somehow God is on your side,
Hunger and Cold!

You respect no hoary wrong
More for having triumphed long;
Its past victims, haggard throng
From the mould
You unbury: swords and spears Weaker are than poor men's tears, Weaker than your silent years,
Hunger and Cold!

Let them guard both hall and bower;
Through the window you will glower, Patient till your reckoning hour Shall be tolled;
Cheeks are pale, but hands are red, Guiltless blood may chance be shed,
But ye must and will be fed,
Hunger and Cold!

God has plan: man must not spoil,
Some were made to starve and toil,
Some to share the wine and oil,
We are told:
Devil's theories are these,
Stifling hope and love and peace, Framed your hideous lusts to please,
Hunger and Cold!

Scatter ashes on thy head,
Tears of burning sorrow shed, Earth! and be by Pity led To Love's fold;
Ere they block the very door
With lean corpses of the poor,
And will hush for naught but gore,
Hunger and Cold!

THE LANDLORD

WHAT boot your houses and your lands?
In spite of close-drawn deed and fence,
Like water, 'twixt your cheated hands,
They slip into the graveyard's sands,
And mock your ownership's pretence.

How shall you speak to urge your right, Choked with that soil for which you lust?
The bit of clay, for whose delight You grasp, is mortgaged, too; Death might Foreclose this very day in dust.

Fence as you please, this plain poor man, Whose only fields are in his wit,
 Who shapes the world, as best he can,
 According to God's higher plan, Owns you, and fences as is fit.

Though yours the rents, his incomes wax
 By right of eminent domain;
 From factory tall to woodman's axe,
 All things on earth must pay their tax,
 To feed his hungry heart and brain.

He takes you from your easy-chair,
 And what he plans that you must do;
 You sleep in down, eat dainty fare, —
 He mounts his crazy garret-stair
 And starves, the landlord over you.

Feeding the clods your idlesse drains,
 You make more green six feet of soil;
 His fruitful word, like suns and rains, Partakes the seasons' bounteous pains,
 And toils to lighten human toil.

Your lands, with force or cunning got,
 Shrink to the measure of the grave;
 But Death himself abridges not The tenures of almighty thought,
 The titles of the wise and brave.

TO A PINE-TREE

Lowell's friend C. F. Briggs called the poet's attention to Coleridge's lines in The Ancient Mariner,

"And ice, mast high, came floating by As green as emerald," as perhaps the literary justification of "crags of green ice" in the penultimate stanza of this poem, — but maintained nevertheless that the epithet green was not true to nature. In his reply Lowell wrote: "I did not have Coleridge's lines in my mind when I wrote my verses. Coleridge had a fine, true eye, and I would gladly accept him (if I wanted any aid) in confirmation. I did trust my own eye. When I was a boy, my favorite sport was sailing upon Fresh Pond in summer, and in winter helping the hardy reapers to get in their harvest of ice, and never was a field of wheat in July of a more lovely green. You have doubtless seen ice-bugs (as most people entomologically pronounce it), and they may not be green, though I think they are described as of all colors. But my ice was fresh-water ice, and I am right about it."

FAR up on Katahdin thou towerest, Purple-blue with the distance and vast;
 Like a cloud o'er the lowlands thou lowerest,
 That hangs poised on a lull in the blast,
 To its fall leaning awful.

In the storm, like a prophet o'ermaddened, Thou singest and tossest thy branches;
 Thy heart with the terror is gladdened, Thou forebodest the dread avalanches,
 When whole mountains swoop valeward.

In the calm thou o'erstretchest the valleys
 With thine arms, as if blessings imploring, Like an old king led forth from his palace,
 When his people to battle are pouring From the city beneath him.

To the lumberer asleep 'neath thy glooming Thou dost sing of wild billows in motion, Till he longs to be swung mid their booming
 In the tents of the Arabs of ocean, Whose finned isles are their cattle.

For the gale snatches thee for his lyre,
 With mad hand crashing melody frantic.
 While he pours forth his mighty desire To leap down on the eager Atlantic, Whose arms stretch to his playmate.

The wild storm makes his lair in thy branches, Swooping thence on the continent under;
 Like a lion, crouched close on his haunches,
 There awaiteth his leap the fierce thunder, Growling low with impatience.

Spite of winter, thou keep'st thy green glory, Lusty father of Titans past number!
 The snow-flakes alone make thee hoary, Nestling close to thy branches in slumber,
 And thee mantling with silence.

Thou alone know'st the splendor of winter, Mid thy snow-silvered, hushed precipices, Hearing crags of green ice groan and splinter,

And then plunge down the muffled abysses
In the quiet of midnight.

Thou alone know'st the glory of summer,
Gazing down on thy broad seas of forest,
On thy subjects that send a proud murmur
Up to thee, to their sachem, who tower-est
From thy bleak throne to heaven.

SI DESCENDERO IN INFERNUM, ADES

O WANDERING dim on the extremest edge Of God's bright providence, whose spirits sigh Drearly in you, like the winter sedge That shivers o'er the dead pool stiff and dry,
A thin, sad voice, when the bold wind roars by
From the clear North of Duty, — Still by cracked arch and broken shaft I trace
That here was once a shrine and holy place Of the supernal Beauty, A child's play-altar reared of stones and moss,
With wilted flowers for offering laid across,
Mute recognition of the all-ruling Grace.

How far are ye from the innocent, from those Whose hearts are as a little lane serene, Smooth-heaped from wall to wall with un-broke snows,
Or in the summer blithe with lamb-cropped green, Save the one track, where naught more rude is seen
Than the plump wain at even Bringing home four months' sunshine bound in sheaves !
How far are ye from those ! yet who believes
That ye can shut out heaven ?
Your souls partake its influence, not in vain
Nor all unconscious, as that silent lane
Its drift of noiseless apple-blooms receives.

Looking within myself, I note how thin A plank of station, chance, or prosperous fate, Doth fence me from the clutching waves of sin;
In my own heart I find the worst man's mate,
And see not dimly the smooth-hinged gate
That opes to those abysses Where ye grope darkly, — ye who never knew
On your young hearts love's consecrating dew,
Or felt a mother's kisses,
Or home's restraining tendrils round you curled;
Ah, side by side with heart's-ease in this world
The fatal nightshade grows and bitter rue !
One band ye cannot break, — the force that clips
And grasps your circles to the central
light;
Yours is the prodigal comet's long ellipse, Self-exiled to the farthest verge of
night;
Yet strives with you no less that inward
might
No sin hath e'er imbruted;
The god in you the creed-dimmed eye eludes;
The Law brooks not to have its solitudes
By bigot feet polluted;
Yet they who watch your God-compelled return
May see your happy perihelion burn Where the calm sun his unfledged planets broods.

TO THE PAST

WONDROUS and awful are thy silent halls, O kingdom of the past !
There lie the bygone ages in their palls, Guarded by shadows vast;
There all is hushed and breathless, Save when some image of old error falls Earth worshipped once as deathless.
There sits drear Egypt, mid beleaguering sands,
Half woman and half beast.

The burnt-out torch within her mouldering
hands
That once lit all the East;
A dotard bleared and hoary, There Asser crouches o'er the blackened brands
Of Asia's long-quenched glory.

Still as a city buried 'neath the sea Thy courts and temples stand; Idle as forms on wind-waved tapestry Of saints and heroes grand,
Thy phantasms grope and shiver, Or watch the loose shores crumbling silently
Into Time's gnawing river.

Titanic shapes with faces blank and dun,
Of their old godhead lorn, Gaze on the embers of the sunken sun,
Which they misdeem for morn;
And yet the eternal sorrow
In their unmonarched eyes says day is done Without the hope of morrow.

O realm of silence and of swart eclipse,
The shapes that haunt thy gloom Make signs to us and move their withered lips
Across the gulf of doom;
Yet all their sound and motion Bring no more freight to us than wraiths of ships
On the mirage's ocean.

And if sometimes a moaning wandereth
From out thy desolate halls,
If some grim shadow of thy living death Across our sunshine falls
And scares the world to error, The eternal life sends forth melodious breath
To chase the misty terror.

Thy mighty clamors, wars, and worldnoised deeds
Are silent now in dust, Gone like a tremble of the huddling reeds Beneath some sudden gust;
Thy forms and creeds have vanished, Tossed out to wither like unsightly weeds
From the world's garden banished.

Whatever of true life there was in thee Leaps in our age's veins;

Wield still thy bent and wrinkled em-pery,
And shake thine idle chains;—
To thee thy dross is clinging,
For us thy martyrs die, thy prophets
see,
Thy poets still are singing.

Here, mid the bleak waves of our strife and care,
Float the green Fortunate Isles
Where all thy hero-spirits dwell, and share Our martyrdoms and toils;
The present moves attended
With all of brave and excellent and fair That made the old time splendid.

TO THE FUTURE

O LAND of Promise! from what Pisgal's height
Can I behold thy stretch of peaceful bowers,
Thy golden harvests flowing out of sight, Thy nestled homes and sun-illuminated towers?
Gazing upon the sunset's high-heaped
gold,
Its crags of opal and of chrysolite, Its deeps on deeps of glory, that unfold
Still brightening abysses,
And blazing precipices, Whence but a scanty leap it seems to heaven,
Sometimes a glimpse is given Of thy more gorgeous realm, thy more unstinted blisses.

O Land of Quiet! to thy shore the surf
Of the perturbed Present rolls and sleeps; Our storms breathe soft as June upon thy turf
And lure out blossoms; to thy bosom leaps,
As to a mother's, the o'erwearied heart,
Hearing far off and dim the toiling mart, The hurrying feet, the curses without number,
And, circled with the glow Elysian
Of thine exulting vision, Out of its very cares woos charms for peace and slumber.

To thee the earth lifts up her fettered hands
 And cries for vengeance; with a pitying smile Thou blestest her, and she forgets her bands, And her old woe-worn face a little while Grows young and noble; unto thee the Oppressor Looks, and is dumb with awe;
 The eternal law,
 Which makes the crime its own blindfold redresser, Shadows his heart with perilous foreboding,
 And he can see the grim-eyed Doom From out the trembling gloom
 Its silent-footed steeds towards his palace goading.

What promises hast thou for Poets' eyes,
 A-weary of the turmoil and the wrong !
 To all their hopes what overjoyed replies !
 What undreamed ecstasies for blissful song !
 Thy happy plains no war-trump's brawling clangor Disturbs, and fools the poor to hate the poor;
 The humble glares not on the high with anger;
 Love leaves no grudge at less, no greed for more;
 In vain strives Self the godlike sense to smother;
 From the soul's deeps
 It throbs and leaps;
 The noble 'neath foul rags beholds his long-lost brother.

To thee the Martyr looketh, and his fires Unlock their fangs and leave his spirit free;
 To thee the Poet mid his toil aspires,
 And grief and hunger climb about his knee, Welcome as children; thou upholdest
 The lone Inventor by his demon haunted;
 The Prophet cries to thee when hearts are coldest,
 And gazing o'er the midnight's bleak abyss, Sees the drowsed soul awaken at thy kiss,
 And stretch its happy arms and leap up disenchanted.

Thou bringest vengeance, but so loving-kindly
 The guilty thinks it pity; taught by thee, Fierce tyrants drop the scourges where-with blindly Their own souls they were scarring; conquerors see With horror in their hands the accursed spear That tore the meek One's side on Calvary,
 And from their trophies shrink with ghastly fear;
 Thou, too, art the Forgiver,
 The beauty of man's soul to man revealing;
 The arrows from thy quiver Pierce Error's guilty heart, but only pierce for healing.

Oh, whither, whither, glory-wing'd dreams,
 From out Life's sweat and turmoil would ye hear me ?
 Shut, gates of Fancy, on your golden gleams,— This agony of hopeless contrast spare me!
 Fade, cheating glow, and leave me to my night !
 He is a coward, who would borrow A charm against the present sorrow
 From the vague Future's promise of delight:
 As life's alarums nearer roll,
 The ancestral buckler calls, Self-clanging from the walls
 In the high temple of the soul;
 Where are most sorrows, there the poet's sphere is,
 To feed the soul with patience,
 To heal its desolations
 With words of unshorn truth, with love that never wearies.

HEBE

I saw the twinkle of white feet,
 I saw the flash of robes descending;
 Before her ran an influence fleet,
 That bowed my heart like barley bending.
 As, in bare fields, the searching bees Pilot to blooms beyond our finding,
 It led me on, by sweet degrees
 Joy's simple honey-cells unbending.

Those Graces were that seemed grim Fates;
With nearer love the sky leaned o'er me;
The long-sought Secret's golden gates On musical hinges swung before me.

I saw the brimmed bowl in her grasp Thrilling with godhood; like a lover
I sprang the proffered life to clasp; —
The beaker fell; the luck was over.

The Earth has drunk the vintage up;
What boots it patch the goblet's splinters?

Can Summer fill the icy cup,
Whose treacherous crystal is but Winter's?

O spendthrift haste! await the Gods;
The nectar crowns the lips of Patience;
Haste scatters on unthankful sods
The immortal gift in vain libations.

Coy Hebe flies from those that woo,
And shuns the hands would seize upon her;
Follow thy life, and she will sue
To pour for thee the cup of honor.

THE SEARCH

I WENT to seek for Christ,
And Nature seemed so fair That first the woods and fields my youth enticed,
And I was sure to find him there:
The temple I forsook,
And to the solitude Allegiance paid; but winter came and shook

The crown and purple from my wood;
His snows, like desert sands, with scornful drift,

Besieged the columned aisle and palace-
gate;
My Thebes, cut deep with many a solemn rift,

But epitaphed her own sepulchred state:
Then I remembered whom I went to seek,
And blessed blunt Winter for his counsel bleak.

Back to the world I turned,
For Christ, I said, is King; So the cramped alley and the hut I spurned,

As far beneath his sojourning:
Mid power and wealth I sought,
But found no trace of him,
And all the costly offerings I had brought With sudden rust and mould grew dim:
I found his tomb, indeed, where, by their laws,
All must on stated days themselves imprison, Mocking with bread a dead creed's grinning jaws, Witless how long the life had thence arisen;
Due sacrifice to this they set apart, Prizing it more than Christ's own living
heart.

So from my feet the dust
Of the proud World I shook; Then came dear Love and shared with me his crust,
And half my sorrow's burden took.
After the World's soft bed,
Its rich and dainty fare, Like down seemed Love's coarse pillow to my head,

His cheap food seemed as manna rare;
Fresh-trodden prints of bare and bleeding
feet,

Turned to the heedless city whence I
came,
Hard by I saw, and springs of worship
sweet

Gushed from my cleft heart smitten by the same;
Love looked me in the face and spake no
words,
But straight I knew those footprints were the Lord's.

I followed where they led,
And in a hovel rude, With naught to fence the weather from his head,

The King I sought for meekly stood;
A naked, hungry child Clung round his gracious knee, And a poor hunted slave looked up and smiled

To bless the smile that set him free;
New miracles I saw his presence do, — No more I knew the hovel bare and poor,
The gathered chips into a wood-pile grew The broken morsel swelled to goodly store;

I knelt and wept: my Christ no more I seek,
His throne is with the outcast and the weak.

THE PRESENT CRISIS

Dated December, 1844.

WHEN a deed is done for Freedom, through the broad earth's aching breast Runs a thrill of joy prophetic, trembling on from east to west,
And the slave, where'er he cowers, feels the soul within him climb To the awful verge of manhood, as the energy sublime
Of a century bursts full-blossomed on the thorny stem of Time.

Through the walls of hut and palace shoots the instantaneous throe,
When the travail of the Ages wrings earth's systems to and fro;
At the birth of each new Era, with a recognizing start,
Nation wildly looks at nation, standing with mute lips apart, And glad Truth's yet mightier man-child leaps beneath the Future's heart.

So the Evil's triumph sendeth, with a terror and a chill, Under continent to continent, the sense of coming ill,
And the slave, where'er he cowers, feels his sympathies with God In hot tear-drops ebbing earthward, to be drunk up by the sod, Till a corpse crawls round unburied, delving in the nobler clod.

For mankind are one in spirit, and an instinct bears along,
Round the earth's electric circle, the swift flash of right or wrong; Whether conscious or unconscious, yet Humanity's vast frame Through its ocean-sundered fibres feels the gush of joy or shame;—
In the gain or loss of one race all the rest have equal claim.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,

In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight, Parts the goats upon the left hand, and the sheep upon the right, And the choice goes by forever 'twixt that darkness and that light.

Hast thou chosen, O my people, on whose party thou shalt stand, Ere the Doom from its worn sandals shakes the dust against our land?
Though the cause of Evil prosper, yet 'tis Truth alone is strong,
And, albeit she wander outcast now, I see around her throng Troops of beautiful, tall angels, to enshield her from all wrong.

Backward look across the ages and the beacon-moments see,
That, like peaks of some sunk continent, jut through Oblivion's sea;
Not an ear in court or market for the low foreboding cry
Of those Crises, God's stern winnowers, from whose feet earth's chaff must fly; Never shows the choice momentous till the judgment hath passed by.

Careless seems the great Avenger; history's pages but record
One death-grapple in the darkness 'twixt old systems and the Word; Truth forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne,— Yet that scaffold sways the future, and, behind the dim unknown, Standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above his own.

We see dimly in the Present what is small and what is great,
Slow of faith how weak an arm may turn the iron helm of fate, But the soul is still oracular; amid the market's din,
List the ominous stern whisper from the Delphic cave within,— "They enslave their children's children who make compromise with sin."

Slavery, the earth-born Cyclops, fellest of the giant brood,

Sons of brutish Force and Darkness, who have drenched the earth with blood, Famished in his self-made desert, blinded by our purer day, Gropes in yet unblasted regions for his miserable prey; — Shall we guide his gory fingers where our helpless children play ?

Then to side with Truth is noble when we share her wretched crust, Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and
't is prosperous to be just;
Then it is the brave man chooses, while the coward stands aside, Doubting in his abject spirit, till his Lord is crucified,
And the multitude make virtue of the faith they had denied.

Count me o'er earth's chosen heroes, — they were souls that stood alone, While the men they agonized for hurled the contumelious stone, Stood serene, and down the future saw the golden beam incline To the side of perfect justice, mastered by their faith divine, By one man's plain truth to manhood and to God's supreme design.

By the light of burning heretics Christ's bleeding feet I track, Toiling up new Calvaries ever with the cross that turns not back, And these mounds of anguish number how each generation learned One new word of that grand Credo which in prophet-hearts hath burned Since the first man stood God-conquered with his face to heaven upturned.

For Humanity sweeps onward: where today the martyr stands, On the morrow crouches Judas with the silver in his hands; Far in front the cross stands ready and the crackling fagots burn, While the hooting mob of yesterday in silent awe return To glean up the scattered ashes into History's golden urn.

'T is as easy to be heroes as to sit the idle slaves

Of a legendary virtue carved upon our father's graves, Worshippers of light ancestral make the present light a crime; — Was the Mayflower launched by cowards, steered by men behind their time ?
Turn those tracks toward Past or Future, that make Plymouth Rock sublime ?

They were men of present valor, stalwart old iconoclasts, Unconvinced by axe or gibbet that all virtue was the Past's;
But we make their truth our falsehood, thinking that hath made us free, Hoarding it in mouldy parchments, while our tender spirits flee The rude grasp of that great Impulse which drove them across the sea.

They have rights who dare maintain them;
we are traitors to our sires, Smothering in their holy ashes Freedom's new-lit altar-fires;
Shall we make their creed our jailer ?
Shall we, in our haste to slay, From the tombs of the old prophets steal the funeral lamps away To light up the martyr-fagots round the prophets of to-day ?

New occasions teach new duties; Time makes ancient good uncouth; They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth; Lo, before us gleam her camp-fires! we ourselves must Pilgrims be, Launch our Mayflower, and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea, Nor attempt the Future's portal with the Past's blood-rusted key.

AN INDIAN-SUMMER REVERIE

The reader familiar with Lowell's life will readily recognize the local references which occur in this poem. To others it may be worth while to point out that the village smithy is the same as that commemorated by Longfellow, that Allston lived in the section of Cambridge known as Cambridgeport, that some of the old willows at the causey's end still stand, and that the group is the one which gave the name to Under the Willows.

WHAT visionary tints the year puts on,
 When falling leaves falter through motionless air Or numbly cling and shiver to be gone !
 How shimmer the low flats and pastures bare,
 As with her nectar Hebe Autumn fills
 The bowl between me and those distant hills,
 And smiles and shakes abroad her misty, tremulous hair !

No more the landscape holds its wealth apart,
 Making me poorer in my poverty,
 But mingles with my senses and my heart;
 My own projected spirit seems to me In her own reverie the world to steep;
 'T is she that waves to sympathetic sleep, Moving, as she is moved, each field and hill and tree.

How fuse and mix, with what unfelt degrees,
 Clasped by the faint horizon's languid arms,
 Each into each, the hazy distances !
 The softened season all the landscape charms;
 Those hills, my native village that embay,
 In waves of dreamier purple roll away,
 And floating in mirage seem all the glimmering farms.

Far distant sounds the hidden chickadee Close at my side; far distant sound the leaves;
 The fields seem fields of dream, where Memory Wanders like gleaning Ruth; and as the sheaves Of wheat and barley wavered in the eye Of Boaz as the maiden's glow went by,
 So tremble and seem remote all things the sense receives.

The cock's shrill trump that tells of scattered corn, Passed breezily on by all his flapping mates,

Faint and more faint, from barn to barn is borne,
 Southward, perhaps to far Magellan's Straits; Dimly I catch the throb of distant flails; Silently overhead the hen-hawk sails,
 With watchful, measuring eye, and for his quarry waits.

The sobered robin, hunger-silent now, Seeks cedar-berries blue, his autumn cheer;
 The chipmunk, on the shingly shagbark's bough,
 Now saws, now lists with downward eye and ear, Then drops his nut, and, cheeping, with a bound Whisks to his winding fastness underground;
 The clouds like swans drift down the streaming atmosphere.

O'er yon bare knoll the pointed cedar shadows Drowse on the crisp, gray moss; the ploughman's call Creeps faint as smoke from black, fresh-furrowed meadows;
 The single crow a single caw lets fall;
 And all around me every bush and tree Says Autumn's here, and Winter soon will be,
 Who snows his soft, white sleep and silence over all.

The birch, most shy and ladylike of trees,
 Her poverty, as best she may, retrieves,
 And hints at her foregone gentilities
 With some saved relics of her wealth of leaves;
 The swamp-oak, with his royal purple on,
 Glares red as blood across the sinking sun,
 As one who prouder to a falling fortune cleaves.

He looks a sachem, in red blanket wrapt,
 Who, mid some council of the sad-garbed whites,

Erect and stern, in his own memories
lapt,
With distant eye broods over other sights,
Sees the hushed wood the city's flare replace,
The wounded turf heal o'er the railway's trace,
And roams the savage Past of his undwindled rights.

The red-oak, softer-grained, yields all for lost,
And, with his crumpled foliage stiff and
dry,
After the first betrayal of the frost, Rebuffs the kiss of the relenting sky;
The chestnuts, lavish of their long-hid
gold,
To the faint Summer, beggared now and old,
Pour back the sunshine hoarded 'neath her favoring eye.

The ash her purple drops forgivingly And sadly, breaking not the general hush;
The maple-swamps glow like a sunset
sea,
Each leaf a ripple with its separate flush;
All round the wood's edge creeps the skirting blaze
Of bushes low, as when, on cloudy days, Ere the rain fall, the cautious farmer burns his brush.

O'er yon low wall, which guards one unkempt zone,
Where vines and weeds and scrub-oaks intertwine Safe from the plough, whose rough, discordant stone
Is massed to one soft gray by lichens fine,
The tangled blackberry, crossed and recrossed, weaves
A prickly network of ensanguined
leaves;
Hard by, with coral beads, the prim black-alders shine.

Pillaring with flame this crumbling boundary,

Whose loose blocks topple 'neath the ploughboy's foot,
Who, with each sense shut fast except the eye, Creeps close and scares the jay he hopes to shoot,
The woodbine up the elm's straight stem aspires, Coiling it, harmless, with autumn fires;
In the ivy's paler blaze the martyr oak stands mute.

Below, the Charles, a stripe of nether sky,
Now hid by rounded apple-trees between Whose gaps the misplaced sail sweetly bellying by,
Now flickering golden through a woodland screen,
Then spreading out, at his next turn beyond,
A silver circle like an inland pond—Slips seaward silently through marshes purple and green.

Dear marshes! vain to him the gift of sight
Who cannot in their various incomes share From every season drawn, of shade and light,
Who sees in them but levels brown and
bare;
Each change of storm or sunshade scatters free
On them its largess of variety, For Nature with cheap means still works her wonders rare.

In Spring they lie one broad expanse of green, O'er which the light winds run with glimmering feet:
Here, yellower stripes track out creek unseen,
There, darker growths o'er hid ditches meet;
And purpler stains show where blossoms crowd,
As if the silent shadow of a cloud Hung there becalmed, with the next breeze to fleet.

All round, upon the river's slippery edge,

Witching to deeper calm the drowsy tide,
 Whispers and leans the breeze-entangling sedge;
 Through emerald glooms the lingering waters slide,
 Or, sometimes wavering, throw back the sun,
 And the stiff banks in eddies melt and run
 Of dimpling light, and with the current seem to glide.

In Summer 't is a blithesome sight to see,
 As, step by step, with measured swing, they pass,
 The wide-ranked mowers wading to the knee,
 Their sharp scythes panting through the wiry grass;
 Then, stretched beneath a rick's shade in a ring,
 Their nooning take, while one begins to sing
 A stave that droops and dies 'neath the close sky of brass.

Meanwhile that devil-may-care, the bobolink, Remembering duty, in mid-quaver stops Just ere he sweeps o'er rapture's tremulous brink,
 And 'twixt the winrows most demurely drops, A decorous bird of business, who provides For his brown mate and fledglings six besides,
 And looks from right to left, a farmer mid his crops.

Another change subdues them in the Fall,
 But saddens not; they still show merrier tints, Though sober russet seems to cover all;
 When the first sunshine through their dew-drops glints, Look how the yellow clearness, streamed across,
 Redeems with rarer hues the season's loss,
 As Dawn's feet there had touched and left their rosy prints.

Or come when sunset gives its freshened zest, Lean o'er the bridge and let the ruddy thrill,
 While the shorn sun swells down the hazy west, Glow opposite; — the marshes drink their fill And swoon with purple veins, then slowly fade Through pink to brown, as eastward moves the shade, Lengthening with stealthy creep, of Simond's darkening hill.

Later, and yet ere Winter wholly shuts,
 Ere through the first dry snow the runner grates,
 And the loath cart-wheel screams in slippery ruts, While firmer ice the eager boy awaits, Trying each buckle and strap beside the fire,
 And until bedtime plays with his desire, Twenty times putting on and off his new-bought skates; —

Then, every morn, the river's banks shine bright With smooth plate-armor, treacherous and frail, By the frost's clinking hammers forged at night,
 'Gainst which the lances of the sun prevail, Giving a pretty emblem of the day When guiltier arms in light shall melt away,
 And states shall move free-limbed, loosed from war's cramping mail.

And now those waterfalls the ebbing river Twice every day creates on either side Tinkle, as through their fresh-sparred grots they shiver
 In grass-arched channels to the sun denied;
 High flaps in sparkling blue the far-heard crow,
 The silvered flats gleam frostily below,
 Suddenly drops the gull and breaks the glassy tide.

But crowned in turn by vying seasons
 three,
 Their winter halo hath a fuller ring;
 This glory seems to rest immovably,— The others were too fleet and vanish-
 ing;
 When the hid tide is at its highest flow, O'er marsh and stream one breathless trance of snow
 With brooding fulness awes and hushes everything.

The sunshine seems blown off by the bleak wind,
 As pale as formal candles lit by day; Gropes to the sea the river dumb and blind;
 The brown ricks, snow-thatched by the storm in play, Show pearly breakers combing o'er their lee, White crests as of some just enchanted
 sea,
 Checked in their maddest leap and hanging poised midway.

But when the eastern blow, with rain
 aslant,
 From mid-sea's prairies green and rolling plains Drives in his wallowing herds of bil-lows gaunt,
 And the roused Charles remembers in his veins
 Old Ocean's blood and snaps his gyves of frost,
 That tyrannous silence on the shores is tost
 In dreary wreck, and crumbling desolation reigns.

Edgewise or flat, in Druid-like device, With leaden pools between or gullies
 bare,
 The blocks lie strewn, a bleak Stonehenge of ice;
 No life, no sound, to break the grim despair,
 Save sullen plunge, as through the sedges stiff Down crackles riverward some thaw-sapped cliff,
 Or when the close-wedged fields of ice crunch here and there.

But let me turn from fancy-pictures
 To that whose pastoral calm before
 lies:
 Here nothing harsh or rugged int-venes;
 The early evening with her misty dy-Smooths off the ravelled edges of t-nigh,
 Relieves the distant with her cooler s-And tones the landscape down, and sooththe wearied eyes.

There gleams my native village, d-
 to me,
 Though higher change's waves each dare seen, Whelming fields famed in boyhoo-history, Sanding with houses the diminish-
 green;
 There, in red brick, which soften-time defies,
 Stand square and stiff the Musfactories;—
 How with my life knit up is every w-known scene!

Flow on, dear river! not alone you fl-To outward sight, and through y-marshes wind;
 Fed from the mystic springs of lo-ago,
 Your twin flows silent through my woof mind:
 Grow dim, dear marshes, in the ev-ing's gray!
 Before my inner sight ye stretch aw-And will forever, though these fleshly e-grow blind.

Beyond the hillock's house-bespot swell,
 Where Gothic chapels house the ho-and chaise,
 Where quiet cits in Grecian temp-
 dwell,
 Where Coptic tombs resound with pra-and praise,
 Where dust and mud the equal y-divide,
 There gentle Allston lived, wrought, and died, Transfiguring street and shop with illumined gaze.

Virgilium vidi tantum, — I have seen
 But as a boy, who looks alike on all,
 That misty hair, that fine Undine-like mien, Tremulous as down to feeling's faintest call; — Ah, dear old homestead! count it to thy fame
 That thither many times the Painter
 came; —
 One elm yet bears his name, a feathery tree and tall.

Swiftly the present fades in memory's
 glow, —
 Our only sure possession is the past;
 The village blacksmith died a month
 ago,
 And dim to me the forge's roaring blast; Soon fire-new mediævals we shall
 see Oust the black smithy from its chestnut-tree,
 And that hewn down, perhaps, the beehive green and vast.

How many times, prouder than king on throne,
 Loosed from the village school-dame's A's and B's, Panting have I the creaky bellows
 blown,
 And watched the pent volcano's red increase,
 Then paused to see the ponderous sledge, brought down
 By that hard arm voluminous and brown,
 From the white iron swarm its golden vanishing bees.

Dear native town! whose choking elms each year
 With eddying dust before their time turn gray, Pining for rain, — to me thy dust is
 dear;
 It glorifies the eve of summer day,
 And when the westering sun half sunken burns,
 The mote-thick air to deepest orange turns,
 The westward horseman rides through clouds of gold away,

So palpable, I've seen those unshorn few,
 The six old willows at the causey's end (Such trees Paul Potter never dreamed nor drew),
 Through this dry mist their checkering shadows send,
 Striped, here and there, with many a long-drawn thread,
 Where streamed through leafy chinks
 the trembling red,
 Past which, in one bright trail, the hang-bird's flashes blend.

Yes, dearer far thy dust than all that e'er,
 Beneath the awarded crown of victory, Gilded the blown Olympic charioteer; Though lightly prized the ribboned parchments three,
 Yet collegisse juvat, I am glad That here what colleging was mine I had, —
 It linked another tie, dear native town, with thee!

Nearer art thou than simply native
 earth,
 My dust with thine concedes a deeper tie;
 A closer claim thy soil may well put forth,
 Something of kindred more than sympathy;
 For in thy bounds I reverently laid
 away
 That blinding anguish of forsaken
 clay,
 That title I seemed to have in earth and sea and sky,

That portion of my life more choice to
 me (Though brief, yet in itself so round and whole)
 Than all the imperfect residue can be; —
 The Artist saw his statue of the soul Was perfect; so, with one regretful stroke,
 The earthen model into fragments
 broke,
 And without her the impoverished seasons roll.

THE GROWTH OF THE LEGEND

A LEGEND that grew in the forest's hush Slowly as tear-drops gather and gush,
 When a word some poet chanced to say Ages ago, in his careless way, Brings our youth back to us out of its shroud

Clearly as under yon thunder-cloud I see that white sea-gull. It grew and grew,
 From the pine-trees gathering a sombre hue, Till it seems a mere murmur out of the vast

Norwegian forests of the past;
 And it grew itself like a true Northern pine,
 First a little slender line,
 Like a mermaid's green eyelash, and then anon

A stem that a tower might rest upon, Standing spear-straight in the waist-deep
 moss,

Its bony roots clutching around and across,
 As if they would tear up earth's heart in their grasp

Ere the storm should uproot them or make them unclasp;

Its cloudy boughs singing, as suiteth the pine,

To snow-bearded sea-kings old songs of the brine,

Till they straightened and let their staves fall to the floor,

Hearing waves moan again on the perilous
 shore

Of Vinland, perhaps, while their prow groped its way

'Twixt the frothed gnashing tusks of some ship-crunching bay.

So, pine-like, the legend grew, stronglimbed and tall,

As the Gypsy child grows that eats crusts in the hall;

It sucked the whole strength of the earth and the sky,

Spring, Summer, Fall, Winter, all brought it supply;

'T was a natural growth, and stood fearlessly there,

True part of the landscape as sea, land, and
 air;

For it grew in good times, ere the fashion it was

To force these wild births of the woods under glass,

And so, if 't is told as it should be told, Though 't were sung under Venice's moonlight of gold,

You would hear the old voice of its mother,
 the pine,

Murmur sealike and northern through every line,

And the verses should grow, self-sustained and free,

Round the vibrating stem of the melody, Like the lithe moonlit limbs of the parent
 tree.

Yes, the pine is the mother of legends;
 what food

For their grim roots is left when the thousand-year'd wood,

The dim-aisled cathedral, whose tall arches
 spring

Light, sinewy, graceful, firm-set as the wing

From Michael's white shoulder, is hewn and defaced

By iconoclast axes in desperate waste,
 And its wrecks seek the ocean it prophesied
 long,

Cassandra-like, crooning its mystical song?
 Then the legends go with them, — even yet on the sea

A wild virtue is left in the touch of the tree, And the sailor's night-watches are thrilled to the core

With the lineal offspring of Odin and Thor.

Yes, wherever the pine-wood has never let
 in,

Since the day of creation, the light and the din

Of manifold life, but has safely conveyed From the midnight primeval its armful of
 shade,

And has kept the weird Past with its child-faith alive

Mid the hum and the stir of To-day's busy hive,

There the legend takes root in the age-gathered gloom,

And its murmurous boughs for their sagas find room.

Where Aroostook, far-heard, seems to sob as he goes Groping down to the sea 'neath his mountainous snows;
Where the lake's froze Sahara of never-tracked white,
When the crack shoots across it, complains to the night
With a long, lonely moan, that leagues northward is lost,
As the ice shrinks away from the tread of the frost;
Where the lumberers sit by the log-fires that throw
Their own threatening shadows far round o'er the snow,
When the wolf howls aloof, and the waver-ing glare Flashes out from the blackness the eyes of the bear,
When the wood's huge recesses, halflighted, supply
A canvas where Fancy her mad brush may try,
Blotting in dark Horrors that venture not
down Through the right-angled streets of the brisk, whitewashed town, But skulk in the depths of the measureless
wood Mid the Dark's creeping whispers that curdle the blood,
When the eye, glanced in dread o'er the shoulder, may dream, Ere it shrinks to the camp-fire's companion-ing gleam,
That it saw the fierce ghost of the Red Man crouch back To the shroud of the tree-trunk's invincible black;
There the old shapes crowd thick round the pine-shadowed camp, Which shun the keen gleam of the scholarly lamp,
And the seed of the legend finds true Nor-land ground, While the border-tale's told and the canteen flits round.

A CONTRAST

THY love thou sentest oft to me,
And still as oft I thrust it back; Thy messengers I could not see

In those who everything did lack,
The poor, the outcast and the black.

Pride held his hand before mine eyes,
The world with flattery stuffed mine ears;
I looked to see a monarch's guise, Nor dreamed thy love would knock for
years,
Poor, naked, fettered, full of tears.

Yet, when I sent my love to thee, Thou with a smile didst take it in,
And entertain'dst it royally, Though grimed with earth, with hunger thin,
And leprous with the taint of sin.

Now every day thy love I meet,
As o'er the earth it wanders wide,
With weary step and bleeding feet,
Still knocking at the heart of pride And offering grace, though still denied.

EXTREME UNCTION

Go! leave me, Priest; my soul would be Alone with the consoler, Death;
Far sadder eyes than thine will see This crumbling clay yield up its breath;
These shrivelled hands have deeper stains Than holy oil can cleanse away, Hands that have plucked the world's coarse gains
As erst they plucked the flowers of May.

Call, if thou canst, to these gray eyes Some faith from youth's traditions wrung;
This fruitless husk which dustward dries Hath been a heart once, hath been young;
On this bowed head the awful Past Once laid its consecrating hands;
The Future in its purpose vast Paused, waiting my supreme commands.

But look! whose shadows block the door?
Who are those two that stand aloof?
See! on my hands this freshening gore Writes o'er again its crimson proof!
My looked-for death-bed guests are met;
There my dead Youth doth wring its
hands,
And there, with eyes that goad me yet,
The ghost of my Ideal stands!

God bends from out the deep and says,
 "I gave thee the great gift of life;
 Wast thou not called in many ways?
 Are not my earth and heaven at strife?
 I gave thee of my seed to sow, Bringest thou me my hundred-fold?"
 Can I look up with face aglow,
 And answer, "Father, here is gold"?

I have been innocent; God knows When first this wasted life began,
 Not grape with grape more kindly grows,
 Than I with every brother-man:
 Now here I gasp; what lose my kind, When this fast ebbing breath shall part?
 What bands of love and service bind
 This being to a brother heart?

Christ still was wandering o'er the earth Without a place to lay his head;
 He found free welcome at my hearth,
 He shared my cup and broke my bread:
 Now, when I hear those steps sublime,
 That bring the other world to this,
 My snake-turned nature, sunk in slime, Starts sideway with defiant hiss.

Upon the hour when I was born, God said, "Another man shall be,"
 And the great Maker did not scorn Out of himself to fashion me;
 He sunned me with his ripening looks,
 And Heaven's rich instincts in me grew,
 As effortless as woodland nooks Send violets up and paint them blue.

Yes, I who now, with angry tears, Am exiled back to brutish clod,
 Have borne unquenched for fourscore years
 A spark of the eternal God;
 And to what end? How yield I back The trust for such high uses given?
 Heaven's light hath but revealed a track Whereby to crawl away from heaven.

Men think it is an awful sight
 To see a soul just set adrift
 On that drear voyage from whose night
 The ominous shadows never lift;
 But 't is more awful to behold
 A helpless infant newly born, Whose little hands unconscious hold
 The keys of darkness and of morn.

Mine held them once; I flung away Those keys that might have open set
 The golden sluices of the day,
 But clutch the keys of darkness yet;
 I hear the reapers singing go Into God's harvest; I, that might With them have chosen, here below Grope shuddering at the gates of night.

O glorious Youth, that once wast mine!
 O high Ideal! all in vain Ye enter at this ruined shrine Whence worship ne'er shall rise again;
 The bat and owl inhabit here,
 The snake nests in the altar-stone,
 The sacred vessels moulder near,
 The image of the God is gone.

THE OAK

WHAT gnarled stretch, what depth of shade, is his!
 There needs no crown to mark the forest's king;
 How in his leaves outshines full summer's
 bliss!
 Sun, storm, rain, dew, to him their tribute bring,
 Which he with such benignant royalty Accepts, as overpayeth what is lent;
 All nature seems his vassal proud to be,
 And cunning only for his ornament.

How towers he, too, amid the billowed
 snows,
 An unquelled exile from the summer's throne,
 Whose plain, uncinctured front more kingly shows,
 Now that the obscuring courtier leaves are flown.
 His boughs make music of the winter air, Jewelled with sleet, like some cathedral front Where clinging snow-flakes with quaint art repair
 The dints and furrows of time's envious brunt.

How doth his patient strength the rude March wind Persuade to seem glad breaths of summer breeze,
 And win the soil that fain would be unkind

To swell his revenues with proud increase !
 He is the gem; and all the landscape wide (So doth his grandeur isolate the sense) Seems but the setting, worthless all beside,
 An empty socket, were he fallen thence.

So, from oft converse with life's wintry gales, Should man learn how to clasp with tougher roots

The inspiring earth; how otherwise avails
 The leaf-creating sap that sunward shoots ?

So every year that falls with noiseless flake

Should fill old scars up on the stormward side,

And make hoar age revered for age's sake,
 Not for traditions of youth's leafy pride.

So, from the pinched soil of a churlish fate,
 True hearts compel the sap of sturdier growth,

So between earth and heaven stand simply great,

That these shall seem but their attendants both;

For nature's forces with obedient zeal

Wait on the rooted faith and oaken will;
 As quickly the pretender's cheat they feel,
 And turn mad Pucks to flout and mock him still.

Lord ! all thy works are lessons; each contains

Some emblem of man's all-containing soul;

Shall he make fruitless all thy glorious pains,

Delving within thy grace an eyeless mole ?

Make me the least of thy Dodona-grove, Cause me some message of thy truth to bring,

Speak but a word through me, nor let thy love

Among my boughs disdain to perch and sing.

AMBROSE

NEVER, surely, was holier man Than Ambrose, since the world began;

With diet spare and raiment thin
 He shielded himself from the father of sin;
 With bed of iron and scourgings oft,
 His heart to God's hand as wax made soft.

Through earnest prayer and watchings long

He sought to know 'tween right and wrong, Much wrestling with the blessed Word
 To make it yield the sense of the Lord,
 That he might build a storm-proof creed
 To fold the flock in at their need.

At last he builded a perfect faith, Fenced round about with The Lord thus saith;

To himself he fitted the doorway's size, Meted the light to the need of his eyes,
 And knew, by a sure and inward sign,
 That the work of his fingers was divine.

Then Ambrose said, "All those shall die
 The eternal death who believe not as I;"
 And some were boiled, some burned in fire,
 Some sawn in twain, that his heart's desire.
 For the good of men's souls might be satisfied

By the drawing of all to the righteous side.

One day, as Ambrose was seeking the truth In his lonely walk, he saw a youth Resting himself in the shade of a tree;
 It had never been granted him to see So shining a face, and the good man thought

'T were pity he should not believe as he ought.

So he set himself by the young man's side,
 And the state of his soul with questions tried;

But the heart of the stranger was hardened indeed,

Nor received the stamp of the one true creed;

And the spirit of Ambrose waxed sore to find

Such features the porch of so narrow a mind.

"As each beholds in cloud and fire
 The shape that answers his own desire,
 So each," said the youth, "in the Law shall find

The figure and fashion of his mind;

And to each in his mercy hath God allowed His several pillar of fire and cloud."

The soul of Ambrose burned with zeal And holy wrath for the young man's weal:
"Believest thou then, most wretched
youth,"

Cried he, "a dividual essence in Truth?
I fear me thy heart is too cramped with sin To take the Lord in his glory in."

Now there bubbled beside them where they stood

A fountain of waters sweet and good;
The youth to the streamlet's brink drew near

Saying, "Ambrose, thou maker of creeds, look here!"

Six vases of crystal then he took,
And set them along the edge of the brook.

"As into these vessels the water I pour,
There shall one hold less, another more,
And the water unchanged, in every case,
Shall put on the figure of the vase;
O thou, who wouldst unity make through strife,

Canst thou fit this sign to the Water of Life?"

When Ambrose looked up, he stood alone,
The youth and the stream and the vases were gone;

But he knew, by a sense of humbled grace,
He had talked with an angel face to face,
And felt his heart change inwardly,
As he fell on his knees beneath the tree.

ABOVE AND BELOW

I

O DWELLERS in the valley-land,
Who in deep twilight grope and cower, Till the slow mountain's dial-hand Shorten to noon's triumphal hour, While ye sit idle, do ye think The Lord's great work sits idle too?
That light dare not o'erleap the brink Of morn, because 't is dark with you?

Though yet your valleys skulk in night,
In God's ripe fields the day is cried,
And reapers, with their sickles bright, Troop, singing, down the mountain-side:

Come up, and feel what health there is In the frank Dawn's delighted eyes,
As, bending with a pitying kiss,
The night-shed tears of Earth she dries!

The Lord wants reapers: oh, mount up, Before night comes, and says, "Too late!"

Stay not for taking scrip or cup,
The Master hungers while ye wait;
'T is from these heights alone your eyes
The advancing spears of day can see,
That o'er the eastern hill-tops rise,
To break your long captivity.

II

Lone watcher on the mountain-height,
It is right precious to behold
The first long surf of climbing light Flood all the thirsty east with gold;
But we, who in the shadow sit,
Know also when the day is nigh, Seeing thy shining forehead lit
With his inspiring prophecy.

Thou hast thine office; we have ours;
God lacks not early service here,
But what are thine eleventh hours
He counts with us for morning cheer;
Our day, for Him, is long enough,
And when He giveth work to do,
The bruised reed is amply tough To pierce the shield of error through.

But not the less do thou aspire Light's earlier messages to preach;
Keep back no syllable of fire,
Plunge deep the rowels of thy speech.
Yet God deems not thine aerie sight
More worthy than our twilight dim;
For meek Obedience, too, is Light,
And following that is finding Him.

THE CAPTIVE

It was past the hour of trysting, But she lingered for him still;
Like a child, the eager streamlet Leaped and laughed adown the hill, Happy to be free at twilight
From its toiling at the mill.

Then the great moon on a sudden Ominous, and red as blood,

Startling as a new creation, O'er the eastern hilltop stood,
Casting deep and deeper shadows
Through the mystery of the wood.

Dread closed vast and vague about her,
And her thoughts turned fearfully To her heart, if there some shelter From the silence there might be,
Like bare cedars leaning inland
From the blighting of the sea.

Yet he came not, and the stillness Dampened round her like a tomb;
She could feel cold eyes of spirits Looking on her through the gloom,
She could hear the groping footsteps
Of some blind, gigantic doom.

Suddenly the silence wavered
Like a light mist in the wind,
For a voice broke gently through it, Felt like sunshine by the blind,
And the dread, like mist in sunshine, Furled serenely from her mind.

"Once my love, my love forever, Flesh or spirit, still the same,
If I failed at time of trysting, Deem thou not my faith to blame;
I, alas, was made a captive,
As from Holy Land I came.

"On a green spot in the desert, Gleaming like an emerald star,
Where a palm-tree, in lone silence, Yearning for its mate afar, Droops above a silver runnel, Slender as a scimitar,

"There thou 'lt find the humble postern
To the castle of my foe;
If thy love burn clear and faithful, Strike the gateway, green and low, Ask to enter, and the warder Surely will not say thee no."

Slept again the aspen silence,
But her loneliness was o'er;
Round her soul a motherly patience Clasped its arms forevermore;
From her heart ebb'd back the sorrow, Leaving smooth the golden shore.

Donned she now the pilgrim scallop, Took the Pilgrim staff in hand;

Like a cloud-shade flitting eastward, Wandered she o'er sea and land;
And her footsteps in the desert Fell like cool rain on the sand.

Soon, beneath the palm-tree's shadow, Knelt she at the postern low;
And thereat she knocked full gently, Fearing much the warder's no;
All her heart stood still and listened,
As the door swung backward slow.

There she saw no surly warder
With an eye like bolt and bar;
Through her soul a sense of music Throbb'd, and, like a guardian Lar,
On the threshold stood an angel,
Bright and silent as a star.

Fairest seemed he of God's seraphs,
And her spirit, lily-wise, Opened when he turned upon her
The deep welcome of his eyes, Sending upward to that sunlight
All its dew for sacrifice.

Then she heard a voice come onward Singing with a rapture new,
As Eve heard the songs in Eden, Dropping earthward with the dew;
Well she knew the happy singer,
Well the happy song she knew.

Forward leaped she o'er the threshold, Eager as a glancing surf;
Fell from her the spirit's languor, Fell from her the body's scurf;
'Neath the palm next day some Arabs Found a corpse upon the turf.

THE BIRCH-TREE

RIPPLING through thy branches goes the sunshine,
Among thy leaves that palpitate forever; Ovid in thee a pining Nymph had pris-oned,
The soul once of some tremulous inland river, Quivering to tell her woe, but, ah! dumb, dumb forever!

While all the forest, witch'd with slumberous moonshine,

Holds up its leaves in happy, happy still-
ness,

Waiting the dew, with breath and pulse suspended,

I hear afar thy whispering, gleamy islands,
And track thee wakeful still amid the wide-hung silence.

On the brink of some wood-nestled lakelet, Thy foliage, like the tresses of a Dryad, Dripping round thy slim white stem, whose shadow

Slopes quivering down the water's dusky quiet,

Thou shrink'st as on her bath's edge would some startled Naiad.

Thou art the go-between of rustic lovers; Thy white bark has their secrets in its keeping;

Reuben writes here the happy name of Patience,

And thy lithe boughs hang murmuring and weeping

Above her, as she steals the mystery from thy keeping.

Thou art to me like my beloved maiden,
So frankly coy, so full of trembly confidences;

Thy shadow scarce seems shade, thy pat-tering leaflets

Sprinkle their gathered sunshine o'er my senses,

And Nature gives me all her summer confidences.

Whether my heart with hope or sorrow tremble,

Thou sympathizest still; wild and unquiet,
I fling me down; thy ripple, like a river, Flows valleyward, where calmness is, and by it

My heart is floated down into the land of quiet.

AN INTERVIEW WITH MILES STANDISH

I SAT one evening in my room,
In that sweet hour of twilight When blended thoughts, half light, half
gloom,

Throng through the spirit's skylight;
The flames by fits curled round the bars,

Or up the chimney crinkled, While embers dropped like falling stars,
And in the ashes tinkled.

I sat and mused; the fire burned low,
And, o'er my senses stealing, Crept something of the ruddy glow
That bloomed on wall and ceiling;

My pictures (they are very few,
The heads of ancient wise men) Smoothed down their knotted fronts, and grew

As rosy as excisemen.

My antique high-backed Spanish chair Felt thrills through wood and leather, That had been strangers since whilere, Mid Andalusian heather,
The oak that built its sturdy frame His happy arms stretched over The ox whose fortunate hide became The bottom's polished cover.

It came out in that famous bark,
That brought our sires intrepid, Capacious as another ark
For furniture decrepit;
For, as that saved of bird and beast
A pair for propagation,
So has the seed of these increased And furnished half the nation.

Kings sit, they say, in slippery seats;
But those slant precipices Of ice the northern voyager meets Less slippery are than this is;
To cling therein would pass the wit
Of royal man or woman,
And whatso'er can stay in it Is more or less than human.

I offer to all bores this perch,
Dear well-intentioned people
With heads as void as week-day church, Tongues longer than the steeple;
To folks with missions, whose gaunt eyes See golden ages rising, — Salt of the earth! in what queer Guys Thou 'rt fond of crystallizing!

My wonder, then, was not unmixed
With merciful suggestion,
When, as my roving eyes grew fixed Upon the chair in question,
I saw its trembling arms enclose

A figure grim and rusty, Whose doublet plain and plainer hose Were something worn and dusty.

Now even such men as Nature forms Merely to fill the street with,
Once turned to ghosts by hungry worms,
Are serious things to meet with;
Your penitent spirits are no jokes,
And, though I'm not averse to A quiet shade, even they are folks One cares not to speak first to.

Who knows, thought I, but he has come,
By Charon kindly ferried,
To tell me of a mighty sum Behind my waincoat buried ?
There is a buccaneerish air About that garb outlandish —
Just then the ghost drew up his chair And said, "My name is Standish.

"I come from Plymouth, deadly bored With toasts, and songs, and speeches, As long and flat as my old sword,
As threadbare as my breeches:
They understand us Pilgrims ! they,
Smooth men with rosy faces, Strength's knots and gnarls all pared away,
And varnish in their places !

"We had some toughness in our grain,
The eye to rightly see us is Not just the one that lights the brain Of drawing-room Tyrtæuses:
They talk about their Pilgrim blood, Their birthright high and holy !
A mountain-stream that ends in mud Methinks is melancholy.

"He had stiff knees, the Puritan, That were not good at bending;
The homespun dignity of man
He thought was worth defending;
He did not, with his pinchbeck ore,
His country's shame forgotten, Gild Freedom's coffin o'er and o'er,
When all within was rotten.

"These loud ancestral boasts of yours,
How can they else than vex us ?
Where were your dinner orators When slavery grasped at Texas ?
Dumb on his knees was every one That now is bold as Cæsar;

Mere pegs to hang an office on Such stalwart men as these are."

"Good sir," I said, "you seem much stirred;
The sacred compromises" —
"Now God confound the dastard word !
My gall thereat arises:
Northward it hath this sense alone,
That you, your conscience blinding, Shall bow your fool's nose to the stone,
When slavery feels like grinding.

"'T is shame to see such painted sticks In Vane's and Winthrop's places, To see your spirit of Seventy-six Drag humbly in the traces,
With slavery's lash upon her back,
And herds of office-holders
To shout applause, as, with a crack,
It peels her patient shoulders.

"We forefathers to such a rout ! — No, by my faith in God's word !"
Half rose the ghost, and half drew out
The ghost of his old broadsword, Then thrust it slowly back again,
And said, with reverent gesture,
"No, Freedom, no ! blood should not stain
The hem of thy white vesture.

"I feel the soul in me draw near The mount of prophesying;
In this bleak wilderness I hear A John the Baptist crying; Far in the east I see upleap
The streaks of first forewarning,
And they who sowed the light shall reap
The golden sheaves of morning.

"Child of our travail and our woe, Light in our day of sorrow,
Through my rapt spirit I foreknow
The glory of thy morrow;
I hear great steps, that through the shade Draw nigher still and nigher,
And voices call like that which bade
The prophet come up higher."

I looked, no form mine eyes could find,
I heard the red cock crowing,
And through my window-chinks the wind
A dismal tune was blowing;
Thought I, My neighbor Buckingham Hath somewhat in him gritty,

Some Pilgrim-stuff that hates all sham,
And he will print my ditty.

ON THE CAPTURE OF FUGITIVE SLAVES NEAR WASHINGTON

In a letter to Edward M. Davis written from Elmwood July 24, 1845, Lowell says: "I blew another 'dolorous and jarring blast' in the Courier the other day, which you will probably see in the Liberator of this week or next. I was impelled to write by the account of the poor fugitives who were taken near Washington. I think it has done some good. At any rate, it has set two gentlemen together by the ears about Dissolution, and they are hammering away at each other in the Courier." The blast was the following stanzas.

Look on who will in apathy, and stifle they who can,
The sympathies, the hopes, the words, that make man truly man; Let those whose hearts are dungeoned up with interest or with ease Consent to hear with quiet pulse of loath-some deeds like these!

I first drew in New England's air, and from her hardy breast Sucked in the tyrant-hating milk that will not let me rest;
And if my words seem treason to the dullard and the tame,
'T is but my Bay-State dialect, — our fathers spake the same!

Shame on the costly mockery of piling stone on stone
To those who won our liberty, the heroes dead and gone,
While we look coldly on and see law-shielded ruffians slay
The men who fain would win their own, the heroes of to-day!

Are we pledged to craven silence? Oh, fling it to the wind,
The parchment wall that bars us from the least of human kind, That makes us cringe and temporize, and dumbly stand at rest, While Pity's burning flood of words is red-hot in the breast!

Though we break our fathers' promise, we have nobler duties first;
The traitor to Humanity is the traitor most accursed;
Man is more than Constitutions; better rot beneath the sod, Than be true to Church and State while we are doubly false to God!

We owe allegiance to the State; but deeper, truer, more,
To the sympathies that God hath set within our spirit's core;
Our country claims our fealty; we grant it so, but then Before Man made us citizens, great Nature made us men.

He's true to God who's true to man;
wherever wrong is done,
To the humblest and the weakest, 'neath the all-beholding sun, That wrong is also done to us; and they are slaves most base, Whose love of right is for themselves, and not for all their race.

God works for all. Ye cannot hem the hope of being free With parallels of latitude, with mountain-range or sea.
Put golden padlocks on Truth's lips, be callous as ye will,
From soul to soul, o'er all the world, leaps one electric thrill.

Chain down your slaves with ignorance, ye cannot keep apart,
With all your craft of tyranny, the human heart from heart:
When first the Pilgrims landed on the Bay State's iron shore,
The word went forth that slavery should one day be no more.

Out from the land of bondage 't is decreed our slaves shall go, And signs to us are offered, as erst to Pharaoh;
If we are blind, their exodus, like Israel's of yore,
Through a Red Sea is doomed to be, whose surges are of gore.

'T is ours to save our brethren, with peace and love to win Their darkened hearts from error, ere they harden it to sin;
But if before his duty man with listless spirit stands, Erelong the Great Avenger takes the work from out his hands.

TO THE DANDELION

DEAR common flower, that grow'st beside the way, Fringing the dusty road with harmless
gold,
First pledge of blithesome May,
Which children pluck, and, full of pride uphold,
High-hearted buccaneers, o'erjoyed that they
An Eldorado in the grass have found, Which not the rich earth's ample
round
May match in wealth, thou art more dear
to me
Than all the prouder summer-blooms may be.

Gold such as thine ne'er drew the Spanish prow
Through the primeval hush of Indian seas, Nor wrinkled the lean brow Of age, to rob the lover's heart of ease;
'T is the Spring's largess, which she scatters now
To rich and poor alike, with lavish hand, Though most hearts never understand To take it at God's value, but pass by The offered wealth with unrewarded eye.

Thou art my tropics and mine Italy;
To look at thee unlocks a warmer clime;
The eyes thou givest me Are in the heart, and heed not space or
time:
Not in mid June the golden-cuirassed
bee
Feels a more summer-like warm ravish-ment
In the white lily's breezy tent, His fragrant Sybaris, than I, when first From the dark green thy yellow circles burst.

Then think I of deep shadows on the grass,
Of meadows where in sun the cattle graze,
Where, as the breezes pass,
The gleaming rushes lean a thousand ways,
Of leaves that slumber in a cloudy mass,
Or whiten in the wind, of waters blue That from the distance sparkle through Some woodland gap, and of a sky above, Where one white cloud like a stray lamb doth move.

My childhood's earliest thoughts are linked with thee;
The sight of thee calls back the robin's
song,
Who, from the dark old tree
Beside the door, sang clearly all day long,
And I, secure in childish piety, Listened as if I heard an angel sing With news from heaven, which he could bring Fresh every day to my untainted ears When birds and flowers and I were happy peers.

How like a prodigal doth nature seem,
When thou, for all thy gold, so common art!
Thou teachest me to deem More sacredly of every human heart, Since each reflects in joy its scanty gleam Of heaven, and could some wondrous secret
show,
Did we but pay the love we owe,
And with a child's undoubting wisdom
look
On all these living pages of God's book.

THE GHOST-SEER

This poem was printed March 8, 1845, in the Broadway Journal, edited by C. F. Briggs.
In a letter accompanying the poem Lowell confesses his dissatisfaction with the execution, as compared with the conception, and adds:
"Written in the metre which I have chosen it is perhaps too long, but the plot would have sufficed for quite a long and elaborate poem, into which a good deal of reflection and experience might have been compressed."

YE who, passing graves by night, Glance not to the left or right,
Lest a spirit should arise,
Cold and white, to freeze your eyes,

Some weak phantom, which your doubt Shapes upon the dark without From the dark within, a guess
 At the spirit's deathlessness, Which ye entertain with fear
 In your self-built dungeon here, Where ye sell your God-given lives Just for gold to buy you gyves, — Ye without a shudder meet In the city's noonday street, Spirits sadder and more dread
 Than from out the clay have fled, Buried, beyond hope of light,
 In the body's haunted night !
 See ye not that woman pale ?
 There are bloodhounds on her trail !
 Bloodhounds two, all gaunt and lean, (For the soul their scent is keen,) Want and Sin, and Sin is last,
 They have followed far and fast;
 Want gave tongue, and, at her howl, Sin awakened with a growl.
 Ah, poor girl ! she had a right To a blessing from the light;
 Title-deeds to sky and earth
 God gave to her at her birth;
 But, before they were enjoyed,
 Poverty had made them void,
 And had drunk the sunshine up
 From all nature's ample cup, Leaving her a first-born's share In the dregs of darkness there.
 Often, on the sidewalk bleak, Hungry, all alone, and weak,
 She has seen, in night and storm,
 Rooms o'erflow with firelight warm,
 Which, outside the window-glass, Doubled all the cold, alas !
 Till each ray that on her fell Stabbed her like an icicle,
 And she almost loved the wail
 Of the bloodhounds on her trail.
 Till the floor becomes her bier, She shall feel their pantings near,
 Close upon her very heels,
 Spite of all the din of wheels;
 Shivering on her pallet poor,
 She shall hear them at the door Whine and scratch to be let in, Sister bloodhounds, Want and Sin !

Hark ! that rustle of a dress,
 Stiff with lavish costliness !
 Here comes one whose cheek would flush But to have her garment brush

'Gainst the girl whose fingers thin Wove the weary broidery in,
 Bending backward from her toil,
 Lest her tears the silk might soil,
 And, in midnights chill and murk, Stitched her life into the work,
 Shaping from her bitter thought Heart's-ease and forget-me-not,
 Satirizing her despair
 With the emblems woven there.
 Little doth the wearer heed
 Of the heart-break in the brede;
 A hyena by her side Skulks, down-looking, — it is Pride.
 He digs for her in the earth,
 Where lie all her claims of birth,
 With his foul paws rooting o'er Some long-buried ancestor, Who perhaps a statue won By the ill deeds he had done,
 By the innocent blood he shed,
 By the desolation spread Over happy villages, Blotting out the smile of peace.
 There walks Judas, he who sold Yesterday his Lord for gold, Sold God's presence in his heart
 For a proud step in the mart;
 He hath dealt in flesh and blood;
 At the bank his name is good;
 At the bank, and only there,
 'T is a marketable ware.
 In his eyes that stealthy gleam
 Was not learned of sky or stream, But it has the cold, hard glint
 Of new dollars from the mint.
 Open now your spirit's eyes,
 Look through that poor clay disguise
 Which has thickened, day by day, Till it keeps all light at bay,
 And his soul in pitchy gloom Gropes about its narrow tomb,
 From whose dank and slimy walls Drop by drop the horror falls.
 Look ! a serpent lank and cold Hugs his spirit fold on fold;
 From his heart, all day and night,
 It doth suck God's blessed light.
 Drink it will, and drink it must,
 Till the cup holds naught but dust;
 All day long he hears it hiss, Writhing in its fiendish bliss;
 All night long he sees its eyes Flicker with foul ecstasies,
 As the spirit ebbs away

Into the absorbing clay.
 Who is he that skulks, afraid Of the trust he has betrayed, Shuddering if perchance a gleam Of old nobleness should stream Through the pent, unwholesome room, Where his shrunk soul cowers in gloom, Spirit sad beyond the rest
 By more instinct for the best?
 'T is a poet who was sent For a bad world's punishment, By compelling it to see Golden glimpses of To Be,
 By compelling it to hear Songs that prove the angels near;
 Who was sent to be the tongue
 Of the weak and spirit-wrung, Whence the fiery-winged Despair In men's shrinking eyes might flare.
 'T is our hope doth fashion us To base use or glorious:
 He who might have been a lark Of Truth's morning, from the dark Raining down melodious hope Of a freer, broader scope, Aspirations, prophecies,
 Of the spirit's full sunrise,
 Chose to be a bird of night,
 That, with eyes refusing light, Hooted from some hollow tree
 Of the world's idolatry.
 'T is his punishment to hear Sweep of eager pinions near,
 And his own vain wings to feel Drooping downward to his heel,
 All their grace and import lost, Burdening his weary ghost:
 Ever walking by his side
 He must see his angel guide,
 Who at intervals doth turn Looks on him so sadly stern,
 With such ever-new surprise Of hushed anguish in her eyes,
 That it seems the light of day
 From around him shrinks away,
 Or drops blunted from the wall
 Built around him by his fall.
 Then the mountains, whose white peaks Catch the morning's earliest streaks,
 He must see, where prophets sit,
 Turning east their faces lit,
 Whence, with footsteps beautiful,
 To the earth, yet dim and dull,
 They the gladsome tidings bring
 Of the sunlight's hastening:

Never can these hills of bliss Be o'erclimbed by feet like his!

But enough! Oh, do not dare
 From the next the veil to tear, Woven of station, trade, or dress,
 More obscene than nakedness, Wherewith plausible culture drapes Fallen Nature's myriad shapes!
 Let us rather love to mark
 How the unextinguished spark Still gleams through the thin disguise
 Of our customs, pomps, and lies,
 And, not seldom blown to flame, Vindicates its ancient claim.

STUDIES FOR TWO HEADS

The second of these studies was from A. Bronson Alcott. See Letters II. 349, where Lowell has something to say of the ease with which he wrote at the time of this poem, i. e. before 1850. He was under an engagement at this time to write constantly for the Anti-Slavery Standard, and he threw off many poems as part of the fulfilment of his engagement. The spur to activity came when his own mind was fertile, and some of his best known and most spontaneous work appeared at this time.

I

SOME sort of heart I know is hers, —
 I chanced to feel her pulse one night;
 A brain she has that never errs,
 And yet is never nobly right;
 It does not leap to great results,
 But, in some corner out of sight, Suspects a spot of latent blight,
 And, o'er the impatient infinite,
 She bargains, haggles, and consults.

Her eye, — it seems a chemic test
 And drops upon you like an acid;
 It bites you with unconscious zest,
 So clear and bright, so coldly placid;
 It holds you quietly aloof,
 It holds, — and yet it does not win you;
 It merely puts you to the proof
 And sorts what qualities are in you;
 It smiles, but never brings you nearer,
 It lights, — her nature draws not nigh; 'T is but that yours is growing clearer
 To her assays; — yes, try and try, You'll get no deeper than her eye.

There, you are classified: she's gone Far, far away into herself;
 Each with its Latin label on,
 Your poor components, one by one,
 Are laid upon their proper shelf
 In her compact and ordered mind,
 And what of you is left behind
 Is no more to her than the wind;
 In that clear brain, which, day and night,
 No movement of the heart e'er jostles,
 Her friends are ranged on left and right,— Here, silix, hornblende, sienite;
 There, animal remains and fossils.

And yet, O subtile analyst,
 That canst each property detect Of mood or grain, that canst untwist
 Each tangled skein of intellect,
 And with thy scalpel eyes lay bare Each mental nerve more fine than air,— O brain exact, that in thy scales Canst weigh the sun and never err,
 For once thy patient science fails,
 One problem still defies thy art;— Thou never canst compute for her
 The distance and diameter
 Of any simple human heart.

II

Hear him but speak, and you will feel
 The shadows of the Portico Over your tranquil spirit steal,
 To modulate all joy and woe
 To one subdued, subduing glow;
 Above our squabbling business-hours,
 Like Phidian Jove's, his beauty lowers,
 His nature satirizes ours;
 A form and front of Attic grace,
 He shames the higgling market-place,
 And dwarfs our more mechanic powers.

What throbbing verse can fitly render That face so pure, so trembling-tender?
 Sensation glimmers through its rest,
 It speaks unmanacled by words,
 As full of motion as a nest
 That palpitates with unfledged birds;
 'T is likeliest to Bethesda's stream, Forewarned through all its thrilling springs, White with the angel's coming gleam,
 And rippled with his fanning wings.

Hear him unfold his plots and plans,
 And larger destinies seem man's;
 You conjure from his glowing face

The omen of a fairer race;
 With one grand trope he boldly spans
 The gulf wherein so many fall,
 'Twixt possible and actual;
 His first swift word, talaria-shod, Exuberant with conscious God,
 Out of the choir of planets blots
 The present earth with all its spots.

Himself unshaken as the sky,
 His words, like whirlwinds, spin on high Systems and creeds pellmell together;
 'T is strange as to a deaf man's eye, While trees uprooted splinter by,
 The dumb turmoil of stormy weather;
 Less of iconoclast than shaper,
 His spirit, safe behind the reach Of the tornado of his speech, Burns calmly as a glowworm's taper.

So great in speech, but, ah! in act
 So overrun with vermin troubles,
 The coarse, sharp-cornered, ugly fact
 Of life collapses all his bubbles:
 Had he but lived in Plato's day,
 He might, unless my fancy errs,
 Have shared that golden voice's sway O'er barefooted philosophers.
 Our nipping climate hardly suits
 The ripening of ideal fruits:
 His theories vanquish us all summer,
 But winter makes him dumb and dumber;
 To see him mid life's needful things Is something painfully bewildering;
 He seems an angel with clipt wings Tied to a mortal wife and children,
 And by a brother seraph taken In the act of eating eggs and bacon.
 Like a clear fountain, his desire Exults and leaps toward the light,
 In every drop it says "Aspire!"
 Striving for more ideal height;
 And as the fountain, falling thence,
 Crawls baffled through the common gutter,
 So, from his speech's eminence,
 He shrinks into the present tense, Unkinged by foolish bread and butter.

Yet smile not, worldling, for in deeds Not all of life that's brave and wise is;
 He strews an ampler future's seeds,
 'T is your fault if no harvest rises;
 Smooth back the sneer; for is it naught
 That all he is and has is Beauty's?

By soul the soul's gains must be wrought,
The Actual claims our coarser thought,
The Ideal hath its higher duties.

ON A PORTRAIT OF DANTE BY GIOTTO

CAN this be thou who, lean and pale,
With such immitigable eye Didst look upon those writhing souls in bale,

And note each vengeance, and pass by Unmoved, save when thy heart by chance Cast backward one forbidden glance,
And saw Francesca, with child's glee, Subdue and mount thy wild-horse knee And with proud hands control its fiery prance ?

With half-drooped lids, and smooth, round
brow,

And eye remote, that iuly sees Fair Beatrice's spirit wandering now In some sea-lulled Hesperides, Thou movest through the jarring street,
Secluded from the noise of feet
By her gift-blossom in thy hand, Thy branch of palm from Holy Land;—
No trace is here of ruin's fiery sleet.

Yet there is something round thy lips
That prophesies the coming doom, The soft, gray herald-shadow ere the eclipse

Notches the perfect disk with gloom;
A something that would banish thee,
And thine untamed pursuer be,
From men and their unworthy fates, Though Florence had not shut her gates, And Grief had loosed her clutch and let thee free.

Ah ! he who follows fearlessly
The beckonings of a poet-heart Shall wander, and without the world's decree,

A banished man in field and mart;
Harder than Florence' walls the bar Which with deaf sternness holds him far From home and friends, till death's release,

And makes his only prayer for peace, Like thine, scarred veteran of a lifelong
war !

ON THE DEATH OF A FRIEND'S CHILD

This poem was printed in the Democratic Review, October, 1844, and the friend was doubtless C. F. Briggs. See the letter of consolation addressed to him in August, Letters I. 78-81.

DEATH never came so nigh to me before, Nor showed me his mild face: oft had I mused

Of calm and peace and safe forgetfulness, Of folded hands, closed eyes, and heart at
rest,

And slumber sound beneath a flowery turf,
Of faults forgotten, and an inner place Kept sacred for us in the heart of friends;
But these were idle fancies, satisfied With the mere husk of this great mystery, And dwelling in the outward shows of
things.

Heaven is not mounted to on wings of
dreams,

Nor doth the unthankful happiness of
youth

Aim thitherward, but floats from bloom to bloom,

With earth's warm patch of sunshine well content:

'T is sorrow builds the shining ladder up,
Whose golden rounds are our calamities, Whereon our firm feet planting, nearer
God

The spirit climbs, and hath its eyes unsealed.

True is it that Death's face seems stern and cold,

When he is sent to summon those we love,
But all God's angels come to us disguised:
Sorrow and sickness, poverty and death,
One after other lift their frowning masks,
And we behold the seraph's face beneath,
All radiant with the glory and the calm Of having looked upon the front of God.
With every anguish of our earthly part The spirit's sight grows clearer; this was meant

When Jesus touched the blind man's lids with clay.

Life is the jailer, Death the angel sent To draw the unwilling bolts and set us free.
He flings not ope the ivory gate of Rest,— Only the fallen spirit knocks at that,—

But to benigner regions beckons us,
To destinies of more rewarded toil.
In the hushed chamber, sitting by the dead,
It grates on us to hear the flood of life Whirl rustling onward, senseless of our loss.

The bee hums on; around the blossomed
vine

Whirs the light humming-bird; the cricket chirps;

The locust's shrill alarum stings the ear; Hard by, the cock shouts lustily; from farm to farm,

His cheery brothers, telling of the sun,
Answer, till far away the joyance dies:
We never knew before how God had filled
The summer air with happy living sounds;
All round us seems an overplus of life,
And yet the one dear heart lies cold and still.

It is most strange, when the great miracle Hath for our sakes been done, when we have had

Our inwardest experience of God, When with his presence still the room expands,

And is awed after him, that naught is changed,

That Nature's face looks unacknowledging,
And the mad world still dances heedless on After its butterflies, and gives no sign.

'T is hard at first to see it all aright:
In vain Faith blows her trump to summon back

Her scattered troop: yet, through the clouded glass

Of our own bitter tears, we learn to look Undazzled on the kindness of God's face; Earth is too dark, and Heaven alone shines
through.

It is no little thing, when a fresh soul
And a fresh heart, with their unmeasured scope

For good, not gravitating earthward yet,
But circling in diviner periods,
Are sent into the world, — no little thing,
When this unbounded possibility
Into the outer silence is withdrawn.

Ah, in this world, where every guiding thread

Ends suddenly in the one sure centre,
death,

The visionary hand of Might-have-been Alone can fill Desire's cup to the brim!

How changed, dear friend, are thy part and thy child's!

He bends above thy cradle now, or holds His warning finger out to be thy guide; Thou art the nursling now; he watches
thee

Slow learning, one by one, the secret things Which are to him used sights of every day;
He smiles to see thy wondering glances con

The grass and pebbles of the spirit-world,
To thee miraculous; and he will teach Thy knees their due observances of prayer.
Children are God's apostles, day by day Sent forth to preach of love, and hope, and peace;

Nor hath thy labe his mission left undone.
To me, at least, his going hence hath given Serenest thoughts and nearer to the skies,
And opened a new fountain in my heart For thee, my friend, and all: and oh, if Death

More near approaches meditates, and clasps Even now some dearer, more reluctant
hand,

God, strengthen thou my faith, that I may
see

That 't is thine angel, who, with loving haste,

Unto the service of the inner shrine,
Doth waken thy beloved with a kiss.

EURYDICE

HEAVEN'S cup held down to me I drain,
The sunshine mounts and spurs my brain;
Bathing in grass, with thirsty eye
I suck the last drop of the sky;
With each hot sense I draw to the lees
The quickening out-door influences, And empty to each radiant comer
A supernaculum of summer:
Not, Bacchus, all thy grosser juice Could bring enchantment so profuse, Though for its press each grape-bunch had The white feet of an Oread.

Through our coarse art gleam, now and then,

The features of angelic men:

'Neath the lewd Satyr's veiling paint Glow forth the Sibyl, Muse, or Saint;
The dauber's botch no more obscures
The mighty master's portraitures.

And who can say what luckier beam
 The hidden glory shall redeem,
 For what chance clod the soul may wait To stumble on its nobler fate,
 Or why, to his unwarned abode,
 Still by surprises comes the God?
 Some moment, nailed on sorrow's cross,
 May mediate a whole youth's loss,
 Some windfall joy, we know not whence,
 Redeem a lifetime's rash expense,
 And, suddenly wise, the soul may mark, Stripped of their simulated dark, Mountains of gold that pierce the sky, Girdling its valleyed poverty.

I feel ye, childhood's hopes, return,
 With olden heats my pulses burn, — Mine be the self-forgetting sweep,
 The torrent impulse swift and wild, Wherewith Taghkanic's rockborn child Dares gloriously the dangerous leap,
 And, in his sky-descended mood,
 Transmutes each drop of sluggish blood,
 By touch of bravery's simple wand,
 To amethyst and diamond, Proving himself no bastard slip,
 But the true granite-cradled one, Nursed with the rock's primeval drip,
 The cloud-embracing mountain's son!

Prayer breathed in vain! no wish's sway Rebuilds the vanished yesterday;
 For plated wares of Sheffield stamp
 We gave the old Aladdin's lamp;
 'T is we are changed; ah, whither went That undesigned abandonment,
 That wise, unquestioning content,
 Which could erect its microcosm
 Out of a weed's neglected blossom, Could call up Arthur and his peers
 By a low moss's clump of spears,
 Or, in its shingle trireme launched, Where Charles in some green inlet branched,
 Could venture for the golden fleece
 And dragon-watched Hesperides,
 Or, from its ripple-shattered fate, Ulysses' chances re-create?
 When, heralding life's every phase,
 There glowed a goddess-veiling haze,
 A plenteous, forewarning grace,
 Like that more tender dawn that flies Before the full moon's ample rise?
 Methinks thy parting glory shines Through yonder grove of singing pines;

At that elm-vista's end I trace Dimly thy sad leave-taking face, Eurydice! Eurydice!
 The tremulous leaves repeat to me
 Eurydice! Eurydice!
 No gloomier Orcus swallows thee
 Than the unclouded sunset's glow; Thine is at least Elysian woe;
 Thou hast Good's natural decay,
 And faded like a star away Into an atmosphere whose shine
 With fuller day o'ermasters thine, Entering defeat as 't were a shrine;
 For us, — we turn life's diary o'er
 To find but one word, — Nevermore.

SHE CAME AND WENT

As a twig trembles, which a bird Lights on to sing, then leaves unbent, So is my memory thrilled and stirred; —
 I only know she came and went.

As clasps some lake, by gusts unriven,
 The blue dome's measureless content,
 So my soul held that moment's heaven; —
 I only know she came and went.

As, at one bound, our swift spring heaps
 The orchards full of bloom and scent, So clove her May my wintry sleeps; —
 I only know she came and went.

An angel stood and met my gaze,
 Through the low doorway of my tent;
 The tent is struck, the vision stays; —
 I only know she came and went.

Oh, when the room grows slowly dim,
 And life's last oil is nearly spent,
 One gush of light these eyes will brim,
 Only to think she came and went.

THE CHANGELING

I HAD a little daughter,
 And she was given to me To lead me gently backward
 To the Heavenly Father's knee,
 That I, by the force of nature, Might in some dim wise divine
 The depth of his infinite patience
 To this wayward soul of mine.

I know not how others saw her,
 But to me she was wholly fair,
 And the light of the heaven she came from Still lingered and gleamed in her hair;
 For it was as wavy and golden,
 And as many changes took,
 As the shadows of sun-gilt ripples
 On the yellow bed of a brook.

To what can I liken her smiling Upon me, her kneeling lover, How it leaped from her lips to her eyelids,

And dimpled her wholly over,
 Till her outstretched hands smiled also,
 And I almost seemed to see
 The very heart of her mother Sending sun through her veins to me !

She had been with us scarce a twelvemonth,

And it hardly seemed a day,
 When a troop of wandering angels Stole my little daughter away;
 Or perhaps those heavenly Zingari
 But loosed the hampering strings,
 And when they had opened her cage-door,
 My little bird used her wings.

But they left in her stead a changeling,
 A little angel child,
 That seems like her bud in full blossom,
 And smiles as she never smiled:
 When I wake in the morning, I see it Where she always used to lie,
 And I feel as weak as a violet Alone 'neath the awful sky.

As weak, yet as trustful also;
 For the whole year long I see All the wonders of faithful Nature Still worked for the love of me;
 Winds wander, and dews drip earthward, Rain falls, suns rise and set,
 Earth whirls, and all but to prosper
 A poor little violet.

This child is not mine as the first was,
 I cannot sing it to rest,
 I cannot lift it up fatherly
 And bliss it upon my breast:
 Yet it lies in my little one's cradle
 And sits in my little one's chair, And the light of the heaven she's gone to Transfigures its golden hair.

THE PIONEER

What man would live confined with brick and stone, Imprisoned from the healing touch of
 air,
 And cramped with selfish landmarks everywhere,
 When all before him stretches, furrowless and lone,
 The unmapped prairie none can fence or own ?

What man would read and read the self-same faces,
 And, like the marbles which the windmill grinds, Rub smooth forever with the same smooth minds,
 This year retracing last year's, every year's, dull traces,
 When there are woods and un-penfolded spaces ?

What man o'er one old thought would pore and pore, Shut like a book between its covers thin
 For every fool to leave his dog's-ears
 in,
 When solitude is his, and God forevermore,
 Just for the opening of a paltry door ?

What man would watch life's oozy element Creep Letheward forever, when he might Down some great river drift beyond men's sight,
 To where the undethroned forest's royal tent Broods with its hush o'er half a continent ?

What man with men would push and al-tercate, Piecing out crooked means to crooked
 ends,
 When he can have the skies and woods for friends,
 Snatch back the rudder of his undismantled
 fate,
 And in himself be ruler, church, and state ?

Cast leaves and feathers rot in last year's nest,
 The winged brood, flown thence, new dwellings plan;
 The serf of his own Past is not a man;
 To change and change is life, to move and never rest; —
 Not what we are, but what we hope, is best.

The wild, free woods make no man halt or blind;
 Cities rob men of eyes and hands and feet, Patching one whole of many incomplete;
 The general preys upon the individual mind,
 And each alone is helpless as the wind.

Each man is some man's servant; every soul Is by some other's presence quite dis-crowned;
 Each owes the next through all the imperfect round, Yet not with mutual help; each man is his own goal,
 And the whole earth must stop to pay him toll.

Here, life the undiminished man demands;
 New faculties stretch out to meet new wants;
 What Nature asks, that Nature also grants;
 Here man is lord, not drudge, of eyes and feet and hands,
 And to his life is knit with hourly bands.

Come out, then, from the old thoughts and old ways,
 Before you harden to a crystal cold
 Which the new life can shatter, but not mould; Freedom for you still waits, still, looking backward, stays,
 But widens still the irretrievable space.

LONGING

Of all the myriad moods of mind
 That through the soul come thronging,

Which one was e'er so dear, so kind,
 So beautiful as Longing?
 The thing we long for, that we are
 For one transcendent moment, Before the Present poor and bare Can make its sneering comment.

Still, through our paltry stir and strife, Glows down the wished Ideal,
 And Longing moulds in clay what Life Carves in the marble Real;
 To let the new life in, we know,
 Desire must ope the portal;
 Perhaps the longing to be so Helps make the soul immortal.

Longing is God's fresh heavenward will With our poor earthward striving;
 We quench it that we may be still Content with merely living;
 But, would we learn that heart's full scope
 Which we are hourly wronging, Our lives must climb from hope to hope And realize our longing.

Ah! let us hope that to our praise Good God not only reckons
 The moments when we tread his ways,
 But when the spirit beckons, —
 That some slight good is also wrought Beyond self-satisfaction,
 When we are simply good in thought, Howe'er we fail in action.

ODE TO FRANCE

FEBRUARY, 1848

I

As, flake by flake, the beetling avalanches Build up their imminent crags of noiseless snow, Till some chance thrill the loosened ruin launches
 In unwarned havoc on the roofs below, So grew and gathered through the silent
 years
 The madness of a People, wrong by
 wrong.
 There seemed no strength in the dumb toiler's tears,
 No strength in suffering; but the Past was strong:
 The brute despair of trampled centuries

Leaped up with one hoarse yell and snapped its bands, Groped for its right with horny, callous
 hands,
 And stared around for God with bloodshot
 eyes.
 What wonder if those palms were all too hard For nice distinctions, — if that manad throng —
 They whose thick atmosphere no bard Had shivered with the lightning of his
 song,
 Brutes with the memories and desires of
 men,
 Whose chronicles were writ with iron pen,
 In the crooked shoulder and the forehead low,
 Set wrong to balance wrong,
 And physicked woe with woe ?

II

They did as they were taught; not theirs the blame,
 If men who scattered firebrands reaped the flame:
 They trampled Peace beneath their savage feet,
 And by her golden tresses drew Mercy along the pavement of the street.
 O Freedom! Freedom! is thy morning-
 dew
 So gory red? Alas, thy light had ne'er
 Shone in upon the chaos of their lair!
 They reared to thee such symbol as they
 knew,
 And worshipped it with flame and
 blood,
 A Vengeance, axe in hand, that stood Holding a tyrant's head up by the clotted hair.

What wrongs the Oppressor suffered, these we know;
 These have found piteous voice in song and prose;
 But for the Oppressed, their darkness and their woe,
 Their grinding centuries, — what Muse had those?
 Though hall and palace had nor eyes nor ears,

Hardening a people's heart to senseless
 stone,
 Thou knewest them, O Earth, that drank their tears,
 O Heaven, that heard their inarticulate moan!
 They noted down their fetters, link by link;
 Coarse was the hand that scrawled, and red the ink;
 Rude was their score, as suits unlettered
 men, Notched with a headsman's axe upon a block:
 What marvel if, when came the avenging shock,
 'T was Atë, not Urania, held the pen ?

IV

With eye averted, and an anguished frown, Loathingly glides the Muse through scenes of strife, Where, like the heart of Vengeance up and down, Throbs in its framework the blood-muffled knife;
 Slow are the steps of Freedom, but her feet Turn never backward: hers no bloody
 glare;
 Her light is calm, and innocent, and sweet,
 And where it enters there is no despair:
 Not first on palace and cathedral spire Quivers and gleams that unconsuming fire; While these stand black against her morning skies,
 The peasant sees it leap from peak to peak Along his hills; the craftsman's burning
 eyes
 Own with cool tears its influence mother-
 meek;
 It lights the poet's heart up like a star; Ah! while the tyrant deemed it still afar,
 And twined with golden threads his futile snare,
 That swift, convicting glow all round him ran;
 'T was close beside him there,
 Sunrise whose Memnon is the soul of man.

O Broker-King, is this thy wisdom's fruit?
 A dynasty plucked out as 't were a weed Grown rankly in a night, that leaves no seed!

Could eighteen years strike down no deeper root ?

But now thy vulture eye was turned on Spain;
A shout from Paris, and thy crown falls off, Thy race has ceased to reign,
And thou become a fugitive and scoff: Slippery the feet that mount by stairs of
gold,
And weakest of all fences one of steel; Go and keep school again like him of old,

The Syracusan tyrant; — thou mayst feel Royal amid a birch-swayed commonweal !

VI

Not long can he be ruler who allows His time to run before him; thou wast
naught
Soon as the strip of gold about thy brows Was no more emblem of the People's
thought:

Vain were thy bayonets against the foe Thou hadst to cope with; thou didst wage

War not with Frenchmen merely; — no, Thy strife was with the Spirit of the Age,
The invisible Spirit whose first breath divine

Scattered thy frail endeavor, And, like poor last year's leaves, whirled thee and thine

Into the Dark forever !

Is here no triumph ? Nay, what though The yellow blood of Trade meanwhile should pour

Along its arteries a shrunken flow, And the idle canvas droop around the shore ?

These do not make a state,
Nor keep it great;
I think God made

The earth for man, not trade;
And where each humblest human creature Can stand, no more suspicious or afraid, Erect and kingly in his right of nature,
To heaven and earth knit with harmonious ties, —

Where I beheld the exultation
Of manhood glowing in those eyes
That had been dark for ages, Or only lit with bestial loves and rages,

There I behold a Nation:

The France which lies Between the Pyrenees and Rhine
Is the least part of France;

I see her rather in the soul whose shine Burns through the craftsman's grimy countenance,

In the new energy divine Of Toil's enfranchised glance.

VIII

And if it be a dream,
If the great Future be the little Past 'Neath a new mask, which drops and shows at last

The same weird, mocking face to balk and blast, Yet, Muse, a gladder measure suits the theme,

And the Tyrtæan harp Loves notes more resolute and sharp, Throbbing, as throbs the bosom, hot and fast:

Such visions are of morning,
Theirs is no vague forewarning,
The dreams which nations dream come true,
And shape the world anew;

If this be a sleep,
Make it long, make it deep,
O Father, who sendest the harvests men reap!

While Labor so sleepeth,
His sorrow is gone,

No longer he weepeth,
But smileth and steepeth
His thoughts in the dawn;

He heareth Hope yonder Rain, lark-like, her fancies,
His dreaming hands wander

Mid heart's-ease and pansies;
" 'T is a dream ! 'T is a vision ! "

Shrieks Mammon aghast;
" The day's broad derision Will chase it at last;

Ye are mad, ye have taken A slumbering kraken
For firm land of the Past ! "

Ah ! if he awaken,
God shield us all then,
If this dream rudely shaken Shall cheat him again !

IX

Since first I heard our North-wind blow, Since first I saw Atlantic throw
On our grim rocks his thunderous snow,

I loved thee, Freedom; as a boy
 The rattle of thy shield at Marathon Did with a Grecian joy Through all my pulses run;
 But I have learned to love thee now Without the helm upon thy gleaming brow,
 A maiden mild and undefiled Like her who bore the world's redeeming child;
 And surely never did thine altars glance
 With purer fires than now in France; While, in their clear white flashes, Wrong's shadow, backward cast, Waves cowering o'er the ashes
 Of the dead, blaspheming Past, O'er the shapes of fallen giants,
 His own unburied brood, Whose dead hands clench defiance
 At the overpowering Good:
 And down the happy future runs a flood Of prophesying light;
 It shows an Earth no longer stained with blood,
 Blossom and fruit where now we see the bud
 Of Brotherhood and Right.

ANTI-APIS

PRAISEST Law, friend? We, too, love it much as they that love it best;
 'T is the deep, august foundation, whereon Peace and Justice rest;
 On the rock primeval, hidden in the Past its bases be,
 Block by block the endeavoring Ages built it up to what we see.

But dig down: the Old unbury; thou shalt find on every stone That each Age hath carved the symbol of what god to them was known, Ugly shapes and brutish sometimes, but the fairest that they knew;
 If their sight were dim and earthward, yet their hope and aim were true.

Surely as the unconscious needle feels the far-off loadstar draw, So strives every gracious nature to at-one itself with law;
 And the elder Saints and Sages laid their pious framework right
 By a theocratic instinct covered from the people's sight.

As their gods were, so their laws were;
 Thor the strong could reave and steal,
 So through many a peaceful inlet tore the Norseman's eager keel;
 But a new law came when Christ came,
 and not blameless, as before, Can we, paying him our lip-tithes, give our lives and faiths to Thor.

Law is holy: ay, but what law? Is there nothing more divine Than the patched-up broils of Congress, venal, full of meat and wine?
 Is there, say you, nothing higher? Naught, God save us! that transcends Laws of cotton texture, wove by vulgar men for vulgar ends?

Did Jehovah ask their counsel, or submit to them a plan,
 Ere he filled with loves, hopes, longings, this aspiring heart of man?
 For their edict does the soul wait, ere it swing round to the pole Of the true, the free, the God-willed, all that makes it be a soul?

Law is holy; but not your law, ye who keep the tablets whole While ye dash the Law to pieces, shatter it in life and soul;
 Bearing up the Ark is lightsome, golden Apis hid within,
 While we Levites share the offerings, richer by the people's sin.

Give to Cæsar what is Cæsar's? yes, but tell me, if you can,
 Is this superscription Cæsar's here upon our brother man?
 Is not here some other's image, dark and sullied though it be,
 In this fellow-soul that worships, struggles Godward even as we?

It was not to such a future that the Mayflower's prow was turned,
 Not to such a faith the martyrs clung, exulting as they burned;
 Not by such laws are men fashioned, earnest, simple, valiant, great In the household virtues whereon rests the unconquerable state.

Ah ! there is a higher gospel, overhead the God-roof springs,
 And each glad, obedient planet like a golden shuttle sings Through the web which Time is weaving in his never-resting loom, Weaving seasons many-colored, bringing prophecy to doom.

Think you Truth a farthing rushlight, to be pinched out when you will With your deft official fingers, and your politicians' skill ?
 Is your God a wooden fetish, to be hidden out of sight
 That his black eyes may not see you do the thing that is not right ?

But the Destinies think not so; to their judgment-chamber lone Comes no noise of popular clamor, there Fame's trumpet is not blown;
 Your majorities they reckon not; that you grant, but then you say That you differ with them somewhat, — which is stronger, you or they ?

Patient are they as the insects that build islands in the deep; They hurl not the bolted thunder, but their silent way they keep;
 Where they have been that we know; where empires towered that were not just;
 Lo ! the skulking wild fox scratches in a little heap of dust.

A PARABLE

SAID Christ our Lord, "I will go and see How the men, my brethren, believe in me." He passed not again through the gate of birth,
 But made himself known to the children of earth.

Then said the chief priests, and rulers, and kings,
 "Behold, now, the Giver of all good things;
 Go to, let us welcome with pomp and state Him who alone is mighty and great."

With carpets of gold the ground they spread
 Wherever the Son of Man should tread,

And in palace-chambers lofty and rare They lodged him, and served him with kingly fare.

Great organs surged through arches dim Their jubilant floods in praise of him;
 And in church, and palace, and judgment-hall,
 He saw his own image high over all.

But still, wherever his steps they led,
 The Lord in sorrow bent down his head,
 And from under the heavy foundation-stones,
 The son of Mary heard bitter groans.

And in church, and palace, and judgment-
 hall,
 He marked great fissures that rent the wall,
 And opened wider and yet more wide
 As the living foundation heaved and sighed.

"Have ye founded your thrones and altars,
 then,
 On the bodies and souls of living men ?
 And think ye that building shall endure, Which shelters the noble and crushes the poor ?

"With gates of silver and bars of gold Ye have fenced my sheep from their Father's fold;
 I have heard the dropping of their tears In heaven these eighteen hundred years."

"O Lord and Master, not ours the guilt, We build but as our fathers built;
 Behold thine images, how they stand, Sovereign and sole, through all our land.

"Our task is hard, — with sword and flame
 To hold thine earth forever the same,
 And with sharp crooks of steel to keep Still, as thou leftest them, thy sheep."

Then Christ sought out an artisan, A low-browed, stunted, haggard man,
 And a motherless girl, whose fingers thin Pushed from her faintly want and sin.

These set he in the midst of them,
 And as they drew back their garment-hem,
 For fear of defilement, "Lo, here," said he,
 "The images ye have made of me !"

WRITTEN FOR THE CELEBRATION OF THE INTRODUCTION OF THE COCHITUATE WATER INTO THE CITY OF BOSTON

The public system of water works in Boston dates from October 25, 1848, when with much ceremony the water of Lake Cochituate, formerly called Long Pond, was turned into the reservoir which then occupied the site of the present extension of the State House, and a stream was conducted into the Frog Pond on Boston Common, where the pressure gave head to a fine jet. Besides the Ode, a selection was sung from the oratorio of Elijah, and addresses were made by the mayor and the chairman of the water commissioners.

My name is Water: I have sped Through strange, dark ways, untried
before,
By pure desire of friendship led,
Cochituate's ambassador;
He sends four royal gifts by me:
Long life, health, peace, and purity.

I'm Ceres' cup-bearer; I pour,
For flowers and fruits and all their kin,
Her crystal vintage, from of yore Stored in old Earth's selectest bin, Flora's Falernian ripe, since God
The wine-press of the deluge trod.

In that far isle whence, iron-willed,
The New World's sires their bark unmoored,
The fairies' acorn-cups I filled
Upon the toadstool's silver board, And, 'neath Herne's oak, for Shakespeare's
sight,
Strewed moss and grass with diamonds
bright.

No fairies in the Mayflower came,
And, lightsome as I sparkle here,
For Mother Bay State, busy dame, I've toiled and drudged this many a
year,
Throbb'd in her engines' iron veins, Twirled myriad spindles for her gains.

I, too, can weave: the warp I set Through which the sun his shuttle throws,

And, bright as Noah saw it, yet
For you the arching rainbow glows, A sight in Paradise denied To unfallen Adam and his bride.

When Winter held me in his grip,
You seized and sent me o'er the wave, Ungrateful! in a prison-ship;
But I forgive, not long a slave,
For, soon as summer south-winds blew, Homeward I fled, disguised as dew.

For countless services I'm fit,
Of use, of pleasure, and of gain,
But lightly from all bonds I flit, Nor lose my mirth, nor feel a stain;
From mill and wash-tub I escape,
And take in heaven my proper shape.

So, free myself, to-day, elate
I come from far o'er hill and mead,
And here, Cochituate's envoy, wait
To be your blithesome Ganymede,
And brim your cups with nectar true That never will make slaves of you.

LINES

SUGGESTED BY THE GRAVES OF TWO ENGLISH SOLDIERS ON CONCORD BAT-TLE-GROUND

THE same good blood that now refills
The dotard Orient's shrunken veins,
The same whose vigor westward thrills, Bursting Nevada's silver chains, Poured here upon the April grass, Freckled with red the herbage new;
On reeled the battle's trampling mass,
Back to the ash the bluebird flew.

Poured here in vain; — that sturdy blood Was meant to make the earth more green,
But in a higher, gentler mood
Than broke this April noon serene;
Two graves are here: to mark the place,
At head and foot, an unhewn stone, O'er which the herald lichens trace
The blazon of Oblivion.

These men were brave enough, and true
To the hired soldier's bull-dog creed;
What brought them here they never knew;
They fought as suits the English breed:

They came three thousand miles, and died,
To keep the Past upon its throne;
Unheard, beyond the ocean tide,
Their English mother made her moan.

The turf that covers them no thrill Sends up to fire the heart and brain;
No stronger purpose nerves the will,
No hope renews its youth again:
From farm to farm the Concord glides,
And trails my fancy with its flow;
O'erhead the balanced hen-hawk slides, Twinned in the river's heaven below.

But go, whose Bay State bosom stirs, Proud of thy birth and neighbor's right, Where sleep the heroic villagers Borne red and stiff from Concord fight; Thought Reuben, snatching down his gun,
Or Seth, as ebbed the life away,
What earthquake rifts would shoot and run World-wide from that short April fray?

What then? With heart and hand they wrought,
According to their village light;
'T was for the Future that they fought,
Their rustic faith in what was right.
Upon earth's tragic stage they burst Unsummoned, in the humble sock; Theirs the fifth act; the curtain first Rose long ago on Charles's block.

Their graves have voices; if they threw Dice charged with fates beyond their ken,
Yet to their instincts they were true,
And had the genius to be men.
Fine privilege of Freedom's host,
Of humblest soldiers for the Right! — Age after age ye hold your post, Your graves send courage forth, and might.

TO ———

We, too, have autumns, when our leaves Drop loosely through the dampened air, When all our good seems bound in sheaves,
And we stand reaped and bare.

Our seasons have no fixed returns,
Without our will they come and go;
At noon our sudden summer burns,
Ere sunset all is snow.

But each day brings less summer cheer, Crimps more our ineffectual spring,
And something earlier every year
Our singing birds take wing.

As less the olden glow abides,
And less the chillier heart aspires, With drift-wood beached in past spring-tides
We light our sullen fires.

By the pinched rushlight's starving beam
We cower and strain our wasted sight,
To stitch youth's shroud up, seam by seam,
In the long arctic night.

It was not so — we once were young — When Spring, to womanly Summer turn-
ing,
Her dew-drops on each grass-blade strung,
In the red sunrise burning.

We trusted then, aspired, believed That earth could be remade to-morrow;
Ah, why be ever undeceived?
Why give up faith for sorrow?

O thou, whose days are yet all spring,
Faith, blighted one, is past retrieving;
Experience is a dumb, dead thing;
The victory 's in believing.

FREEDOM

In a letter to Mr. Norton, written June 29, 1859, Mr. Lowell refers to English comments on the Austro-Italian war, then in its early stages, and alludes to a quotation which Mr. Bright had made from his writings. "But," he says, "I fear he thinks me too much of a Quaker. In my Poems there are some verses on 'Freedom' written in '48 or '49. They ended thus as originally written. I left the verses out only because I did not think them good, — not because I did not like the sentiment. I have strength of mind enough not to change a word — though I see how much better I might make it." He then copies the lines which below are separated from the poem by a long dash, and adds: "I think it must have been written in 1848, for I remember that, as I first composed it, it had 'Fair Italy' instead of 'Humanity.'"

ARE we, then, wholly fallen? Can it be That thou, North wind, that from thy mountains bringest

Their spirit to our plains, and thou, blue sea,

Who on our rocks thy wreaths of freedom flingest,

As on an altar, — can it be that ye Have wasted inspiration on dead ears, Dulled with the too familiar clank of chains?

The people's heart is like a harp for years Hung where some petrifying torrent rains Its slow-incrusting spray: the stiffened chords

Faint and more faint make answer to the tears

That drip upon them: idle are all words:
Only a golden plectrum wakes the tone Deep buried 'neath that ever-thickening stone.

We are not free: doth Freedom, then, consist

In musing with our faces toward the Past, While petty cares and crawling interests twist

Their spider-threads about us, which at last Grow strong as iron chains, to cramp and bind

In formal narrowness heart, soul, and mind?

Freedom is recreated year by year,
In hearts wide open on the Godward side,
In souls calm-cadenced as the whirling sphere,

In minds that sway the future like a tide.
No broadest creeds can hold her, and no codes;

She chooses men for her august abodes, Building them fair and fronting to the dawn;

Yet, when we seek her, we but find a few Light footprints, leading morn-ward through the dew:

Before the day had risen, she was gone.

And we must follow: swiftly runs she on,
And, if our steps should slacken in despair,
Half turns her face, half smiles through golden hair,

Forever yielding, never wholly won:
That is not love which pauses in the race
Two close-linked names on fleeting sand to trace;

Freedom gained yesterday is no more ours;
Men gather but dry seeds of last year's flowers;

Still there's a charm ungranted, still a grace,

Still rosy Hope, the free, the unattained, Makes us Possession's languid hand let fall;

'T is but a fragment of ourselves is gained,
The Future brings us more, but never all.

And, as the finder of some unknown realm, Mounting a summit whence he thinks to see

On either side of him the imprisoning sea, Beholds, above the clouds that overwhelm
The valley-land, peak after snowy peak Stretch out of sight, each like a silver helm

Beneath its plume of smoke, sublime and bleak,

And what he thought an island finds to be A continent to him first oped, — so we Can from our height of Freedom look along A boundless future, ours if we be strong;
Or if we shrink, better remount our ships And, fleeing God's express design, trace back

The hero-freighted Mayflower's prophetic track

To Europe entering her blood-red eclipse.

Therefore of Europe now I will not doubt,
For the broad foreheads surely win the day,

And brains, not crowns or soul-gelt armies, weigh

In Fortune's scales: such dust she brushes out.

Most gracious are the conquests of the Word,

Gradual and silent as a flower's increase,
And the best guide from old to new is Peace —

Yet, Freedom, thou canst sanctify the sword!

Bravely to do whate'er the time demands, Whether with pen or sword, and not to flinch,

This is the task that fits heroic hands;
So are Truth's boundaries widened inch by inch.

I do not love the Peace which tyrants make;

The calm she breeds let the sword's lightning break!

It is the tyrants who have beaten out Ploughshares and pruning-hooks to spears and swords,
And shall I pause and moralize and doubt?
Whose veins run water let him mete his words!
Each fetter sundered is the whole world's gain!
And rather than humanity remain
A pearl beneath the feet of Austrian swine, Welcome to me whatever breaks a chain.
That surely is of God, and all divine!

BIBLIOLATRES

BOWING thyself in dust before a Book,
And thinking the great God is thine alone, O rash iconoclast, thou wilt not brook What gods the heathen carves in wood and
stone,
As if the Shepherd who from the outer cold
Leads all his shivering lambs to one sure
fold
Were careful for the fashion of his crook.
There is no broken reed so poor and base, No rush, the bending tilt of swamp-fly
blue,
But He therewith the ravening wolf can chase,
And guide his flock to springs and pastures new;
Through ways unlooked for, and through many lands,
Far from the rich folds built with human
hands,
The gracious footprints of his love I trace.

And what art thou, own brother of the clod, That from his hand the crook wouldst snatch away
And shake instead thy dry and sapless rod, To scare the sheep out of the wholesome
day?
Yea, what art thou, blind, unconverted Jew,
That with thy idol-volume's covers two Wouldst make a jail to coop the living
God?

Thou hear'st not well the mountain organ-tones
By prophet ears from Hor and Sinai caught,

Thinking the cisterns of those Hebrew brains
Drew dry the springs of the All-knower's
thought,
Nor shall thy lips be touched with living
fire,
Who blow'st old altar-coals with sole desire To weld anew the spirit's broken chains.

God is not dumb, that He should speak no
more;
If thou hast wanderings in the wilderness
And find'st not Sinai, 't is thy soul is poor; There towers the Mountain of the Voice no
less,
Which whoso seeks shall find, but he who bends,
Intent on manna still and mortal ends, Sees it not, neither hears its thundered lore.

Slowly the Bible of the race is writ,
And not on paper leaves nor leaves of stone;
Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it, Texts of despair or hope, of joy or moan.
While swings the sea, while mists the mountains shroud, While thunder's surges burst on cliffs of
cloud,
Still at the prophets' feet the nations sit.

BEAVER BROOK

... "Don't you like the poem [Beaver Brook] I sent you last week? I was inclined to think pretty well of it, but I have not seen it in print yet. The little mill stands in a valley between one of the spurs of Wellington Hill and the main summit, just on the edge of Waltham. It is surely one of the loveliest spots in the world. It is one of my lions, and if you will make me a visit this spring I will take you up to hear it roar, and I will show you 'the oaks'—the largest, I fancy, left in the country." Letters I. 149. The poem was sent to Mr. Gay for the Standard. These oaks are now known as the Waverley Oaks, and are to be preserved.

HUSHED with broad sunlight lies the hill,
And, minuting the long day's loss,
The cedar's shadow, slow and still,
Creeps o'er its dial of gray moss.

Warm noon brims full the valley's cup,
The aspen's leaves are scarce astir;
Only the little mill sends up Its busy, never-ceasing burr.

Climbing the loose-piled wall that hems
The road along the mill-pond's brink,
From 'neath the arching barberry-stems,
My footstep scares the shy chewink.

Beneath a bony buttonwood
The mill's red door lets forth the din;
The whitened miller, dust-imbued, Flits past the square of dark within.

No mountain torrent's strength is here;
Sweet Beaver, child of forest still,
Heaps its small pitecher to the ear,
And gently waits the miller's will.

Swift slips Undine along the race Unheard, and then, with flashing bound, Floods the dull wheel with light and grace,
And, laughing, hunts the loath drudge
round.

The miller dreams not at what cost
The quivering millstones hum and whirl,

Nor how for every turn are tost Armfuls of diamond and of pearl.

But Summer cleared my happier eyes With drops of some celestial juice,
To see how Beauty underlies Forevermore each form of use.

And more; methought I saw that flood,
Which now so dull and darkling steals,
Thick, here and there, with human blood,
To turn the world's laborious wheels.

No more than doth the miller there, Shut in our several cells, do we Know with what waste of beauty rare Moves every day's machinery.

Surely the wiser time shall come When this fine overplus of might,
No longer sullen, slow, and dumb, Shall leap to music and to light.

In that new childhood of the Earth Life of itself shall dance and play, Fresh blood in Time's shrunk veins make mirth,
And labor meet delight half-way.

MEMORIAL VERSES

KOSSUTH

A RACE of nobles may die out,
A royal line may leave no heir;
Wise Nature sets no guards about Her pewter plate and wooden ware.

But they fail not, the kinglier breed,
Who starry diadems attain;
To dungeon, axe, and stake succeed Heirs of the old heroic strain.

The zeal of Nature never cools, Nor is she thwarted of her ends;
When gapped and dulled her cheaper tools, Then she a saint and prophet spends.

Land of the Magyars! though it be The tyrant may relink his chain, Already thine the victory,
As the just Future measures gain.

Thou hast succeeded, thou hast won
The deathly travail's amplest worth;
A nation's duty thou hast done,
Giving a hero to our earth.

And he, let come what will of woe, Hath saved the land he strove to save;
No Cossack hordes, no traitor's blow, Can quench the voice shall haunt his grave.

"I Kossuth am: O Future, thou That clear'st the just and blott'st the vile, O'er this small dust in reverence bow, Remembering what I was erewhile.

"I was the chosen trump wherethrough Our God sent forth awakening breath; Came chains? Came death? The strain
He blew
Sounds on, outliving chains and death."

TO LAMARTINE

1848

I did not praise thee when the crowd,
 'Witched with the moment's inspiration,
 Vexed thy still ether with hosannas loud,
 And stamped their dusty adoration;
 I but looked upward with the rest,
 And, when they shouted Greatest, whispered Best.

They raised thee not, but rose to thee,
 Their fickle wreaths about thee fling-
 ing;
 So on some marble Phœbus the swol'n sea Might leave his worthless seaweed clinging,
 But pious hands, with reverent care,
 Make the pure limbs once more sublimely
 bare.

Now thou 'rt thy plain, grand self again,
 Thou art secure from panegyric,
 Thou who gav'st politics an epic strain,
 And actedst Freedom's noblest lyric;
 This side the Blessed Isles, no tree Grows green enough to make a wreath for thee.

Nor can blame cling to thee; the snow From swinish footprints takes no stain-
 ing,
 But, leaving the gross soils of earth below,
 Its spirit mounts, the skies regaining,
 And unresentful falls again,
 To beautify the world with dews and rain.

The highest duty to mere man vouchsafed Was laid on thee, — out of wild chaos, When the roused popular ocean foamed and chafed
 And vulture War from his Imaus Snuffed blood, to summon homely Peace,
 And show that only order is release.

To carve thy fullest thought, what though Time was not granted? Aye in history,
 Like that Dawn's face which baffled Angelo Left shapeless, grander for its mystery, Thy great Design shall stand, and day Flood its blind front from Orient's far
 away.

Who says thy day is o'er? Control,
 My heart, that bitter first emotion;
 While men shall reverence the steadfast
 soul,
 The heart in silent self-devotion Breaking, the mild, heroic mien, Thou 'lt need no prop of marble, Lamartine.

If France reject thee, 't is not thine,
 But her own, exile that she utters;
 Ideal France, the deathless, the divine, Will be where thy white pennon flutters,
 As once the nobler Athens went With Aristides into banishment.

No fitting meteward hath To-day
 For measuring spirits of thy stature;
 Only the Future can reach up to lay The laurel on that lofty nature, Bard, who with some diviner art Hast touched the bard's true lyre, a nation's
 heart.

Swept by thy hand, the gladdened chords, Crashed now in discords fierce by others,
 Gave forth one note beyond all skill of
 words,
 And chimed together, We are brothers.
 O poem unsurpassed! it ran All round the world, unlocking man to
 man.

France is too poor to pay alone
 The service of that ample spirit;
 Paltry seem low dictatorship and throne, Weighed with thy self-renouncing merit;
 They had to thee been rust and loss;
 Thy aim was higher, — thou hast climbed a Cross!

TO JOHN GORHAM PALFREY

Dr. Palfrey, whose name is for students associated mainly with his History of New England, was one of the most consistent and firm anti-slavery men of his day. Chosen to Congress as a Whig member, he refused to support the Whig candidate for the Speakership of the House, because he was assured that the candidate, Mr. Winthrop, would not use his position to obstruct the extension of the slave power

This incident called out the fourth of the first series of Biglow Papers.

THERE are who triumph in a losing cause,
Who can put on defeat, as 't were a wreath Unwithering in the adverse popular breath, Safe from the blasting demagogue's applause;
'T is they who stand for Freedom and God's laws.

And so stands Palfrey now, as Marvell
stood,
Loyal to Truth dethroned, nor could be wooded

To trust the playful tiger's velvet paws:
And if the second Charles brought in decay Of ancient virtue, if it well might wring Souls that had broadened 'neath a nobler
day,

To see a losel, marketable king Fearfully watering with his realm's best blood

Cromwell's quenched bolts, that erst had cracked and flamed, Scaring, through all their depths of courtier mud,

Europe's crowned bloodsuckers, — how more ashamed
Ought we to be, who see Corruption's flood Still rise o'er last year's mark, to mine
away

Our brazen idol's feet of treacherous
clay !

O utter degradation ! Freedom turned Slavery's vile bawd, to cozen and betray To the old lecher's clutch a maiden prey,
If so a loathsome pander's fee be earned !
And we are silent, — we who daily tread A soil sublime, at least, with heroes' graves ! —

Beckon no more, shades of the noble
dead !

Be dumb, ye heaven-touched lips of winds and waves !

Or hope to rouse some Coptic dullard, hid

Ages ago, wrapt stiffly, fold on fold,
With cerements close, to wither in the cold, Forever hushed, and sunless pyramid !

Beauty and Truth, and all that these contain,

Drop not like ripened fruit about our feet;
We climb to them through years of sweat and pain;

Without long struggle, none did e'er attain

The downward look from Quiet's blissful seat:

Though present loss may be the hero's
part,

Yet none can rob him of the victor heart Whereby the broad-realmed future is subdued,

And Wrong, which now insults from tri-umph's car,

Sending her vulture hope to raven far,
Is made unwilling tributary of Good.

O Mother State, how quenched thy Sinai
fires !

Is there none left of thy stanch Mayflower breed ?

No spark among the ashes of thy sires,
Of Virtue's altar-flame the kindling
seed ?

Are these thy great men, these that cringe and creep,

And writhe through slimy ways to place and power ? —

How long, O Lord, before thy wrath shall reap

Our frail-stemmed summer prosperings in their flower ?

Oh for one hour of that undaunted stock That went with Vane and Sidney to the block !

Oh for a whiff of Naseby, that would sweep,

With its stern Puritan besom, all this chaff

From the Lord's threshing-floor ! Yet more than half

The victory is attained, when one or two, Through the fool's laughter and the traitor's scorn,

Beside thy sepulchre can bide the morn, Crucified Truth, when thou shalt rise anew.

TO W. L. GARRISON

"Some time afterward, it was reported to me by the city officers that they had ferreted out the paper and its editor; that his office was an obscure hole, his only visible auxiliary a negro boy, and his supporters a few very insignificant persons of all colors."—Letter of H. G. Otis.

This significant sentence printed at its head gave the key-note to the following poem, but it is interesting to read the characterization of Garrison drawn by Mr. Lowell at this same time, in a letter to C. F. Briggs dated March 26, 1848. "I do not agree with the abolitionists in their disunion and non-voting theories. They treat ideas as ignorant persons do cherries. They think them unwholesome unless they are swallowed, stones and all. Garrison is so used to standing alone that, like Daniel Boone, he moves away as the world creeps up to him, and goes farther into the wilderness. He considers every step a step forward, though it be over the edge of a precipice. But, with all his faults and they are the faults of his position) he is a great and extraordinary man. His work may be over, but it has been a great work. . . . I respect Garrison (respect does not include love). Remember that Garrison was so long in a position where he alone was right and all the world wrong, that such a position has created in him a habit of mind which may remain, though circumstances have wholly changed. Indeed a kind of that cast is essential to a Reformer. Luther was as infallible as any man that ever held St. Peter's keys." Letters I. 125, 126.

IN a small chamber, friendless and unseen,

Toiled o'er his types one poor, unlearned young man;

The place was dark, unfurnished, and mean;

Yet there the freedom of a race began.

Help came but slowly; surely no man yet

Put lever to the heavy world with less:
What need of help? He knew how types were set,

He had a dauntless spirit, and a press.

Such earnest natures are the fiery pith,

The compact nucleus, round which systems grow;

Mass after mass becomes inspired therewith,

And whirls impregnate with the central glow.

O Truth! O Freedom! how are ye still born

In the rude stable, in the manger nurst!

What humble hands unbar those gates of morn

Through which the splendors of the New Day burst!

What! shall one monk, scarce known beyond his cell,

Front Rome's far-reaching bolts, and scorn her frown?

Brave Luther answered YES; that thunder's swell

Rocked Europe, and discharmed the triple crown.

Whatever can be known of earth we know, Sneered Europe's wise men, in their snail-shells curled;

No! said one man in Genoa, and that No
Out of the darkness summoned this New World.

Who is it will not dare himself to trust?

Who is it hath not strength to stand alone?

Who is it thwarts and bilks the inward MUST?

He and his works, like sand, from earth are blown.

Men of a thousand shifts and wiles, look here!

See one straightforward conscience put in pawn

To win a world; see the obedient sphere
By bravery's simple gravitation drawn!

Shall we not heed the lesson taught of old,
And by the Present's lips repeated still,
In our own single manhood to be bold, Fortressed in conscience and impregnable will?

We stride the river daily at its spring,
Nor, in our childish thoughtlessness, foresee

What myriad vassal streams shall tribute bring,

How like an equal it shall greet the sea.

O small beginnings, ye are great and strong,
Based on a faithful heart and weariless brain!

Ye build the future fair, ye conquer wrong,
Ye earn the crown, and wear it not in vain.

ON THE DEATH OF CHARLES TURNER TORREY

The Martyr Torrey was the name applied to this clergyman, who gave up his professional life in order to devote himself to the anti-slavery cause in Maryland. He was condemned to long imprisonment for aiding in the escape of slaves, but died in the penitentiary, May, 1846, of disease brought on by ill usage. His body was taken to Boston, and the funeral made a profound impression on the community.

WOE worth the hour when it is crime
To plead the poor dumb bondman's cause,
When all that makes the heart sublime,
The glorious throbs that conquer time,
Are traitors to our cruel laws !

He strove among God's suffering poor One gleam of brotherhood to send;
The dungeon oped its hungry door
To give the truth one martyr more,
Then shut, — and here behold the end !

O Mother State ! when this was done,
No pitying throe thy bosom gave;
Silent thou saw'st the death-shroud spun,
And now thou givest to thy son
The stranger's charity, — a grave.

Must it be thus forever ? No !
The hand of God sows not in vain, Long sleeps the darkling seed below,
The seasons come, and change, and go,
And all the fields are deep with grain.

Although our brother lie asleep,
Man's heart still struggles, still aspires;
His grave shall quiver yet, while deep Through the brave Bay State's pulses leap Her ancient energies and fires.

When hours like this the senses' gush Have stilled, and left the spirit room,
It hears amid the eternal hush
The swooping pinions' dreadful rush, That bring the vengeance and the doom; —

Not man's brute vengeance, such as rends
What rivets man to man apart, —
God doth not so bring round his ends, But waits the ripened time, and sends His mercy to the oppressor's heart.

ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF DR CHANNING

I DO not come to weep above thy pall, And mourn the dying - out of nobl
powers;
The poet's clearer eye should see, in all Earth's seeming woe, seed of immortal flowers.

Truth needs no champions: in the infinit
deep
Of everlasting Soul her strength abides From Nature's heart her mighty pulse
leap,
Through Nature's veins her strength undying, tides.

Peace is more strong than war, and gentle
ness,
Where force were vain, makes conquest o'er the wave;
And love lives on and hath a power t bless,
When they who loved are hidden in th
grave.

The sculptured marble brags of death strewn fields,
And Glory's epitaph is writ in blood;
But Alexander now to Plato yields, Clarkson will stand where Wellington bath stood.

I watch the circle of the eternal years,
And read forever in the storied page One lengthened roll of blood, and wrong and tears,
One onward step of Truth from age t
age.

The poor are crushed; the tyrants lin their chain;
The poet sings through narrow dur geon-grates;
Man's hope lies quenched; and, lo ! wit steadfast gain Freedom doth forge her mail of advers fates.

Men slay the prophets; fagot, rack, an cross
Make up the groaning record of th past;

But Evil's triumphs are her endless loss, And sovereign Beauty wins the soul at last.

No power can die that ever wrought for Truth;

Thereby a law of Nature it became,
And lives unwithered in its blithesome
youth,

When he who called it forth is but a name.

Therefore I cannot think thee wholly gone;

The better part of thee is with us still;
Thy soul its hampering clay aside hath thrown,

And only freer wrestles with the Ill.

Thou livest in the life of all good things;

What words thou spak'st for Freedom shall not die;

Thou sleepest not, for now thy Love hath
wings

To soar where hence thy Hope could hardly fly.

And often, from that other world, on this Some gleams from great souls gone before may shine,

To shed on struggling hearts a clearer bliss,
And clothe the Right with lustre more
divine.

Thou art not idle: in thy higher sphere

Thy spirit bends itself to loving tasks, And strength to perfect what it dreamed of here

Is all the crown and glory that it asks.

For sure, in Heaven's wide chambers, there is room

For love and pity, and for helpful deeds; Else were our summons thither but a doom To life more vain than this in clayey weeds.

From off the starry mountain-peak of song,

Thy spirit shows me, in the coming time,
An earth unwithered by the foot of wrong,
A race revering its own soul sublime.

What wars, what martyrdoms, what crimes, may come,

Thou knowest not, nor I; but God will lead

The prodigal soul from want and sorrow
home,

And Eden ope her gates to Adam's seed.

Farewell! good man, good angel now!
this hand

Soon, like thine own, shall lose its cunning too;

Soon shall this soul, like thine, bewildered
stand,

Then leap to thread the free, unfathomed
blue:

When that day comes, oh, may this hand grow cold,

Busy, like thine, for Freedom and the Right;

Oh, may this soul, like thine, be ever bold To face dark Slavery's encroaching blight!

This laurel-leaf I cast upon thy bier;

Let worthier hands than these thy wreath intwine;

Upon thy hearse I shed no useless tear, —
For us weep rather thou in calm divine!

TO THE MEMORY OF HOOD

ANOTHER star 'neath Time's horizon dropped,

To gleam o'er unknown lands and seas; Another heart that beat for freedom stopped, —

What mournful words are these!

O Love Divine, that claspest our tired
earth,

And lullest it upon thy heart, Thou knowest how much a gentle soul is worth

To teach men what thou art!

His was a spirit that to all thy poor

Was kind as slumber after pain:

Why ope so soon thy heaven-deep Quiet's door

And call him home again?

Freedom needs all her poets: it is they

Who give her aspirations wings,
And to the wiser law of music sway
Her wild imaginings.

Yet thou hast called him, nor art thou unkind,

O Love Divine, for 't is thy will That gracious natures leave their love behind

To work for Mercy still.

Let laurelled marbles weigh on other tombs,

Let anthems peal for other dead,
Rustling the bannered depth of minster-glooms

With their exulting spread.

His epitaph shall mock the short-lived stone,

No lichen shall its lines efface,
He needs these few and simple lines alone

To mark his resting-place:—

“Here lies a Poet. Stranger, if to thee

His claim to memory be obscure,
If thou wouldst learn how truly great was he,

Go, ask it of the poor.”

THE VISION OF SIR LAUNFAL

THIS poem was written apparently early in 1848, for in a letter to Mr. Briggs, dated February 1 of that year, Lowell, referring to it, says: “The new poem I spoke of is a sort of a story, and more likely to be popular than what I write generally. Maria thinks very highly of it. I shall probably publish it by itself next summer.” The poem was published in the middle of December, 1848, and in an exuberant letter to Mr. Briggs shortly after it appeared, Lowell wrote: “Last night . . . I walked to Watertown over the snow with the new moon before me and a sky exactly like that in Page’s evening landscape. Orion was rising behind me, and, as I stood on the hill just before you enter the village, the stillness of the fields around me was delicious, broken only by the tinkle of a little brook which runs too swiftly for Frost to catch it. My picture of the brook in Sir Launfal was drawn from it.” The following note was prefixed to the poem by its author.

According to the mythology of the Romans, the San Greal, or Holy Grail, was the cup out of which Jesus partook of the Last Supper with his disciples. It was brought into England by Joseph of Arimathea, and remained there, an object of pilgrimage and adoration, for many years in the keeping of his lineal descendants. It was incumbent upon those who had charge of it to be chaste in thought, word, and deed; but one of the keepers having broken this condition, the Holy Grail disappeared. From that time it was a favorite enterprise of the knights of Arthur’s court to go in search of it. Sir Galahad was at last successful in finding it, as may be read in the seventeenth book of the Romance of King Arthur. Tennyson has made Sir Galahad the subject of one of the most exquisite of his poems.

The plot (if I may give that name to anything so slight) of the following poem is my own, and, to serve its purposes, I have enlarged the circle of competition in search of the miraculous cup in such a manner as to include, not only other persons than the heroes of the Round Table, but also a period of time subsequent to the supposed date of King Arthur’s reign.

PRELUDE TO PART FIRST

OVER his keys the musing organist, Beginning doubtfully and far away, First lets his fingers wander as they list,
And builds a bridge from Dreamland for his lay:

Then, as the touch of his loved instrument Gives hope and fervor, nearer draws his theme,

First guessed by faint auroral flushes sent Along the wavering vista of his dream.

Not only around our infancy Doth heaven with all its splendors lie;
Daily, with souls that cringe and plot,
We Sinais climb and know it not.

Over our manhood bend the skies;
Against our fallen and traitor lives
The great winds utter prophecies;
With our faint hearts the mountain strives;
Its arms outstretched, the druid wood Waits with its benedictite;

And to our age's drowsy blood
Still shouts the inspiring sea.

Earth gets its price for what Earth gives us;

The beggar is taxed for a corner to die
in,

The priest hath his fee who comes and shrives us,

We bargain for the graves we lie in;
At the devil's booth are all things sold, Each ounce of dross costs its ounce of
gold;

For a cap and bells our lives we pay, Bubbles we buy with a whole soul's task-
ing:

'T is heaven alone that is given away,
'T is only God may be had for the ask-
ing;

No price is set on the lavish summer;
June may be had by the poorest comer.

And what is so rare as a day in June ?

Then, if ever, come perfect days;

Then Heaven tries earth if it be in tune,

And over it softly her warm ear lays;

Whether we look, or whether we listen,

We hear life murmur, or see it glisten;

Every clod feels a stir of might,

An instinct within it that reaches and
towers,

And, groping blindly above it for light,

Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers;

The flush of life may well be seen

Thrilling back over hills and valleys;

The cowslip startles in meadows green,

The buttercup catches the sun in its chalice,

And there's never a leaf nor a blade too mean

To be some happy creature's palace;

The little bird sits at his door in the sun,

Attil like a blossom among the leaves,

And lets his illumined being o'errun

With the deluge of summer it receives;

His mate feels the eggs beneath her wings,

And the heart in her dumb breast flutters and sings;

He sings to the wide world, and she to her nest,—

In the nice ear of Nature which song is the best ?

Now is the high-tide of the year,

And whatever of life hath ebbed away

Comes flooding back with a ripply cheer, Into every bare inlet and creek and bay;

Now the heart is so full that a drop over-fills it,

We are happy now because God wills it;

No matter how barren the past may have been,

'T is enough for us now that the leaves are
green;

We sit in the warm shade and feel right well

How the sap creeps up and the blossoms
swell;

We may shut our eyes, but we cannot help knowing

That skies are clear and grass is growing;

The breeze comes whispering in our ear,

That dandelions are blossoming near,

That maize has sprouted, that streams are flowing,

That the river is bluer than the sky,

That the robin is plastering his house hard by ;

And if the breeze kept the good news
back,

For other couriers we should not lack;

We could guess it all by you heifer's lowing,—

And hark ! how clear bold chanticleer,

Warmed with the new wine of the year,

Tells all in his lusty crowing !

Joy comes, grief goes, we know not how;

Everything is happy now,

Everything is upward striving;

'T is as easy now for the heart to be true

As for grass to be green or skies to be blue,—

'T is the natural way of living:

Who knows whither the clouds have fled ?

In the unscarred heaven they leave no wake;

And the eyes forget the tears they have shed,

The heart forgets its sorrow and ache;

The soul partakes the season's youth,

And the sulphurous rifts of passion and
woe

Lie deep 'neath a silence pure and smooth,

Like burnt-out craters healed with snow.

What wonder if Sir Launfal now

Remembered the keeping of his vow ?

PART FIRST

I

"My golden spurs now bring to me,
 And bring to me my richest mail,
 For to-morrow I go over land and sea
 In search of the Holy Grail; Shall never a bed for me be spread,
 Nor shall a pillow be under my head, Till I begin my vow to keep;
 Here on the rushes will I sleep,
 And perchance there may come a vision
 true
 Ere day create the world anew."
 Slowly Sir Launfal's eyes grew dim, Slumber fell like a cloud on him,
 And into his soul the vision flew.

II

The crows flapped over by twos and threes, In the pool drowsed the cattle up to their knees,
 The little birds sang as if it were
 The one day of summer in all the year, And the very leaves seemed to sing on the trees:
 The castle alone in the landscape lay Like an outpost of winter, dull and gray:
 'T was the proudest hall in the North Countree,
 And never its gates might opened be,
 Save to lord or lady of high degree;
 Summer besieged it on every side,
 But the churlish stone her assaults defied;
 She could not scale the chilly wall, Though around it for leagues her pavilions tall Stretched left and right, Over the hills and out of sight;
 Green and broad was every tent,
 And out of each a murmur went Till the breeze fell off at night.

The drawbridge dropped with a surly clang, And through the dark arch a charger sprang,
 Bearing Sir Launfal, the maiden knight,
 In his gilded mail, that flamed so bright It seemed the dark castle had gathered all Those shafts the fierce sun had shot over its wall
 In his siege of three hundred summers
 long,

And, binding them all in one blazing sheaf, Had cast them forth: so, young and
 strong,
 And lightsome as a locust-leaf, Sir Launfal flashed forth in his maiden mail,
 To seek in all climes for the Holy Grail.

IV

It was morning on hill and stream and tree,
 And morning in the young knight's
 heart;
 Only the castle moodily Rebuffed the gifts of the sunshine free,
 And gloomed by itself apart;
 The season brimmed all other things up Full as the rain fills the pitcher-plant's cup.

As Sir Launfal made morn through the darksome gate,
 He was 'ware of a leper, crouched by the same,
 Who begged with his hand and moaned as he sate;
 And a loathing over Sir Launfal came;
 The sunshine went out of his soul with a thrill,
 The flesh 'neath his armor 'gan shrink and crawl,
 And midway its leap his heart stood still Like a frozen waterfall;
 For this man, so foul and bent of stature, Rapped harshly against his dainty nature,
 And seemed the one blot on the summer morn,—
 So he tossed him a piece of gold in scorn.

VI

The leper raised not the gold from the dust:
 "Better to me the poor man's crust, Better the blessing of the poor,
 Though I turn me empty from his door;
 That is no true alms which the hand can hold;
 He gives only the worthless gold
 Who gives from a sense of duty;
 But he who gives but a slender mite,
 And gives to that which is out of sight,
 That thread of the all-sustaining Beauty Which runs through all and doth all unite,—
 The hand cannot clasp the whole of his alms,

The heart outstretches its eager palms,
For a god goes with it and makes it store To the soul that was starving in darkness before."

PRELUDE TO PART SECOND

Down swept the chill wind from the mountain peak,
From the snow five thousand summers old;

On open wold and hilltop bleak
It had gathered all the cold,
And whirled it like sleet on the wanderer's cheek;

It carried a shiver everywhere
From the unleaved boughs and pastures bare;

The little brook heard it and built a roof
'Neath which he could house him, winter-proof;

All night by the white stars' frosty gleams
He groined his arches and matched his beams;

Slender and clear were his crystal spars
As the lashes of light that trim the stars:
He sculptured every summer delight In his halls and chambers out of sight;
Sometimes his tinkling waters slept Down through a frost-leaved forest-crypt, Long, sparkling aisles of steel-stemmed trees

Bending to counterfeit a breeze;
Sometimes the roof no fretwork knew But silvery mosses that downward grew;
Sometimes it was carved in sharp relief
With quaint arabesques of ice-fern leaf; Sometimes it was simply smooth and clear
For the gladness of heaven to shine through, and here

He had caught the nodding bulrush-tops
And hung them thickly with diamond drops,

That crystallised the beams of moon and sun,
And made a star of every one:
No mortal builder's most rare device Could match this winter-palace of ice;
'T was as if every image that mirrored lay In his depths serene through the summer day,

Each fleeting shadow of earth and sky,
Lest the happy model should be lost,
Had been mimicked in fairy masonry
By the elfin builders of the frost.

Within the hall are song and laughter,
The cheeks of Christmas glow red and jolly,

And sprouting is every corbel and rafter
With lightsome green of ivy and holly;
Through the deep gulf of the chimney wide

Wallows the Yule-log's roaring tide;
The broad flame-pennons droop and flap
And belly and tug as a flag in the wind;
Like a locust shrills the imprisoned sap, Hunted to death in its galleries blind;
And swift little troops of silent sparks,
Now pausing, now scattering away as in fear,

Go threading the soot-forest's tangled darks Like herds of startled deer.

But the wind without was eager and sharp,
Of Sir Launfal's gray hair it makes a harp,
And rattles and wrings

The icy strings,
Singing, in dreary monotone,
A Christmas carol of its own,
Whose burden still, as he might guess,
Was "Shelterless, shelterless, shelterless!"

The voice of the seneschal flared like a torch

As he shouted the wanderer away from the porch,

And he sat in the gateway and saw all night

The great hall-fire, so cheery and bold, Through the window-slits of the castle old,

Build out its piers of ruddy light Against the drift of the cold.

PART SECOND

I

There was never a leaf on bush or tree,
The bare boughs rattled shudderingly;
The river was dumb and could not speak,
For the weaver Winter its shroud had spun;

A single crow on the tree-top bleak
From his shining feathers shed off the cold sun;

Again it was morning, but shrunk and cold,
As if her veins were sapless and old,
And she rose up decrepitley
For a last dim look at earth and sea.

II

Sir Launfal turned from his own hard gate,
 For another heir in his earldom sate;
 An old, bent man, worn out and frail, He came back from seeking the Holy Grail;
 Little he recked of his earldom's loss, No more on his surcoat was blazoned the
 cross,
 But deep in his soul the sign he wore,
 The badge of the suffering and the poor.

Sir Launfal's raiment thin and spare Was idle mail 'gainst the barb'd air,
 For it was just at the Christmas time;
 So he mused, as he sat, of a sunnier clime, And sought for a shelter from cold and snow
 In the light and warmth of long-ago;
 He sees the snake-like caravan crawl O'er the edge of the desert, black and small,
 Then nearer and nearer, till, one by one,
 He can count the camels in the sun,
 As over the red-hot sands they pass
 To where, in its slender necklace of grass, The little spring laughed and leapt in the shade,
 And with its own self like an infant played,
 And waved its signal of palms.

"For Christ's sweet sake, I beg an alms ;"
 The happy camels may reach the spring, But Sir Launfal sees only the grewsome
 thing,
 The leper, lank as the rain-blanch'd bone,
 That cowers beside him, a thing as lone And white as the ice-isles of Northern
 seas
 In the desolate horror of his disease.

And Sir Launfal said, "I behold in thee
 An image of Him who died on the tree;
 Thou also hast had thy crown of thorns, Thou also hast had the world's buffets and scorns,
 And to thy life were not denied The wounds in the hands and feet and
 side:
 Mild Mary's Son, acknowledge me; Behold, through him, I give to thee !"

VI

Then the soul of the leper stood up in his
 eyes
 And looked at Sir Launfal, and straightway he Remembered in what a haughtier guise
 He had flung an alms to leprosie, When he girt his young life up in gilded mail
 And set forth in search of the Holy Grail.
 The heart within him was ashes and dust;
 He parted in twain his single crust,
 He broke the ice on the streamlet's brink,
 And gave the leper to eat and drink,
 'T was a mouldy crust of coarse brown bread,
 'T was water out of a wooden bowl, — Yet with fine wheaten bread was the leper
 fed,
 And 't was red wine he drank with his thirsty soul.

As Sir Launfal mused with a downcast
 face,
 A light shone round about the place;
 The leper no longer crouched at his side,
 But stood before him glorified, Shining and tall and fair and straight As the pillar that stood by the Beautiful Gate, —
 Himself the Gate whereby men can Enter the temple of God in Man.

VIII

His words were shed softer than leaves from the pine,
 And they fell on Sir Launfal as snows on the brine,
 That mingle their softness and quiet in one With the shaggy unrest they float down upon;
 And the voice that was softer than silence
 said,
 "Lo, it is I, be not afraid !
 In many climes, without avail,
 Thou hast spent thy life for the Holy Grail; Behold, it is here, — this cup which thou Didst fill at the streamlet for me but now;
 This crust is my body broken for thee,
 This water his blood that died on the tree;
 The Holy Supper is kept, indeed,
 In whatso we share with another's need;
 Not what we give, but what we share.

For the gift without the giver is bare;
 Who gives himself with his alms feeds three, Himself, his hungering neighbor, and me."

IX

Sir Launfal awoke as from a swoond:
 "The Grail in my castle here is found!
 Hang my idle armor up on the wall,
 Let it be the spider's banquet-hall;
 He must be fenced with stronger mail Who would seek and find the Holy Grail."

The castle gate stands open now,
 And the wanderer is welcome to the hall
 As the hangbird is to the elm-tree bough;

No longer scowl the turrets tall,
 The Summer's long siege at last is o'er;
 When the first poor outcast went in at the
 door,
 She entered with him in disguise,
 And mastered the fortress by surprise;
 There is no spot she loves so well on ground,
 She lingers and smiles there the whole year
 round;
 The meanest serf on Sir Launfal's land Has hall and bower at his command;
 And there's no poor man in the North Countree
 But is lord of the earldom as much as he.

LETTER FROM BOSTON

THIS letter was written to Mr. James Miller McKim, who had succeeded Whittier as editor of The Pennsylvania Freeman, where the verses were first published.

December, 1846.

DEAR M——

By way of saving time,
 I'll do this letter up in rhyme,
 Whose slim stream through four pages flows Ere one is packed with tight-screwed prose, Threading the tube of an epistle, Smooth as a child's breath through a whistle.

The great attraction now of all Is the "Bazaar" at Faneuil Hall, Where swarm the anti-slavery folks
 As thick, dear Miller, as your jokes.
 There's GARRISON, his features very Benign for an incendiary, Beaming forth sunshine through his glasses
 On the surrounding lads and lasses, (No bee could blither be, or brisker,) — A Pickwick somehow turned John Ziska, His bump of firmness swelling up Like a rye cupeake from its cup.
 And there, too, was his English tea-set,
 Which in his ear a kind of flea set His Uncle Samuel for its beauty Demanding sixty dollars duty, ('T was natural Sam should serve his trunk
 ill,

For G., you know, has cut his uncle,) — Whereas, had he but once made tea in 't, His uncle's ear had had the flea in 't,
 There being not a cent of duty
 On any pot that ever drew tea.

There was MARIA CHAPMAN, too,

With her swift eyes of clear steel-blue,
 The coiled-up mainspring of the Fair, Originating everywhere
 The expansive force without a sound That whirls a hundred wheels around, Herself meanwhile as calm and still As the bare crown of Prospect Hill;
 A noble woman, brave and apt,
 Cumæan sibyl not more rapt,
 Who might, with those fair tresses shorn,
 The Maid of Orleans' casque have worn, Herself the Joan of our Ark,
 For every shaft a shining mark.

And there, too, was ELIZA FOLLEN, Who scatters fruit-creating pollen Where'er a blossom she can find Hardy enough for Truth's north wind, Each several point of all her face Tremblingly bright with the inward grace.
 As if all motion gave it light Like phosphorescent seas at night.

There jokes our EDMUND, plainly son Of him who bearded Jefferson,
 A non-resistant by conviction,
 But with a bump in contradiction,
 So that whene'er it gets a chance His pen delights to play the lance,
 And — you may doubt it, or believe it — Full at the head of Joshua Leavitt
 The very calumet he'd launch,
 And scourge him with the olive branch.
 A master with the foils of wit,

'T is natural he should love a hit;
 A gentleman, withal, and scholar,
 Only base things excite his choler,
 And then his satire's keen and thin
 As the lithe blade of Saladin.
 Good letters are a gift apart,
 And his are gems of Flemish art, True offspring of the fireside Muse,
 Not a rag-gathering of news
 Like a new hopfield which is all poles,
 But of one blood with Horace Walpole's.

There, with one hand behind his back, Stands PHILLIPS buttoned in a sack,
 Our Attic orator, our Chatham;
 Old fogies, when he lightens at 'em, Shriveled like leaves; to him 't is granted Always to say the word that's wanted,
 So that he seems but speaking clearer
 The tiptop thought of every hearer;
 Each flash his brooding heart lets fall Fires what's combustible in all,
 And sends the applauses bursting in Like an exploded magazine.
 His eloquence no frothy show,
 The gutter's street-polluted flow,
 No Mississippi's yellow flood Whose shoalness can't be seen for mud;—
 So simply clear, serenely deep,
 So silent-strong its graceful sweep, None measures its unrippling force Who has not striven to stem its course;
 How fare their barques who think to play With smooth Niagara's mane of spray, Let Austin's total shipwreck say.
 He never spoke a word too much—Except of Story, or some such, Whom, though condemned by ethics strict,
 The heart refuses to convict.

Beyond, a crater in each eye, Sways brown, broad-shouldered PILLS-BURY,

Who tears up words like trees by the roots,
 A Theseus in stout cow-hide boots,
 The wager of eternal war Against that loathsome Minotaur
 To whom we sacrifice each year
 The best blood of our Athens here, (Dear M., pray brush up your Lempriere.) A terrible denouncer he,
 Old Sinai burns unquenchably Upon his lips; he well might be a Hot-blazing soul from fierce Judea, Habakkuk. Ezra, or Hosea.

His words are red hot iron searers,
 And nightmare-like he mounts his hearers, Spurring them like avenging Fate, or As Waterton his alligator.

Hard by, as calm as summer even,
 Smiles the reviled and pelted STEPHEN,
 The unappeasable Boanerges
 To all the Churches and the Clergies, The grim savant who, to complete His own peculiar cabinet, Contrived to label 'mong his kicks
 One from the followers of Hicks;
 Who studied mineralogy
 Not with soft book upon the knee,
 But learned the properties of stones
 By contact sharp of flesh and bones,
 And made the experimentum crucis
 With his own body's vital juices;
 A man with caoutchouc endurance,
 A perfect gem for life insurance,
 A kind of maddened John the Baptist,
 To whom the harshest word comes aptest,
 Who, struck by stone or brick ill-starred, Hurls back an epithet as hard,
 Which, deadlier than stone or brick,
 Has a propensity to stick.
 His oratory is like the scream
 Of the iron-horse's frenzied steam Which warns the world to leave wide space For the black engine's swerveless race.
 Ye men with neckcloths white, I warn you—

Habet a whole haymow in cornu.

A Judith, there, turned Quakeress, Sits ABBY in her modest dress, Serving a table quietly,
 As if that mild and downcast eye Flashed never, with its scorn intense,
 More than Medea's eloquence.
 So the same force which shakes its dread Far-blazing blocks o'er Ætna's head, Along the wires in silence fares
 And messages of commerce bears.
 No nobler gift of heart and brain,
 No life more white from spot or stain,
 Was e'er on Freedom's altar laid Than hers, the simple Quaker maid.

These last three (leaving in the lurch Some other themes) assault the Church, Who therefore writes them in her lists
 As Satan's limbs and atheists;
 For each sect has one argument

Whereby the rest to hell are sent,
Which serve them like the Graia's tooth, Passed round in turn from mouth to mouth;—

If any ism should arise,
Then look on it with constable's eyes,
Tie round its neck a heavy athe-,
And give it kittens' hydropathy.
This trick with other (useful very) tricks Is laid to the Babylonian meretrix, But 't was in vogue before her day Wherever priesthoods had their way,
And Buddha's Popes with this struck dumb
The followers of Fi and Fum.

Well, if the world, with prudent fear Pay God a seventh of the year,
And as a Farmer, who would pack
All his religion in one stack,
For this world works six days in seven And idles on the seventh for Heaven, Expecting, for his Sunday's sowing,
In the next world to go a-mowing
The crop of all his meeting-going;—
If the poor Church, by power enticed, Finds none so infidel as Christ,

Quite backward reads his Gospel meek, (As 't were in Hebrew writ, not Greek,) Fencing the gallows and the sword With conscripts drafted from his word,
And makes one gate of Heaven so wide That the rich orthodox might ride Through on their camels, while the poor Squirm through the scant, unyielding door, Which, of the Gospel's straitest size,
Is narrower than bead-needles' eyes, What wonder World and Church should
call

The true faith atheistical?

Yet, after all, 'twixt you and me,
Dear Miller, I could never see That Sin's and Error's ugly smirch Stained the walls only of the Church;
There are good priests, and men who take Freedom's torn cloak for lucre's sake;
I can't believe the Church so strong,
As some men do, for Right or Wrong.
But, for this subject (long and vext)
I must refer you to my next,
As also for a list exact
Of goods with which the Hall was packed.

A FABLE FOR CRITICS

IN a Prefatory Note which Mr. Lowell prefixed to a later issue of this poem, the history of its inception and publication is thus briefly told: "This jeu d'esprit was extemporized, I may fairly say, so rapidly was it written, purely for my own amusement and with no thought of publication. I sent daily instalments of it to a friend in New York, the late Charles F. Briggs. He urged me to let it be printed, and I at last consented to its anonymous publication. The secret was kept till after several persons had laid claim to its authorship." In the Letters it is possible to get a closer view of the author at work. In a letter to Mr. Briggs, written November 13, 1847, he says: "My satire remains just as it was. About six hundred lines I think are written. I left it because I wished to finish it in one mood of mind, and not to get that and my serious poems in the new volume entangled. It is a rambling, disjointed affair, and I may alter the form of it, but if I can get it read, I know it will take. I intend to give it some serial title and continue it at intervals." On the last day of the same year, he writes to his correspondent: "I have been hard at work copying my satire, that I might get it (what was finished of it, at least) to you by New-Year's Day as a present. As it is, I can only send the first part. It was all written with one impulse and was the work of not a great many hours, but it was written in good spirits (con amore, as Leupp said he used to smoke), and therefore seems to me to have a hearty and easy swing about it that is pleasant. But I was interrupted midway by being obliged to get ready the copy for my volume, and I have never been able to weld my present mood upon the old one without making an ugly swelling at the joint.

"I wish you to understand that I make you a New Year's gift, not of the manuscript, but of the thing itself. I wish you to get it printed (if you think the sale will warrant it) for your own benefit. At the same time I am desirous of retaining my copyright, in order that, if circumstances render it desirable, I may still possess a control over it. Therefore, if you think it would repay publishing (I have no doubt of it, or I should not offer it to you) I wish you would enter the copyright in your own name, and then make a transfer to me in 'consideration of,' etc.

"I am making as particular directions as if I were drawing my will, but I have a sort of presentiment (which I never had in regard to anything else) that this little bit of pleasantry will take. Perhaps I have said too much of the Centurion. But it was only the comicality of his character that attracted me — for the man himself personally never entered my head. But the sketch is clever?"

Again under date of March 26, 1848: "Since I sent you the first half, I have written something about Willis and about Longfellow — and I am waiting for pleasanter weather in order to finish it. I want to get my windows open and to write in the fresh air. I ought not to have sent you any part of it till I had finished it entirely. I feel a sense of responsibility which hinders my pen from running along as it ought in such a theme. I wish the last half to be as jolly and unconstrained as the first. If you had not praised what I sent you, I dare say you would have had the whole of it ere this. Praise is the only thing that can make me feel any doubt of myself." Six weeks later he wrote, May 12: "When I can sit at my open window and my friendly leaves hold their hands before my eyes to prevent their wandering to the landscape, I can sit down and write. I have begun upon the Fable again fairly, and am making some headway. I think with what I sent you (which I believe was about five hundred lines) it will make something over a thousand. I have done, since I sent the first half, Willis, Longfellow, Bryant, Miss Fuller, and Mrs. Child. In Longfellow's case I have attempted no characterization. The same (in a degree) may be said of S. M. F. With her I have been perfectly good-humored, but I have a fancy that what I say will stick uncomfortably. It will make you laugh. So will L. M. C. After S. M. F. I make a short digression on bores in general, which has some drollery. Willis I think good. Bryant is funny, and as fair as I could make it, immitigably just. Indeed I have endeavored to be so in all."

The volume was affectionately inscribed to Charles F. Briggs, and furnished with the following rhymed title page and preliminary note, a second note being prefixed to a second edition.

Set forth in October, the 21st day, In the year '48, G. P. Putnam, Broadway.

It being the commonest mode of procedure, I premise a few candid remarks

TO THE READER:—

This trifle, begun to please only myself and my own private fancy, was laid on the shelf. But some friends, who had seen it, induced me, by dint of saying they liked it, to put it in print. That is, having come to that very conclusion, I asked their advice when 't would make no confusion. For though (in the gentlest of ways) they had hinted it was scarce worth the while, I should doubtless have printed it.

I began it, intending a Fable, a frail, slender thing, rhyme-y-winged, with a sting in its tail. But, by additions and alterations not previously planned, digressions chance-hatched, like birds' eggs in the sand, and dawdlings to suit every whimsey's demand (always freeing the bird which I held in my hand, for the two perched, perhaps out of reach, in the tree), — it grew by degrees to the size which you see. I was like the old woman that carried the calf, and my neighbors, like hers, no doubt, wonder and laugh; and when, my strained arms with their grown burthen full, I call it my Fable, they call it a bull.

Having scrawled at full gallop (as far as that goes) in a style that is neither good verse nor bad prose, and being a person whom nobody knows, some people will say I am rather more free with my readers than it is becoming to be, that I seem to expect them to wait on my leisure in following wherever I wander at pleasure, that, in short, I take more than a young author's lawful ease, and laugh in a queer way so like Mephistopheles, that the Public will doubt, as they grope through my rhythm, if in truth I am making fun of them or with them.

So the excellent Public is hereby assured that the sale of my book is already secured. For there is not a poet throughout the whole land but will purchase a copy or two out of hand, in the fond expectation of being amused in it, by seeing his betters cut up and abused in it. Now, I find, by a pretty exact calculation, there are something like ten thousand bards in the nation, of that special variety whom the Review and Magazine critics call lofty and true, and about thirty thousand (this tribe is increasing) of the kinds who are termed full of promise and pleasing. The Public will see by a glance at this schedule, that they cannot expect me to be over-sedulous about courting them, since it seems I have got enough fuel made sure of for boiling my pot.

As for such of our poets as find not their names mentioned once in my pages, with praises or blames, let them SEND IN THEIR CARDS, without further DELAY, to my friend G. P. PUTNAM, Esquire, in Broadway, where a LIST will be kept with the strictest regard to the day and the hour of receiving the card. Then, taking them up as I chance to have time (that is, if their names can be twisted in rhyme), I will honestly give each his PROPER POSITION, at the rate of ONE AUTHOR to each NEW EDITION. Thus a PREMIUM is offered sufficiently HIGH (as the magazines say when they tell their best lie) to induce bards to CLUB their resources and buy the balance of every edition, until they have all of them fairly been run through the mill.

One word to such readers (judicious and wise) as read books with something behind the mere eyes, of whom in the country, perhaps, there are two, including myself, gentle reader, and you. All the characters sketched in this slight jeu d'esprit, though, it may be, they seem, here and there, rather free, and drawn from a somewhat too cynical standpoint, are meant to be faithful, for that is the grand point, and none but an owl would feel sore at a rub from a jester who tells you, without any subterfuge, that he sits in Diogenes' tub.

A PRELIMINARY NOTE TO THE SECOND EDITION, though it well may be reckoned, of all composition, the species at once most delightful and healthy, is a thing which an author, unless he be wealthy and willing to pay for that kind of delight, is not, in all instances, called on to write, though there are, it is said, who, their spirits to cheer, slip in a new title-page three times a year, and in this way snuff up an imaginary savor of that sweetest of dishes, the popular favor, — much as if a starved painter should fall to and treat the Ugolino inside to a picture of meat.

You remember (if not, pray turn backward and look) that, in writing the preface which ushered my book, I treated you, excellent Public, not merely with a cool disregard, but downright cavalierly. Now I would not take back the least thing I then said, though I thereby could butter both sides of my bread, for I never could see that an author owed aught to the people he solaced, diverted, or taught; and, as for mere fame, I have long ago learned that the persons by whom it is finally earned are those with whom your verdict weighed not a pin, unsustained by the higher court sitting within.

But I wander from what I intended to say, — that you have, namely, shown such a liberal way of thinking, and so much æsthetic perception of anonymous worth in the handsome reception you gave to my book, spite of some private piques (having bought the first thousand in barely two weeks), that I think, past a doubt, if you measured the phiz of yours most devotedly, Wonderful Quiz, you would find that its vertical section was shorter, by an inch and two tenths, or 'twixt that and a quarter.

You have watched a child playing — in those wondrous years when belief is not bound to the eyes and the ears, and the vision divine is so clear and unmarred, that each baker of pies in the dirt is a bard? Give a knife and a shingle, he fits out a fleet, and, on that little mud-puddle over the street, his fancy, in purest good faith, will make sail round the globe with a puff of his breath for a gale, will visit, in barely ten minutes, all climes, and do the Columbus-feat hundreds of times. Or, suppose the young poet fresh stored with delights from that Bible of childhood, the Arabian Nights, he will turn to a crony and cry, "Jack, let's play that I am a Genius!" Jacky straightway makes Aladdin's lamp out of a stone, and, for hours, they enjoy each his own supernatural powers. This is all very pretty and pleasant, but then suppose our two urchins have grown into men, and both have turned authors,—one says to his brother, "Let's play we're the American somethings or other,—say Homer or Sophocles, Goethe or Scott (only let them be big enough, no matter what). Come, you shall be Byron or Pope, which you choose: I'll be Coleridge, and both shall write mutual reviews." So they both (as mere strangers) before many days send each other a cord of anonymous bays. Each, piling his epithets, smiles in his sleeve to see what his friend can be made to believe; each, reading the other's unbiassed review, thinks—Here's pretty high praise, but no more than my due. Well, we laugh at them both, and yet make no great fuss when the same farce is acted to benefit us. Even I, who, if asked, scarce a month since, what Fudge meant, should have answered, the dear Public's critical judgment, begin to think sharp-witted Horace spoke sooth when he said that the Public sometimes hit the truth.

In reading these lines, you perhaps have a vision of a person in pretty good health and condition; and yet, since I put forth my primary edition, I have been crushed, scorched, withered, used up and put down (by Smith with the cordial assistance of Brown), in all, if you put any faith in my rhymes, to the number of ninety-five several times, and, while I am writing,—I tremble to think of it, for I may at this moment be just on the brink of it,—Molybdostom, angry at being omitted, has begun a critique,—am I not to be pitied?¹

Now I shall not crush them since, indeed, for that matter, no pressure I know of could render them flatter; nor wither, nor scorch them,—no action of fire could make either them or their articles drier; nor waste time in putting them down—I am thinking not their own self-inflation will keep them from sinking; for there's this contradiction about the whole bevy,—though without the least weight, they are awfully heavy. No, my dear honest bore, surdo fabulam narras, they are no more to me than a rat in the arras. I can walk with the Doctor, get facts from the Don, or draw out the Lambish quintessence of John, and feel nothing more than a half-comic sorrow, to think that they all will be lying to-morrow tossed carelessly up on the waste-paper shelves, and forgotten by all but their half-dozen selves. Once snug in my attic, my fire in a roar, I leave the whole pack of them outside the door. With Hakluyt or Purchas I wander away to the black northern seas or barbaric Cathay; get fou with O'Shanter, and sober me then with that builder of brick-kilnish dramas, rare Ben; snuff Herbert, as holy as a flower on a grave; with Fletcher ~~wax~~ tender, o'er Chapman grow brave; with Marlowe or Kyd take a fine poet-rave; in Very, most Hebrew of Saxons, find peace; with Lycidas welter on vext Irish seas; with Webster grow wild, and climb earthward again, down by mystical Browne's Jacob's-ladder-like brain, to that spiritual Pepys (Cotton's version) Montaigne; find a new depth in Wordsworth, undreamed of before, that marvel, a poet divine who can bore. Or, out of my study, the scholar thrown off, Nature holds up her shield 'gainst the sneer and the scoff; the landscape, forever consoling and kind, pours her wine and her oil on the smarts of the mind. The waterfall, scattering its vanishing gems; the tall grove of hemlocks, with moss on their stems, like splashes of sunlight; the pond in the woods, where no foot but mine and the bittern's intrudes, where pitcher-plants purple and gentians hard by recall to September the blue of June's sky; these are all my kind neighbors, and leave me no wish to say aught to you all, my poor critics, but — pish! I've buried the hatchet: I'm twisting an allumette out of one of you now, and relighting my calumet. In your private capacities, come when you please, I will give you my hand and a fresh pipe apiece.

As I ran through the leaves of my poor little book, to take a fond author's first tremulous look, it was quite an excitement to hunt the errata, sprawled in as birds' tracks are in some kinds of strata (only these made things crooked). Fancy an heir that a father had seen born well-featured and fair, turning suddenly wry-nosed, club-footed, squint-eyed, hair-lipped, wapper-jawed, carrot-haired, from a pride become an aversion, — my case was yet worse. A club-foot (by way of a change) in a verse, I might have forgiven, an o's being wry, a limp in an e, or a cock in an i, — but to have the sweet babe of my brain served in pi! I am not queasy-stomached, but such a Thyestean banquet as that was quite out of the question.

In the edition now issued no pains are neglected, and my verses, as orators say, stand corrected. Yet some blunders remain of the Public's own make, which I wish to correct for my personal sake. For instance, a character drawn in pure fun and condensing the traits of a dozen in one, has been, as I hear, by some persons applied to a good friend of mine, whom to stab in the side, as we walked along chatting and joking together, would not be my way. I can hardly tell whether a question will ever arise in which he and I should by any strange fortune agree, but meanwhile my esteem for him grows as I know him, and, though not the best judge on earth of a poem, he knows what it is he is saying and why, and is honest and fearless, two good points which I have not found so rife I can easily smother my love for them, whether on my side or t' other.

For my other anonymi, you may be sure that I know what is meant by a caricature, and what by a portrait. There are those who think it is capital fun to be spattering their ink on quiet, unquarrelsome folk, but the minute the game changes sides and the others begin it, they see something savage and horrible in it. As for me I respect neither women nor men for their gender, nor own any sex in a pen. I choose just to hint to some causeless unfriends that, as far as I know, there are always two ends (and one of them heaviest, too) to a staff, and two parties also to every good laugh.

A FABLE FOR CRITICS

PHŒBUS, sitting one day in a laurel-tree's shade, Was reminded of Daphne, of whom it was made,
For the god being one day too warm in his wooing,
She took to the tree to escape his pursuing;
Be the cause what it might, from his offers she shrunk,
And, Ginevra-like, shut herself up in a trunk;
And, though 't was a step into which he had driven her,
He somehow or other had never forgiven her;
Her memory he nursed as a kind of a tonic, Something bitter to chew when he'd play the Byronic,
And I can't count the obstinate nymphs that he thought over By a strange kind of smile he put on when he thought of her.
"My case is like Dido's," he sometimes remarked;
"When I last saw my love, she was fairly embarked In a laurel, as she thought — but (ah, how Fate mocks!)
She has found it by this time a very bad box;
Let hunters from me take this saw when they need it, — You're not always sure of your game when you've treed it.
Just conceive such a change taking place in one's mistress!
What romance would be left? — who can flatter or kiss trees?
And, for mercy's sake, how could one keep up a dialogue With a dull wooden thing that will live and will die a log, —
Not to say that the thought would forever intrude

That you 've less chance to win her the more she is wood ?
Ah ! it went to my heart, and the memory still grieves,
To see those loved graces all taking their leaves ;
Those charms beyond speech, so enchanting but now,
As they left me forever, each making its bough !
If her tongue had a tang sometimes more than was right,
Her new bark is worse than ten times her old bite."

Now, Daphne — before she was happily treeified —
Over all other blossoms the lily had deified,
And when she expected the god on a visit ('T was before he had made his intentions explicit),
Some buds she arranged with a vast deal of care,
To look as if artlessly twined in her hair, Where they seemed, as he said, when he paid his addresses, Like the day breaking through the long night of her tresses ;
So whenever he wished to be quite irresistible, Like a man with eight trumps in his hand at a whist-table (I feared me at first that the rhyme was untwistable, Though I might have lugged in an allusion to Cristabel), —
He would take up a lily, and gloomily look in it,
As I shall at the —, when they cut up my book in it.

Well, here, after all the bad rhyme I 've been spinning,
I 've got back at last to my story's beginning:
Sitting there, as I say, in the shade of his mistress,
As dull as a volume of old Chester mysteries,
Or as those puzzling specimens which, in old histories,
We read of his verses — the Oracles, namely, — (I wonder the Greeks should have swallowed them tamely,

For one might bet safely whatever he has to risk,
They were laid at his door by some ancient Miss Asterisk,
And so dull that the men who retailed them out-doors Got the ill name of augurs, because they were bores, —)
First, he mused what the animal substance or herb is Would induce a mustache, for you know he 's imberbis ;
Then he shuddered to think how his youthful position
Was assailed by the age of his son the physician ;
At some poems he glanced, had been sent to him lately,
And the metre and sentiment puzzled him greatly ;
" Mehercle ! I 'd make such proceeding felonious, —
Have they all of them slept in the cave of Trophonius ?
Look well to your seat, 't is like taking an airing
On a corduroy road, and that out of repair-
ing ;
It leads one, 't is true, through the primitive forest,
Grand natural features, but then one has no rest ;
You just catch a glimpse of some ravishing distance,
When a jolt puts the whole of it out of existence, —
Why not use their ears, if they happen to have any ? "
— Here the laurel-leaves murmured the name of poor Daphne.

" Oh, weep with me, Daphne," he sighed,
" for you know it 's A terrible thing to be pestered with poets !
But, alas, she is dumb, and the proverb holds good,
She never will cry till she 's out of the wood !
What would n't I give if I never had known of her ?
'T were a kind of relief had I something to groan over:
If I had but some letters of hers, now, to toss over,

I might turn for the nonce a Byronic philosopher,
 And bewitch all the flats by bemoaning the loss of her.
 One needs something tangible, though, to begin on, — A loom, as it were, for the fancy to spin on;
 What boots all your grist? it can never be ground Till a breeze makes the arms of the wind-mill go round; (Or, if 't is a water-mill, alter the metaphor,
 And say it won't stir, save the wheel be well wet afore, Or lug in some stuff about water 'so dreamily,' —
 It is not a metaphor, though, 't is a simile);
 A lily, perhaps, would set my mill a-going,
 For just at this season, I think, they are blowing.
 Here, somebody, fetch one; not very far hence They're in bloom by the score, 't is but climbing a fence; There's a poet hard by, who does nothing but fill his Whole garden, from one end to t' other, with lilies;
 A very good plan, were it not for satiety,
 One longs for a weed here and there, for variety;
 Though a weed is no more than a flower in disguise,
 Which is seen through at once, if love give a man eyes."

Now there happened to be among Phœbus's followers,
 A gentleman, one of the omnivorous swallowers,
 Who bolt every book that comes out of the press, Without the least question of larger or less,
 Whose stomachs are strong at the expense of their head, —
 For reading new books is like eating new bread, One can bear it at first, but by gradual steps he Is brought to death's door of a mental dyspepsy.

On a previous stage of existence, our Hero Had ridden outside, with the glass below zero;
 He had been, 't is a fact you may safely rely on,
 Of a very old stock a most eminent scion, — A stock all fresh quacks their fierce boluses ply on,
 Who stretch the new boots Earth's unwilling to try on,
 Whom humbugs of all shapes and sorts keep their eye on,
 Whose hair's in the mortar of every new Zion,
 Who, when whistles are dear, go directly and buy one,
 Who think slavery a crime that we must not say fie on,
 Who hunt, if they e'er hunt at all, with the lion (Though they hunt lions also, whenever they spy one),
 Who contrive to make every good fortune a wry one,
 And at last choose the hard bed of honor to die on,
 Whose pedigree, traced to earth's earliest years,
 Is longer than anything else but their ears; —
 In short, he was sent into life with the wrong key,
 He unlocked the door, and stepped forth a poor donkey.
 Though kicked and abused by his bipedal betters Yet he filled no mean place in the kingdom of letters;
 Far happier than many a literary hack,
 He bore only paper-mill rags on his back (For it makes a vast difference which side the mill One expends on the paper his labor and skill);
 So, when his soul waited a new transmigration,
 And Destiny balanced 'twixt this and that station,
 Not having much time to expend upon bothers, Remembering he'd had some connection with authors,

And considering his four legs had grown paralytic, —
She set him on two, and he came forth a critic.

Through his babyhood no kind of pleasure he took
In any amusement but tearing a book;
For him there was no intermediate stage From babyhood up to straight-laced middle age;
There were years when he did n't wear coat-tails behind,
But a boy he could never be rightly defined;
Like the Irish Good Folk, though in length scarce a span,
From the womb he came gravely, a little old man;
While other boys' trousers demanded the toil
Of the motherly fingers on all kinds of soil,
Red, yellow, brown, black, clayey, gravelly, loamy,
He sat in the corner and read Viri Romæ.
He never was known to unbend or to revel once
In base, marbles, hockey, or kick up the devil once;
He was just one of those who excite the benevolence
Of your old prigs who sound the soul's depths with a ledger, And are on the lookout for some young men to "edgercate," as they call it, who won't be too costly,
And who 'll afterward take to the ministry mostly;
Who always wear spectacles, always look bilious, Always keep on good terms with each mater-familias
Throughout the whole parish, and manage to rear Ten boys like themselves, on four hundred a year:
Who, fulfilling in turn the same fearful conditions,
Either preach through their noses, or go upon missions.

In this way our Hero got safely to college.

Where he bolted alike both his commons and knowledge;
A reading-machine, always wound up and going,
He mastered whatever was not worth the knowing,
Appeared in a gown, with black waistcoat of satin,
To spout such a Gothic oration in Latin That Tully could never have made out a word in it (Though himself was the model the author preferred in it),
And grasping the parchment which gave him in fee
All the mystic and-so-forths contained in
A. B., He was launched (life is always compared to a sea)
With just enough learning, and skill for the using it,
To prove he 'd a brain, by forever confusing it.
So worthy St. Benedict, piously burning With the holiest zeal against secular learn-
ing,
Nesciensque scienter, as writers express it, Indoctusque sapienter a Roma recessit.

'T would be endless to tell you the things that he knew,
Each a separate fact, undeniably true, But with him or each other they 'd nothing to do;
No power of combining, arranging, discerning, Digested the masses he learned into learn-
ing;
There was one thing in life he had practica knowledge for (And this, you will think, he need scarce go to college for), — Not a deed would he do, nor a word would he utter,
Till he 'd weighed its relations to plain bread and butter.
When he left Alma Mater, he practised his wits
In compiling the journals' historical bits, — Of shops broken open, men falling in fits,
Great fortunes in England bequeathed to poor printers,
And cold spells, the coldest for many past winters, —

Then, rising by industry, knack, and address, Got notices up for an unbiased press, With a mind so well poised, it seemed equally made for Applause or abuse, just which chanced to be paid for:
 From this point his progress was rapid and sure,
 To the post of a regular heavy reviewer.

And here I must say he wrote excellent articles On Hebraical points, or the force of Greek particles;
 They filled up the space nothing else was prepared for,
 And nobody read that which nobody cared for;
 If any old book reached a fiftieth edition, He could fill forty pages with safe erudi-
 tion:
 He could gauge the old books by the old set of rules,
 And his very old nothings pleased very old fools;
 But give him a new book, fresh out of the
 heart,
 And you put him at sea without compass or chart, —
 His blunders aspired to the rank of an art;
 For his lore was engraft, something foreign that grew in him, Exhausting the sap of the native and true
 in him,
 So that when a man came with a soul that was new in him, Carving new forms of truth out of Nature's old granite,
 New and old at their birth, like Le Ver-rier's planet,
 Which, to get a true judgment, themselves must create
 In the soul of their critic the measure and weight,
 Being rather themselves a fresh standard of grace,
 To compute their own judge, and assign him his place,
 Our reviewer would crawl all about it and round it,
 And, reporting each circumstance just as he found it, Without the least malice, — his record would be

Profoundly æsthetic as that of a flea, Which, supping on Wordsworth, should print, for our sakes, Recollections of nights with the Bard of the Lakes, Or, lodged by an Arab guide, ventured to render a Comprehensive account of the ruins at Denderah.

As I said, he was never precisely unkind, The defect in his brain was just absence of
 mind;
 If he boasted, 't was simply that he was self-made,
 A position which I, for one, never gain-
 said,
 My respect for my Maker supposing a skill In his works which our Hero would answer but ill;
 And I trust that the mould which he used may be cracked, or he, Made bold by success, may enlarge his phylactery,
 And set up a kind of a man-manufactory, — An event which I shudder to think about, seeing
 That Man is a moral, accountable being.

He meant well enough, but was still in the way,
 As dunces still are, let them be where they
 may;
 Indeed, they appear to come into existence
 To impede other folks with their awkward assistance;
 If you set up a dunce on the very North pole
 All alone with himself, I believe, on my
 soul,
 He 'd manage to get betwixt somebody's
 shins,
 And pitch him down bodily, all in his sins,
 To the grave polar bears sitting round on the ice,
 All shortening their grace, to be in for a slice;
 Or, if he found nobody else there to pother, Why, one of his legs would just trip up the other,
 For there 's nothing we read of in torture's inventions,
 Like a well-meaning dunce, with the best of intentions.

A terrible fellow to meet in society,
 Not the toast that he buttered was ever so dry at tea;
 There he'd sit at the table and stir in his sugar, Crouching close for a spring, all the while,
 like a cougar;
 Be sure of your facts, of your measures and weights,
 Of your time, — he's as fond as an Arab of dates;
 You'll be telling, perhaps, in your comical
 way,
 Of something you've seen in the course of the day;
 And, just as you're tapering out the conclusion,
 You venture an ill-fated classic allusion, —
 The girls have all got their laughs ready, when, whack!
 The cougar comes down on your thunderstruck back!
 You had left out a comma, — your Greek's put in joint,
 And pointed at cost of your story's whole point.
 In the course of the evening, you find chance for certain Soft speeches to Anne, in the shade of the curtain:
 You tell her your heart can be likened to one flower,
 "And that, O most charming of women, 's the sunflower,
 Which turns" — here a clear nasal voice, to your terror,
 From outside the curtain, says, "That's all an error."
 As for him, he's — no matter, he never grew tender, Sitting after a ball, with his feet on the fender, Shaping somebody's sweet features out of cigar smoke (Though he'd willingly grant you that such doings are smoke);
 All women he damns with mutabile semper, And if ever he felt something like love's distemper,
 'T was tow'ards a young lady who spoke ancient Mexican,
 And assisted her father in making a lexicon;
 Though I recollect hearing him get quite ferocious

About Mary Clausum, the mistress of Gro-tius,
 Or something of that sort, — but, no more to bore ye
 With character-painting, I'll turn to my story.

Now, Apollo, who finds it convenient sometimes
 To get his court clear of the makers of rhymes,
 The genus, I think it is called, irritabile, Every one of whom thinks himself treated most shabbily,
 And nurses a — what is it? — inmedicabile, Which keeps him at boiling-point, hot for a quarrel,
 As bitter as wormwood, and sourer than sorrel,
 If any poor devil but look at a laurel; — Apollo, I say, being sick of their rioting (Though he sometimes acknowledged their verse had a quieting Effect after dinner, and seemed to suggest a Retreat to the shrine of a tranquil siesta), Kept our Hero at hand, who, by means of a bray,
 Which he gave to the life, drove the rabble
 away;
 And if that would n't do, he was sure to succeed,
 If he took his review out and offered to read;
 Or, failing in plans of this milder description,
 He would ask for their aid to get up a subscription,
 Considering that authorship was n't a rich craft,
 To print the "American drama of Witchcraft."
 "Stay, I'll read you a scene," — but he hardly began,
 Ere Apollo shrieked "Help!" and the authors all ran:
 And once, when these purgatives acted with less spirit,
 And the desperate case asked a remedy desperate,
 He drew from his pocket a foolscap epistle As calmly as if 't were a nine-barrelled pistol,
 And threatened them all with the judgment to come,

Of "A wandering Star's first impressions of Rome."

"Stop! stop!" with their hands o'er their ears, screamed the Muses,

"He may go off and murder himself, if he chooses,

'T was a means self-defence only sanctioned his trying,

'T is mere massacre now that the enemy 's flying;

If he 's forced to 't again, and we happen to be there,

Give us each a large handkerchief soaked in strong ether."

I called this a "Fable for Critics;" you think it 's

More like a display of my rhythmical trinkets;

My plot, like an icicle, 's slender and slippery,

Every moment more slender, and likely to slip awry,

And the reader unwilling in loco desipere Is free to jump over as much of my frippery

As he fancies, and, if he 's a provident skipper, he May have like Odysseus control of the gales,

And get safe to port, ere his patience quite fails;

Moreover, although 't is a slender return For your toil and expense, yet my paper will burn,

And, if you have manfully struggled thus far with me,

You may e'en twist me up, and just light your cigar with me:

If too angry for that, you can tear me in pieces,

And my membra disjecta consign to the breezes,

A fate like great Ratzau's, whom one of those bores,

Who befell with bad verses poor Louis Quatorze,

Describes (the first verse somehow ends with victoire),

As dispersant partout et ses membres et sa gloire;

Or, if I were over-desirous of earning A repute among noodles for classical learning,

I could pick you a score of allusions, i-wis,

As new as the jests of Didaskalos tis;
Better still, I could make out a good solid list

From authors recondite who do not exist, —
But that would be naughty: at least, I could twist

Something out of Absyrtus, or turn your inquiries

After Milton's prose metaphor, drawn from Osiris;

But, as Cicero says he won't say this or that (A fetch, I must say, most transparent and flat),

After saying whate'er he could possibly think of, —

I simply will state that I pause on the brink of A mire, ankle-deep, of deliberate confusion, Made up of old jumbles of classic allusion:

So, when you were thinking yourselves to be pitied,

Just conceive how much harder your teeth you 'd have gritted,

An 't were not for the dulness I 've kindly omitted.

I 'd apologize here for my many digressions,

Were it not that I 'm certain to trip into fresh ones

('T is so hard to escape if you get in their mesh once);

Just reflect, if you please, how 't is said by Horatius,

That Mæonides nods now and then, and, my gracious!

It certainly does look a little bit ominous When he gets under way with ton d' apameibomenos.

(Here a something occurs which I 'll just clap a rhyme to,

And say it myself, ere a Zoilus have time to, —

Any author a nap like Van Winkle's may take,

If he only contrive to keep readers awake, But he 'll very soon find himself laid on the shelf,

If they fall a-nodding when he nods himself.)

Once for all, to return, and to stay, will I, nihil I —

When Phœbus expressed his desire for a lily,

Our Hero, whose homœopathic sagacity With an ocean of zeal mixed his drop of capacity,
 Set off for the garden as fast as the wind (Or, to take a comparison more to my
 mind,
 As a sound politician leaves conscience behind),
 And leaped the low fence, as a party hack jumps O'er his principles, when something else turns up trumps.

He was gone a long time, and Apollo,
 meanwhile,
 Went over some sonnets of his with a file, For, of all compositions, he thought that the sonnet
 Best repaid all the toil you expended upon
 it;
 It should reach with one impulse the end of its course,
 And for one final blow collect all of its force;
 Not a verse should be salient, but each one should tend
 With a wave-like up-gathering to break at the end;
 So, condensing the strength here, there smoothing a wry kink,
 He was killing the time, when up walked
 Mr. D——; At a few steps behind him, a small man in glasses Went dodging about, muttering, "Murderers! asses!"
 From out of his pocket a paper he'd take,
 With a proud look of martyrdom tied to its stake,
 And, reading a squib at himself, he'd say,
 "Here I see
 'Gainst American letters a bloody conspiracy,
 They are all by my personal enemies written;
 I must post an anonymous letter to Britain,
 And show that this gall is the merest suggestion
 Of spite at my zeal on the Copyright question,
 For, on this side the water, 't is prudent to pull O'er the eyes of the public their national wool,
 By accusing of slavish respect to John Bull

All American authors who have more or less
 Of that anti-American humbug — success, While in private we're always embracing the knees
 Of some twopenny editor over the seas,
 And licking his critical shoes, for you know 't is The whole aim of our lives to get one English notice;
 My American puffs I would willingly burn
 all (They're all from one source, monthly, weekly, diurnal)
 To get but a kick from a transmarine journal!"

So, culling the gibes of each critical scorner
 As if they were plums, and himself were Jack Horner,
 He came cautiously on, peeping round every corner,
 And into each hole where a weasel might pass in,
 Expecting the knife of some critic assassin,
 Who stabs to the heart with a caricature, Not so bad as those daubs of the Sun, to be sure,
 Yet done with a dagger-o'-type, whose vile portraits Disperse all one's good and condense all one's poor traits.

Apollo looked up, hearing footsteps approaching,
 And slipped out of sight the new rhymes he was broaching, —
 "Good day, Mr. D——, I'm happy to meet With a scholar so ripe, and a critic so neat Who through Grub Street the soul of a gentleman carries;
 What news from that suburb of London and Paris Which latterly makes such shrill claims to monopolize
 The credit of being the New World's metropolis?"

"Why, nothing of consequence, save this attack
 On my friend there, behind, by some pitiful hack,
 Who thinks every national author a poor
 one,

That is n't a copy of something that's foreign,
And assaults the American Dick—"

"Nay, 't is clear That your Damon there's fond of a flea in his ear,
And, if no one else furnished them gratis, on tick
He would buy some himself, just to hear the old click ;
Why, I honestly think, if some fool in Japan Should turn up his nose at the ' Poems on
Man,' (Which contain many verses as fine, by the bye,
As any that lately came under my eye,) Your friend there by some inward instinct would know it, Would get it translated, reprinted, and show
it ;
As a man might take off a high stock to exhibit
The autograph round his own neck of the gibbet ;
Nor would let it rest so, but fire column after column, Signed Cato, or Brutus, or something as solemn,
By way of displaying his critical crosses,
And tweaking that poor transatlantic proboscis, His broadsides resulting (this last there's no doubt of)
In successively sinking the craft they're fired out of.
Now nobody knows when an author is hit,
If he have not a public hysterical fit ; Let him only keep close in his snug garret's dim ether,
And nobody'd think of his foes — or of him either ;
If an author have any least fibre of worth
in him,
Abuse would but tickle the organ of mirth
in him ;
All the critics on earth cannot crush with their ban
One word that's in tune with the nature of
man."

"Well, perhaps so ; meanwhile I have brought you a book, Into which if you'll just have the goodness to look,

You may feel so delighted (when once you are through it)
As to deem it not unworth your while to review it,
And I think I can promise your thoughts,
if you do,
A place in the next Democratic Review."

"The most thankless of gods you must surely have thought me, For this is the forty-fourth copy you've brought me ;
I have given them away, or at least I have tried,
But I've forty-two left, standing all side by side
(The man who accepted that one copy died), —
From one end of a shelf to the other they reach,
'With the author's respects' neatly written in each.
The publisher, sure, will proclaim a Te Deum,
When he hears of that order the British Museum
Has sent for one set of what books were first printed In America, little or big, — for 't is hinted That this is the first truly tangible hope he Has ever had raised for the sale of a copy.
I've thought very often 't would be a good thing
In all public collections of books, if a wing Were set off by itself, like the seas from the dry lands,
Marked Literature suited to desolate islands, And filled with such books as could never be read Save by readers of proofs, forced to do it for bread, —
Such books as one's wrecked on in small country taverns, Such as hermits might mortify over in caverns,
Such as Satan, if printing had then been invented,
As the climax of woe, would to Job have presented,
Such as Crusoe might dip in, although there are few so Outrageously cornered by fate as poor Crusoe ;
And since the philanthropists just now are banging

And gibbeting all who're in favor of hanging (Though Cheever has proved that the Bible and Altar Were let down from Heaven at the end of a halter,
 And that vital religion would dull and grow callous, Unrefreshed, now and then, with a sniff of the gallows),—
 And folks are beginning to think it looks odd,
 To choke a poor scamp for the glory of God;
 And that He who esteems the Virginia reel A bait to draw saints from their spiritual weal,
 And regards the quadrille as a far greater knavery Than crushing his African children with slavery,— Since all who take part in a waltz or cotil-lon
 Are mounted for hell on the Devil's own pillion,
 Who, as every true orthodox Christian well knows,
 Approaches the heart through the door of the toes,—
 That He, I was saying, whose judgments are stored
 For such as take steps in despite of his word,
 Should look with delight on the agonized prancing
 Of a wretch who has not the least ground for his dancing, While the State, standing by, sings a verse from the Psalter About offering to God on his favorite halter,
 And, when the legs droop from their twitching divergence, Sells the clothes to a Jew, and the corpse to the surgeons;—
 Now, instead of all this, I think I can direct you all
 To a criminal code both humane and effectual;—
 I propose to shut up every doer of wrong With these desperate books, for such term, short or long,
 As, by statute in such cases made and provided,
 Shall be by your wise legislators decided:

Thus: Let murderers be shut, to grow wiser and cooler,
 At hard labor for life on the works of Miss —;
 Petty thieves, kept from flagranter crimes by their fears, Shall peruse Yankee Doodle a blank term of years,—
 That American Punch, like the English, no doubt,— Just the sugar and lemons and spirit left
 out.

“But stay, here comes Tityrus Griswold, and leads on The flocks whom he first plucks alive, and then feeds on,— A loud-cackling swarm, in whose feathers warm drest,
 He goes for as perfect a — swan as the rest.

“There comes Emerson first, whose rich words, every one,
 Are like gold nails in temples to hang trophies on,
 Whose prose is grand verse, while his verse, the Lord knows, Is some of it pr— No, 't is not even prose;
 I'm speaking of metres; some poems have welled
 From those rare depths of soul that have ne'er been excelled;
 They're not epics, but that does n't matter a pin,
 In creating, the only hard thing's to begin;
 A grass-blade's no easier to make than an oak;
 If you've once found the way, you've achieved the grand stroke;
 In the worst of his poems are mines of rich matter, But thrown in a heap with a crash and a clatter;
 Now it is not one thing nor another alone Makes a poem, but rather the general
 tone,
 The something pervading, uniting the
 whole,
 The before unconceived, unconceivable soul,
 So that just in removing this trifle or that,
 you Take away, as it were, a chief limb of the statue;

Roots, wood, bark, and leaves singly perfect may be,
But, clapt hodge-podge together, they don't make a tree.

"But, to come back to Emerson (whom, by the way, I believe we left waiting), — his is, we may say,
A Greek head on right Yankee shoulders, whose range Has Olympus for one pole, for t' other the Exchange;
He seems, to my thinking (although I 'm afraid The comparison must, long ere this, have been made),
A Plotinus-Montaigne, where the Egyptian's gold mist
And the Gascon's shrewd wit cheek-by-jowl coexist; All admire, and yet scarcely six converts he's got To I don't (nor they either) exactly know what;
For though he builds glorious temples, 't is odd He leaves never a doorway to get in a god.
'T is refreshing to old-fashioned people like me To meet such a primitive Pagan as he,
In whose mind all creation is duly respected As parts of himself — just a little projected;
And who's willing to worship the stars and the sun,
A convert to — nothing but Emerson.
So perfect a balance there is in his head,
That he talks of things sometimes as if they were dead;
Life, nature, love, God, and affairs of that sort,
He looks at as merely ideas; in short,
As if they were fossils stuck round in a cabinet,
Of such vast extent that our earth's a mere dab in it;
Composed just as he is inclined to conjecture her,
Namely, one part pure earth, ninety-nine parts pure lecturer;
You are filled with delight at his clear demonstration,

Each figure, word, gesture, just fits the occasion,
With the quiet precision of science he'll sort 'em,
But you can't help suspecting the whole a post mortem.

"There are persons, mole-blind to the soul's make and style,
Who insist on a likeness 'twixt him and Carlyle;
To compare him with Plato would be vastly fairer, Carlyle's the more burly, but E. is the rarer;
He sees fewer objects, but clearer, truer, — If C.'s as original, E.'s more peculiar;
That he's more of a man you might say of the one,
Of the other he's more of an Emerson;
C.'s the Titan, as shaggy of mind as of limb, —
E. the clear-eyed Olympian, rapid and slim;
The one's two thirds Norseman, the other half Greek,
Where the one's most abounding, the other's to seek;
C.'s generals require to be seen in the mass, — E.'s specialties gain if enlarged by the glass;
C. gives nature and God his own fits of the blues,
And rims common-sense things with mystical hues, —
E. sits in a mystery calm and intense,
And looks coolly around him with sharp common-sense;
C. shows you how every-day matters unite With the dim transdiurnal recesses of night, — While E., in a plain, preternatural way, Makes mysteries matters of mere every day;
C. draws all his characters quite à la Fuseli, —
Not sketching their bundles of muscles and thews illy, He paints with a brush so untamed and profuse,
They seem nothing but bundles of muscles and thews;
E. is rather like Flaxman, lines strait and severe,

And a colorless outline, but full, round, and clear ; —

To the men he thinks worthy he frankly accords

The design of a white marble statue in words.

C. labors to get at the centre, and then Take a reckoning from there of his actions and men ;

E. calmly assumes the said centre as granted,

And, given himself, has whatever is wanted.

“He has imitators in scores, who omit No part of the man but his wisdom and wit, —

Who go carefully o’er the sky-blue of his brain,

And when he has skimmed it once, skim it again ;

If at all they resemble him, you may be sure it is Because their shoals mirror his mists and obscurities,

As a mud-puddle seems deep as heaven for a minute,

While a cloud that floats o’er is reflected within it.

“There comes —, for instance ; to see him’s rare sport,

Tread in Emerson’s tracks with legs painfully short ;

How he jumps, how he strains, and gets red in the face,

To keep step with the mystagogue’s natural pace ;

He follows as close as a stick to a rocket, His fingers exploring the prophet’s each pocket.

Fie, for shame, brother bard ; with good fruit of your own,

Can’t you let Neighbor Emerson’s orchards alone ?

Besides, ’t is no use, you ’ll not find e’en a core, — — has picked up all the windfalls before. They might strip every tree, and E. never would catch ’em,

His Hesperides have no rude dragon to watch ’em ;

When they send him a dishful, and ask him to try ’em,

He never suspects how the sly rogues came by ’em ;

He wonders why ’t is there are none such his trees on,

And thinks ’em the best he has tasted this season.

“Yonder, calm as a cloud, Alcott stalks in a dream,

And fancies himself in thy groves, Academe,

With the Parthenon nigh, and the olive-trees o’er him,

And never a fact to perplex him or bore him,

With a snug room at Plato’s when night comes, to walk to,

And people from morning till midnight to talk to,

And from midnight till morning, nor snore in their listening ; —

So he muses, his face with the joy of it glistering,

For his highest conceit of a happiest state is Where they’d live upon acorns, and hear him talk gratis ;

And indeed, I believe, no man ever talked better, —

Each sentence hangs perfectly poised to a letter ;

He seems piling words, but there’s royal dust hid

In the heart of each sky-piercing pyramid. While he talks he is great, but goes out like a taper,

If you shut him up closely with pen, ink, and paper ;

Yet his fingers itch for ’em from morning till night,

And he thinks he does wrong if he don’t always write ;

In this, as in all things, a lamb among men, He goes to sure death when he goes to his pen.

“Close behind him is Brownson, his mouth very full

With attempting to gulp a Gregorian bull ; Who contrives, spite of that, to pour out as he goes

A stream of transparent and forcible prose ; He shifts quite about, then proceeds to expound

That ’t is merely the earth, not himself, that turns round,

And wishes it clearly impressed on your mind

That the weathercock rules and not follows
the wind ;
Proving first, then as deftly confuting each
side,
With no doctrine pleased that's not somewhere denied,
He lays the denier away on the shelf,
And then — down beside him lies gravely himself.
He's the Salt River boatman, who always stands willing To convey friend or foe without charging a shilling,
And so fond of the trip that, when leisure's to spare,
He'll row himself up, if he can't get a fare.
The worst of it is, that his logic's so strong,
That of two sides he commonly chooses the
wrong ;
If there is only one, why, he'll split it in two,
And first pummel this half, then that, black and blue.
That white's white needs no proof, but it takes a deep fellow To prove it jet-black, and that jet-black is yellow.
He offers the true faith to drink in a sieve, —
When it reaches your lips there's naught left to believe But a few silly- (syllable, I mean,) -gisms that squat 'em Like tadpoles, o'erjoyed with the mud at the bottom.

“There is Willis, all natty and jaunty and gay,
Who says his best things in so foppish a
way,
With conceits and pet phrases so thickly o'erlaying 'em,
That one hardly knows whether to thank him for saying 'em;
Over-ornament ruins both poem and prose, Just conceive of a Muse with a ring in her nose !
His prose had a natural grace of its own,
And enough of it, too, if he'd let it alone;
But he twitches and jerks so, one fairly gets tired,
And is forced to forgive where one might have admired;
Yet whenever it slips away free and un-laced,
It runs like a stream with a musical waste,

And gurgles along with the liquidest sweep; —
'T is not deep as a river, but who'd have it
deep ?
In a country where scarcely a village is found
That has not its author sublime and profound,
For some one to be slightly shallow's a duty, And Willis's shallowness makes half his beauty.
His prose winds along with a blithe, gurgling error,
And reflects all of Heaven it can see in its mirror:
'T is a narrowish strip, but it is not an artifice;
'T is the true out-of-doors with its genuine hearty phiz;
It is Nature herself, and there's something in that,
Since most brains reflect but the crown of a hat.
Few volumes I know to read under a tree,
More truly delightful than his A l'Abri, With the shadows of leaves flowing over your book,
Like ripple-shades netting the bed of a brook;
With June coming softly your shoulder to look over,
Breezes waiting to turn every leaf of your book over,
And Nature to criticise still as you read, — The page that bears that is a rare one indeed.

“He's so innate a cockney, that had he been born Where plain bare-skin's the only full-dress that is worn,
He'd have given his own such an air that you'd say
'T had been made by a tailor to lounge in Broadway.
His nature's a glass of champagne with the foam on 't,
As tender as Fletcher, as witty as Beaumont;
So his best things are done in the flush of the moment;
If he wait, all is spoiled; he may stir it and shake it,
But, the fixed air once gone, he can never re-make it.

He might be a marvel of easy delightfulness,
 If he would not sometimes leave the r out of sprightfulness;
 And he ought to let Scripture alone — 't is self-slaughter,
 For nobody likes inspiration-and-water.
 He'd have been just the fellow to sup at the Mermaid, Cracking jokes at rare Ben, with an eye to the barmaid,
 His wit running up as Canary ran down, — The topmost bright bubble on the wave of The Town.

"Here comes Parker, the Orson of parsons, a man Whom the Church undertook to put under her ban
 (The Church of Socinus, I mean), — his opinions
 Being So- (ultra) -cinian, they shocked the Socinians;
 They believed — faith, I'm puzzled — I think I may call Their belief a believing in nothing at all, Or something of that sort; I know they all went
 For a general union of total dissent:
 He went a step farther; without cough or
 hem,
 He frankly avowed he believed not in them;
 And, before he could be jumbled up or prevented,
 From their orthodox kind of dissent he dissented.
 There was heresy here, you perceive, for the right
 Of privately judging means simply that
 light
 Has been granted to me, for deciding on
you;
 And in happier times, before Atheism grew,
 The deed contained clauses for cooking you
 too:
 Now at Xerxes and Knut we all laugh, yet our foot
 With the same wave is wet that mocked Xerxes and Knut,
 And we all entertain a secure private notion,
 That our Thus far! will have a great weight with the ocean.
 'T was so with our liberal Christians: they bore
 With sincerest conviction their chairs to the shore;

They brandished their worn theological birches, Bade natural progress keep out of the Churches,
 And expected the lines they had drawn to prevail
 With the fast-rising tide to keep out of their pale;
 They had formerly dammed the Pontifical
 See,
 And the same thing, they thought, would do nicely for P.; But he turned up his nose at their mumming and shamming,
 And cared (shall I say?) not a d — for their damming;
 So they first read him out of their church, and next minute Turned round and declared he had never been in it.
 But the ban was too small or the man was too big,
 For he recked not their bells, books, and candles a fig (He scarce looks like a man who would stay treated shabbily, Sophroniscus' son's head o'er the features of Rabelais); —
 He bangs and bethwacks them, — their backs he salutes
 With the whole tree of knowledge torn up by the roots;
 His sermons with satire are plenteously verjuiced,
 And he talks in one breath of Confutzee, Cass, Zerduscht,
 Jack Robinson, Peter the Hermit, Strap, Dathan, Cush, Pitt (not the bottomless, that he's no faith in),
 Pan, Pillicock, Shakespeare, Paul, Toots, Monsieur Tonson, Aldebaran, Alcander, Ben Khorat, Ben Jonson, Thoth, Richter, Joe Smith, Father Paul,
 Judah Monis,
 Musæus, Muretus, hem, — μ Scorpionis, Maccabee, Maccaboy, Mac — Mac — ah!
 Machiavelli,
 Condorcet, Count d'Orsay, Conder, Say, Ganganelli,
 Orion, O'Connell, the Chevalier D'O, (See the Memoirs of Sully,) τὸ πᾶν, the great toe
 Of the statue of Jupiter, now made to pass

For that of Jew Peter by good Romish brass,
(You may add for yourselves, for I find it a bore,
All the names you have ever, or not, heard before,
And when you've done that — why, invent a few more).
His hearers can't tell you on Sunday beforehand,
If in that day's discourse they'll be Bibled or Koraned, For he's seized the idea (by his martyrdom fired)
That all men (not orthodox) may be inspired;
Yet though wisdom profane with his creed he may weave in,
He makes it quite clear what he does n't believe in,
While some, who decry him, think all Kingdom Come
Is a sort of a, kind of a, species of Hum, Of which, as it were, so to speak, not a crumb
Would be left, if we did n't keep carefully mum,
And, to make a clean breast, that 't is perfectly plain
That all kinds of wisdom are somewhat profane;
Now P.'s creed than this may be lighter or darker,
But in one thing, 't is clear, he has faith, namely — Parker;
And this is what makes him the crowd-drawing preacher,
There's a background of god to each hard-working feature,
Every word that he speaks has been fierily furnaced
In the blast of a life that has struggled in earnest:
There he stands, looking more like a ploughman than priest,
If not dreadfully awkward, not graceful at least,
His gestures all downright and same, if you will,
As of brown-fisted Hobnail in hoeing a drill;
But his periods fall on you, stroke after stroke,
Like the blows of a lumberer felling an oak,

You forget the man wholly, you're thankful to meet With a preacher who smacks of the field and the street,
And to hear, you're not over-particular whence,
Almost Taylor's profusion, quite Latimer's
sense.

"There is Bryant, as quiet, as cool, and as dignified,
As a smooth, silent iceberg, that never is ignified,
Save when by reflection 't is kindled o' nights
With a semblance of flame by the chill Northern Lights.
He may rank (Griswold says so) first bard of your nation (There's no doubt that he stands in supreme iceolation),
Your topmost Parnassus he may set his heel on,
But no warm applauses come, peal following peal on, —
He's too smooth and too polished to hang any zeal on:
Unqualified merits, I'll grant, if you choose, he has 'em, But he lacks the one merit of kindling enthusiasm;
If he stir you at all, it is just, on my soul,
Like being stirred up with the very North Pole.

"He is very nice reading in summer, but inter
Nos, we don't want extra freezing in winter;
Take him up in the depth of July, my advice is,
When you feel an Egyptian devotion to ices.
But, deduct all you can, there's enough that's right good in him, He has a true soul for field, river, and wood in him;
And his heart, in the midst of brick walls, or where'er it is,
Glows, softens, and thrills with the tenderest charities —
To you mortals that delve in this trade-ridden planet?
No, to old Berkshire's hills, with their limestone and granite.

If you 're one who in loco (add foco here) desipis,
 You will get of his outermost heart (as I guess) a piece;
 But you 'd get deeper down if you came as a precipice,
 And would break the last seal of its inwardest fountain,
 If you only could palm yourself off for a mountain.
 Mr. Quivis, or somebody quite as discern-
 ing,
 Some scholar who 's hourly expecting his learning, Calls B. the American Wordsworth; but Wordsworth
 May be rated at more than your whole tuneful herd 's worth.
 No, don't be absurd, he 's an excellent Bryant;
 But, my friends, you 'll endanger the life of your client,
 By attempting to stretch him up into a giant:
 If you choose to compare him, I think there are two per-sons fit for a parallel — Thomson and Cowper;¹
 I don't mean exactly, — there 's something of each,
 There 's T.'s love of nature, C.'s penchant to preach;
 Just mix up their minds so that C.'s spice of craziness Shall balance and neutralize T.'s turn for laziness,
 And it gives you a brain cool, quite frictionless, quiet, Whose internal police nips the buds of all riot, —
 A brain like a permanent strait-jacket put on The heart that strives vainly to burst off a button, —
 A brain which, without being slow or mechanic, Does more than a larger less drilled, more volcanic;
 He 's a Cowper condensed, with no craziness bitten,
 And the advantage that Wordsworth before him had written.

To demonstrate quickly and easily how per--versely absurd 't is to sound this name Cowper, As people in general call him named super,
 I remark that he rhymes it himself with horse-trooper.

"But, my dear little bardlings, don't prick up your ears Nor suppose I would rank you and Bryant as peers;
 If I call him an iceberg, I don't mean to say
 There is nothing in that which is grand in its way;
 He is almost the one of your poets that knows How much grace, strength, and dignity lie in Repose;
 If he sometimes fall short, he is too wise to mar
 His thought's modest fulness by going too far;
 'T would be well if your authors should all make a trial
 Of what virtue there is in severe self-denial,
 And measure their writings by Hesiod's staff,
 Which teaches that all has less value than half.

"There is Whittier, whose swelling and vehement heart
 Strains the strait-breasted drab of the Quaker apart,
 And reveals the live Man, still supreme and erect,
 Underneath the bemummying wrappers of sect;
 There was ne'er a man born who had more of the swing
 Of the true lyric bard and all that kind of
 thing;
 And his failures arise (though he seem not to know it)
 From the very same cause that has made him a poet, —
 A fervor of mind which knows no separation
 'Twixt simple excitement and pure inspiration,
 As my Pythoness erst sometimes erred from not knowing If 't were I or mere wind through her tripod was blowing;
 Let his mind once get head in its favorite direction
 And the torrent of verse bursts the dams of reflection, While, borne with the rush of the metre along,

The poet may chance to go right or go
 wrong,
 Content with the whirl and delirium of
 song;
 Then his grammar's not always correct, nor his rhymes,
 And he's prone to repeat his own lyrics
 sometimes,
 Not his best, though, for those are struck off at white-heats
 When the heart in his breast like a triphammer beats,
 And can ne'er be repeated again any more Than they could have been carefully plotted before:
 Like old what 's-his-name there at the battle of Hastings (Who, however, gave more than mere rhythmical bastings),
 Our Quaker leads off metaphorical fights For reform and whatever they call human rights,
 Both singing and striking in front of the
 war,
 And hitting his foes with the mallet of Thor; Anne haec, one exclaims, on beholding his knocks, Vestis filii tui, O leather-clad Fox?
 Can that be thy son, in the battle's mid-
 din,
 Preaching brotherly love and then driving it in
 To the brain of the tough old Goliath of
 sin,
 With the smoothest of pebbles from Castaly's spring Impressed on his hard moral sense with a sling?

 "All honor and praise to the right-hearted bard
 Who was true to The Voice when such service was hard,
 Who himself was so free he dared sing for the slave
 When to look but a protest in silence was brave;
 All honor and praise to the women and men Who spoke out for the dumb and the down-trodden then!
 It needs not to name them, already for each I see History preparing the statue and niche:

They were harsh, but shall you be so shocked at hard words Who have beaten your pruning-hooks up into swords,
 Whose rewards and hurrahs men are surer to gain
 By the reaping of men and of women than grain?
 Why should you stand aghast at their fierce wordy war, if You scalp one another for Bank or for Tariff?
 Your calling them cut-throats and knaves all day long Does n't prove that the use of hard language is wrong;
 While the World's heart beats quicker to think of such men As signed Tyranny's doom with a bloody steel-pen, While on Fourth-of-Julys beardless orators fright one
 With hints at Harmodius and Aristogiton, You need not look shy at your sisters and brothers
 Who stab with sharp words for the freedom of others;—
 No, a wreath, twine a wreath for the loyal
 and true
 Who, for sake of the many, dared stand with the few,
 Not of blood-spattered laurel for enemies braved,
 But of broad, peaceful oak-leaves for citizens saved!

 "Here comes Dana, abstractedly loitering along,
 Involved in a paulo-post-future of song, Who'll be going to write what'll never be written Till the Muse, ere he think of it, gives him the mitten,—
 Who is so well aware of how things should be done,
 That his own works displease him before they're begun,—
 Who so well all that makes up good poetry
 knows,
 That the best of his poems is written in prose;
 All saddled and bridled stood Pegasus waiting,
 He was booted and spurred, but he loitered debating;

In a very grave question his soul was immersed, — Which foot in the stirrup he ought to put first;
 And, while this point and that he judiciously dwelt on,
 He, somehow or other, had written Paul Felton, Whose beauties or faults, whichever you see there, You'll allow only genius could hit upon either.
 That he once was the Idle Man none will deplore,
 But I fear he will never be anything more;
 The ocean of song heaves and glitters before him,
 The depth and the vastness and longing sweep o'er him,
 He knows every breaker and shoal on the chart,
 He has the Coast Pilot and so on by heart, Yet he spends his whole life, like the man in the fable,
 In learning to swim on his library-table.

"There swaggers John Neal, who has wasted in Maine
 The sinews and cords of his pugilist brain, Who might have been poet, but that, in its stead, he Preferred to believe that he was so already;
 Too hasty to wait till Art's ripe fruit should drop,
 He must pelt down an unripe and colicky crop;
 Who took to the law, and had this sterling plea for it,
 It required him to quarrel, and paid him a fee for it;
 A man who's made less than he might have, because He always has thought himself more than he was, —
 Who, with very good natural gifts as a bard, Broke the strings of his lyre out by striking too hard,
 And cracked half the notes of a truly fine voice, Because song drew less instant attention than noise.
 Ah, men do not know how much strength is in poise,
 That he goes the farthest who goes far enough,

And that all beyond that is just bother and stuff.
 No vain man matures, he makes too much new wood;
 His blooms are too thick for the fruit to be good;
 'T is the modest man ripens, 't is he that achieves, Just what 's needed of sunshine and shade he receives;
 Grapes, to mellow, require the cool dark of their leaves;
 Neal wants balance; he throws his mind always too far,
 Whisking out flocks of comets, but never a star;
 He has so much muscle, and loves so to show it,
 That he strips himself naked to prove he's a poet,
 And, to show he could leap Art's wide ditch, if he tried,
 Jumps clean o'er it, and into the hedge t' other side.
 He has strength, but there's nothing about him in keeping;
 One gets surelier onward by walking than leaping;
 He has used his own sinews himself to distress,
 And had done vastly more had he done vastly less;
 In letters, too soon is as bad as too late;
 Could he only have waited he might have been great;
 But he plumped into Helicon up to the waist,
 And muddled the stream ere he took his first taste.

"There is Hawthorne, with genius so shrinking and rare
 That you hardly at first see the strength that is there;
 A frame so robust, with a nature so sweet,
 So earnest, so graceful, so lithe and so fleet, Is worth a descent from Olympus to meet;
 'T is as if a rough oak that for ages had stood,
 With his gnarled bony branches like ribs of the wood, Should bloom, after cycles of struggle and scathe,
 With a single anemone trembly and rathe;

His strength is so tender, his wildness so meek, That a suitable parallel sets one to seek, — He's a John Bunyan Fouqué, a Puritan Tieck; When Nature was shaping him, clay was not granted For making so full-sized a man as she wanted,
 So, to fill out her model, a little she spared From some finer-grained stuff for a woman prepared,
 And she could not have hit a more excellent plan For making him fully and perfectly man.
 The success of her scheme gave her so much delight,
 That she tried it again, shortly after, in Dwight;
 Only, while she was kneading and shaping the clay,
 She sang to her work in her sweet childish way,
 And found, when she'd put the last touch to his soul,
 That the music had somehow got mixed with the whole.

"Here's Cooper, who's written six volumes to show He's as good as a lord: well, let's grant that he's so;
 If a person prefer that description of praise,
 Why, a coronet's certainly cheaper than bays;
 But he need take no pains to convince us he's not (As his enemies say) the American Scott.
 Choose any twelve men, and let C. read aloud
 That one of his novels of which he's most proud, And I'd lay any bet that, without ever quitting Their box, they'd be all, to a man, for acquitting.
 He has drawn you one character, though, that is new,
 One wildflower he's plucked that is wet with the dew
 Of this fresh Western world, and, the thing not to mince,
 He has done naught but copy it ill ever since;
 His Indians, with proper respect be it said,

Are just Natty Bumppo, daubed over with red,
 And his very Long Toms are the same useful Nat, Rigged up in duck pants and a sou'wester hat (Though once in a Coffin, a good chance was found To have slipped the old fellow away underground).
 All his other men-figures are clothes upon sticks,
 The dernière chemise of a man in a fix (As a captain besieged, when his garrison's small, Sets up caps upon poles to be seen o'er the wall);
 And the women he draws from one model don't vary,
 All sappy as maples and flat as a prairie.
 When a character's wanted, he goes to the task
 As a cooper would do in composing a cask;
 He picks out the staves, of their qualities heedful, Just hoops them together as tight as is needful, And, if the best fortune should crown the attempt, he Has made at the most something wooden and empty.

"Don't suppose I would underrate Cooper's abilities;
 If I thought you'd do that, I should feel very ill at ease;
 The men who have given to one character life
 And objective existence are not very rife;
 You may number them all, both prose-writers and singers, Without overrunning the bounds of your fingers,
 And Natty won't go to oblivion quicker Than Adams the parson or Primrose the vicar.

"There is one thing in Cooper I like, too, and that is That on manners he lectures his countrymen gratis;
 Not precisely so either, because, for a rarity,
 He is paid for his tickets in unpopularity.
 Now he may overcharge his American pictures.

But you'll grant there's a good deal of truth in his strictures;
And I honor the man who is willing to sink Half his present repute for the freedom to think,
And, when he has thought, be his cause strong or weak,
Will risk t' other half for the freedom to
speak,
Caring naught for what vengeance the mob has in store, Let that mob be the upper ten thousand or lower.

"There are truths you Americans need to be told,
And it never'll refute them to swagger and scold;
John Bull, looking o'er the Atlantic, in choler
At your aptness for trade, says you worship the dollar;
But to scorn such eye-dollar-try's what very few do,
And John goes to that church as often as you do.
No matter what John says, don't try to outcrow him,
'T is enough to go quietly on and outgrow
him;
Like most fathers, Bull hates to see Number One Displacing himself in the mind of his son,
And detests the same faults in himself he'd neglected
When he sees them again in his child's glass reflected;
To love one another you're too like by
half;
If he is a bull, you're a pretty stout calf,
And tear your own pasture for naught but to show What a nice pair of horns you're beginning to grow.

"There are one or two things I should just like to hint,
For you don't often get the truth told you in print;
The most of you (this is what strikes all beholders)
Have a mental and physical stoop in the shoulders;
Though you ought to be free as the winds and the waves,

You've the gait and the manners of runaway slaves;
Though you brag of your New World, you don't half believe in it;
And as much of the Old as is possible weave in it;
Your goddess of freedom, a tight, buxom girl,
With lips like a cherry and teeth like a pearl,
With eyes bold as Herë's, and hair floating
free,
And full of the sun as the spray of the sea,
Who can sing at a husking or romp at a shearing,
Who can trip through the forests alone without fearing,
Who can drive home the cows with a song through the grass,
Keeps glancing aside into Europe's cracked glass,
Hides her red hands in gloves, pinches up her lithe waist,
And makes herself wretched with transmarine taste;
She loses her fresh country charm when she takes Any mirror except her own rivers and lakes.

"You steal Englishmen's books and think Englishmen's thought, With their salt on her tail your wild eagles is caught;
Your literature suits its each whisper and motion
To what will be thought of it over the ocean;
The cast clothes of Europe your statesmanship tries
And mumbles again the old blarneys and lies;— Forget Europe wholly, your veins throb with blood,
To which the dull current in hers is but mud; Let her sneer, let her say your experiment fails,
In her voice there's a tremble e'en now while she rails,
And your shore will soon be in the nature of things Covered thick with gilt drift-wood of cast-away kings,
Where alone, as it were in a Longfellow's Wait,

Her fugitive pieces will find themselves safe.
 O my friends, thank your god, if you have one, that he
 'Twixt the Old World and you set the gulf of a sea;
 Be strong-backed, brown-handed, upright as your pines,
 By the scale of a hemisphere shape your designs,
 Be true to yourselves and this new nineteenth age,
 As a statue by Powers, or a picture by Page, Plough, sail, forge, build, carve, paint, make all over new,
 To your own New-World instincts contrive to be true, Keep your ears open wide to the Future's first call,
 Be whatever you will, but yourselves first of all,
 Stand fronting the dawn on Toil's heaven-scaling peaks,
 And become my new race of more practical Greeks. — Hem ! your likeness at present, I shudder to tell o't, Is that you have your slaves, and the Greek had his helot."

Here a gentleman present, who had in his attic More pepper than brains, shrieked, "The man 's a fanatic, I 'm a capital tailor with warm tar and feathers,
 And will make him a suit that 'll serve in all weathers;
 But we 'll argue the point first, I 'm willing to reason 't, Palaver before condemnation 's but decent;
 So, through my humble person, Humanity begs Of the friends of true freedom a loan of bad eggs."
 But Apollo let one such a look of his show forth
 As when ἦτε νύκτι δουκός, and so forth,
 And the gentleman somehow slunk out of the way,
 But, as he was going, gained courage to say, —
 "At slavery in the abstract my whole soul rebels,

I am as strongly opposed to 't as any one else."
 "Ay, no doubt, but whenever I 've happened to meet With a wrong or a crime, it is always concrete," Answered Phœbus severely; then turning to us,
 "The mistake of such fellows as just made the fuss Is only in taking a great busy nation
 For a part of their pitiful cotton-plantation. — But there comes Miranda, Zeus ! where shall I flee to ?
 She has such a penchant for bothering me too !
 She always keeps asking if I don't observe a Particular likeness 'twixt her and Minerva;
 She tells me my efforts in verse are quite clever; —
 She 's been travelling now, and will be worse than ever;
 One would think, though, a sharp-sighted noter she 'd be Of all that 's worth mentioning over the sea,
 For a woman must surely see well, if she try,
 The whole of whose being 's a capital I:
 She will take an old notion, and make it her own,
 By saying it o'er in her Sibylline tone,
 Or persuade you 't is something tremendously deep,
 By repeating it so as to put you to sleep;
 And she well may defy any mortal to see through it,
 When once she has mixed up her infinite me through it.
 There is one thing she owns in her own single right,
 It is native and genuine — namely, her spite;
 Though, when acting as censor, she privately blows
 A censor of vanity 'neath her own nose."

Here Miranda came up, and said, "Phœbus ! you know That the Infinite Soul has its infinite woe, As I ought to know, having lived cheek by jowl, Since the day I was born, with the Infinite Soul:

I myself introduced, I myself, I alone, To my Land's better life authors solely my own,

Who the sad heart of earth on their shoulders have taken,

Whose works sound a depth by Life's quiet unshaken,

Such as Shakespeare, for instance, the Bible, and Bacon,

Not to mention my own works; Time's nadir is fleet,

And, as for myself, I 'm quite out of conceit "—

"Quite out of conceit! I 'm enchanted to hear it,"

Cried Apollo aside. "Who 'd have thought she was near it?"

To be sure, one is apt to exhaust those commodities

One uses too fast, yet in this case as odd it is As if Neptune should say to his turbot's and whittings,

'I 'm as much out of salt as Miranda's own writings'

(Which, as she in her own happy manner has said,

Sound a depth, for 't is one of the functions of lead).

She often has asked me if I could not find A place somewhere near me that suited her
mind;

I know but a single one vacant, which she,
With her rare talent that way, would fit to a T.

And it would not imply any pause or cessation

In the work she esteems her peculiar vocation,—

She may enter on duty to-day, if she chooses,

And remain Tiring-woman for life to the Muses."

Miranda meanwhile has succeeded in driving

Up into a corner, in spite of their striving,
A small flock of terrified victims, and there,

With an I-turn-the-crank-of-the-Universe
air

And a tone which, at least to my fancy, appears

Not so much to be entering as boxing your ears,

Is unfolding a tale (of herself, I surmise, For 't is dotted as thick as a peacock's with I's).

Apropos of Miranda, I 'll rest on my oars And drift through a trifling digression on bores,

For, though not wearing ear-rings in more majorum,

Our ears are kept bored just as if we still wore 'em.

There was one feudal custom worth keeping, at least,

Roasted bores made a part of each well-ordered feast,

And of all quiet pleasures the very ne plus
Was in hunting wild bores as the tame ones hunt us.

Archæologists, I know, who have personal fears

Of this wise application of hounds and of spears,

Have tried to make out, with a zeal more than wanted,

'T was a kind of wild swine that our ancestors hunted;

But I 'll never believe that the age which has strewn

Europe o'er with cathedrals, and otherwise shown

That it knew what was what, could by chance not have known (Spending, too, its chief time with its buff on, no doubt)

Which beast 't would improve the world most to thin out.

I divide bores myself, in the manner of rifles,

Into two great divisions, regardless of trifles;—

There's your smooth-bore and screw-bore, who do not much vary

In the weight of cold lead they respectively carry.

The smooth-bore is one in whose essence the mind

Not a corner nor cranny to cling by can find;

You feel as in nightmares sometimes, when you slip

Down a steep slated roof, where there's nothing to grip;

You slide and you slide, the blank horror increases,—

You had rather by far be at once smashed to pieces;

You fancy a whirlpool below white and frothing,
 And finally drop off and light upon — nothing.
 The screw-bore has twists in him, faint predilections For going just wrong in the tritest directions;
 When he's wrong he is flat, when he's right he can't show it, He'll tell you what Snooks said about the new poet,¹ Or how Fogrum was outraged by Tennyson's Princess;
 He has spent all his spare time and intellect since his Birth in perusing, on each art and science, Just the books in which no one puts any reliance,
 And though nemo, we're told, horis omnibus sapit,
 The rule will not fit him, however you shape it,
 For he has a perennial foison of sappiness;
 He has just enough force to spoil half your day's happiness,
 And to make him a sort of mosquito to be with,
 But just not enough to dispute or agree with.

These sketches I made (not to be too explicit)
 From two honest fellows who made me a visit,
 And broke, like the tale of the Bear and the Fiddle, My reflections on Halleck short off by the middle;
 I sha'n't now go into the subject more deeply,
 For I notice that some of my readers look sleep'y;
 I will barely remark that, 'mongst civilized nations, There's none that displays more exemplary patience Under all sorts of boring, at all sorts of hours,
 From all sorts of desperate persons, than ours.
 Not to speak of our papers, our State legislatures,

¹ (If you call Snooks an owl, he will show by his looks that he's morally certain you're jealous of Snooks.)

And other such trials for sensitive natures, Just look for a moment at Congress, — appalled, My fancy shrinks back from the phantom it called;
 Why, there's scarcely a member unworthy to frown
 'Neath what Fourier nicknames the Boreal crown; Only think what that infinite bore-pow'r could do If applied with a utilitarian view; Suppose, for example, we shipped it with care
 To Sahara's great desert and let it bore there;
 If they held one short session and did nothing else, They'd fill the whole waste with Artesian wells.
 But 't is time now with pen phonographic to follow Through some more of his sketches our laughing Apollo: —

“There comes Harry Franco, and, as he draws near,
 You find that's a smile which you took for a sneer;
 One half of him contradicts t' other; his wont
 Is to say very sharp things and do very blunt;
 His manner's as hard as his feelings are tender,
 And a sortie he'll make when he means to surrender;
 He's in joke half the time when he seems to be sternest,
 When he seems to be joking, be sure he's in earnest;
 He has common sense in a way that's uncommon, Hates humbug and cant, loves his friends like a woman, Builds his dislikes of cards and his friendships of oak, Loves a prejudice better than aught but a joke,
 Is half upright Quaker, half downright Come-outer, Loves Freedom too well to go stark mad about her,
 Quite artless himself, is a lover of Art.

Shuts you out of his secrets and into his
heart,
And though not a poet, yet all must admire
In his letters of Pinto his skill on the liar.

"There comes Poe, with his raven, like Barnaby Rudge,
Three fifths of him genius and two fifths sheer fudge,
Who talks like a book of iambs and pentameters,
In a way to make people of common sense damn metres,
Who has written some things quite the best of their kind, But the heart somehow seems all squeezed out by the mind, Who — But hey-day! What's this?
Messieurs Mathews and Poe,
You must n't fling mud-balls at Longfellow
so,
Does it make a man worse that his character's such As to make his friends love him (as you think) too much?
Why, there is not a bard at this moment alive
More willing than he that his fellows should thrive;
While you are abusing him thus, even now He would help either one of you out of a slough;
You may say that he's smooth and all that till you're hoarse,
But remember that elegance also is force; After polishing granite as much as you will,
The heart keeps its tough old persistency
still;
Deduct all you can, that still keeps you at bay;
Why, he'll live till men weary of Collins and Gray.
I'm not over-fond of Greek metres in English,
To me rhyme's a gain, so it be not too jin-glish,
And your modern hexameter verses are no
more Like Greek ones than sleek Mr. Pope is like Homer;
As the roar of the sea to the coo of a pigeon
is,
So, compared to your moderns, sounds old Melesigenes;

I may be too partial, the reason, perhaps, o't is That I've heard the old blind man recite his own rhapsodies,
And my ear with that music impregnate
may be,
Like the poor exiled shell with the soul of the sea,
Or as one can't bear Strauss when his nature is cloven
To its depths within depths by the stroke of Beethoven;
But, set that aside, and 't is truth that I
speak,
Had Theocritus written in English, not Greek,
I believe that his exquisite sense would scarce change a line In that rare, tender, virgin-like pastoral Evangeline.
That's not ancient nor modern, its place is apart Where time has no sway, in the realm of pure Art,
'T is a shrine of retreat from Earth's hubbub and strife
As quiet and chaste as the author's own life.

"There comes Philothea, her face all aglow,
She has just been dividing some poor creature's woe,
And can't tell which pleases her most, to relieve
His want, or his story to hear and believe;
No doubt against many deep griefs she prevails,
For her ear is the refuge of destitute tales;
She knows well that silence is sorrow's best food,
And that talking draws off from the heart its black blood, So she'll listen with patience and let you unfold
Your bundle of rags as 't were pure cloth of gold,
Which, indeed, it all turns to as soon as she's touched it,
And (to borrow a phrase from the nursery)
muched it;
She has such a musical taste, she will go Any distance to hear one who draws a long bow;
She will swallow a wonder by mere might and main,

And thinks it Geometry's fault if she's fain To consider things flat, inasmuch as they're plain;
 Facts with her are accomplished, as Frenchmen would say — They will prove all she wishes them to either way, —
 And, as fact lies on this side or that, we must try,
 If we're seeking the truth, to find where it don't lie;
 I was telling her once of a marvellous aloe That for thousands of years had looked spindling and fallow,
 And, though nursed by the fruitfulest powers of mud,
 Had never vouchsafed e'en so much as a bud, Till its owner remarked (as a sailor, you
 know, Often will in a calm) that it never would blow,
 For he wished to exhibit the plant, and designed
 That its blowing should help him in raising
 the wind;
 At last it was told him that if he should water
 Its roots with the blood of his unmarried daughter (Who was born, as her mother, a Calvinist,
 said,
 With William Law's serious caul on her
 head),
 It would blow as the obstinate breeze did when by a Like decree of her father died Iphigenia; At first he declared he himself would be blowed
 Ere his conscience with such a foul crime he would load,
 But the thought, coming oft, grew less dark than before,
 And he mused, as each creditor knocked at his door,
 If this were but done they would dun me no
 more;
 I told Philothea his struggles and doubts,
 And how he considered the ins and the outs
 Of the visions he had, and the dreadful dyspepsy,
 How he went to the seër that lives at Po'- keepsie,
 How the seër advised him to sleep on it first,

And to read his big volume in case of the worst,
 And further advised he should pay him five dollars
 For writing Um, Um, on his wristbands and collars;
 Three years and ten days these dark words he had studied When the daughter was missed, and the aloe had budded;
 I told how he watched it grow large and more large,
 And wondered how much for the show he should charge, —
 She had listened with utter indifference to this, till
 I told how it bloomed, and, discharging its pistil
 With an aim the Eumenides dictated, shot
 The botanical filicide dead on the spot;
 It had blown, but he reaped not his horrible
 gains,
 For it blew with such force as to blow out his brains,
 And the crime was blown also, because on the wad,
 Which was paper, was writ 'Visitation of God,'
 As well as a thrilling account of the deed Which the coroner kindly allowed me to read.

"Well, my friend took this story up just, to be sure,
 As one might a poor foundling that's laid at one's door;
 She combed it and washed it and clothed it and fed it,
 And as if 't were her own child most tenderly bred it, Laid the scene (of the legend, I mean) far away a-mong the green vales underneath Himalaya,
 And by artist-like touches, laid on here and there,
 Made the whole thing so touching, I frankly declare
 I have read it all thrice, and, perhaps I am
 weak,
 But I found every time there were tears on my cheek.

"The pole, science tells us, the magnet controls,

But she is a magnet to emigrant Poles, And folks with a mission that nobody
 knows Throng thickly about her as bees round a rose;
 She can fill up the carets in such, make their scope
 Converge to some focus of rational hope,
 And, with sympathies fresh as the morning, their gall Can transmute into honey, — but this is not all;
 Not only for those she has solace, oh
 say,
 Vice's desperate nursling adrift in Broad-
 way,
 Who clingest, with all that is left of thee human,
 To the last slender spar from the wreck of the woman,
 Hast thou not found one shore where those tired drooping feet Could reach firm mother-earth, one full heart on whose beat The soothed head in silence reposing could hear
 The chimes of far childhood throb back on the ear?
 Ah, there 's many a beam from the fountain of day
 That, to reach us unclouded, must pass, on its way, Through the soul of a woman, and hers is wide ope
 To the influence of Heaven as the blue eyes of Hope;
 Yes, a great heart is hers, one that dares to go in To the prison, the slave-hut, the alleys of
 sin,
 And to bring into each, or to find there, some line
 Of the never completely out-trampled divine;
 If her heart at high floods swamps her brain now and then,
 'T is but richer for that when the tide ebbs agen,
 As, after old Nile has subsided, his plain Overflows with a second broad deluge of grain;
 What a wealth would it bring to the narrow and sour Could they be as a Child but for one little
 hour!

"What! Irving? thrice welcome, warm heart and fine brain, You bring back the happiest spirit from Spain,
 And the gravest sweet humor, that ever were there Since Cervantes met death in his gentle despair;
 Nay, don't be embarrassed, nor look so beseeching,
 I sha'n't run directly against my own preaching,
 And, having just laughed at their Raphaels and Dantes,
 Go to setting you up beside matchless Cervantes;
 But allow me to speak what I honestly feel, —
 To a true poet-heart add the fun of Dick Steele,
 Throw in all of Addison, minus the chill, With the whole of that partnership's stock and good-will,
 Mix well, and while stirring, hum o'er, as a spell,
 The fine old English Gentleman, simmer it
 well,
 Sweeten just to your own private liking, then strain,
 That only the finest and clearest remain, Let it stand out of doors till a soul it receives
 From the warm lazy sun loitering down through green leaves, And you'll find a choice nature, not wholly deserving
 A name either English or Yankee, — just Irving.

"There goes, — but stet nominis umbra,
 — his name
 You 'll be glad enough, some day or other,
 to claim,
 And will all crowd about him and swear that you knew him If some English critic should chance to review him.
 The old porcos ante ne projiciatis MARGARITAS, for him you have verified gratis;
 What matters his name? Why, it may be Sylvester,
 Judd, Junior, or Junius, Ulysses, or Nestor, For aught I know or care; 't is enough that I look

On the author of 'Margaret,' the first Yankee book
 With the soul of Down East in 't, and things farther East,
 As far as the threshold of morning, at least,
 Where awaits the fair dawn of the simple
 and true,
 Of the day that comes slowly to make all things new.
 'T has a smack of pine woods, of bare field and bleak hill,
 Such as only the breed of the Mayflower could till;
 The Puritan's shown in it, tough to the core,
 Such as prayed, smiting Agag on red Marston Moor:
 With an unwilling humor, half choked by the drouth
 In brown hollows about the inhospitable
 mouth;
 With a soul full of poetry, though it has qualms
 About finding a happiness out of the Psalms;
 Full of tenderness, too, though it shrinks in the dark, Hamadryad-like, under the coarse, saggy bark;
 That sees visions, knows wrestlings of God with the Will,
 And has its own Sinais and thunderings
 still."

Here, "Forgive me, Apollo," I cried,
 "while I pour
 My heart out to my birthplace: O loved more and more
 Dear Baystate, from whose rocky bosom thy sons
 Should suck milk, strong-will-giving, brave, such as runs In the veins of old Greylock — who is it that dares Call thee pedler, a soul wrapped in bank-books and shares?
 It is false! She's a Poet! I see, as I write,
 Along the far railroad the steam-snake glide white,
 The cataract-throb of her mill-hearts I hear,
 The swift strokes of trip-hammers weary my ear,

Sledges ring upon anvils, through logs the saw screams, Blocks swing to their place, beetles drive home the beams: —
 It is songs such as these that she croons to the din
 Of her fast-flying shuttles, year out and year in,
 While from earth's farthest corner there comes not a breeze
 But wafts her the buzz of her gold-gleaning bees:
 What though those horn hands have as yet found small time For painting and sculpture and music and rhyme?
 These will come in due order; the need that pressed sorest
 Was to vanquish the seasons, the ocean, the forest,
 To bridle and harness the rivers, the steam, Making those whirl her mill-wheels, this tug in her team,
 To vassalize old tyrant Winter, and make Him delve surlily for her on river and lake; —
 When this New World was parted, she strove not to shirk
 Her lot in the heirdom, the tough, silent Work,
 The hero-share ever from Herakles down To Odin, the Earth's iron sceptre and
 crown:
 Yes, thou dear, noble Mother! if ever men's praise
 Could be claimed for creating heroical lays, Thou hast won it; if ever the laurel divine Crowned the Maker and Builder, that glory is thine!
 Thy songs are right epic, they tell how this rude Rock-rib of our earth here was tamed and subdued;
 Thou hast written them plain on the face of the planet
 In brave, deathless letters of iron and granite;
 Thou hast printed them deep for all time;
 they are set
 From the same runic type-fount and alphabet
 With thy stout Berkshire hills and the arms of thy Bay, —
 They are staves from the burly old Mayflower lay.

If the drones of the Old World, in querulous ease, Ask thy Art and thy Letters, point proudly to these,
 Or, if they deny these are Letters and Art, Toil on with the same old invincible heart;
 Thou art rearing the pedestal broad-based and grand Whereon the fair shapes of the Artist shall stand,
 And creating, through labors undaunted and long,
 The theme for all Sculpture and Painting and Song!

"But my good mother Baystate wants no praise of mine,
 She learned from her mother a precept divine About something that butters no parsnips, her forte
 In another direction lies, work is her sport (Though she'll curtsy and set her cap straight, that she will,
 If you talk about Plymouth and red Bunker's hill).
 Dear, notable goodwife! by this time of night,
 Her hearth is swept neatly, her fire burning bright,
 And she sits in a chair (of home plan and make) rocking, Musing much, all the while, as she darns on a stocking, Whether turkeys will come pretty high next Thanksgiving, Whether flour'll be so dear, for, as sure as she's living,
 She will use rye-and-injun then, whether the pig
 By this time ain't got pretty tolerable big,
 And whether to sell it outright will be best,
 Or to smoke hams and shoulders and salt down the rest,—
 At this minute, she'd swop all my verses, ah, cruel!
 For the last patent stove that is saving of fuel;
 So I'll just let Apollo go on, for his phiz Shows I've kept him awaiting too long as it is."

"If our friend, there, who seems a reporter, is done

With his burst of emotion, why, I will go on,"
 Said Apollo; some smiled, and, indeed, I must own There was something sarcastic, perhaps, in his tone;—

"There's Holmes, who is matchless among you for wit;
 A Leyden-jar always full-charged, from which flit
 The electrical tingles of hit after hit;
 In long poems 't is painful sometimes, and invites A thought of the way the new Telegraph writes, Which pricks down its little sharp sentences spitefully
 As if you got more than you'd title to rightfully,
 And you find yourself hoping its wild father Lightning Would flame in for a second and give you a fright'ning.
 He has perfect sway of what I call a sham metre,
 But many admire it, the English pentameter,
 And Campbell, I think, wrote most commonly worse,
 With less nerve, swing, and fire in the same kind of verse, Nor e'er achieved aught in 't so worthy of praise
 As the tribute of Holmes to the grand Marseillaise.
 You went crazy last year over Bulwer's New Timon;— Why, if B., to the day of his dying, should rhyme on, Heaping verses on verses and tomes upon tomes,
 He could ne'er reach the best point and vigor of Holmes.
 His are just the fine hands, too, to weave you a lyric Full of fancy, fun, feeling, or spiced with satiric
 In a measure so kindly, you doubt if the toes That are trodden upon are your own or your foes'.

"There is Lowell, who's striving Parnassus to climb

With a whole bale of isms tied together with rhyme,
 He might get on alone, spite of brambles and boulders,
 But he can't with that bundle he has on his shoulders,
 The top of the hill he will ne'er come nigh reaching Till he learns the distinction 'twixt singing and preaching;
 His lyre has some chords that would ring pretty well,
 But he'd rather by half make a drum of the shell,
 And rattle away till he's old as Methusalem,
 At the head of a march to the last new Jerusalem.

"There goes Halleck, whose Fanny's a pseudo Don Juan, With the wickedness out that gave salt to the true one,
 He's a wit, though, I hear, of the very first order,
 And once made a pun on the words soft Recorder;
 More than this, he's a very great poet, I'm told,
 And has had his works published in crimson
 and gold,
 With something they call 'Illustrations,' to wit,
 Like those with which Chapman obscured Holy Writ,¹ Which are said to illustrate, because, as I view it,
 Like lucus a non, they precisely don't do it; Let a man who can write what himself understands Keep clear, if he can, of designing men's
 hands,
 Who bury the sense, if there's any worth having,
 And then very honestly call it engraving.
 But, to quit badinage, which there is n't much wit in,
 Halleck's better, I doubt not, than all he has written;
 In his verse a clear glimpse you will frequently find,
 If not of a great, of a fortunate mind,
 Which contrives to be true to its natural loves

In a world of back-offices, ledgers, and stoves.
 When his heart breaks away from the brokers and banks,
 And kneels in his own private shrine to give thanks,
 There's a genial manliness in him that earns
 Our sincerest respect (read, for instance, his 'Burns'), And we can't but regret (seek excuse where we may)
 That so much of a man has been peddled
 away.

"But what's that? a mass-meeting?
 No, there come in lots
 The American Bulwers, Disraelis, and Scotts,
 And in short the American everything elses, Each charging the others with envies and jealousies;—
 By the way, 't is a fact that displays what profusions
 Of all kinds of greatness bless free institutions,
 That while the Old World has produced barely eight
 Of such poets as all men agree to call great,
 And of other great characters hardly a score (One might safely say less than that rather than more),
 With you every year a whole crop is begotten,
 They're as much of a staple as corn is, or cotton;
 Why, there's scarcely a huddle of log-huts and shanties
 That has not brought forth its own Miltons
 and Dantes;
 I myself know ten Byrons, one Coleridge, three Shelleys,
 Two Raphaels, six Titians (I think), one Apelles,
 Leonardos and Rubenses plenty as lichens, One (but that one is plenty) American Dickens,
 A whole flock of Lambs, any number of Tennysons,— In short, if a man has the luck to have any sons,
 He may feel pretty certain that one out of twain
 Will be some very great person over again

¹ (Cuts rightly called wooden, as all must admit.)

There is one inconvenience in all this, which lies In the fact that by contrast we estimate size,¹
 And, where there are none except Titans, great stature Is only the normal proceeding of nature.
 What puff the strained sails of your praise will you furl at, if The calmest degree that you know is superlative?
 At Rome, all whom Charon took into his wherry must,
 As a matter of course, be well issimust and errimust,
 A Greek, too, could feel, while in that famous boat he tost,
 That his friends would take care he was ιστοσ and ωτατοσ,
 And formerly we, as through graveyards we past, Thought the world went from bad to worst fearfully fast;
 Let us glance for a moment, 't is well worth the pains,
 And note what an average graveyard contains;
 There lie levellers levelled, duns done up themselves,
 There are booksellers finally laid on their shelves, Horizontally there lie upright politicians, Dose-a-dose with their patients sleep faultless physicians,
 There are slave-drivers quietly whipped under ground,
 There bookbinders, done up in boards, are fast bound,
 There card-players wait till the last trump be played,
 There all the choice spirits get finally laid,
 There the babe that's unborn is supplied with a berth,
 There men without legs get their six feet of earth,
 There lawyers repose, each wrapped up in his case,
 There seekers of office are sure of a place,
 There defendant and plaintiff get equally cast, There shoemakers quietly stick to the last,

There brokers at length become silent as stocks,
 There stage-drivers sleep without quitting their box,
 And so forth and so forth and so forth and so on,
 With this kind of stuff one might endlessly go on;
 To come to the point, I may safely assert you Will find in each yard every cardinal virtue;¹
 Each has six truest patriots: four discoverers of ether, Who never had thought on 't nor mentioned it either;
 Ten poets, the greatest who ever wrote rhyme:
 Two hundred and forty first men of their time:
 One person whose portrait just gave the least hint
 Its original had a most horrible squint:
 One critic, most (what do they call it?) reflective,
 Who never had used the phrase ob- or subjective:
 Forty fathers of Freedom, of whom twenty bred Their sons for the rice-swamps, at so much a head,
 And their daughters for — faugh! thirty mothers of Gracchi:
 Non-resistants who gave many a spiritual blackeye:
 Eight true friends of their kind, one of whom was a jailer:
 Four captains almost as astounding as Taylor:
 Two dozen of Italy's exiles who shoot us his Kaisership daily, stern pen-and-ink Brutuses,
 Who, in Yankee back-parlors, with crucified smile,² Mount serenely their country's funereal pile: Ninety-nine Irish heroes, ferocious rebels
 'Gainst the Saxon in cis-marine garrets and cellars, Who shake their dread fists o'er the sea and all that, —

¹ That is in most cases we do, but not all, Past a doubt, there are men who are innately small,
 Such as Blank, who, without being 'minished a title, Might stand for a type of the Absolute Little.

¹ (And at this just conclusion will surely arrive, That the goodness of earth is more dead than alive.)
² Not forgetting their tea and their toast, though, the while.

As long as a copper drops into the hat:
 Nine hundred Teutonic republicans stark From Vaterland's battle just won—in the Park,
 Who the happy profession of martyrdom take Whenever it gives them a chance at a steak:
 Sixty-two second Washingtons: two or three Jacksons:
 And so many everythings-else that it racks one's Poor memory too much to continue the list,
 Especially now they no longer exist;—
 I would merely observe that you've taken to giving The puffs that belong to the dead to the living,
 And that somehow your trump-of-contemporary-doom's tones
 Is tuned after old dedications and tombstones."

Here the critic came in and a thistle presented —¹
 From a frown to a smile the god's features relented,
 As he stared at his envoy, who, swelling with pride,
 To the god's asking look, nothing daunted, replied,—
 "You're surprised, I suppose, I was absent so long;
 But your godship respecting the lilies was
 wrong;
 I hunted the garden from one end to t'other,
 And got no reward but vexation and bother, Till, tossed out with weeds in a corner to wither,
 This one lily I found and made haste to bring hither."

"Did he think I had given him a book to review?
 I ought to have known what the fellow would do," Muttered Phœbus aside, "for a thistle will pass Beyond doubt for the queen of all flowers with an ass;

He has chosen in just the same way as he'd choose
 His specimens out of the books he reviews;
 And now, as this offers an excellent text, I'll give 'em some brief hints on criticism next."
 So, musing a moment, he turned to the crowd,
 And, clearing his voice, spoke as follows aloud:—

"My friends, in the happier days of the
 muse,
 We were luckily free from such things as reviews;
 Then naught came between with its fog to make clearer
 The heart of the poet to that of his hearer; Then the poet brought heaven to the people, and they Felt that they, too, were poets in hearing his lay;
 Then the poet was prophet, the past in his soul Precreated the future, both parts of one whole;
 Then for him there was nothing too great or too small,
 For one natural deity sanctified all;
 Then the bard owned no clipper and meter of moods
 Save the spirit of silence that hovers and broods
 O'er the seas and the mountains, the rivers and woods;
 He asked not earth's verdict, forgetting the clods,
 His soul soared and sang to an audience of
 gods;
 'T was for them that he measured the thought and the line, And shaped for their vision the perfect design,
 With as glorious a foresight, a balance as
 true,
 As swung out the worlds in the infinite blue;
 Then a glory and greatness invested man's
 heart,
 The universal, which now stands estranged and apart,
 In the free individual moulded, was Art; Then the forms of the Artist seemed thrilled with desire For something as yet unattained, fuller, higher,

¹ Turn back now to page—goodness only knows what,
 And take a fresh hold on the thread of my plot.

As once with her lips, lifted hands, and eyes listening,
 And her whole upward soul in her countenance glistening,
 Eurydice stood — like a beacon unfired, Which, once touched with flame, will leap heav'nward inspired —
 And waited with answering kindle to mark The first gleam of Orpheus that pained the red Dark.
 Then painting, song, sculpture did more than relieve
 The need that men feel to create and believe,
 And as, in all beauty, who listens with love Hears these words oft repeated — 'beyond and above,'
 So these seemed to be but the visible sign Of the grasp of the soul after things more
 divine;
 They were ladders the Artist erected to climb
 O'er the narrow horizon of space and of
 time,
 And we see there the footsteps by which men had gained To the one rapturous glimpse of the never-attained,
 As shepherds could erst sometimes trace in the sod
 The last spurning print of a sky-cleaving
 god.

"But now, on the poet's dis-privacied moods
 With do this and do that the pert critic intrudes;
 While he thinks he's been barely fulfilling his duty
 To interpret 'twixt men and their own sense of beauty,
 And has striven, while others sought honor or pelf,
 To make his kind happy as he was himself,
 He finds he's been guilty of horrid offences
 In all kinds of moods, numbers, genders, and tenses;
 He's been ob and subjective, what Kettle calls Pot,
 Precisely, at all events, what he ought not,
You have done this, says one judge; done that, says another;
You should have done this, grumbles one; that,
 says t' other;

Never mind what he touches, one shrieks out Taboo!
 And while he is wondering what he shall do, Since each suggests opposite topics for
 song,
 They all shout together you're right! and you're wrong!

"Nature fits all her children with something to do,
 He who would write and can't write can surely review,
 Can set up a small booth as critic and sell us his Petty conceit and his pettier jealousies; Thus a lawyer's apprentice, just out of his teens,
 Will do for the Jeffrey of six magazines; Having read Johnson's lives of the poets half through,
 There's nothing on earth he's not competent to;
 He reviews with as much nonchalance as he whistles, —
 He goes through a book and just picks out the thistles;
 It matters not whether he blame or commend,
 If he's bad as a foe, he's far worse as a friend:
 Let an author but write what's above his poor scope,
 He goes to work gravely and twists up a rope,
 And, inviting the world to see punishment
 done,
 Hangs himself up to bleach in the wind and the sun;
 'T is delightful to see, when a man comes along
 Who has anything in him peculiar and
 strong,
 Every cockboat that swims clear its fierce (pop) gundeck at him,
 And make as he passes its ludicrous Peck at him — "

Here Miranda came up and began, "As to that —"
 Apollo at once seized his gloves, cane, and
 hat,
 And, seeing the place getting rapidly cleared,
 I too snatched my notes and forthwith disappeared.

THE UNHAPPY LOT OF MR. KNOTT

PART I

SHOWING HOW HE BUILT HIS HOUSE AND HIS WIFE MOVED INTO IT

MY worthy friend, A. Gordon Knott,
From business snug withdrawn,
Was much contented with a lot
That would contain a Tudor cot
'Twixt twelve feet square of garden-plot,
And twelve feet more of lawn.

He had laid business on the shelf
To give his taste expansion,
And, since no man, retired with pelf,
The building mania can shun, Knott, being middle-aged himself, Resolved to build (unhappy elf!)
A mediæval mausion.

He called an architect in counsel;
"I want," said he, "a — you know
what,
(You are a builder, I am Knott,) A thing complete from chimney-pot Down to the very grounsel;
Here's a half-acre of good laud;
Just have it nicely mapped and planned And make your workmen drive on;
Meadow there is, and upland too,
And I should like a water-view,
D' you think you could contrive one?
(Perhaps the pump and trough would do,

If painted a judicious blue?)
The woodland I've attended to;"
[He meant three pines stuck up askew, Two dead ones and a live one.]

"A pocket-full of rocks 't would take To build a house of freestone, But then it is not hard to make What nowadays is the stone;
The cunning painter in a trice
Your house's outside petrifies,
And people think it very gneiss Without inquiring deeper;
My money never shall be thrown Away on such a deal of stone, When stone of deal is cheaper."

And so the greenest of antiques Was reared for Knott to dwell in:
The architect worked hard for weeks In venting all his private peaks Upon the roof, whose crop of leaks Had satisfied Fluellen; Whatever anybody had
Out of the common, good or bad, Knott had it all worked well in;
A donjon-keep, where clothes might dry,
A porter's lodge that was a sty,
A campanile slim and high,
Too small to hang a bell in;
All up and down and here and there, With Lord-knows-whats of round and square
Stuck on at random everywhere, —
It was a house to make one stare,
All corners and all gables;
Like dogs let loose upon a bear,
Ten emulous styles staboyed with care,
The whole among them seemed to tear,
And all the oddities to spare
Were set upon the stables.

Knott was delighted with a pile Approved by fashion's leaders:
(Only he made the builder smile,
By asking every little while,
Why that was called the Twodoor style, Which certainly had three doors?) Yet better for this luckless man
If he had put a downright ban
Upon the thing in limine;
For, though to quit affairs his plan, Ere many days, poor Knott began Perforce accepting draughts, that ran All ways — except up chimney;
The house, though painted stone to mock,
With nice white lines round every block,
Some trepidation stood in,
When tempests (with petrific shock, So to speak,) made it really rock, Though not a whit less wooden;
And painted stone, how'er well done,
Will not take in the prodigal sun Whose beams are never quite at one With our terrestrial lumber;
So the wood shrank around the knots,

And gaped in disconcerting spots,
And there were lots of dots and rots
And crannies without number, Wherethrough, as you may well presume,
The wind, like water through a flume, Came rushing in ecstatic, Leaving, in all three floors, no room
That was not a rheumatic;
And, what with points and squares and rounds
Grown shaky on their poises,
The house at nights was full of pounds, Thumps, bumps, creaks, scratchings, raps — till — “Zounds!”
Cried Knott, “this goes beyond all bounds;
I do not deal in tongues and sounds, Nor have I let my house and grounds
To a family of Noyeses!”

But, though Knott's house was full of airs,

He had but one, — a daughter;
And, as he owned much stocks and shares,
Many who wished to render theirs
Such vain, unsatisfying cares,
And needed wives to sew their tears,
In matrimony sought her;
They vowed her gold they wanted not,
Their faith would never falter,
They longed to tie this single Knott In the Hymeneal halter;
So daily at the door they rang, Cards for the belle delivering,
Or in the choir at her they sang, Achieving such a rapturous twang
As set her nerves ashivering.

Now Knott had quite made up his mind That Colonel Jones should have her;
No beauty he, but oft we find Sweet kernels 'neath a roughish rind, So hoped his Jenny'd be resigned
And make no more palaver;
Glanced at the fact that love was blind,
That girls were ratherish inclined To pet their little crosses, Then nosologically defined
The rate at which the system pined In those unfortunates who dined Upon that metaphoric kind Of dish — their own proboscis.

But she, with many tears and moans, Besought him not to mock her,
Said 't was too much for flesh and bones

To marry mortgages and loans,
That fathers' hearts were stocks and stones,
And that she'd go, when Mrs. Jones,

To Davy Jones's locker;
Then gave her head a little toss That said as plain as ever was,
If men are always at a loss Mere womankind to bridle —
To try the thing on woman cross
Were fifty times as idle;
For she a strict resolve had made And registered in private,
That either she would die a maid,
Or else be Mrs. Doctor Slade,
If woman could contrive it;
And, though the wedding-day was set, Jenny was more so, rather,
Declaring, in a pretty pet,
That, howsoever they spread their net,
She would out-Jennyrall them yet,
The colonel and her father.

Just at this time the Public's eyes Were keenly on the watch, a stir Beginning slowly to arise About those questions and replies, Those raps that unwrapped mysteries
So rapidly at Rochester, And Knott, already nervous grown By lying much awake alone,
And listening, sometimes to a moan,
And sometimes to a clatter, Whene'er the wind at night would rouse
The gingerbread-work on his house,
Or when some hasty-tempered mouse, Behind the plastering, made a towse
About a family matter,
Began to wonder if his wife,
A paralytic half her life,
Which made it more surprising,
Might not to rule him from her urn,
Have taken a peripatetic turn
For want of exorcising.

This thought, once nestled in his head, Erelong contagious grew, and spread Infecting all his mind with dread, Until at last he lay in bed
And heard his wife, with well-known tread, Entering the kitchen through the shed, (Or was 't his fancy, mocking?) Opening the pantry, cutting bread, And then (she'd been some ten years dead)
Closets and drawers unlocking;

Or, in his room (his breath grew thick)
 He heard the long-familiar click Of slender needles flying quick,
 As if she knit a stocking;
 For whom? — he prayed that years might flit

With pains rheumatic shooting, Before those ghostly things she knit Upon his unfleshed sole might fit,
 He did not fancy it a bit,
 To stand upon that footing;
 At other times, his frightened hairs Above the bedclothes trusting,
 He heard her, full of household cares, (No dream entrapped in supper's snares,
 The foal of horrible nightmares,
 But broad awake, as he declares,) Go bustling up and down the stairs,
 Or setting back last evening's chairs,
 Or with the poker thrusting
 The raked-up sea-coal's hardened crust — And — what! impossible! it must!
 He knew she had returned to dust,
 And yet could scarce his senses trust, Hearing her as she poked and fussed
 About the parlor, dusting!

Night after night he strove to sleep And take his ease in spite of it;
 But still his flesh would chill and creep, And, though two night-lamps he might keep,

He could not so make light of it.
 At last, quite desperate, he goes
 And tells his neighbors all his woes, Which did but their amount enhance;
 They made such mockery of his fears That soon his days were of all jeers,

His nights of the rueful countenance;
 "I thought most folks," one neighbor
 said,
 "Gave up the ghost when they were dead?"

Another gravely shook his head, Adding, "From all we hear, it's Quite plain poor Knott is going mad —
 For how can he at once be sad

And think he's full of spirits?"
 A third declared he knew a knife

Would cut this Knott much quicker,
 "The surest way to end all strife,
 And lay the spirit of a wife,
 Is just to take and lick her!"

A temperance man caught up the word,
 "Ah yes," he groaned, "I've always heard

Our poor friend somewhat slanted Tow'rd taking liquor overmuch;
 I fear these spirits may be Dutch, (A sort of gins, or something such,)
 With which his house is haunted;
 I see the thing as clear as light, —
 If Knott would give up getting tight, Naught farther would be wanted:"
 So all his neighbors stood aloof
 And, that the spirits 'neath his roof Were not entirely up to proof, Unanimously granted.

Knott knew that cocks and sprites were foes,

And so bought up, Heaven only knows How many, for he wanted crows
 To give ghosts caws, as I suppose,
 To think that day was breaking;
 Moreover what he called his park,
 He turned into a kind of ark
 For dogs, because a little bark Is a good tonic in the dark,

If one is given to waking;
 But things went on from bad to worse,
 His curs were nothing but a curse,
 And, what was still more shocking, Foul ghosts of living fowl made scoff And would not think of going off
 In spite of all his cocking.

Shanghais, Bucks-counties, Dominiques, Malays (that did n't lay for weeks,)

Polanders, Bantams, Dorkings, (Waiving the cost, no trifling ill, Since each brought in his little bill,) By day or night were never still,
 But every thought of rest would kill

With cacklings and with quorkings; Henry the Eighth of wives got free

By a way he had of axing;
 But poor Knott's Tudor henery Was not so fortunate, and he Still found his trouble waxing;

 As for the dogs, the rows they made,
 And how they howled, snarled, barked and bayed,

Beyond all human knowledge is;
 All night, as wide awake as gnats,
 The terriers rumpused after rats,
 Or, just for practice, taught their brats
 To worry cast-off shoes and hats,
 The bull-dogs settled private spats,
 All chased imaginary cats,
 Or raved behind the fence's slats

At real ones, or, from their mats,
 With friends, miles off, held pleasant chats,
 Or, like some folks in white cravats, Contemptuous of sharps and flats,
 Sat up and sang dogsologies.
 Meanwhile the cats set up a squall,
 And, safe upon the garden-wall,
 All night kept eat-a-walling,
 As if the feline race were all,
 In one wild cataleptic sprawl,
 Into love's tortures falling.

PART II

SHOWING WHAT IS MEANT BY A FLOW OF SPIRITS

At first the ghosts were somewhat shy, Coming when none but Knott was nigh,
 And people said 't was all their eye, (Or rather his) a flam, the sly

Digestion's machination:
 Some recommended a wet sheet,
 Some a nice broth of pounded pent,
 Some a cold flat-iron to the feet,
 Some a decoction of lamb's-bleat,
 Some a southwesterly grain of wheat;
 Meat was by some pronounced unmeet, Others thought fish most indiscreet,
 And that 't was worse than all to eat
 Of vegetables, sour or sweet.
 (Except, perhaps, the skin of beet.)

In such a concatenation:
 One quack his button gently plucks
 And murmurs, "Biliary ducks!"
 Says Knott, "I never ate one;"
 But all, though brimming full of wrath, Homœo, Allo, Hydropath,
 Concurred in this—that t' other's path

To death's door was the straight one.
 Still, spite of medical advice,
 The ghosts came thicker, and a spice
 Of mischief grew apparent;

Nor did they only come at night,
 But seemed to fancy broad daylight, Till Knott, in horror and affright,
 His unoffending hair rent;

Whene'er with handkerchief on lap,
 He made his elbow-chair a trap,
 To catch an after-dinner nap, The spirits, always on the tap,
 Would make a sudden rap, rap, rap,
 The half-spun cord of sleep to suap,

(And what is life without its nap But threadbareness and mere mishap?)
 As 't were with a percussion cap

The trouble's climax capping;
 It seemed a party dried and grim
 Of mummies had come to visit him, Each getting off from every limb
 Its multitudinous wrapping; Scratchings sometimes the walls ran round,
 The merest penny-weights of sound; Sometimes 't was only by the pound

They carried on their dealing,
 A thumping 'neath the parlor floor, Thump-bump-thump-bumping o'er and o'er,
 As if the vegetables in store (Quiet and orderly before)

Were all together peeling;
 You would have thought the thing was done

By the spirit of some son of a gun,
 And that a forty-two-pounder,
 Or that the ghost which made such sounds Could be none other than John Pounds, Of Ragged Schools the founder.

Through three gradations of affright,
 The awful noises reached their height;

At first they knocked nocturnally, Then, for some reason, changing quite,
 (As mourners, after six months' flight, Turn suddenly from dark to light.)

Began to knock diurnally,
 And last, combining all their stocks, (Scotland was ne'er so full of Knox,)

Into one Chaos (father of Nox), Nocte pluit—they showered knocks,
 And knocked, knocked, knocked, eternally;

Ever upon the go, like buoys, (Wooden sea-urchins,) all Knott's joys, They turned to troubles and a noise
 That preyed on him internally.

Soon they grew wider in their scope;
 Whenever Knott a door would ope,
 It would ope not, or else elope And fly back (curbless as a trope Once started down a stanza's slope
 By a bard that gave it too much rope—)

Like a clap of thunder slamming;
 And, when kind Jenny brought his hat, (She always, when he walked, did that,) Just as upon his head it sat,
 Submitting to his settling pat,
 Some unseen hand would jam it flat,
 Or give it such a furious bat

That eyes and nose went cramming Up out of sight, and consequently,
As when in life it paddled free,
His beaver caused much damning;
If these things seem o'erstrained to be,
Read the account of Doctor Dee,
'T is in our college library;
Read Wesley's circumstantial plea,
And Mrs. Crowe, more like a bee, Sucking the nightshade's honeyed fee,
And Stilling's Pneumatology; Consult Scot, Glanvil, grave Wierus, and both Mathers; further see, Webster, Casaubon, James First's treatise, a right royal Q. E. D.

Writ with the moon in perigee, Bodin de la Demonomanie — (Accent that last line gingerly)
All full of learning as the sea Of fishes, and all disagree, Save in Sathanas apage!
Or, what will surely put a flea In unbelieving ears — with glee, Out of a paper (sent to me
By some friend who forgot to P...
A... Y... — I use cryptography Lest I his vengeful pen should dree — His P...O...S...T...A...G...E...)

Things to the same effect I cut,
About the tantrums of a ghost,
Not more than three weeks since, at most,
Near Stratford, in Connecticut.

Knott's Upas daily spread its roots, Sent up on all sides livelier shoots,
And bore more pestilential fruits;
The ghosts behaved like downright brutes,
They snipped holes in his Sunday suits, Practised all night on octave flutes,
Put peas (not peace) into his boots,

Whereof grew corns in season, They scotched his sheets, and, what was worse,

Stuck his silk nightcap full of burrs,
Till he, in language plain and terse, (But much unlike a Bible verse,)

Swore he should lose his reason.

The tables took to spinning, too, Perpetual yarns, and arm-chairs grew To prophets and apostles;

One footstool vowed that only he
Of law and gospel held the key,
That teachers of whate'er degree To whom opinion bows the knee

Were n't fit to teach Truth's a b c, And were (the whole lot) to a T
Mere fogies all and fossils;
A teapoy, late the property Of Knox's Aunt Keziah, (Whom Jenny most irreverently Had nicknamed her aunt-tipathy) With tips emphatic claimed to be The prophet Jeremiah;
The tins upon the kitchen-wall,
Turned tintinnabulators all,
And things that used to come at call For simple household services Began to hop and whirl and prance, Fit to put out of countenance
The Commis and Grisettes of France Or Turkey's dancing Dervises.

Of course such doings, far and wide,
With rumors filled the country-side,
And (as it is our nation's pride
To think a Truth not verified Till with majorities allied)

Parties sprung up, affirmed, denied,
And candidates with questions plied,
Who, like the circus-riders, tried At once both hobbies to bestride,
And each with his opponent vied
In being inexplicit.

Earnest inquirers multiplied;
Folks, whose tenth cousins lately died, Wrote letters long, and Knott replied;
All who could either walk or ride Gathered to wonder or deride,
And paid the house a visit;
Horses were to his pine-trees tied,
Mourners in every corner sighed,
Widows brought children there that cried, Swarms of lean Seekers, eager-eyed, (People Knott never could abide,) Into each hole and cranny pried
With strings of questions cut and dried From the Devont Inquirer's Guide, For the wise spirits to decide —

As, for example, is it True that the damned are fried or boiled?
Was the Earth's axis greased or oiled?
Who cleaned the moon when it was soiled?
How baldness might be cured or foiled?
How heal diseased potatoes?
Did spirits have the sense of smell?
Where would departed spinsters dwell?
If the late Zenas Smith were well?
If Earth were solid or a shell?

Were spirits fond of Doctor Fell?
 Did the bull toll Cook-Robin's knell?
 What remedy would bugs expel?
 If Paine's invention were a sell?
 Did spirits by Webster's system spell?
 Was it a sin to be a belle?
 Did dancing sentence folks to hell?
 If so, then where most torture fell?
 On little toes or great toes?
 If life's true seat were in the brain?
 Did Ensign mean to marry Jane?
 By whom, in fact, was Morgan slain?
 Could matter ever suffer pain?
 What would take out a cherry-stain?
 Who picked the pocket of Seth Crane,
 Of Waldo precinct, State of Maine?
 Was Sir John Franklin sought in vain?
 Did primitive Christians ever train?
 What was the family-name of Cain?
 Them spoons, were they by Betty ta'en?
 Would earth-worm poultice cure a sprain?
 Was Socrates so dreadful plain?
 What teamster guided Charles's wain?
 Was Uncle Ethan mad or sane,
 And could his will in force remain?
 If not, what counsel to retain?
 Did Le Sage steal Gil Blas from Spain?
 Was Junius writ by Thomas Paine?
 Were ducks discomforted by rain?
 How did Britannia rule the main?
 Was Jonas coming back again?
 Was vital truth upon the wane?
 Did ghosts, to scare folks, drag a chain?
 Who was our Huldah's chosen swain?
 Did none have teeth pulled without payin', Ere ether was invented?
 Whether mankind would not agree,
 If the universe were tuned in C?
 What was it ailed Lucindy's knee?
 Whether folks eat folks in Feejee?
 Whether his name would end with T?
 If Saturn's rings were two or three,
 And what bump in Phrenology
 They truly represented?
 These problems dark, wherein they groped, Wherewith man's reason vainly coped,
 Now that the spirit-world was oped,
 In all humility they hoped Would be resolved instantly;
 Each of the miscellaneous rout Brought his, or her, own little doubt,
 And wished to pump the spirits out, Through his or her own private spout,
 Into his or her decanter.

PART III

WHEREIN IT IS SHOWN THAT THE MOST ARDENT SPIRITS ARE MORE ORNA-MENTAL THAN USEFUL

Many a speculating wight Came by express-trains, day and night,
 To see if Knott would "sell his right," Meaning to make the ghosts a sight —
 What they call a "meenaygerie;"
 One threatened, if he would not "trade,"
 His run of custom to invade, (He could not these sharp folks persuade That he was not, in some way, paid.)
 And stamp him as a plagiarist,
 By coming down, at one fell swoop,
 With THE ORIGINAL KNOCKING TROUPE, Come recently from Hades,
 Who (for a quarter-dollar heard)
 Would ne'er rap out a hasty word Whence any blame might be incurred From the most fastidious ladies;
 The late lamented Jesse Soule,
 To stir the ghosts up with a pole
 And be director of the whole,
 Who was engaged the rather For the rare merits he'd combine, Having been in the spirit line,
 Which trade he only did resign,
 With general applause, to shine,
 Awful in mail of cotton fine,
 As ghost of Hamlet's father!
 Another a fair plan reveals Never yet hit on, which, he feels,
 To Knott's religious sense appeals —
 "We'll have your house set up on wheels,
 A speculation pious;
 For music, we can shortly find A barrel-organ that will grind Psalm-tunes — an instrument designed For the New England tour — refined From secular drosses, and inclined To an unworldly turn, (combined With no sectarian bias;)
 Then, travelling by stages slow, Under the style of Knott & Co., I would accompany the show
 As moral lecturer, the foe Of Rationalism; while you could throw The rappings in, and make them go Strict Puritan principles, you know, (How do you make 'em? with your toe?)

And the receipts which thence might flow,

We could divide between us;
Still more attractions to combine, Beside these services of mine,
I will throw in a very fine (It would do nicely for a sign)

Original Titian's Venus."
Another offered handsome fees
If Knott would get Demosthenes (Nay, his mere knuckles, for more ease)

To rap a few short sentences;
Or if, for want of proper keys,
His Greek might make confusion,

Then just to get a rap from Burke,
To recommend a little work

On Public Elocution.
Meanwhile, the spirits made replies

To all the reverent whats and whys, Resolving doubts of every size,
And giving seekers grave and wise,
Who came to know their destinies,

A rap-turous reception;
When unbelievers void of grace Came to investigate the place, (Creatures of Sadduceistic race, With grovelling intellects and base,)
They could not find the slightest trace

To indicate deception;
Indeed, it is declared by some That spirits (of this sort) are glum, Almost, or wholly, deaf and dumb,
And (out of self-respect) quite mum
To skeptic natures cold and numb, Who of this kind of Kingdom Come

Have not a just conception:
True, there were people who demurred That, though the raps no doubt were heard

Both under them and o'er them, Yet, somehow, when a search they made,
They found Miss Jenny sore afraid, Or Jenny's lover, Doctor Slade, Equally awestruck and dismayed,
Or Deborah, the chambermaid, Whose terrors not to be gainsaid
In laughs hysteric were displayed,

Was always there before them;
This had its due effect with some Who straight departed, muttering, Hum!

Transparent hoax! and Gammon!
But these were few: believing souls,
Come, day by day, in larger shoals,
As the ancients to the windy holes
'Neath Delphi's tripod brought their doles, Or to the shrine of Ammon.

The spirits seemed exceeding tame, Call whom you fancied, and he came;
The shades august of eldest fame

You summoned with an awful ease;
As grosser spirits gurgled out From chair and table with a spout, In Auerbach's cellar once, to flout
The senses of the rabble rout, Where'er the gimlet twirled about

Of cunning Mephistopheles,
So did these spirits seem in store,
Behind the wainscot or the door,
Ready to thrill the being's core Of every enterprising bore

With their astounding glamour; Whatever ghost one wished to hear,
By strange coincidence, was near To make the past or future clear

(Sometimes in shocking grammar)
By raps and taps, now there, now here —
It seemed as if the spirit queer Of some departed auctioneer
Were doomed to practise by the year

With the spirit of his hammer:
Whate'er you asked was answered, yet One could not very deeply get Into the obliging spirits' debt, Because they used the alphabet

In all communications,
And new revealings (though sublime)
Rapped out, one letter at a time,

With boggles, hesitations, Stoppings, beginnings o'er again,
And getting matters into train,
Could hardly overload the brain

With too excessive rations, Since just to ask if two and two Really make four? or, How d'ye do?
And get the fit replies thereto

In the tramundane rat-tat-too, Might ask a whole day's patience.

'T was strange ('mongst other things) to find

In what odd sets the ghosts combined,

Happy forthwith to thump any Piece of intelligence inspired,
The truth whereof had been inquired

By some one of the company;
For instance, Fielding, Mirabeau, Orator Henley, Cicero, Paley, John Ziska, Marivaux, Melancthon, Robertson, Junot, Scaliger, Chesterfield, Rousseau, Hakluyt, Boccaccio, South, De Foe,

Diaz, Josephus, Richard Roe, Odin, Arminius, Charles le gros, Tiresias, the late James Crow, Casabianca, Grose, Prideaux,
 Old Grimes, Young Norval, Swift, Brissot, Maimonides, the Chevalier D'O, Socrates, Fénelon, Job, Stow,
 The inventor of Elixir pro,
 Euripides, Spinoza, Poe, Confucius, Hiram Smith, and Fo, Came (as it seemed, somewhat de trop)
 With a disembodied Esquimaux,
 To say that it was so and so,

With Franklin's expedition;
 One testified to ice and snow,
 One that the mercury was low,
 One that his progress was quite slow,
 One that he much desired to go,
 One that the cook had frozen his toe, (Dissented from by Dandolo, Wordsworth, Cynaegirus, Boileau, La Houtan, and Sir Thomas Roe,)
 One saw twelve white bears in a row,
 One saw eleven and a crow,
 With other things we could not know (Of great statistic value, though.) By our mere mortal vision.

Sometimes the spirits made mistakes,
 And seemed to play at ducks and drakes With bold inquiry's heaviest stakes
 In science or in mystery;
 They knew so little (and that wrong)
 Yet rapped it out so bold and strong,
 One would have said the unnumbered
 throng

Had been Professors of History; What made it odder was, that those Who, you would naturally suppose, Could solve a question, if they chose,
 As easily as count their toes,

Were just the ones that blundered;
 One day, Ulysses happening down,
 A reader of Sir Thomas Browne And who (with him) had wondered What song it was the Sirens sang, Asked the shrewd Ithacan — bang! bang!
 With this response the chamber rang,
 "I guess it was Old Hundred."
 And Franklin, being asked to name
 The reason why the lightning came, Replied, "Because it thundered."

On one sole point the ghosts agreed,
 One fearful point, than which, indeed,

Nothing could seem absurder;
 Poor Colonel Jones they all abused And finally downright accused

The poor old man of murder;
 'T was thus; by dreadful raps was shown Some spirit's longing to make known A bloody fact, which he alone Was privy to, (such ghosts more prone In Earth's affairs to meddle are;)
 Who are you? with awe-stricken looks,
 All ask: his airy knuckles he crooks,
 And raps, "I was Eliab Snooks,

That used to be a pedler;
 Some on ye still are on my books!"
 Whereat, to inconspicuous nooks;
 (More fearing this than common spooks,)

Shrank each indebted meddler;
 Further the vengeful ghost declared That while his earthly life was spared,
 About the country he had fared,

A duly licensed follower Of that much-wandering trade that wins

Slow profit from the sale of tins
 And various kinds of hollow-ware; That Colonel Jones enticed him in, Pretending that he wanted tin,
 There slew him with a rolling-pin,
 Hid him in a potato-bin,

And (the same night) him ferried Across Great Pond to t' other shore,
 And there, on land of Widow Moore, Just where you turn to Larkin's store,

Under a rock him buried;
 Some friends (who happened to be by)
 He called upon to testify
 That what he said was not a lie,

And that he did not stir this Foul matter, out of any spite
 But from a simple love of right;—

Which statements the Nine Worthies, Rabbi Akiba, Charlemagne, Seth, Colley Cibber, General Wayne, Cambyses, Tasso, Tubal-Cain,
 The owner of a castle in Spain, Jehanghire, and the Widow of Nain, (The friends aforesaid,) made more plain

And by loud raps attested;
 To the same purport testified Plato, John Wilkes, and Colonel Pride
 Who knew said Snooks before he died,

Had in his wares invested, Thought him entitled to belief And freely could concur, in brief, In everything the rest did.

Eliab this occasion seized, (Distinctly here the spirit sneezed,) To say that he should ne'er be eased Till Jenny married whom she pleased, Free from all cheeks and urgin's, (This spirit dropt his final g's)
 And that, unless Knott quickly sees This done, the spirits to appease,
 They would come back his life to tease,
 As thick as mites in ancient cheese,
 And let his house on an endless lease To the ghosts (terrific rappers these And veritable Eumenides)

Of the Eleven Thousand Virgins !

Knott was perplexed and shook his head,
 He did not wish his child to wed

With a suspected murderer, (For, true or false, the rumor spread,) But as for this roiled life he led,
 "It would not answer," so he said,
 "To have it go no furdurer."

At last, scarce knowing what it meant, Reluctantly he gave consent That Jenny, since 't was evident That she would follow her own bent,

Should make her own election;
 For that appeared the only way
 These frightful noises to allay Which had already turned him gray And plunged him in dejection.

Accordingly, this artless maid
 Her father's ordinance obeyed,
 And, all in whitest crape arrayed, (Miss Pulsifer the dresses made And wishes here the fact displayed That she still carries on the trade, The third door south from Bagg's Arcade,) A very faint "I do" essayed
 And gave her hand to Hiram Slade, From which time forth, the ghosts were laid,

And ne'er gave trouble after;
 But the Selectmen, be it known,
 Dug underneath the aforesaid stone, Where the poor pedler's corpse was thrown,

And found thereunder a jaw-bone,
 Though, when the crowner sat thereon,
 He nothing hatched, except alone

Successive broods of laughter;
 It was a frail and dingy thing,
 In which a grinder or two did cling,

In color like molasses,
 Which surgeons, called from far and wide,
 Upon the horror to decide,

Having put on their glasses, Reported thus: "To judge by looks, These bones, by some queer hooks or crooks,

May have belonged to Mr. Snooks,
 But, as men deepest-read in books Are perfectly aware, bones, If buried fifty years or so,
 Lose their identity and grow
 From human bones to bare bones."

Still, if to Jaalam you go down, You'll find two parties in the town,
 One headed by Benaiah Brown,
 And one by Perez Tinkham;
 The first believe the ghosts all through And vow that they shall never rue The happy chance by which they knew That people in Jupiter are blue,
 And very fond of Irish stew,
 Two curious facts which Prince Lee Boo Rapped clearly to a chosen few —

Whereas the others think 'em
 A trick got up by Doctor Slade With Deborah the chambermaid
 And that sly cretur Jinny.
 That all the revelations wise,
 At which the Brownites made big eyes, Might have been given by Jared Keyes,

A natural fool and ninny,
 And, last week, did n't Eliab Snooks Come back with never better looks,
 As sharp as new-bought mackerel hooks,
 And bright as a new pin, eh ?

Good Parson Wilbur, too, avers (Though to be mixed in parish stirs Is worse than handling chestnut-burrs)
 That no case to his mind occurs Where spirits ever did converse,
 Save in a kind of guttural Erse, (So say the best authorities;)

And that a charge by raps conveyed Should be most scrupulously weighed

And searched into, before it is Made public, since it may give pain That cannot soon be cured again,
 And one word may infix a stain

Which ten cannot gloss over, Though speaking for his private part,
 He is rejoiced with all his heart

Miss Knott missed not her lover.

FRAGMENTS OF AN UNFINISHED POEM

In the note introducing Fitz Adam's Story, infra p. 411, will be found a brief account of the unfinished poem of which this is a fragment.

I AM a man of forty, sirs, a native of East Haddam,
And have some reason to surmise that I descend from Adam;
But what's my pedigree to you? That I will soon unravel; I've sucked my Haddam-Eden dry, therefore desire to travel,
And, as a natural consequence, presume I need n't say,
I wish to write some letters home and have those letters p—[I spare the word suggestive of those grim Next Morns that mount Clump, Clump, the stairways of the brain with — "Sir, my small account," And, after every good we gain — Love, Fame, Wealth, Wisdom — still,
As punctual as a cuckoo clock, hold up their little bill,
The garçons in our Café of Life, by dreaming us forgot — Sitting, like Homer's heroes, full and musing God knows what, — Till they say, bowing, S'il vous plait, voila, Messieurs, la note!] I would not hint at this so soon, but in our callous day,
The tollman Debt, who drops his bar across the world's highway, Great Caesar in mid-march would stop, if Caesar could not pay; Pilgriming's dearer than it was: men cannot travel now Scot-free from Dan to Beersheba upon a simple vow; Nay, as long back as Bess's time, when Walsingham went over Ambassador to Cousin France, at Canterbury and Dover
He was so fleeced by innkeepers that, ere he quitted land,
He wrote to the Prime Minister to take the knaves in hand.
If I with staff and scallop-shell should try my way to win, Would Bonifaces quarrel as to who should take me in?

Or would my pilgrim's progress end where Bunyan started his on,
And my grand tour be round and round the backyard of a prison?
I give you here a saying deep and therefore, haply true;
'T is out of Merlin's prophecies, but quite as good as new:
The question both for men and meates longe boyaes ht beginne Thee in a noteshell, rather thane thee in a case of tinne.
But, though men may not travel now, as in the Middle Ages,
With self-sustaining retinues of little gilt-edged pages, Yet one may manage pleasantly, where'er he likes to roam,
By sending his small pages (at so much per small page) home;
And if a staff and scallop-shell won't serve so well as then,
Our outlay is about as small — just paper, ink, and pen.
Be thankful! Humbugs never die, more than the wandering Jew; Bankrupt, they publish their own deaths, slink for a while from view, Then take an alias, change the sign, and the old trade renew;
Indeed, 't is wondrous how each Age, though laughing at the Past, Insists on having its tight shoe made on the same old last;
How it is sure its system would break up at once without The union which it will believe hereditary gout;
How it takes all its swans for geese, nay, stranger yet and sadder, Sees in its treadmill's fruitless jog a heavenward Jacob's-ladder, Shouts, Lo, the Shining Heights are reached!
One moment more aspire!
Trots into cramps its poor, dear legs, gets never an inch the higher,
And like the others, ends with pipe and mug beside the fire.

There, 'tween each doze, it whiffs and sips and watches with a sneer

The green recruits that trudge and sweat where it had swinked whilere,

And sighs to think this soon spent zeal should be in simple truth

The only interval between old Foggyhood and Youth:

"Well," thus it muses, "well, what odds ?

'T is not for us to warn;

'T will be the same when we are dead, and was ere we were born;

Without the Treadmill, too, how grind our store of winter's corn ?

Had we no stock, nor twelve per cent. received from Treadmill shares,

We might . . . but these poor devils at last will get our easy-chairs.

High aims and hopes have great rewards, they, too, serene and snug,

Shall one day have their soothing pipe and their enlivening mug;

From Adam, empty-handed Youth hath always heard the hum

Of Good Times Coming, and will hear until the last day come;

Young ears hear forward, old ones back, and, while the earth rolls on,

Full-handed Eld shall hear recede the steps of Good Times Gone;

Ah what a cackle we set up whene'er an egg was laid !

Cack-cack-cack-cackle ! rang around, the scratch for worms was stayed,

Cut-cut-ca-dah-cut ! from this egg the coming cock shall stalk !

The great New Era dawns, the age of Deeds and not of Talk !

And every stupid hen of us hugged close his egg of chalk,

Thought, — sure, I feel life stir within, each day with greater strength,

When lo, the chick ! from former chicks
he differed not a jot,

But grew and crew and scratched and went, like those before, to pot !

So muse the dim Emeriti, and, mournful though it be,

I must confess a kindred thought hath sometimes come to me,

Who, though but just of forty turned, have heard the rumor of fame

Of nine and ninety Coming Men, all — coming till they came.

Pure Mephistopheles all this ? the vulgar nature jeers ?

Good friend, while I was writing it, my eyes were dim with tears;

Thrice happy he who cannot see, or who his eyes can shut,

Life's deepest sorrow is contained in that small word there — But !

We're pretty nearly crazy here with change and go ahead,

With flinging our caught bird away for two i' th' bush instead,

With butting 'gainst the wall which we declare shall be a portal,

And questioning Deeps that never yet have oped their lips to mortal;

We're growing pale and hollow-eyed, and out of all condition,

With mediums and prophetic chairs, and crickets with a mission,

(The most astounding oracles since Ba-laam's donkey spoke, —

'T would seem our furniture was all of Dodonean oak.)

Make but the public laugh, be sure 't will take you to be somebody;

'T will wrench its button from your clutch, my densely earnest glum body;

'T is good, this noble earnestness, good in its place, but why

Make great Achilles' shield the pan to bake a penny pie ?

Why, when we have a kitchen-range, insist that we shall stop,

And bore clear down to central fires to broil our daily chop ?

Excalibur and Durandart are swords of price, but then

Why draw them sternly when you wish to trim your nails or pen ?

Small gulf between the ape and man; you bridge it with your staff;

But it will be impassable until the ape can laugh; —

No, no, be common now and then, be sensible, be funny,

And, as Siberians bait their traps for bears with pots of honey,

From which ere they'll withdraw their snouts, they'll suffer many a club-lick,

So bait your moral figure-of-fours to catch the Orson public.

Look how the dead leaves melt their way down through deep-drifted snow; They take the sun-warmth down with them — pearls could not conquer so;
 There is a moral here, you see; if you would preach, you must Steep all your truths in sunshine would you have them pierce the crust; Brave Jeremiah, you are grand and terrible, a sign
 And wonder, but were never quite a popular divine;
 Fancy the figure you would cut among the nuts and wine!
 I, on occasion, too, could preach, but hold it wiser far
 To give the public sermons it will take with its cigar,
 And morals fugitive, and vague as are these smoke-wreaths light In which . . . I trace . . . a . . . let me see — bless me! 't is out of sight.
 There are some goodish things at sea; for instance, one can feel A grandeur in the silent man forever at the wheel,
 That bit of two-legged intellect, that particle of drill,
 Who the huge floundering hulk inspires with reason, brain, and will,
 And makes the ship, though skies are black and headwinds whistle loud, Obey her conscience there which feels the loadstar through the cloud;
 And when by lusty western gales the full-sailed barque is hurled, Towards the great moon which, setting on the silent underworld, Rounds luridly up to look on ours, and shoots a broadening line, Of palpitant light from crest to crest across the ridgy brine, Then from the bows look back and feel a thrill that never stales, In that full-bosomed, swan-white pomp of onward-yearning sails; Ah, when dear cousin Bull laments that you can't make a poem, Take him aboard a clipper-ship, young Jonathan, and show him
 A work of art that in its grace and grandeur may compare With any thing that any race has fashioned any where;

'T is not a statue, grumbles John; nay, if you come to that,
 We think of Hyde Park Corner, and concede you beat us flat With your equestrian statue to a Nose and a Cocked hat;
 But 't is not a cathedral; well, e'en that we will allow,
 Both statues and cathedrals are anachronistic now;
 Your minsters, coz, the monuments of men who conquered you, You'd sell a bargain, if we'd take the deans and chapters too;
 No; mortal men build nowadays, as always heretofore,
 Good temples to the gods which they in very truth adore;
 The shepherds of this Broker Age, with all their willing flocks, Although they bow to stones no more, do bend the knee to stocks, And churches can't be beautiful though crowded, floor and gallery, If people worship preacher, and if preacher worship salary;
 'T is well to look things in the face, the god
 o' the modern universe, Hermes, cares naught for halls of art and libraries of puny verse, If they don't sell, he notes them thus upon his ledger — say, per Contra to a loss of so much stone, best Russia duck and paper;
 And, after all, about this Art men talk a deal of fudge, Each nation has its path marked out, from which it must not budge;
 The Romans had as little art as Noah in his ark, Yet somehow on this globe contrived to make an epic mark; Religion, painting, sculpture, song — for these they ran up jolly ticks With Greece and Egypt, but they were great artists in their politics, And if we make no minsters, John, nor epics, yet the Fates Are not entirely deaf to men who can build ships and states;
 The arts are never pioneers, but men have strength and health Who, called on suddenly, can improvise a commonwealth,

Nay, can more easily go on and frame them by the dozen,
Than you can make a dinner-speech, dear sympathizing cousin:
And, though our restless Jonathan have not your graver bent, sure he Does represent this hand-to-mouth, pert, rapid, nineteenth century;
This is the Age of Scramble; men move faster than they did When they pried up the imperial Past's deep-dusted coffin-lid, Searching for scrolls of precedent; the wireleashed lightning now Replaces Delphos—men don't leave the steamer for the scow; What public, were they new to-day, would ever stop to read The Iliad, the Shanàmeh, or the Nibelungenlied?

Their public's gone, the artist Greek, the lettered Shah, the hairy Graf—Folio and plesiosaur sleep well; we weary o'er a paragraph;
The mind moves planet-like no more, it fizzes, cracks, and bustles; From end to end with journals dry the land o'ershadowed rustles,
As with dead leaves a winter-beech, and, with their breath-roused jars Amused, we care not if they hide the eternal skies and stars;
Down to the general level of the Board of Brokers sinking,
The Age takes in the newspapers, or, to say sooth unshrinking,
The newspapers take in the Age, and stocks do all the thinking.

AN ORIENTAL APOLOGUE

SOMEWHERE in India, upon a time, (Read it not Injah, or you spoil the verse.) There dwelt two saints whose privilege sublime
It was to sit and watch the world grow
worse,
Their only care (in that delicious clime)
At proper intervals to pray and curse; Pracrit the dialect each prudent brother Used for himself, Damnonian for the other.

One half the time of each was spent in praying
For blessings on his own unworthy head,
The other half in fearfully portraying Where certain folks would go when they were dead;
This system of exchanges—there's no saying
To what more solid barter 't would have led,
But that a river, vexed with boils and swellings
At rainy times, kept peace between their dwellings.

So they two played at wordy battledore
And kept a curse forever in the air, Flying this way or that from shore to
shore;

Nor other labor did this holy pair, Clothed and supported from the lavish
store
Which crowds lanigerous brought with daily care;
They toiled not, neither did they spin;
their bias
Was tow'rd the harder task of being pious.

Each from his hut rushed six score times a day,
Like a great canon of the Church full-rammed
With cartridge theologic, (so to say,) Touched himself off, and then, recoiling, slammed
His hovel's door behind him in a way That to his foe said plainly,—you'll be damned;
And so like Potts and Wainwright, shrill and strong
The two D——D'd each other all day
long.

One was a dancing Dervise, a Mohammedan,
The other was a Hindoo, a gymnosophist;
One kept his whatd'yecallit and his Ramadan,

Laughing to scorn the sacred rites and laws of his

Transfluvial rival, who, in turn, called Ahmed an Old top, and, as a clincher, shook across a fist

With nails six inches long, yet lifted
not

His eyes from off his navel's mystic knot.

"Who whirls not round six thousand times an hour

Will go," screamed Ahmed, "to the evil
place;

May he eat dirt, and may the dog and Giaour

Defile the graves of him and all his race; Allah loves faithful souls and gives them
power

To spin till they are purple in the face; Some folks get you know what, but he that pure is Earns Paradise and ninety thousand houries."

"Upon the silver mountain, South by East,

Sits Brahma fed upon the sacred bean; He loves those men whose nails are still increased,

Who all their lives keep ugly, foul, and lean;

'Tis of his grace that not a bird or beast Adorned with claws like mine was ever seen;

The suns and stars are Brahma's thoughts divine,

Even as these trees I seem to see are mine."

"Thou seem'st to see, indeed!" roared Ahmed back;

"Were I but once across this plaguy
stream,

With a stout sapling in my hand, one whack

On those lank ribs would rid thee of that dream!

Thy Brahma-blasphemy is ipecac To my soul's stomach; couldst thou grasp the scheme

Of true redemption, thou wouldst know that Deity

Whirls by a kind of blessed spontaneity.

"And this it is which keeps our earth here going

With all the stars." — "Oh, vile! but there's a place

Prepared for such; to think of Brahma throwing

Worlds like a juggler's balls up into Space!

Why, not so much as a smooth lotos blowing

Is e'er allowed that silence to efface

Which broods round Brahma, and our earth, 't is known,

Rests on a tortoise, moveless as this
stone."

So they kept up their banning amœbæan, When suddenly came floating down the stream

A youth whose face like an incarnate pæan

Glowed, 't was so full of grandeur and of gleam;

"If there be gods, then, doubtless, this must be one,"

Thought both at once, and then began to scream,

"Surely, whate'er immortals know, thou knowest,

Decide between us twain before thou goest!"

The youth was drifting in a slim canoe
Most like a huge white water-lily's petal,

But neither of our theologians knew

Whereof 't was made; whether of heavenly metal

Seldseen, or of a vast pearl split in two And hollowed, was a point they could not settle;

'T was good debate-seed, though, and bore large fruit

In after years of many a tart dispute.

There were no wings upon the stranger's
shoulders,

And yet he seemed so capable of rising

That, had he soared like thistledown,
beholders

Had thought the circumstance noways surprising;

Enough that he remained, and, when the solders

Hailed him as umpire in their vocal prize-ring,

The painter of his boat he lightly threw Around a lotos-stem, and brought her to.

The strange youth had a look as if he might

Have trod far planets where the atmosphere (Of nobler temper) steeps the face with
light,

Just as our skins are tanned and freckled
here;

His air was that of a cosmopolite
In the wide universe from sphere to sphere;

Perhaps he was (his face had such grave beauty)

An officer of Saturn's guards off duty.

Both saints began to unfold their tales at once,

Both wished their tales, like simial ones, prehensile,

That they might seize his ear; fool!
knave! and dunce!

Flew zigzag back and forth, like strokes of pencil

In a child's fingers; voluble as duns, They jabbered like the stones on that immense hill

In the Arabian Nights; until the stranger Began to think his ear-drums in some danger.

In general those who nothing have to say Contrive to spend the longest time in doing
it;

They turn and vary it in every way, Hashing it, stewing it, mincing it, ragouting
it;

Sometimes they keep it purposely at bay,
Then let it slip to be again pursuing it;

They drone it, groan it, whisper it and shout it,

Refute it, flout it, swear to't, prove it, doubt it.

Our saints had practised for some thirty years;

Their talk, beginning with a single stem, Spread like a banyan, sending down live piers,

Colonies of digression, and, in them, Germs of yet new dispersion; once by the
ears,

They could convey damnation in a hem,
And blow the pinch of premise-priming off Long syllogistic batteries, with a cough.

Each had a theory that the human ear A providential tunnel was, which led To a huge vacuum (and surely here They showed some knowledge of the general head,)

For cant to be decanted through, a mere Auricular canal or mill-race fed

All day and night, in sunshine and in shower,

From their vast heads of milk-and-waterpower.

The present being a peculiar case,
Each with unwonted zeal the other scouted,

Put his spurred hobby through its every pace,

Pished, pshawed, poohed, horribled, bahed, jeered, sneered, flouted,

Sniffed, nonsensed, infideled, fudged, with his face

Looked scorn too nicely shaded to be shouted,

And, with each inch of person and of vesture,

Contrived to hint some most disdainful gesture.

At length, when their breath's end was come about,

And both could now and then just gasp
"impostor!"

Holding their heads thrust menacingly
out,

As staggering cocks keep up their fighting posture,

The stranger smiled and said, "Beyond a doubt

'T is fortunate, my friends, that you have lost your

United parts of speech, or it had been Impossible for me to get between.

"Produce! says Nature, — what have you produced?"

A new strait-waistcoat for the human mind;
Are you not limbed, nerved, jointed, arteried, juiced,

As other men? yet, faithless to your
kind,

Rather like noxious insects you are used To puncture life's fair fruit, beneath the rind

Laying your creed-eggs, whence in time there spring

Consumers new to eat and buzz and sting.

"Work! you have no conception how 't will sweeten
Your views of Life and Nature, God and
Man;
Had you been forced to earn what you have eaten,
Your heaven had shown a less dyspeptic plan;
At present your whole function is to eat
ten
And talk ten times as rapidly as you can;
Were your shape true to cosmogonic laws,
You would be nothing but a pair of jaws.

"Of all the useless beings in creation The earth could spare most easily you bakers
Of little clay gods, formed in shape and fashion
Precisely in the image of their makers; Why, it would almost move a saint to passion,
To see these blind and deaf, the hourly breakers
Of God's own image in their brother
men,
Set themselves up to tell the how, where,
when,

"Of God's existence; one's digestion's
worse —
So makes a god of vengeance and of blood; Another, — but no matter, they reverse Creation's plan, out of their own vile mud Pat up a god, and burn, drown, hang, or curse
Whoever worships not; each keeps his stud Of texts which wait with saddle on and bridle
To hunt down atheists to their ugly idol.

"This, I perceive, has been your occupation;
You should have been more usefully employed;
All men are bound to earn their daily ration,
Where States make not that primal contract void
By cramps and limits; simple devastation Is the worm's task, and what he has destroyed
His monument; creating is man's work And that, too, something more than mist and murk."

So having said, the youth was seen no
more,
And straightway our sage Brahmin, the philosopher, Cried, "That was aimed at thee, thou endless bore,
Idle and useless as the growth of moss over A rotting tree-trunk!" "I would square that score Full soon," replied the Dervise, "could I cross over And catch thee by the beard. Thy nails I'd trim
And make thee work, as was advised by
him."

"Work? Am I not at work from morn-till night
Sounding the deeps of oracles umbilical Which for man's guidance never come to
light,
With all their various aptitudes, until I call?"

"And I, do I not twirl from left to right For conscience' sake? Is that no work?
Thou silly gull,
He had thee in his eye; 't was Gabriel Sent to reward my faith, I know him
well."

"'T was Vishnu, thou vile whirligig!" and so
The good old quarrel was begun anew;
One would have sworn the sky was black as sloe,
Had but the other dared to call it blue; Nor were the followers who fed them slow
To treat each other with their curses, too, Each hating t' other (moves it tears or laughter?)
Because he thought him sure of hell hereafter.

At last some genius built a bridge of boats
Over the stream, and Ahmed's zealots filed Across, upon a mission to (cut throats And) spread religion pure and undefiled; They sowed the propagandist's wildest oats,
Cutting off all, down to the smallest child, And came back, giving thanks for such fat mercies,
To find their harvest gone past prayers or curses.

All gone except their saint's religious hops,

Which ne kept up with more than common flourish;

But these, however satisfying crops

For the inner man, were not enough to nourish

The body politic, which quickly drops

Reserve in such sad junctures, and turns currish;

So Ahmed soon got cursed for all the famine

Where'er the popular voice could edge a damn in.

At first he pledged a miracle quite boldly, And, for a day or two, they growled and waited;

But, finding that this kind of manna coldly

Sat on their stomachs, they erelong berated
The saint for still persisting in that old lie,

Till soon the whole machine of saintship grated,

Ran slow, creaked, stopped, and, wishing him in Tophet,

They gathered strength enough to stone the prophet.

Some stronger ones contrived (by eating leather,

Their weaker friends, and one thing or another)

The winter months of scarcity to weather;

Among these was the late saint's younger brother,

Who, in the spring, collecting them together,

Persuaded them that Ahmed's holy pother Had wrought in their behalf, and that the place

Of Saint should be continued to his race.

Accordingly, 't was settled on the spot

That Allah favored that peculiar breed; Beside, as all were satisfied, 't would not

Be quite respectable to have the need Of public spiritual food forgot;

And so the tribe, with proper forms, decreed

That he, and, failing him, his next of kin,

Forever for the people's good should spin.

THE BIGLOW PAPERS

FIRST SERIES

In a letter, June 16, 1846, to Mr. Sydney Howard Gay, then editor of the Anti-Slavery Standard, Lowell wrote: "I mean to send all the poems I write (on whatever subject) first to the Standard, except such arrows as I may deem it better to shoot from the ambushment of the Courier, because the old enemy offers me a fairer mark from that quarter. . . . You will find a squib of mine in this week's Courier. I wish it to continue anonymous, for I wish slavery to think it has as many enemies as possible. If I may judge from the number of persons who have asked me if I wrote it, I have struck the old hulk of the Public between wind and water." This was the first of the Biglow Papers. The scheme of anonymity was preserved through the first series, and as Lowell wrote forty years later to Thomas Hughes (Letters, II. 334): "I had great fun out of it. I have often wished that I could have had a literary nom de guerre, and kept my own to myself. I should n't have cared a doit what happened to him." But as appears from the letter given above, the satire was readily fathered on Lowell, and many of the subsequent papers were published in the Standard. "As for Hosea," he wrote to his friend Mr. Charles F. Briggs, November 13, 1847, "I am sorry that I began by making him such a detestable speller. There is no fun in bad spelling of itself, but only where the misspelling suggests something else which is droll per se. You see I am getting him out of it gradually. I mean to altogether. Parson Wilbur is about to propose a subscription for fitting him for college, and has already commenced his education. Perhaps you like the last best, because it is more personal and has therefore more directness of purpose. But I confess I think that Birdofredom's attempt to explain the Anglo-Saxon theory is the best thing yet, except Parson Wilbur's letter in the Courier of last Saturday." The series ran at intervals for about eighteen months, when the papers were collected into a volume. Lowell's letters, written when he was busy over the equipment of the book, show him in high spirits over his jeu d'esprit. "I am going," he writes to Mr. Briggs, "to indulge all my fun in a volume of H. Biglow's verses which I am preparing, and which I shall edit under the character of the Rev. Mr. Wilbur. I hope you saw Mr. B.'s last production, which I consider his best hitherto. I am going to include in the volume an essay of the reverend gentleman on the Yankee dialect, and on dialects in general, and on everything else, and also an attempt at a complete natural history of the Humbug—which I think I shall write in Latin. The book will purport to be published at Jaalam (Mr. B.'s native place), and will be printed on brownish paper, with those little head and tail-pieces which used to adorn our earlier publications—such as hives, scrolls, urns, and the like."

This was written on the last day of the year 1847, but it was not until September of the next year that the actual volume got under way; for meanwhile Lowell's original design had been modified, and he turned the fun he had been devising for the volume of mock poetry into the collection of his Biglow Papers. The essay on the Yankee dialect by Mr. Wilbur was included, but it was not till the second series was published, nearly twenty years later, that there appeared the scholarly introduction, not now as a piece of affected pedantry, but as the serious and delightful study of the author delivered in his own voice.

At the beginning of September, 1848, Lowell wrote to Mr. Gay: "I am as busy as I can be with Mr. Biglow's poems, of which I have got between twenty and thirty pages already printed. It is the hardest book to print that ever I had anything to do with, and what with corrections and Mr. Wilbur's annotations, keeps me more employed than I care to be." Later in the same month he wrote to the same correspondent that he was "wearied out with Mr. Biglow and his tiresome (though wholly respectable) friend Mr. Wilbur." His notes continue to show the pressure under which he worked until the book was published, the middle of November. The first edition (1500) was gone in a week, and the book and its author became famous.

A little more than ten years afterward an English edition was to appear, and Thomas Hughes, who had it in charge, wrote to Lowell asking for a new preface. The answer, a portion of which is here given, is interesting as showing how the book appeared as a whole to its author when he was in the midst of his University service and had made a name for himself as scholar and critic as well as poet.

MY DEAR SIR:—I have put off from time to time writing to you, because I hardly knew what to write. To say simply that I liked your writings would have been pleasant enough (though that would have given me no claim upon you that was not shared by all the world), but I find it particularly hard to write anything about a book of my own. It has been a particular satisfaction to me to hear, now and then, some friendly voice from the old mother-island say "Well done" of the Biglow Papers; for, to say the truth, I like them myself, and when I was reading them over for a new edition, a year or two ago, could not help laughing. But then as I laughed I found myself asking, "Are these yours? How did you make them?" Friendly people say to me sometimes, "Write us more Biglow Papers," and I have even been simple enough to try, only to find that I could not. This has helped to persuade me that the book was a genuine growth, and not a manufacture, and that, therefore, I had an honest right to be pleased without blushing if people liked it. But then, this very fact makes it rather hard to write an introduction to it. All I can say is that the book was thar; how it came is more than I can tell. I cannot, like the great Goethe, deliberately imagine what would have been a proper Entstehungsweise for my book, and then assume it as a fact. And as for an historical preface, I find that quite as hard after now twelve years of more cloistered interests and studies that have alienated me very much from contemporary politics. I only know that I believed our war with Mexico (though we had as just ground for it as a strong nation ever has against a weak one) to be essentially a war of false pretences, and that it would result in widening the boundaries and so prolonging the life of slavery. Believing that it is the manifest destiny of the English race to occupy this whole continent, and to display there that practical understanding in matters of government and colonization which no other race has given such proof of possessing since the Romans, I hated to see a noble hope evaporated into a lying phrase to sweeten the foul breath of demagogues. Leaving the sin of it to God, I believed, and still believe, that slavery is the Achilles-heel of our polity; that it is a temporary and false supremacy of the white races, sure to destroy that supremacy at last, because an enslaved people always prove themselves of more enduring fibre than their enslavers, as not suffering from the social vices sure to be engendered by oppression in the governing class. Against these and many other things I thought all honest men should protest. I was born and bred in the country, and the dialect was homely to me. I tried my first Biglow paper in a newspaper, and found that it had a great run. So I wrote the others from time to time during the year which followed, always very rapidly, and sometimes (as with "What Mr. Robinson thinks") at one sitting.

When I came to collect them and publish them in a volume, I conceived my parson-editor, with his pedantry and verbosity, his amiable vanity and superiority to the verses he was editing, as a fitting artistic background and foil. It gave me the chance, too, of glancing obliquely at many things which were beyond the horizon of my other characters. I was told afterwards that my Parson Wilbur was only Jedediah Cleishbotham over again, and I dare say it may be so; but I drew him from the life as well as I could, and for the authentic reasons I have mentioned. I confess that I am proud of the recognition the book has received in England, because it seems to prove that, despite its intense provincialism, there is a general truth to human nature in it which justifies its having been written.

NOTICES OF AN INDEPENDENT PRESS

[I HAVE observed, reader (bene- or malevolent, as it may happen), that it is customary to append to the second editions of books, and to the second works of authors, short sentences commendatory of the first, under the title of Notices of the Press. These, I have been given to understand, are procurable at certain established rates, payment being made either in money or advertising patronage by the publisher, or by an adequate outlay of servility on the part of the author. Considering these things with myself, and also that such notices are neither intended, nor generally believed, to convey any real opinions, being a purely ceremonial accompaniment of literature, and resembling certificates to the virtues of various moribiferal panaceas, I conceived that it would be not only more economical to prepare a sufficient number of such myself, but also more immediately subservient to the end in view to prefix them to this our primary edition rather than to await the contingency of a second, when they would seem to be of small utility. To delay attaching the bobs until the second attempt at flying the kite would indicate but a slender experience in that useful art. Neither has it escaped my notice, nor failed to afford me matter of reflection, that, when a circus or a caravan is about to visit Jaalam, the initial step is to send forward large and highly ornamented bills of performance, to be hung in the bar-room and the

But life is too short to write about one's self in, and you see that I cannot make a suitable preface. I would rather have something of this kind: "It could not but be gratifying to the writer of the Biglow Papers that Mr. Trübner should deem it worth his while to publish an edition of them in England. It gives him a particular pleasure that the author of Tom Brown's School Days should have consented to see the work through the press, for the remarkable favor with which that work was received on both sides of the Atlantic proved that all speakers of the English tongue, however differing in other respects, agree wholly in their admiration for soundness of head and heart and manliness of character."

Now do not think this is "Buncombe."

The first series as here given retains the elaborate apparatus attached to the poem, in the order given in the book when first published by George Nichols, Cambridge.

post-office. These having been sufficiently gazed at, and beginning to lose their attractiveness except for the flies, and, truly, the boys also (in whom I find it impossible to repress, even during school-hours, certain oral and telegraphic communications concerning the expected show), upon some fine morning the band enters in a gayly painted wagon, or triumphal chariot, and with noisy advertisement, by means of brass, wood, and sheepskin, makes the circuit of our startled village streets. Then, as the exciting sounds draw nearer and nearer, do I desiderate those eyes of Aristarchus, "whose looks were as a breeching to a boy." Then do I perceive, with vain regret of wasted opportunities, the advantage of a pancratic or pantechnic education, since he is most revered by my little subjects who can throw the cleanest sumerset or walk most securely upon the revolving cask. The story of the Pied Piper becomes for the first time credible to me (albeit confirmed by the Hameliners dating their legal instruments from the period of his exit), as I behold how those strains, without pretence of magical potency, bewitch the pupillary legs, nor leave to the pedagogic an entire self-control. For these reasons, lest my kingly prerogative should suffer diminution, I prorogue my restless commons, whom I follow into the street, chiefly lest some mischief may chance befall them. After the manner of such a band, I send forward the following notices of domestic manufacture, to make brazen proclamation, not unconscious of the advantage which will accrue.

if our little craft, cymbula subtilis, shall seem to leave port with a clipping breeze, and to carry, in nautical phrase, a bone in her mouth. Nevertheless, I have chosen, as being more equitable, to prepare some also sufficiently oburgatory, that readers of every taste may find a dish to their palate. I have modelled them upon actually existing specimens, preserved in my own cabinet of natural curiosities. One, in particular, I had copied with tolerable exactness from a notice of one of my own discourses, which, from its superior tone and appearance of vast experience, I concluded to have been written by a man at least three hundred years of age, though I recollected no existing instance of such antediluvian longevity. Nevertheless, I afterwards discovered the author to be a young gentleman preparing for the ministry under the direction of one of my brethren in a neighboring town, and whom I had once instinctively corrected in a Latin quantity. But this I have been forced to omit, from its too great length. — H. W.]

From the Universal Literary Universe.

Full of passages which rivet the attention of the reader. . . . Under a rustic garb, sentiments are conveyed which should be committed to the memory and engraven on the heart of every moral and social being. . . . We consider this a unique performance. . . . We hope to see it soon introduced into our common schools. . . . Mr. Wilbur has performed his duties as editor with excellent taste and judgment. . . . This is a vein which we hope to see successfully prosecuted. . . . We hail the appearance of this work as a long stride toward the formation of a purely aboriginal, indigenous, native, and American literature. We rejoice to meet with an author national enough to break away from the slavish deference, too common among us, to English grammar and orthography. . . . Where all is so good, we are at a loss how to make extracts. . . . On the whole, we may call it a volume which no library, pretending to entire completeness, should fail to place upon its shelves.

From the Higginbottomopolis Snapping-turtle.

A collection of the merest balderdash and doggerel that it was ever our bad fortune to lay eyes on. The author is a vulgar buffoon, and the editor a talkative, tedious old fool. We use strong language, but should any of our readers peruse the book, (from which calamity Heaven preserve them!) they will find reasons for it thick as the leaves of Vallumbrozer, or, to use a still more expressive comparison, as the combined heads of author and editor. The work is wretchedly got up. . . . We should like to know how much British gold was pocketed by this libeller of our country and her purest patriots.

From the Oldfogrumville Mentor.

We have not had time to do more than glance through this handsomely printed volume, but the name of its respectable editor, the Rev. Mr. Wilbur, of Jaadani, will afford a sufficient guaranty for the worth of its contents. . . . The paper is white, the type clear, and the volume of a convenient and attractive size. . . . In reading this elegantly executed work, it has seemed to us that a passage or two might have been retrenched with advantage, and that the general style of diction was susceptible of a higher polish. . . . On the whole, we may safely leave the ungrateful task of criticism to the reader. We will barely suggest, that in volumes intended, as this is, for the illustration of a provincial dialect and turns of expression, a dash of humor or satire might be thrown in with advantage. . . . The work is admirably got up. . . . This work will form an appropriate ornament to the centre-table. It is beautifully printed, on paper of an excellent quality.

From the Dekay Bulwark.

We should be wanting in our duty as the conductor of that tremendous engine, a public press, as an American, and as a man, did we allow such an opportunity as is presented to us by "The Biglow Papers" to pass by without entering our earnest protest against such attempts (now, alas! too common) at demoralizing the public sentiment. Under a wretched ~~mask~~ of stupid drollery, slavery, war, the social glass, and, in short, all the valuable and time-honored institutions justly dear to our common humanity and especially to republicans, are made the butt of coarse and senseless ribaldry by this low-minded scribbler. It is time that the respectable and religious portion of our community should be aroused to the alarming inroads of foreign Jacobinism, sansculottism, and infidelity. It is a fearful proof of the wide-spread nature of this contagion, that these secret stabs at religion and virtue are given from under the cloak (credite, poster!) of a clergyman. It is a mournful spectacle indeed to the patriot and Christian to see liberality and new ideas (falsely so called, — they are as old as Eden) invading the sacred precincts of the pulpit. . . . On the whole, we consider this volume as one of the first shocking results which we predicted would spring out of the late French "Revolution" (!).

From the Bungtown Copper and Comprehensive Tocsin (a tryweakly family journal).

Altogether an admirable work. . . . Full of humor, boisterous, but delicate, — of wit withering and scorching, yet combined with a pathos cool as morning dew, — of satire ponderous as the mace of Richard, yet keen as the scymitar of Saladin. . . . A work full of "mountain-mirth," mischievous as Puck, and lightsome as Ariel. . . . We know not whether to admire most the genial, fresh, and discursive concinnity of the author, or his playful fancy, weird imagination, and compass of style, at once both objective and subjective. . . . We might indulge in some criticisms, but, were the author other than he is, he would be a different being. As it is, he has a wonderful pose, which flits from flower to flower, and bears the reader irresistibly along on its eagle pinions (like Ganymede) to the "highest heaven of invention." . . . We love a book so purely objective. . . . Many of his pictures of natural scenery have an extraordinary subjective clearness and fidelity. . . . In fine, we consider this as one of the most extraordinary volumes of this or any age. We know of no English author who could have written it. It is a work to which the proud genius of our country, standing with one foot on the Aroostook and the other on the Rio Grande, and holding up the star-spangled banner amid the wreck of matter and the crush of worlds, may point with bewildering scorn of the punier efforts of enslaved Europe. . . . We hope soon to encounter our author among those higher walks of literature in which he is evidently capable of achieving enduring fame. Already we should be inclined to assign him a high position in the bright galaxy of our American bards.

From the Saltriver Pilot and Flag of Freedom.

A volume in bad grammar and worse taste. . . . While the pieces here collected were confined to their appropriate sphere in the corners of obscure newspapers, we considered them wholly beneath contempt, but, as the author has chosen to come forward in this public manner, he must expect the lash he so richly merits. . . . Contemptible slanders. . . . Vildest Billingsgate. . . . Has raked all the gutters of our language. . . . The most pure, upright, and consistent politicians not safe from his malignant venom. . . . General Cushing comes in for a share of his vile calumnies. . . . The Reverend Homer Wilbur is a disgrace to his cloth. . . .

From the World-Harmonic-Æolian-Attachment.

Speech is silver: silence is golden. No utterance more Orphic than this. While, therefore, as highest author, we reverence him whose works continue heroically unwritten, we have also our hopeful word for those who with pen (from wing of goose loud-cackling, or seraph God-commissioned) record the thing that is revealed. . . . Under mask of quaintest irony, we detect here the deep, storm-tost (nigh ship-wrecked) soul, thunder-scarred, semi-articulate, but ever climbing hopefully toward the peaceful summits of an Infinite Sorrow. . . . Yes, thou poor, forlorn Hosea, with Hebrew fire-flaming soul in thee, for thee also this life of ours has not been without its aspects of heavenliest pity and laughingest mirth. Conceivable enough! Through coarse Thersites-cloak, we have revelation of the heart, wild-glowing, world-clasping, that is in him. Bravely he grapples with the life-problem as it presents itself to him, uncombed, shaggy, careless of the "nicer proprieties," inexpert of "elegant diction," yet with voice audible enough to whoso hath ears, up there on the gravelly side-hills, or down on the splashy, indiarubber-like salt-marshes of native Jaalam. To this soul also the Necessity of Creating somewhat has unveiled its awful front. If not Oedipuses and Electras and Alcestises, then in God's name Birdofredum Sawins! These also shall get born into the world, and fleh (if so need) a Zingali subsistence therein, these lank, omnivorous Yankees of his. He shall paint the Seen, since the Unseen will not sit to him. Yet in him also are Nibelungen-lays, and Iliads, and Ulysses-wanderings, and Divine Comedies, — if only once he could come at them! Therein lies much, nay all; for what truly is this which we name All, but that which we do not possess? . . . Glimpses also are given us of an old father Eze-kiel, not without paternal pride, as is the wont of such. A brown, parchment-hided old man of the geoponie or bucolic species, gray-eyed, we fancy, queued perhaps, with much weather-cunning and plentiful September-gale memories, bidding fair in good time to become the Oldest Inhabitant. After such hasty apparition, he vanishes and is seen no more. . . . Of "Rev. Homer Wilbur, A. M., Pastor of the First Church in Jaalam," we have small care to speak here. Spare touch in him of his Melesigenes namesake, save, haph, the — blindness! A tolerably caliginose, nephelegeretous elderly gentleman, with infinite faculty of sermonizing, muscularized by long practice and excellent digestive apparatus, and, for the rest, well-meaning enough, and with small private illuminations (somewhat talkowy, it is to be feared) of his own. To him, there, "Pastor of the First Church in Jaalam," our Hosea presents himself as a quite inexplicable Sphinx-riddle. A rich poverty of Latin and Greek, — so far is clear enough, even to eyes peering myopic through horn-lensed editorial spectacles, — but naught farther? O purblind, well-meaning, altogether fuscous Melesigenes-Wilbur, there are things in him incommunicable by stroke of birch! Did it ever enter that old bewildered head of thine that there was the Possibility of the Infinite in him? To thee, quite wingless (and even featherless) biped, has not so much even as a dream of wings ever come? "Talented young parishioner"? Among the Arts whereof thou art Magister, does that of seeing happen to be one? Unhappy Artium Magister! Somehow a Nemean lion, fulvous, torrid-eyed, dry-nursed in broad-howling sand-wildernesses of a sufficiently rare spirit-Libya (it may be supposed) has got whelped among the sheep. Already he stands wild-glaring, with feet clutching the ground as with oak-roots, gathering for a Remus-spring over the walls of thy little fold. In Heaven's name, go not near him with that flybite crook of thine! In good time, thou painful preacher, thou wilt go to the appointed place of departed Artillery-Election Sermons, Right-Hands of Fellowship, and Results of Councils, gathered to thy spiritual fathers with much Latin of the Epitaphial sort; thou, too, shalt have thy reward; but on him the Eumenides have looked, not Xantippes of the pit, snake-tressed, finger-threatening, but radiantly calm as on antique gems; for him paws impatient the winged courser of the gods, champing unwelcome bit; him the starry deeps, the empyrean glooms, and far-flashing splendors await.

From the Onion Grove Phoenix.

A talented young townsman of ours, recently returned from a Continental tour, and who is already favorably known to our readers by his sprightly letters from abroad which have graced our columns, called at our office yesterday. We learn from him, that, having enjoyed the distinguished privilege, while in Germany, of an introduction to the celebrated Von Humbug, he took the opportunity to present that eminent man with a copy of the "Biglow Papers." The next morning he received the following note, which he has kindly furnished us for publication. We prefer to print it verbatim, knowing that our readers will readily forgive the few errors into which the illustrious writer has fallen, through ignorance of our language.

"HIGH-WORTHY MISTER !

"I shall also now especially happy starve, because I have more or less a work one those aboriginal Red-Men seen in which have I so deaf an interest ever taken full-worthy on the self shelf with our Gottsched to be upset.

"Pardon my in the English-speech un-practice !
VON HUMBUG."

He also sent with the above note a copy of his famous work on "Cosmetics," to be presented to Mr. Biglow; but this was taken from our friend by the English custom-house officers, probably through a petty national spite. No doubt, it has by this time found its way into the British Museum. We trust this outrage will be exposed in all our American papers. We shall do our best to bring it to the notice of the State Department. Our numerous readers will share in the pleasure we experience at seeing our young and vigorous national literature thus encouragingly patted on the head by this venerable and world-renowned German. We love to see these reciprocations of good-feeling between the different branches of the great Anglo-Saxon race.

[The following genuine "notice" having met my eye, I gladly insert a portion of it here, the more especially as it contains one of Mr. Biglow's poems not elsewhere printed.—H. W.]

From the Jaalam Independent Blunderbuss.

... But, while we lament to see our young townsman thus mingling in the heated contests of party politics, we think we detect in him the presence of talents which, if properly directed, might give an innocent pleasure to many. As a proof that he is competent to the production of other kinds of poetry, we copy for our readers a short fragment of a pastoral by him, the manuscript of which was loaned us by a friend. The title of it is "The Courtin'."

PROEMIUM

LECTORI BENEVOLO S.

Toga scholastica nondum deposita, quum systemata varia entomologica, a viris ejus scientiæ-cultoribus studiosissimis summa diligentia ædificata, penitus indagasset, non fuit quin luctuose omnibus in iis, quamvis aliter laude dignissimis, hiatum magni momenti perciperem. Tunc, nescio quo motu superiore impulsus, aut qua captus dulcedine operis, ad eum implendum (Curtius alter) me solemniter devovi. Nec ab isto labore, δαίμονος imposito, abstinui antequam tractatulum sufficienter inconcinnum lingua vernacula perfecteram. Inde, juveniliter tumefactus, et barathro ineptiæ τῶν βιβλιοπωλῶν (necnon "Publici Legentis") nusquam explorato, me composuisse quod quasi placentas præfervidas (ut sic dicam) homines ingurgitarent credidi. Sed, quum huic et alio bibliopolæ MSS. mea submissem et nihil solidius responsione valde negativa in Musæum meum retulisset, horror ingens atque misericordia, ob crassitudinem Lambertianam in cerebris homunculorum istius muneris cælesti quada ira infixam, me invasere. Exemplo mei solius impensis librum edere decrevi, nihil omnino dubitans quin "Mundus Scientificus" (ut aiunt) crumenam meam ampliter replet. Nullam, attamen, ex agro illo meo parvulo segetem demessui præter gaudium vacuum bene de Republica merendi. Iste panis meus pretiosus super aquas literarias fæculentas præfidenter jactus, quasi Harpyiarum quarundam (scilicet bibliopolarum istorum facinorosorum supradictorum) tactu rancidus, intra perpaucos dies mihi domum rediit. Et, quum ipse tali victu ali non tolerarem, primum in mentem venit pistori (typographo nempe) nihilominus solvendum esse. Animum non idcirco demisi, imo æque ac pueri naviculas suas penes se lino retinent (eo ut e recto cursu delapsas ad ripam retrahant), sic ego Argô meam chartaceam fluctibus laborantem a quasitu velleris aurei, ipse potius tonsus pelleque exutus, mente solida revocavi. Metaphoram ut mutem, boomaran- gam meam a scopo aberrantem retraxi, dum majore vi, occasione ministrante, adversus Fortunam intorquerem. Ast mihi, talia volventi, et, sicut Saturnus ille παίδοβόρος, liberos intellectus mei depascere fidenti, casus miserandus, nec antea inauditus, supervenit. Nam, ut ferunt Scythas pietatis causa et parsimoniæ, parentes suos mortuos devorasse, sic filius hic meus primogenitus, Scythis ipsis minus mansuetus, patrem vivum totum et calcitrantem exsorbere enixus est. Nec tamen hac de causa sobolem meam esurientem exheredavi. Sed famem istam pro valido testimonio virilitatis roborisque potius habui, cibumque ad eam satiandam, salva paterna mea carne, petii. Et quia bilem illam scaturientem ad æs etiam concoquendum idoneam esse estimabam, unde æs alienum, ut minoris pretii, haberem, circumspexi. Rebus ita se habentibus, ab avunculo meo Johanne Doolittle, Armigero, impetravi ut pecunias necessarias suppeditaret, ne opus esset mihi universitatem relinquendi antequam ad gradum primum in artibus pervenissem. Tunc ego, salvum facere patronum meum munificum maxime cupiens, omnes libros primæ editionis operis mei non venditos una cum privilegio in omne ævum ejusdem imprimendi et edendi avunculo meo dicto pigneravi. Ex illo die, atro lapide notando, curæ vociferantes familiæ singulis annis crescentibus eo usque insultabant ut nunquam tam carum pignus e vinculis istis æheneis solvere possem.

Avunculo vero nuper mortuo, quum inter alios consanguineos testamenti ejus lectionem audiendi causa advenissem, erectis auribus verba talia sequentia accepi: "Quoniam persuasum habeo meum dilectum nepotem Homerum, longa et intima rerum angustiarum domi experientia, aptissimum esse qui divitias tueatur, beneficenterque ac prudenter iis divinis creditis utatur, — ergo, motus hisce cogitationibus, exque amore meo in illum magno, do, legoque nepoti caro meo supranominato omnes singularesque istas possessiones nec ponderabiles nec computabiles meas quæ sequuntur, scilicet: quingentos libros quos mihi pigneravit dictus Homerus, anno lucis 1792, cum privilegio edendi et repetendi opus istud 'scientificum' (quod dicunt) suum, si sic elegerit. Tamen D. O. M. precor oculos Homeri nepotis mei ita aperiat eumque moveat, ut libros istos in bibliotheca unius e plurimis castellis suis Hispaniensibus tuto abscondat."

His verbis (vix credibilibus, auditis, cor meum in pectore exsultavit. Deinde, quoniam tractatus Anglice scriptus spem auctoris fefellerat, quippe quum studium Historiæ Naturalis in Republica nostra inter factionis strepitum languescat, Latine versum edere statui, et eo potius quia nescio quomodo disciplina academica et duo diplomata proficiant, nisi quod

NOTE TO TITLE-PAGE

It will not have escaped the attentive eye, that I have, on the title-page, omitted those honorary appendages to the editorial name which not only add greatly to the value of every book, but whet and exacerbate the appetite of the reader. For not only does he surmise that an honorary membership of literary and scientific societies implies a certain amount of necessary distinction on the part of the recipient of such decorations, but he is willing to trust himself more entirely to an author who writes under the fearful responsibility of involving the reputation of such bodies as the S. Archæol. Dahom. or the Acad. Lit. et Scient. Kamtschat. I cannot but think that the early editions of Shakespeare and Milton would have met with more rapid and general acceptance, but for the barrenness of their respective title-pages; and I believe that, even now, a publisher of the works of either of those justly distinguished men would find his account in procuring their admission to the membership of learned bodies on the Continent, — a proceeding no whit more incongruous than the reversal of the judgment against Socrates, when he was already more than twenty centuries beyond the reach of antidotes, and when his memory had acquired a deserved respectability. I conceive that it was a feeling of the importance of this precaution which induced Mr. Locke to style himself "Gent." on the title-page of his Essay, as who should say to his readers that they could receive his metaphysics on the honor of a gentleman.

Nevertheless, finding that, without descending to a smaller size of type than would have been compatible with the dignity of the several societies to be named, I could not compress my intended list within the limits of a single page, and thinking, moreover, that the act would carry with it an air of decorous modesty, I have chosen to take the reader aside, as it were, into my private closet, and there not only exhibit to him the diplomas which I already possess, but also to furnish him with a prophetic vision of those which I may, without undue presumption, hope for, as not beyond the reach of human ambition and attainment. And I am the rather induced to this from the fact that my name has been unaccountably dropped from the last triennial catalogue of our beloved Alma Mater. Whether this is to be attributed to the difficulty of Latinizing any of those honorary adjuncts (with a complete list of which I took care to furnish the proper persons nearly a year beforehand), or whether it had its origin in any more culpable motives, I forbear to consider in this place, the matter being in course of painful investigation. But, however this may be, I felt the omission the more keenly, as I had, in expectation of the new catalogue, enriched the library of the Jaalam Athenæum with the old one then in my possession, by which means it has come about that my children will be deprived of a never-wearying winter evening's amusement in looking out the name of their parent in that distinguished roll. Those harmless innocents had at least committed no — but I forbear, having intrusted my reflections and animadversions on this painful topic to the safe-keeping of my private diary, intended for posthumous publication. I state this fact here, in order that certain nameless individuals, who are, perhaps, overmuch congratulating themselves upon my silence, may know that a rod is in pickle which the vigorous hand of a justly incensed posterity will apply to their memories.

The careful reader will note that, in the list which I have prepared, I have included the names of several Cisatlantic societies to which a place is not commonly assigned in processions of this nature. I have ventured to do this, not only to encourage native ambition and genius, but also because I have never been able to perceive in what way distance (unless we suppose them at the end of a lever) could increase the weight of learned bodies. As far as I have been able to extend my researches among such stuffed specimens as occasionally reach America, I have discovered no generic difference between the antipodal Fogrum Jaalonicum and the F. Americanum sufficiently common in our own immediate neighborhood. Yet, with a becoming deference to the popular belief that distinctions of this sort are enhanced in value by every additional mile they travel, I have intermixed the names of some tolerably distant literary and other associations with the rest.

I add here, also, an advertisement, which, that it may be the more readily understood by those persons especially interested therein, I have written in that curtailed and otherwise maltreated canine Latin, to the writing and reading of which they are accustomed.

INTRODUCTION

WHEN, more than three years ago, my talented young parishioner, Mr. Biglow, came to me and submitted to my animadversions the first of his poems which he intended to commit to the more hazardous trial of a city newspaper, it never so much as entered my imagination to conceive that his productions would ever be gathered into a fair volume, and ushered into the august presence of the reading public by myself. So little are we shortsighted mortals able to predict the event! I confess that there is to me a quite new satisfaction in being associated (though only as sleeping partner) in a book which can stand by itself in an independent unity on the shelves of libraries. For there is always this drawback from the pleasure of printing a sermon, that, whereas the queasy stomach of this generation will not bear a discourse long enough to make a separate volume, those religious and godly-minded children (those Samuels, if I may call them so) of the brain must at first lie buried in an undistinguished heap, and then get such resurrection as is vouchsafed to them, mummy-wrapped with a score of others in a cheap binding, with no other mark of distinction than the word "Miscellaneous" printed upon the back. Far be it from me to claim any credit for the quite unexpected popularity which I am pleased to find these bucolic strains have attained unto. If I know myself, I am measurably free from the itch of vanity; yet I may be allowed to say that I was not backward to recognize in them a certain wild, puckery, acidulous (sometimes even verging toward that point which, in our rustic phrase, is termed shut-eyed) flavor, not wholly unpleasing, nor unwholesome, to palates cloyed with the sugariness of tamed and cultivated fruit. It may be, also, that some touches of my own, here and there, may have led to their wider acceptance, albeit solely from my larger experience of literature and authorship.¹

I was at first inclined to discourage Mr. Biglow's attempts, as knowing that the desire to poetize is one of the diseases naturally incident to adolescence, which, if the fitting remedies be not at once and with a bold hand applied, may become chronic, and render one, who might else have become in due time an ornament of the social circle, a painful object even to nearest friends and relatives. But thinking, on a further experience, that there was a germ of promise in him which required only culture and the pulling up of weeds from about it, I thought it best to set before him the acknowledged examples of English composition in verse, and leave the rest to natural emulation. With this view, I accordingly lent him some volumes of Pope and Goldsmith, to the assiduous study of which he promised to devote his evenings. Not long afterward, he brought me some verses written upon that model, a specimen of which I subjoin, having changed some phrases of less elegance, and a few rhymes objectionable to the cultivated ear. The poem consisted of childish reminiscences, and the sketches which follow will not seem destitute of truth to those whose fortunate education began in a country village. And, first, let us hang up his charcoal portrait of the school-dame.

"Propped on the marsh, a dwelling now, I see The humble school-house of my A, B, C, Where well-drilled urchins, each behind his tire,
Waited in ranks the wished command to fire,
Then all together, when the signal came,
Discharged their a-b abs against the dame.
Daughter of Danaus, who could daily pour In treacherous pipkins her Pierian store,
She, mid the volleyed learning firm and calm, Patted the furloughed ferule on her palm,
And, to our wonder, could divine at once Who flashed the pan, and who was downright dunce.

"There young Devotion learned to climb with ease
The gnarly limbs of Scripture family-trees,
And he was most commended and admired
Who soonest to the topmost twig perspired;
Each name was called as many various ways
As pleased the reader's ear on different days,
So that the weather, or the ferule's stings, Colds in the head, or fifty other things, Transformed the helpless Hebrew thrice a week
To guttural Pequot or resounding Greek,
The vibrant accent skipping here and there,
Just as it pleased invention or despair;
No controversial Hebraist was the Dame; With or without the points pleased her the
same;
If any tyro found a name too tough,
And looked at her, pride furnished skill
enough;
She nerved her larynx for the desperate thing,
And cleared the five-barred syllables at a spring.

"Ah, dear old times! there once it was my hap, Perched on a stool, to wear the long-eared cap;
From books degraded, there I sat at ease,
A drone, the envy of compulsory bees;
Rewards of merit, too, full many a time,

¹ The reader curious in such matters may refer (if he can find them) to A sermon preached on the Anniversary of the Dark Day, An Artillery Election Sermon,

A Discourse on the Late Eclipse, Dorcas, a Funeral Sermon on the Death of Madam Submit Tidd, Relict of the late Experience Tidd, Esq., &c., &c.

Each with its woodcut and its moral rhyme,
And pierced half-dollars hung on ribbons gay About my neck (to be restored next day)
I carried home, rewards as shining then As those that deck the lifelong pains of men, More solid than the redemanded praise
With which the world beribbons later days.

"Ah, dear old times! how brightly ye return!

How, rubbed afresh, your phosphor traces burn!

The ramble schoolward through dewsparkling meads,

The willow-wands turned Cinderella steeds,
The impromptu pin-bent hook, the deep remorse

O'er the chance-captured minnow's inchlong corse;

The pockets, plethoric with marbles round,
That still a space for ball and pegtop found, Nor satiate yet, could manage to confine Horsechestnuts, flagroot, and the kite's wound twine,

Nay, like the prophet's carpet could take in,
Enlarging still, the popgun's magazine;
The dinner carried in the small tin pail, Shared with some dog, whose most beseeching tail

And dripping tongue and eager ears belied
The assumed indifference of canine pride;
The caper homeward, shortened if the cart
Of Neighbor Pomeroy, trundling from the mart,

O'ertook me, — then, translated to the seat
I praised the steed, how staunch he was and fleet,

While the bluff farmer, with superior grin, Explained where horses should be thick, where thin,

And warned me (joke he always had in store)
To shun a beast that four white stockings wore.
What a fine natural courtesy was his!

His nod was pleasure, and his full bow bliss;
How did his well-thumbed hat, with ardor rapt,

Its curve decorous to each rank adapt!
How did it graduate with a courtly ease
The whole long scale of social differences, Yet so gave each his measure running o'er.
None thought his own was less, his neighbor's more;

The squire was flattered, and the pauper knew Old times acknowledged 'neath the threadbare blue!

Dropped at the corner of the embowered lane, Whistling I wade the knee-deep leaves again, While eager Argus, who has missed all day
The sharer of his condescending play, Comes leaping onward with a bark elate
And boisterous tail to greet me at the gate;
That I was true in absence to our love Let the thick dog's-ears in my primer prove."

I add only one further extract, which will possess a melancholy interest to all such as have endeavored to glean the materials of revolutionary history from the lips of aged persons, who took a part in the actual making of it, and, finding the manufacture profitable, continued the supply in an adequate proportion to the demand.

"Old Joe is gone, who saw hot Percy goad His slow artillery up the Concord road,
A tale which grew in wonder, year by year,
As, every time he told it, Joe drew near To the main fight, till, faded and grown gray,
The original scene to bolder tints gave way;
Then Joe had heard the foe's scared double-quick

Beat on stove drum with one uncaptured stick,
And, ere death came the lengthening tale to lop,

Himself had fired, and seen a red-coat drop;
Had Joe lived long enough, that scrambling fight

Had squared more nearly with his sense of right,

And vanquished Percy, to complete the tale, Had hammered stone for life in Concord jail."

I do not know that the foregoing extracts ought not to be called my own rather than Mr. Biglow's, as, indeed, he maintained stoutly that my file had left nothing of his in them. I should not, perhaps, have felt entitled to take so great liberties with them, had I not more than suspected an hereditary vein of poetry in myself, a very near ancestor having written a Latin poem in the Harvard Gratulation on the accession of George the Third. Suffice it to say, that, whether not satisfied with such limited approbation as I could conscientiously bestow, or from a sense of natural inaptitude, certain it is that my young friend could never be induced to any further essays in this kind. He affirmed that it was to him like writing in a foreign tongue, — that Mr. Pope's versification was like the regular ticking of one of Willard's clocks, in which one could fancy, after long listening, a certain kind of rhythm or tune, but which yet was only a poverty-stricken tick, tick, after all, — and that he had never seen a sweet-water on a trellis growing so fairly, or in forms so pleasing to his eye, as a fox-grape over a scrub-oak in a swamp. He added I know not what, to the effect that the sweet-water would only be the more disfigured by having its leaves starched and ironed out, and that Pegāsus (so he called him) hardly looked right with his mane and tail in curl-papers. These and other such opinions I did not long strive to eradicate, attributing them rather to a defective education and senses untuned by too long familiarity with purely natural objects, than to a perverted moral sense. I was the more inclined to this leniency since sufficient evidence was not to seek, that his verses, wanting as they certainly were in classic polish and point, had somehow taken hold of the public ear in a surprising manner. So, only setting him right as to the quantity of the proper name Pegasus, I left him to follow the bent of his natural genius.

Yet could I not surrender him wholly to the tutelage of the pagan (which, literally interpreted, signifies village) muse without yet a further effort for his conversion, and to this end I resolved that whatever of poetic fire yet burned in myself, aided by the assiduous bel-lows of correct models, should be put in requisition. Accordingly, when my ingenious young parishioner brought to my study a copy of verses which he had written touching the acquisition of territory resulting from the Mexican war, and the folly of leaving the question of slavery or freedom to the adjudication of chance, I did myself indite a short fable or apologue after the manner of Gay and Prior, to the end that he might see how easily even such subjects as he treated of were capable of a more refined style and more elegant expression. Mr. Biglow's production was as follows:—

THE TWO GUNNERS

A FABLE

Two fellers, Isrel named and Joe,
One Sundry mornin' 'greed to go Agunnin' soon 'z the bells wuz done
And meetin' finally begun, So'st no one would n't be about Ther Sabbath-breakin' to spy out.

Joe did n't want to go a mite;
He felt ez though 't warn't skeerely right,
But, when his doubts he went to speak on,
Isrel he up and called him Deacon,
An' kep' apokin' fun like sin An' then arubbin' on it in,
Till Joe, less skeered o' doin' wrong Than bein' laughed at, went along.

Past noontime they went trampin' round
An' nary thing to pop at found,
Till, fairly tired o' their spree,
They leaned their guns agin a tree,
An' jest ez they wuz settin' down To take their noonin', Joe looked roun' And see (acrost lots in a pond That warn't mor'n twenty rod beyond) A goose that on the water sot Ez ef awaitin' to be shot.

Isrel he ups and grabs his gun;
Sez he, "By ginger, here 's some fun!"
Don't fire," sez Joe, "it ain't no use, Thet 's Deacon Peleg's tame wil'-goose." Sez Isrel, "I don't care a cent.

I've sighted an' I 'll let her went;"
Bang! went queen's-arm, ole gander flopped His wings a spell, an' quorked, an' dropped.

Sez Joe, "I would n't ha' been hired At that poor critter to ha' fired,
But sence it 's clean gin up the ghost,
We 'll hev the tallest kind o' roast;
I guess our waistbands 'll be tight
'Fore it comes ten o'clock ternight."

"I won't agree to no such bender," Sez Isrel; "keep it tell it 's tender;
'T aint wuth a snap afore it 's ripe;" Sez Joe, "I 'd jest ez lives eat tripe;
You air a buster ter suppose I 'd eat what makes me hol' my nose!"

So they disputed to an' fro Till cunnin' Isrel sez to Joe,
"Don't le's stay here an' play the fool, Le's wait till both on us git cool, Jest for a day or two le's hide it,
An' then toss up an' so decide it."
"Agreed!" sez Joe, an' so they did,
An' the ole goose wuz safely hid.

Now 't wuz the hottest kind o' weather,
An' when at last they come together,
It did n't signify which won,
Fer all the mischief hed been done:
The goose wuz there, but, fer his soul,
Joe would n't ha' tetcht it with a pole;
But Isrel kind o' liked the smell on 't An' made his dinner very well on 't.

My own humble attempt was in manner and form following, and I print it here, I sincerely trust, out of no vainglory, but solely with the hope of doing good.

LEAVING THE MATTER OPEN

A TALE

BY HOMER WILBUR, A. M.

Two brothers once, an ill-matched pair, Together dwelt (no matter where),
To whom an Uncle Sam, or some one,
Had left a house and farm in common.
The two in principles and habits
Were different as rats from rabbits;
Stout Farmer North, with frugal care, Laid up provision for his heir,
Not scorning with hard sun-browned hands
To scrape acquaintance with his lands;
Whatever thing he had to do
He did, and made it pay him, too;
He sold his waste stone by the pound,
His drains made water-wheels spin round,
His ice in summer-time he sold,
His wood brought profit when 't was cold.
He dug and delved from morn till night,
Strove to make profit square with right.

Lived on his means, cut no great dash,
And paid his debts in honest cash.

On tother hand, his brother South Lived very much from hand to mouth, Played gentleman, nursed dainty hands, Borrowed North's money on his lands,
And culled his morals and his graces
From cock-pits, bar-rooms, fights, and races;
His sole work in the farming line Was keeping droves of long-legged swine, Which brought great bothers and expenses To North in looking after fences,
And, when they happened to break through,
Cost him both time and temper too,
For South insisted it was plain He ought to drive them home again,
And North consented to the work Because he loved to buy cheap pork.

Meanwhile, South's swine increasing fast,
His farm became too small at last;
So, having thought the matter over,
And feeling bound to live in clover
And never pay the clover's worth,
He said one day to Brother North: —

"Our families are both increasing,
And, though we labor without ceasing,
Our produce soon will be too scant To keep our children out of want;
They who wish fortune to be lasting Must be both prudent and forecasting;
We soon shall need more land; a lot I know, that cheaply can be got;
You lend the cash, I'll buy the acres,
And we'll be equally partakers."

Poor North, whose Anglo-Saxon blood Gave him a hankering after mud, Wavered a moment, then consented,
And, when the cash was paid, repented;
To make the new land worth a pin, Thought he, it must be all fenced in,
For, if South's swine once get the run on 't
No kind of farming can be done on 't;
If that don't suit the other side,
'T is best we instantly divide.

But somehow South could ne'er incline
This way or that to run the line,
And always found some new pretence
'Gainst setting the division fence;
At last he said: —

"For peace's sake,
Liberal concessions I will make;
Though I believe, upon my soul,
I've a just title to the whole,
I'll make an offer which I call Gen'rous, — we'll have no fence at all;
Then both of us, whenever we choose,
Can take what part we want to use;
If you should chance to need it first,
Pick you the best, I'll take the worst."

"Agreed!" cried North; thought he, This fall With wheat and rye I'll sow it all;

In that way I shall get the start,
And South may whistle for his part.
So thought, so done, the field was sown,
And, winter having come and gone, Sly North walked blithely forth to spy,
The progress of his wheat and rye;
Heavens, what a sight! his brother's swine Had asked themselves all out to dine;
Such grunting, munching, rooting, shoving,
The soil seemed all alive and moving,
As for his grain, such work they'd made on 't, He could n't spy a single blade on 't.

Off in a rage he rushed to South,
"My wheat and rye" — grief choked his mouth:

"Pray don't mind me," said South, "but plant All of the new land that you want;"

"Yes, but your hogs," cried North;

"The grain Won't hurt them," answered South again;
"But they destroy my crop;"

"No doubt;
'T is fortunate you've found it out; Misfortunes teach, and only they,
You must not sow it in their way;"

"Nay, you," says North, "must keep them
out;"

"Did I create them with a snout?" Asked South demurely; "as agreed,
The land is open to your seed,
And would you fain prevent my pigs
From running there their harmless rigs?
God knows I view this compromise
With not the most approving eyes;
I gave up my unquestioned rights
For sake of quiet days and nights;
I offered then, you know 't is true,
To cut the piece of land in two."
"Then cut it now," growls North;

"Abate
Your heat," says South, "'t is now too late;
I offered you the rocky corner,
But you, of your own good the scorner, Refused to take it; I am sorry;
No doubt you might have found a quarry, Perhaps a gold-mine, for aught I know, Containing heaps of native rhino;
You can't expect me to resign My rights" —

"But where," quoth North, "are mine?"
"Your rights," says tother, "well, that's funny, I thought the land" —

"I paid the money;"
"That," answered South, "is from the point,
The ownership, you'll grant, is joint;
I'm sure my only hope and trust is Not law so much as abstract justice, Though, you remember, 't was agreed That so and so — consult the deed; Objections now are out of date,

They might have answered once, but Fate Quashes them at the point we've got to;
Obsta principis, that's my motto."
 So saying, Souh began to whistle
 And looked as obstinate as gristle, While North went homeward, each brown paw Clenched like a knot of natural law,
 And all the while, in either ear, Heard something clicking wondrous clear.

To turn now to other matters, there are two things upon which it should seem fitting to dilate somewhat more largely in this place,—the Yankee character and the Yankee dialect. And, first, of the Yankee character, which has wanted neither open maligners, nor even more dangerous enemies in the persons of those unskilful painters who have given to it that hardness, angularity, and want of proper perspective, which, in truth, belonged, not to their subject, but to their own niggard and unskilful pencil.

New England was not so much the colony of a mother country, as a Hagar driven forth into the wilderness. The little self-exiled band which came hither in 1620 came, not to seek gold, but to found a democracy. They came that they might have the privilege to work and pray, to sit upon hard benches and listen to painful preachers as long as they would, yea, even unto thirty-seventhly, if the spirit so willed it. And surely, if the Greek might boast his Thermopylæ, where three hundred men fell in resisting the Persian, we may well be proud of our Plymouth Rock, where a handful of men, women, and children not merely faced, but vanquished, winter, famine, the wilderness, and the yet more invincible storge that drew them back to the green island far away. These found no lotus growing upon the surly shore, the taste of which could make them forget their little native Ithaca; nor were they so wanting to themselves in faith as to burn their ship, but could see the fair west-wind belly the homeward sail, and then turn unrepining to grapple with the terrible Unknown.

As Want was the prime foe these hardy exodists had to fortress themselves against, so it is little wonder if that traditional feud be long in wearing out of the stock. The wounds of the old warfare were long a-healing, and an east-wind of hard times puts a new ache into every one of them. Thrift was the first lesson in their horn-book, pointed out, letter after letter, by the lean finger of the hard schoolmistress, Necessity. Neither were those plump, rosy-gilled Englishmen that came hither, but a hard-faced, atrabillious, earnest-eyed race, stiff from long wrestling with the Lord in prayer, and who had taught Satan to dread the new Puritan hug. Add two hundred years' influence of soil, climate, and exposure, with its necessary result of idiosyncrasies, and we have the present Yankee, full of expedients, half-master of all trades, inventive in all but the beautiful, full of shifts, not yet capable of comfort, armed at all points against the old enemy Hunger, long-anxious, good at patching, not so careful for what is best as for what will do, with a clasp to his purse and a button to his pocket, not skilled to build against Time, as in old countries, but against sore-pressing Need, accustomed to move the world with no ποῦ στᾶ but his own two feet, and no lever but his own long forecast. A strange hybrid, indeed, did circumstance beget, here in the New World, upon the old Puritan stock, and the earth never before saw such mystic-practicalism, such niggard-geniality, such calculating-fanaticism, such cast-iron-enthusiasm, such sour-faced-humor, such close-fisted-generosity. This new Græculus esuriens will make a living out of anything. He will invent new trades as well as tools. His brain is his capital, and he will get education at all risks. Put him on Juan Fernandez, and he would make a spelling-book first, and a salt-pan afterward. In cælum, jusseris, ibit,—or the other way either,—it is all one, so anything is to be got by it. Yet, after all, thin, speculative Jonathan is more like the Englishman of two centuries ago than John Bull himself is. He has lost somewhat in solidity, has become fluent and adaptable, but more of the original groundwork of character remains. He feels more at home with Fulke Greville, Herbert of Cherbury, Quarles, George Herbert, and Browne, than with his modern English cousins. He is nearer than John, by at least a hundred years, to Naseby, Marston Moor, Worcester, and the time when, if ever, there were true Englishmen. John Bull has suffered the idea of the Invisible to be very much fattened out of him. Jonathan is conscious still that he lives in the world of the Unseen as well as of the Seen. To move John you must make your fulcrum of solid beef and pudding; an abstract idea will do for Jonathan.

 TO THE INDULGENT READER

My friend, the Rev. Mr. Wilbur, having been seized with a dangerous fit of illness, before this Introduction had passed through the press, and being incapacitated for all literary exertion, sent to me his notes, memoranda, &c., and requested me to fashion them into some shape more fitting for the general eye. This, owing to the fragmentary and disjointed state of his manuscripts, I have felt wholly unable to do; yet being unwilling that the reader should be deprived of such parts of his lucubrations as seemed more finished, and not well discerning how to segregate these from the rest, I have concluded to send them all to the press precisely as they are.

COLUMBUS NYE,
Pastor of a Church in Bungtown Corner.

It remains to speak of the Yankee dialect. And, first, it may be premised, in a general way, that any one much read in the writings of the early colonists need not be told that the far greater share of the words and phrases now esteemed peculiar to New England, and local there, were brought from the mother country. A person familiar with the dialect of certain portions of Massachusetts will not fail to recognize, in ordinary discourse, many words now jotted in English vocabularies as archaic, the greater part of which were in common use about the time of the King James translation of the Bible. Shakespeare stands less in need of a glossary to most New-Englanders than to many a native of the Old Country. The peculiarities of our speech, however, are rapidly wearing out. As there is no country where reading is so universal and newspapers are so multitudinous, so no phrase remains long local, but is transplanted in the mail-bags to every remotest corner of the land. Consequently our dialect approaches nearer to uniformity than that of any other nation.

The English have complained of us for coining new words. Many of those so stigmatized were old ones by them forgotten, and all make now an unquestioned part of the currency, wherever English is spoken. Undoubtedly, we have a right to make new words, as they are needed by the fresh aspects under which life presents itself here in the New World; and, indeed, wherever a language is alive, it grows. It might be questioned whether we could not establish a stronger title to the ownership of the English tongue than the mother-islanders themselves. Here, past all question, is to be its great home and centre. And not only is it already spoken here by greater numbers, but with a far higher popular average of correctness than in Britain. The great writers of it, too, we might claim as ours, were ownership to be settled by the number of readers and lovers.

As regards the provincialisms to be met with in this volume, I may say that the reader will not find one which is not (as I believe) either native or imported with the early settlers, nor one which I have not, with my own ears, heard in familiar use. In the metrical portion of the book, I have endeavored to adapt the spelling as nearly as possible to the ordinary mode of pronunciation. Let the reader who deems me over-particular remember this caution of Martial:—

"Quem recitas, meus est, O Fidentine, libellus; Sed male cum recitas, incipit esse tuus."

A few further explanatory remarks will not be impertinent.

I shall barely lay down a few general rules for the reader's guidance.

1. The genuine Yankee never gives the rough sound to the r when he can help it, and often displays considerable ingenuity in avoiding it even before a vowel.

2. He seldom sounds the final g, a piece of self-denial, if we consider his partiality for nasals. The same of the final d, as han' and stan' for hand and stand.

3. The h in such words as while, when, where, he omits altogether.

4. In regard to a, he shows some inconsistency, sometimes giving a close and obscure sound, as hev for have, hendy for handy, ez for as, thet for that, and again giving it the broad sound it has in futher, as hânsome for handsome.

5. To the sound ou he prefixes an e (hard to exemplify otherwise than orally).

The following passage in Shakespeare he would recite thus:—

*"Neow is the winta uv eour discontent Med glorious summa by this sun o' Yock An' all the cleouds thet leowered upun eour heouse
In the deep buzzum o' the oshin buried; Neow air eour brews beound 'ith victorious wreaths;
Eour breused arms hung up fer monimunce;
Eour starn alarums changed to merry meetings, Eour drefle marches to delighfle masures.
Grim-visaged war heth smeuthed his wrinkled
front,
An' neow, instid o' mountin' barebid steeds
To fright the souls o' ferfie edverseries, He capers nimly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasin' uv a loot."*

6. Au, in such words as daughter and slaughter, he pronounces ah.

7. To the dish thus seasoned add a drawl ad libitum.

a. Unable to procure a likeness of Mr. Biglow, I thought the curious reader might be gratified with a sight of the editorial effigies. And here a choice between two was offered,—the one a profile (entirely black) cut by Doyle, the other a portrait painted by a native artist of much promise. The first of these seemed wanting in expression, and in the second a slight obliquity of the visual organs has been heightened (perhaps from an over-desire of force on the part of the artist) into too close an approach to actual strabismus. This slight divergence in my optical apparatus from the ordinary model — however I may have been taught to regard it in the light of a mercy rather than a cross, since it enabled me to give as much of directness and personal application to my discourses as met the wants of my congregation, without risk of offending any by being supposed to have him or her in my eye (as the saying is) — seemed yet to Mrs. Wilbur a sufficient objection to the engraving of the aforesaid painting. We read of many who either absolutely refused to allow the copying of their features, as especially did Plotinus and Agesilaus among the ancients, not to mention the more modern instances of Scioppius, Palæotus, Pinellus, Velserus, Gataker, and others, or were indifferent thereto, as Cromwell.

β. Yet was Cæsar desirous of concealing his baldness. Per contra, my Lord Protector's carefulness in the matter of his wart might be cited. Men generally more desirous of being improved in their portraits than characters. Shall probably find very unflattered likenesses of ourselves in Recording Angel's gallery.

γ. Whether any of our national peculiarities may be traced to our use of stoves, as a certain closeness of the lips in pronunciation, and a smothered smoulderingness of disposition seldom roused to open flame? An unrestrained intercourse with fire probably conducive to generosity and hospitality of soul. Ancient Mexicans used stoves, as the friar Augustin Ruiz reports, Hakluyt, III. 468, — but Popish priests not always reliable authority.

To-day picked my Isabella grapes. Crop injured by attacks of rose-bug in the spring. Whether Noah was justifiable in preserving this class of insects?

δ. Concerning Mr. Biglow's pedigree. Tolerably certain that there was never a poet among his ancestors. An ordination hymn attributed to a maternal uncle, but perhaps a sort of production not demanding the creative faculty.

His grandfather a painter of the grandiose or Michael Angelo school. Seldom painted objects smaller than houses or barns, and these with uncommon expression.

ε. Of the Wilburs no complete pedigree. The crest said to be a wild boar, whence, perhaps, the name. (?) A connection with the Earls of Wilbraham (quasi wild boar ham) might be made out. This suggestion worth following up. In 1677, John W. m. Expect —, had issue, 1. John, 2. Haggai, 3. Expect, 4. Ruhamah, 5. Desire.

"Hear lyes y^e bodye of Mrs Expect Wilber, Y^e crewell salvages they kil'd her Together wth other Christian soles eleaven, October y^e ix daye, 1707.
Y^e stream of Jordan sh^t as crost ore And now expects me on y^e other shore : I live in hope her soon to join ; Her earthlye yeeres were forty and nine."
From Gravestone in Pekussett, North Parish.

This is unquestionably the same John who afterward (1711) married Tabitha Hagg or Ragg.

But if this were the case, she seems to have died early; for only three years after, namely, 1714, we have evidence that he married Winifred, daughter of Lieutenant Tipping.

He seems to have been a man of substance, for we find him in 1696 conveying "one undivided eightieth part of a salt-meadow" in Yabbok, and he commanded a sloop in 1702.

Those who doubt the importance of genealogical studies fuste potius quam argumento erudiendi.

I trace him as far as 1723, and there lose him. In that year he was chosen selectman.

No gravestone. Perhaps overthrown when new hearse-house was built, 1802.

He was probably the son of John, who came from Bilham Comit. Salop. circa 1642.

This first John was a man of considerable importance, being twice mentioned with the honorable prefix of Mr. in the town records. Name spelt with two l-s.

"Hear lyeth y^e bod [stone unhappily broken.] Mr. Ihon Willber [Esq.] [I inclose this in brackets as doubtful. To me it seems clear.] Ob't die [illegible; looks like xviii.] . . . iii [prob. 1693.]

. paynt

Hee gave y^e wicked familists noe reast,
When Sat[an] bl[ow]e his Antinomian blaste,

[A] gaynst y^e horrid Qua[kers]"

It is greatly to be lamented that this curious epitaph is mutilated. It is said that the sacrilegious British soldiers made a target of the stone during the war of Independence. How odious an animosity which pauses not at the grave! How brutal that which spares not the monuments of authentic history! This is not improbably from the pen of Rev. Moody Pyram, who is mentioned by Hubbard as having been noted for a silver vein of poetry. If his papers be still extant, a copy might possibly be recovered.

A LETTER

FROM MR. EZEKIEL BIGLOW OF JAALAM TO THE HON. JOSEPH T. BUCKINGHAM, EDITOR OF THE BOSTON COURIER, IN-CLOSING A POEM OF HIS SON, MR.
HOSEA BIGLOW

JAYLEM, june 1846.

MISTER EDDYTER:—Our Hosea wuz down to Boston last week, and he see a cruetin Sarjunt a struttin round as popler as a hen with 1 chicking, with 2 fellers a drummin and fifin arter him like all nater. the sarjunt he thout Hosea hed n't gut his i teeth cut cos he looked a kindo's though he'd jest com down, so he cal'lated to hook him in, but Hosity wood n't take none o' his sarse for all he hed much as 20 Rooster's tales stuck onto his hat and eenamost enuf brass a bobbin up and down on his shoulders and figureed onto his coat and trousis, let alone wut nater hed sot in his featers, to make a 6 pounder out on.

wal, Hosea he com home considerabal riled, and arter I'd gone to bed I heern Him a thrashin round like a short-tailed Bull in fli-time. The old Woman ses she to me ses she, Zekle, ses she, our Hosee's gut the chollery or suthin anuther ses she, don't you Bee skeered, ses I, he's oney amakin pottery¹ ses i, he's ollers on hand at that ere busynes like Da & martin, and shure enuf, cum mornin, Hosity he cum down stares full chizzle, hare on eend and cote tales flyin, and sot rite of to go reed his varses to Parson Wilbur bein he haint any grate shows o' book larnin himself, bimeby he cum back and sed the parson wuz dreffle tickled with 'em as i hoop you will Be, and said they wuz True grit.

Hosea ses taint hardly fair to call 'em hisn now, cos the parson kind o' slicked off sum o' the last varses, but he told Hosee he did n't want to put his ore in to tetch to the Rest on 'em, bein they wuz very well As thay wuz, and then Hosity ses he sed suthin a nuther about Simplex Mundishes or sum sech feller, but I guess Hosea kind o' did n't hear him, for I never hearn o' nobody o' that name in this villadge, and

I've lived here man and boy 76 year cum next tater diggin, and thair aint no wheres a kitting spryer 'n I be.

If you print 'em I wish you'd jest let folks know who hosity's father is, cos my ant Keziah used to say it's nater to be curus ses she, she aint livin though and he's a likely kind o' lad.

EZEKIEL BIGLOW.

THRASH away, you'll hev to rattle
On them kittle-drums o' yourn, —
'Taint a knowin' kind o' cattle Thet is ketched with mouldy corn;
Put in stiff, you fifer feller, Let folks see how spry you be, — Guess you'll toot till you are yellor
'Fore you git ahold o' me!

Thet air flag's a leetle rotten, Hope it aint your Sunday's best; — Fact! it takes a sight o' cotton To stuff out a soger's chest:
Sence we farmers hev to pay fer 't, Ef you must wear humps like these,
S'posin' you should try salt hay fer 't,
It would du ez slick ez grease.

'T would n't suit them Southun fellers.
They're a dreffle graspin' set,
We must ollers blow the bellers Wen they want their irons het;
May be it's all right ez preachin', But my narves it kind o' grates, Wen I see the overreachin' O' them nigger-drivin' States.

Them thet rule us, them slave-traders, Haint they cut a thunderin' swarth (Helped by Yankee renegaders), Thru the vartu o' the North!
We begin to think it's nater
To take sarse an' not be riled; — Who'd expect to see a tater
All on eend at bein' biled?

Ez fer war, I call it murder, —
There you hev it plain an' flat; I don't want to go no furdur Than my Testymnt fer that;
God hez sed so plump an' fairly,
It's ez long ez it is broad,
An' you've gut to git up airly Ef you want to take in God.

'Taint your eppyletts an' feathers Make the thing a grain more right;
 'Taint afollerin' your bell-wethers Will excuse ye in His sight;
 Ef you take a sword an' dror it,
 An' go stick a feller thru,
 Guv'ment aint to answer for it,
 God 'll send the bill to you.

Wut 's the use o' meetin'-goin'
 Every Sabbath, wet or dry, Ef it 's right to go amowin'
 Feller-men like oats an' rye ?
 I dunno but wut it 's pooty Trainin' round in bobtail coats, —
 But it 's curus Christian dooty
 This 'ere cuttin' folks's throats.

They may talk o' Freedom's airy Tell they 're pupple in the face, —
 It 's a grand gret cemetary Fer the barthrights of our race;
 They jest want this Californy So 's to lug new slave-states in To abuse ye, an' to scorn ye,
 An' to plunder ye like sin.

Aint it cute to see a Yankee Take sech everlastin' pains,
 All to get the Devil's thankee Helpin' on 'em weld their chains ?
 Wy, it 's jest ez clear ez figgers, Clear ez one an' one make two,
 Chaps thet make black slaves o' niggers Want to make wite slaves o' you.

Tell ye jest the eend I 've come to Arter cipherin' plaguy smart,
 An' it makes a handy sum, tu,
 Any gump could larn by heart;
 Laborin' man an' laborin' woman Hev one glory an' one shame.
 Ev'y thin' thet 's done inhuman Injers all on 'em the same.

'Taint by turnin' out to hack folks
 You 're agoin' to git your right, Nor by lookin' down on black folks Coz you 're put upon by wite; Slavery aint o' nary color,
 'Taint the hide thet makes it wus, All it keers fer in a feller
 'S jest to make him fill its pus.

Want to tackle me in, du ye ?
 I expect you 'll hev to wait;
 Wen cold lead puts daylight thru ye You 'll begin to kal'late; S'pose the crows wun't fall to pickin'
 All the carkiss from your bones, Coz you helped to give a lickin'
 To them poor half-Spanish drones ?

Jest go home an' ask our Nancy Wether I 'd be sech a goose Ez to jine ye, — guess you 'd fancy
 The eternal bung wuz loose !
 She wants me fer home consumption,
 Let alone the hay 's to mow, — Ef you 're arter folks o' gumption, You 've a darned long row to hoe.

Take them editors thet 's crowin'
 Like a cockerel three months old, — Don't ketch any on 'em goin',
 Though they be so blasted bold;
 Aint they a prime lot o' fellers ?
 'Fore they think on 't guess they 'll sprout (Like a peach thet 's got the yellers),
 With the meanness bustin' out.

Wal, go 'long to help 'em stealin' Bigger pens to cram with slaves,
 Help the men thet 's ollers dealin' Insults on your fathers' graves;
 Help the strong to grind the feeble,
 Help the many agin the few,
 Help the men thet call your people Witewashed slaves an' peddlin' crew !

Massachusetts, God forgive her,
 She 's akneelin' with the rest,
 She, thet ough' to ha' clung ferever
 In her grand old eagle-nest;
 She thet ough' to stand so fearless While the wracks are round her hurled, Holdin' up a beacon peerless
 To the oppressed of all the world !

Ha'n't they sold your colored seamen ?
 Ha'n't they made your env'ys w'iz ?
 Wut 'll make ye act like freemen ?
 Wut 'll git your dander riz ?
 Come, I 'll tell ye wut I 'm thinkin'
 Is our dooty in this fix,
 They 'd ha' done 't ez quick ez winkin'
 In the days o' seventy-six.

Clang the bells in every steeple, Call all true men to disown
 The tradooers of our people,
 The enslavers o' their own;
 Let our dear old Bay State proudly Put the trumpet to her mouth, Let her ring this messidge loudly
 In the ears of all the South:—

“I'll return ye good fer evil Much ez we frail mortils can,
 But I wun't go help the Devil Makin' man the cus o' man;
 Call me coward, call me traiter, Jest ez suits your mean idees,— Here I stand a tyrant-hater, An' the friend o' God an' Peace!”

Ef I'd my way I hed ruther
 We should go to work an' part,
 They take one way, we take t' other,
 Guess it would n't break my heart;
 Man hed ough' to put asunder Them thet God has noways jined;
 An' I should n't gretly wonder Ef there's thousands o' my mind.

[The first recruiting sergeant on record I conceive to have been that individual who is mentioned in the Book of Job as going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it. Bishop Latimer will have him to have been a bishop, but to me that other calling would appear more congenial. The sect of Cainites is not yet extinct, who esteemed the first-born of Adam to be the most worthy, not only because of that privilege of primogeniture, but inasmuch as he was able to overcome and slay his younger brother. That was a wise saying of the famous Marquis Pescara to the Papal Legate, that it was impossible for men to serve Mars and Christ at the same time. Yet in time past the profession of arms was judged to be κατ' ἐξοχήν that of a gentleman, nor does this opinion want for strenuous upholders even in our day. Must we suppose, then, that the profession of Christianity was only intended for losels, or, at best, to afford an opening for plebeian ambition? Or shall we hold with that nicely metaphysical Pomeranian, Captain Vratz, who was Count Königsmark's chief instrument in the murder of Mr. Thynne, that the Scheme of Salvation has been arranged with an especial eye to the necessities of the upper classes, and that “God would consider a gentleman and deal with him suitably to the condition and profession he had placed him in”? It may be said of us all, Exemplo plus quam ratione vivimus.—H. W.]

FROM MR. HOSEA BIGLOW TO THE HON. J. T. BUCKINGHAM, EDITOR OF THE BOSTON COURIER, COVERING A LETTER FROM MR. B. SAWIN, PRIVATE IN THE MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT

[THIS letter of Mr. Sawin's was not originally written in verse. Mr. Biglow, thinking it peculiarly susceptible of metrical adornment, translated it, so to speak, into his own vernacular tongue. This is not the time to consider the question, whether rhyme be a mode of expression natural to the human race. If leisure from other and more important avocations be granted, I will handle the matter more at large in an appendix to the present volume. In this place I will barely remark, that I have sometimes noticed in the unlanguageed prattlings of infants a fondness for alliteration, assonance, and even rhyme, in which natural predisposition we may trace the three degrees through which our Anglo-Saxon verse rose to its culmination in the poetry of Pope. I would not be understood as questioning in these remarks that pious theory which supposes that children, if left entirely to themselves, would naturally discourse in Hebrew. For this the authority of one experiment is claimed, and I could, with Sir Thomas Browne, desire its establishment, inasmuch as the acquirement of that sacred tongue would thereby be facilitated. I am aware that Herodotus states the conclusion of Psammetichus to have been in favor of a dialect of the Phrygian. But, beside the chance that a trial of this importance would hardly be blessed to a Pagan monarch whose only motive was curiosity, we have on the Hebrew side the comparatively recent investigation of James the Fourth of Scotland. I will add to this prefatory remark, that Mr. Sawin, though a native of Jaalam, has never been a stated attendant on the religious exercises of my congregation. I consider my humble efforts prospered in that not one of my sheep hath ever induced the wolf's clothing of war, save for the comparatively innocent diversion of a militia training. Not that my flock are backward to undergo the hardships of defensive warfare. They serve cheerfully in the great army which fights, even unto death pro aris et focis, accoutred with the spade, the axe, the plane, the sledge, the spelling-book, and other such effectual weapons against want and ignorance and unthrift. I have taught them (under God) to esteem our human institutions as but tents of a night, to be stricken whenever Truth puts the bugle to her lips and sounds a march to the heights of wider-viewed intelligence and more perfect organization. — H. W.]

MISTER BUCKINUM, the follerin Billet was writ hum by a Yung feller of our town that wuz cussed fool enuff to goe atrottin inter Miss Chiff arter a Drum and fife. it ain't Nater for a feller to let on that he's sick o' any bizness that He went intu off his own free will and a Cord, but I rather cal'late he's middlin tired o' voluntearin By this Time. I bleuve u may put depend-ants on his statemente. For I never heered nothin bad on him let Alone his havin what Parson Wilbur cals a pong shong for cocktales, and he ses it wuz a soshiashun of idees sot him agoin arter the Crootin Sargient cos he wore a cocktale onto his hat.

THIS kind o' sogerin' aint a mite like our October trainin', A chap could clear right out from there ef 't only looked like rainin', An' th' Cunnles, tu, could kiver up their shappoes with bandanners, An' send the insines skootin' to the bar-room with their banners (Fear o' gittin' on 'em spotted), an' a feller could cry quarter

This sort o' thing aint jest like thet, — I wish thet I wuz furdur,³ —

¹ In relation to this expression, I cannot but think that Mr. Biglow has been too hasty in attributing it to me. Though Time be a comparatively innocent personage to swear by, and though Longinus in his discourse Περὶ Ὑφους have commended timely oaths as not only a useful but sublime figure of speech, yet I have always kept my lips free from that abomination. Odi

Nimepunce a day fer killin' folks comes kind o' low fer murder,

There's suthin' gits into my throat thet makes it hard to swaller,
It comes so nateral to think about a hempen collar;
It's glory, — but, in spite o' all my tryin' to git callous,

But wen it comes to bein' killed, — I tell ye I felt streaked
The fust time 't ever I found out wy baggonets wuz peaked; Here's how it wuz: I started out to go to a fandango,
The sentinul he ups an' sez, "Thet's furdur 'an you can go."
"None o' your sarse," sez I; sez he, "Stan' back!" "Aint you a bus-ter?" Sez I, "I'm up to all thet air, I guess I've ben to muster;
I know wy sentinuls air sot; you aint agoin' to eat us;
Caleb haint no monopoly to court the seenoreetas;
My folks to hum air full ez good ez his'n be, by golly!"
An' so ez I wuz goin' by, not thinkin' wut would folly,

 An' how he (Mister B. himself) wuz happy

 I felt, ez sister Patience sez, a leetle mite

 I felt, I swon, ez though it wuz a dreffle

 Atrampin' round thru Boston streets

 I act'ly thought it wuz a treat to hear a

 An' every feller felt ez though all Mexico

 The country here thet Mister Bolles declared to be so charmin'

Throughout is swarmin' with the most alarmin' kind o' varmin.
 He talked about delishis froot, but then it wuz a wopper all,
 The holl on 't 's mud an' prickly pears, with here an' there a chapparal;
 You see a feller peekin' out, an', fust you

 Is round your throat an' you a copse, 'fore you can say, "Wut air ye at?"² You never see sech darned gret bugs (it

 I wuz to hum agin,
 I heern a horn, thinks I it 's Sol the fisher-

 His bellowses is sound enough, — ez I 'm a

 I felt a thing go thru my leg, — 't wuz

 Then there 's the yaller fever, tu, they call it here el vomito, —

 My gracious! it 's a scorpion thet 's took

 I darsn't skeer the tarnal thing fer fear

 Afore I come away from hum I hed a strong persuasion Thet Mexicans worn't human beans,⁴ — an ourang outang nation,
 A sort o' folks a chap could kill an' never

 No more 'n a feller 'd dream o' pigs thet he hed hed to slarter;
 I 'd an idee thet they were built arter the Thet stick an Anglo-saxon mask onto State-Should come to Jaalam Centre fer to

BIRDOFREDUM SAWIN.

[Those have not been wanting (as, indeed, when hath Satan been to seek for attorneys?) who have maintained that our late inroad upon Mexico was undertaken not so much for the avenging of any national quarrel, as for the spreading of free institutions and of Protestantism. Capita vix duabus Anticyris medenda! Verily I admire that no pious sergeant among these new Crusaders beheld Martin Luther riding at the front of the host upon a tamed pontifical bull, as, in that former invasion of Mexico, the zealous Gomara (spawn though he were of the Scarlet Woman) was favored with a vision of St. James of Compostella, skewering the infidels upon his apostolical lance. We read, also, that Richard of the lion heart, having gone to Palestine on a similar errand of mercy, was divinely encouraged to cut the throats of such Paynims as refused to swallow the bread of life (doubtless that they might be thereafter incapacitated for swallowing the filthy gobbets of Mahound) by angels of heaven, who cried to the king and his knights, — Seigneurs, tuez! tuez! providentially using the French tongue, as being the only one understood by their auditors. This would argue for the pantoglottism of these celestial intelligences, while, on the other hand, the Devil, teste Cotton Mather, is unversed in certain of the Indian dialects. Yet must he be a semeiologist the most expert, making himself intelligible to every people and kindred by signs; no other discourse, indeed, being needful, than such as the mackerel-fisher holds with his finned quarry, who, if other bait be wanting, can by a bare bit of white rag at the end of a string captivate those foolish fishes. Such piscatorial persuasion is Satan cunning in. Before one he trails a hat and feather, or a bare feather without a hat; before another, a Presidential chair or a tide-waiter's stool, or a pulpit in the city, no matter what. To us, dangling there over our heads, they seem junkets dropped out of the seventh heaven, sops dipped in nectar, but, once in our mouths, they are all one, bits of fuzzy cotton.

This, however, by the way. It is time now revocare gradum. While so many miracles of this sort, vouched by eye-witnesses, have encouraged the arms of Papists, not to speak of Echetlaeus at Marathon and those Dioscuri (whom we must conclude imps of the pit) who sundry times captained the pagan Roman soldiery, it is strange that our first American crusade was not in some such wise also signalized. Yet it is said that the Lord hath manifestly prospered our armies. This opens the question, whether, when our hands are strengthened to make great slaughter of our enemies, it be absolutely and demonstratively certain that this might is added to us from above, or whether some Potentate from an opposite quarter may not have a finger in it, as there are few pies into which his meddling digits are not thrust. Would the Sanctifier and Setter-apart of the seventh day have assisted in a victory gained on the Sabbath, as was one in the late war? Do we not know from Josephus, that, careful of His decree, a certain river in Judæa abstained from flowing on the day of Rest? Or has that day become less an object of His especial care since the year 1697, when so manifest a providence occurred to Mr. William Trowbridge, in answer to whose prayers, when he and all on shipboard with him were starving, a dolphin was sent daily, "which was enough to serve 'em; only on Saturdays they still caught a couple, and on the Lord's Days they could catch none at all"? Haply they might have been permitted, by way of mortification, to take some few sculpins (those banes of the salt-water angler), which unseemly fish would, moreover, have conveyed to them a symbolical reproof for their breach of the day, being known in the rude dialect of our mariners as Cape Cod Clergymen.

It has been a refreshment to many nice consciences to know that our Chief Magistrate would not regard with eyes of approval the (by many esteemed) sinful pastime of dancing, and I own myself to be so far of that mind, that I could not but set my face against this Mexican Polka, though danced to the Presidential piping with a Gubernatorial second. If ever the country should be seized with another such mania pro propaganda fide, I think it would be wise to fill our bombshells with alternate copies of the Cambridge Platform and the Thirty-nine Articles, which would produce a mixture of the highest explosive power, and to wrap every one of our cannon-balls in a leaf of the New Testament, the reading of which is denied to those who sit in the darkness of Popery. Those iron evangelists would thus be able to disseminate vital religion and Gospel truth in quarters inaccessible to the ordinary missionary. I have seen lads, unimpregnate with the more sublimated punctiliousness of Walton, secure pickerel, taking their unwary siesta beneath the lily-pads too high the surface, with a gun and small shot. Why not, then, since gunpowder was unknown in the time of the Apostles (not to enter here upon the question whether it were discovered before that period by the Chinese), suit our metaphor to the age in which we live, and say shooters as well as fishers of men?

I do much fear that we shall be seized now and then with a Protestant fervor, as long as we have neighbor Naboths whose wallowings in Papistical mire excite our horror in exact proportion to the size and desirableness of their vineyards. Yet I rejoice that some earnest Protestants have been made by this war,—I mean those who protested against it. Fewer they were than I could wish, for one might imagine America to have been colonized by a tribe of those nondescript African animals the Aye-Ayes, so difficult a word is No to us all. There is some malformation or defect of the vocal organs, which either prevents our uttering it at all, or gives it so thick a pronunciation as to be unintelligible. A mouth filled with the national pudding, or watering in expectation thereof, is wholly incompetent to this refractory monosyllable. An abject and herpetic Public Opinion is the Pope, the Anti-Christ, for us to protest against e corde cordium. And by what College of Cardinals is this our God's-vicar, our binder and looser, elected? Very like, by the sacred conclave of Tag, Rag, and Bobtail, in the gracious atmosphere of the grog-shop. Yet it is of this that we must all be puppets. This thumps the pulpit-cushion, this guides the editor's pen, this wags the senator's tongue. This decides what Scriptures are canonical, and shuffles Christ away into the Apocrypha. According to that sentence fathered upon Solon, οὗτω δημόσιον κακὸν ἔρχεται οἰκάδ' ἐκάστω. This unclean spirit is skilful to assume various shapes. I have known it to enter my own study and nudge my elbow of a Saturday, under the semblance of a wealthy member of my congregation. It were a great blessing, if every particular of what in the sum we call popular sentiment could carry about the name of its manufacturer stamped legibly upon it. I gave a stab under the fifth rib to that pestilent fallacy,—"Our country, right or wrong,"—by tracing its original to a speech of Ensign Cilley at a dinner of the Bungtown Fencibles.—H. W.]

WHAT MR. ROBINSON THINKS

[A FEW remarks on the following verses will not be out of place. The satire in them was not meant to have any personal, but only a general, application. Of the gentleman upon whose letter they were intended as a commentary Mr. Biglow had never heard, till he saw the letter itself. The position of the satirist is oftentimes one which he would not have chosen, had the election been left to himself. In attacking bad principles, he is obliged to select some individual who has made himself their exponent, and in whom they are impersonate, to the end that what he says may not, through ambiguity, be dissipated tenues in auras. For what says Seneca? Longum iter per praecepta, breve et efficace per exempla. A bad principle is comparatively harmless while it continues to be an abstraction, nor can the general mind comprehend it fully till it is printed in that large type which all men can read at sight, namely, the life and character, the sayings and doings, of particular persons. It is one of the cunningest fetches of Satan, that he never exposes himself directly to our arrows, but, still dodging behind this neighbor or that acquaintance, compels us to wound him through them, if at all. He holds our affections as hostages, the while he patches up a truce with our conscience.

Meanwhile, let us not forget that the aim of the true satirist is not to be severe upon persons, but only upon falsehood, and, as Truth and Falsehood start from the same point, and sometimes even go along together for a little way, his business is to follow the path of the latter after it diverges, and to show her floundering in the bog at the end of it. Truth is quite beyond the reach of satire. There is so brave a simplicity in her, that she can no more be made ridiculous than an oak or a pine. The danger of the satirist is, that continual use may deaden his sensibility to the force of language. He becomes more and more liable to strike harder than he knows or intends. He may be careful to put on his boxing-gloves, and yet forget that, the older they grow, the more plainly may the knuckles inside be felt. Moreover, in the heat of contest, the eye is insensibly drawn to the crown of victory, whose tawdry tinsel glitters through that dust of the ring which obscures Truth's wreath of simple leaves. I have sometimes thought that my young friend, Mr. Biglow, needed a monitory hand laid on his arm, — aliquid suffragandus erat. I have never thought it good husbandry to water the tender plants of reform with aqua fortis, yet, where so much is to do in the beds, he were a sorry gardener who should wage a whole day's war with an iron scuffle on those ill weeds that make the garden-walks of life unsightly, when a sprinkle of Attic salt will wither them up. Est ars etiam maledicendi, says Scaliger, and truly it is a hard thing to say where the graceful gentleness of the lamb merges in downright sheepishness. We may conclude with worthy and wise Dr. Fuller, that "one may be a lamb in private wrongs, but in hearing general affronts to goodness they are asses which are not lions." — H. W.]

GUVERNER B. is a sensible man;

General C. he goes in fer the war;

He don't vally princeprle more 'n an old cud;

Wut did God make us raytional creeturs fer, But glory an' gupowder, plunder an' blood?

So John P.

We kind o' thought Christ went agin war an' pillage,

An' thet eppylett's worn't the best mark of a saint;

An' the angel thet writes all our sins in a

An' John P.

Parson Wilbur he calls all these argimunts

An' thet all this big talk of our destinies

Is half on it ign'ance, an' t'other half

But John P.

Robinson he so must we.

Parson Wilbur sez he never heerd in his life Thet th' Apostles rigged out in their swaller-tail coats,

An' marched round in front of a drum an'

To git some on 'em office, an' some on 'em votes;

But John P.

Robinson he

Sez they did n't know everythin' down in Judee.

Wal, it's a marcy we've gut folks to tell us
The rights an' the wrongs o' these matters, I vow,—

God sends country lawyers, an' other wise

To start the world's team wen it gits in a slough;

Fer John P.

Robinson he

Sez the world 'll go right, ef he hollers out Gee!

[The attentive reader will doubtless have perceived in the foregoing poem an allusion to that pernicious sentiment, — “Our country, right or wrong.” It is an abuse of language to call a certain portion of land, much more, certain personages, elevated for the time being to high station, our country. I would not sever nor loosen a single one of those ties by which we are united to the spot of our birth, nor minish by a tittle the respect due to the Magistrate. I love our own Bay State too well to do the one, and as for the other, I have myself for nigh forty years exercised, however unworthily, the function of Justice of the Peace, having been called thereto by the unsolicited kindness of that most excellent man and upright patriot, Caleb Strong. Patria junus igne alieno luculentior is best qualified with this, — Ubi libertas, ibi patria. We are inhabitants of two worlds, and owe a double, but not a divided, allegiance. In virtue of our clay, this little ball of earth exacts a certain loyalty of us, while, in our capacity as spirits, we are admitted citizens of an invisible and holier fatherland. There is a patriotism of the soul whose claim absolves us from our other and terrene fealty. Our true country is that ideal realm which we represent to ourselves under the names of religion, duty, and the like. Our terrestrial organizations are but far-off approaches to so fair a model, and all they are verily traitors who resist not any attempt to divert them from this their original intendment. When, therefore, one would have us to fling up our caps and shout with the multitude, — “Our country, however bounded!” he demands of us that we sacrifice the larger to the less, the higher to the lower, and that we yield to the imaginary claims of a few acres of soil our duty and privilege as liegemen of Truth. Our true country is bounded on the north and the south, on the east and the west, by Justice, and when she oversteps that invisible boundary-line by so much as a hair's-breadth, she ceases to be our mother, and chooses rather to be looked upon quasi noverca. That is a hard choice when our earthly love of country calls upon us to tread one path and our duty points us to another. We must make as noble and becoming an election as did Penelope between Icarus and Ulysses. Veiling our faces, we must take silently the hand of Duty to follow her.

Shortly after the publication of the foregoing poem, there appeared some comments upon it in one of the public prints which seemed to call for animadversion. I accordingly addressed to Mr. Buckingham, of the Boston Courier, the following letter.

“JAALAM, November 4, 1847.

“To the Editor of the Courier:

“RESPECTED SIR,—Calling at the post-office this morning, our worthy and efficient postmaster offered for my perusal a paragraph in the Boston Morning Post of the 3d instant, wherein certain effusions of the pastoral muse are attributed to the pen of Mr. James Russell Lowell. For aught I know or can affirm to the contrary, this Mr. Lowell may be a very deserving person and a youth of parts (though I have seen verses of his which I could never rightly understand); and if he be such, he, I am certain, as well as I, would be free from any proclivity to appropriate to himself whatever of credit (or discredit) may honestly belong to another. I am confident, that, in penning these few lines, I am only forestalling a disclaimer from that young gentleman, whose silence hitherto, when rumor pointed to him-ward, has excited in my bosom mingled emotions of sorrow and surprise. Well may my young parishioner, Mr. Biglow, exclaim with the poet, “ ‘Sic vos non vobis,’ &c. ;

though, in saying this, I would not convey the impression that he is a proficient in the Latin tongue, — the tongue, I might add, of a Horace and a Tully.

“ Mr. B. does not employ his pen, I can safely say, for any lucre of worldly gain, or to be exalted by the carnal plaudits of men, digito monstrari, &c. He does not wait upon Providence for mercies, and in his heart mean merces. But I should esteem myself as verily deficient in my duty (who am his friend and in some unworthy sort his spiritual fidus Achates, &c.), if I did not step forward to claim for him whatever measure of applause might be assigned to him by the judicious.

“ If this were a fitting occasion, I might venture here a brief dissertation touching the manner and kind of my young friend's poetry. But I dubitate whether this abstruser sort of speculation (though enlivened by some apposite instances from Aristophanes) would sufficiently interest your oppidan readers. As regards their satirical tone, and their plainness of speech, I will only say, that, in my pastoral experience, I have found that the Arch-Enemy loves nothing better than to be treated as a religious, moral, and intellectual being, and that there is no apage Sathanas ! so potent as ridicule. But it is a kind of weapon that must have a button of good-nature on the point of it.

“ The productions of Mr. B. have been stigmatized in some quarters as unpatriotic ; but I can vouch that he loves his native soil with that hearty, though discriminating, attachment which springs from an intimate social intercourse of many years' standing. In the ploughing season, no one has a deeper share in the well-being of the country than he. If Dean Swift were right in saying that he who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before confers a greater benefit on the state than he who taketh a city, Mr. B. might exhibit a fairer claim to the Presidency than General Scott himself. I think that some of those disinterested lovers of the hard-handed democracy, whose fingers have never touched anything rougher than the dollars of our common country, would hesitate to compare palms with him. It would do your heart good, respected Sir, to see that young man mow. He cuts a cleaner and wider swath than any in this town.

“ But it is time for me to be at my Post. It is very clear that my young friend's shot has struck the lintel, for the Post is shaken (Amos ix. 1). The editor of that paper is a strenuous advocate of the Mexican war, and a colonel, as I am given to understand. I presume, that, being necessarily absent in Mexico, he has left his journal in some less judicious hands. At any rate, the Post has been too swift on this occasion. It could hardly have cited a more incontrovertible line from any poem than that which it has selected for animadversion, namely, —

“ If the Post maintains the converse of this proposition, it can hardly be considered as a safe guide-post for the moral and religious portions of its party, however many other excellent qualities of a post it may be blessed with. There is a sign in London on which is painted, — ‘The Green Man.’ It would do very well as a portrait of any individual who should support so unscriptural a thesis. As regards the language of the line in question, I am bold to say that He who readeth the hearts of men will not account any dialect unseemly which conveys a sound and pious sentiment. I could wish that such sentiments were more common, however uncouthly expressed. Saint Ambrose affirms, that veritas a quocunque (why not, then, quomodocunque ?) dicitur, a spiritu sancto est. Digest also this of Baxter : ‘The plainest words are the most profitable oratory in the weightiest matters.’

“ When the paragraph in question was shown to Mr. Biglow, the only part of it which seemed to give him any dissatisfaction was that which classed him with the Whig party. He says, that, if resolutions are a nourishing kind of diet, that party must be in a very hearty and flourishing condition ; for that they have quietly eaten more good ones of their own baking than he could have conceived to be possible without repletion. He has been for some years past (I regret to say) an ardent opponent of those sound doctrines of protective policy which form so prominent a portion of the creed of that party. I confess, that, in some discussions which I have had with him on this point in my study, he has displayed a vein of obstinacy which I had not hitherto detected in his composition. He is also (horresco referens) infected in no small measure with the peculiar notions of a print called the Liberator, whose heresies I take every proper opportunity of combating, and of which, I thank God, I have never read a single line.

“ I did not see Mr. B.'s verses until they appeared in print, and there is certainly one thing in them which I consider highly improper. I allude to the personal references to myself by name. To confer notoriety on an humble individual who is laboring quietly in his vocation, and who keeps his cloth as free as he can from the dust of the political arena (though væ mihi si non evangelizavero), is no doubt an indecorum. The sentiments which he attributes to me I will not deny to be mine. They were embodied, though in a different form, in a discourse preached upon the last day of public fasting, and were acceptable to my entire people (of whatever political views), except the postmaster, who dissented ex officio. I observe that you sometimes devote a portion of your paper to a religious summary. I should be well pleased to furnish a copy of my discourse for insertion in this department of your instructive journal. By omitting the advertisements, it might easily be got within the limits of a single number, and I venture to insure you the sale of some scores of copies in this town. I will cheerfully render myself responsible for ten. It might possibly be advantageous to issue it as an extra. But perhaps you will not esteem it an object, and I will not press it. My offer does not spring from any weak desire of seeing my name in print; for I can enjoy this satisfaction at any time by turning to the Triennial Catalogue of the University, where it also possesses that added emphasis of Italics with which those of my calling are distinguished.

"I would simply add, that I continue to fit ingenuous youth for college, and that I have two spacious and airy sleeping apartments at this moment unoccupied. Ingenuas didicisse, &c. Terms, which vary according to the circumstances of the parents, may be known on application to me by letter, post-paid. In all cases the lad will be expected to fetch his own towels. This rule, Mrs. W. desires me to add, has no exceptions.

"Respectfully, your obedient servant,

"HOMER WILBUR, A. M.

"P. S. Perhaps the last paragraph may look like an attempt to obtain the insertion of my circular gratuitously. If it should appear to you in that light, I desire that you would erase it, or charge for it at the usual rates, and deduct the amount from the proceeds in your hands from the sale of my discourse, when it shall be printed. My circular is much longer and more explicit, and will be forwarded without charge to any who may desire it. It has been very neatly executed on a letter sheet, by a very deserving printer, who attends upon my ministry, and is a creditable specimen of the typographic art. I have one hung over my mantelpiece in a neat frame, where it makes a beautiful and appropriate ornament, and balances the profile of Mrs. W., cut with her toes by the young lady born without arms.

"H. W."

I have in the foregoing letter mentioned General Scott in connection with the Presidency, because I have been given to understand that he has blown to pieces and otherwise caused to be destroyed more Mexicans than any other commander. His claim would therefore be deservedly considered the strongest. Until accurate returns of the Mexicans killed, wounded, and maimed be obtained, it will be difficult to settle these nice points of precedence. Should it prove that any other officer has been more meritorious and destructive than General S., and has thereby rendered himself more worthy of the confidence and support of the conservative portion of our community, I shall cheerfully insert his name, instead of that of General S., in a future edition. It may be thought, likewise, that General S. has invalidated his claims by too much attention to the decencies of apparel, and the habits belonging to a gentleman. These abstruser points of statesmanship are beyond my scope. I wonder not that successful military achievement should attract the admiration of the multitude. Rather do I rejoice with wonder to behold how rapidly this sentiment is losing its hold upon the popular mind. It is related of Thomas Warton, the second of that honored name who held the office of Poetry Professor at Oxford, that, when one wished to find him, being absconded, as was his wont, in some obscure alehouse, he was counselled to traverse the city with a drum and fife, the sound of which inspiring music would be sure to draw the Doctor from his retirement into the street. We are all more or less bitten with this martial insanity. Nescio qui dulcedine . . . cunctos ducit. I confess to some infection of that itch myself. When I see a Brigadier-General maintaining his insecure elevation in the saddle under the severe fire of the training-field, and when I remember that some military enthusiasts, through haste, inexperience, or an over-desire to lend reality to those fictitious combats, will sometimes discharge their ramrods, I cannot but admire, while I deplore, the mistaken devotion of those heroic officers. Semel insanivimus omnes. I was myself, during the late war with Great Britain, chaplain of a regiment, which was fortunately never called to active military duty. I mention this circumstance with regret rather than pride. Had I been summoned to actual warfare, I trust that I might have been strengthened to bear myself after the manner of that reverend father in our New England Israel, Dr. Benjamin Colman, who, as we are told in Turrell's life of him, when the vessel in which he had taken passage for England was attacked by a French privateer, "fought like a philosopher and a Christian, . . . and prayed all the while he charged and fired." As this note is already long, I shall not here enter upon a discussion of the question, whether Christians may lawfully be soldiers. I think it sufficiently evident, that, during the first two centuries of the Christian era, at least, the two professions were esteemed incompatible. Consult Jortin on this head. — H. W.]

REMARKS OF INCREASE D. O'PHACE, ESQUIRE,

AT AN EXTRUMPERY CAUCUS IN STATE STREET, REPORTED BY MR. H. BIG-
LOW

[The ingenious reader will at once understand that no such speech as the following was ever totidem verbis pronounced. But there are simpler and less guarded wits, for the satisfying of which such an explanation may be needful. For there are certain invisible lines, which as Truth successively overpasses, she becomes Untruth to one and another of us, as a large river, flowing from one kingdom into another, sometimes takes a new name, albeit the waters undergo no change, how small soever. There is, moreover, a truth of fiction more veracious than the truth of fact, as that of the Poet, which represents to us things and events as they ought to be, rather than servilely copies them as they are imperfectly imaged in the crooked and smoky glass of our mundane affairs. It is this which makes the speech of Antonius, though originally spoken in no wider a forum than the brain of Shakespeare, more historically valuable than that other which Appian has reported, by as much as the understanding of the Englishman was more comprehensive than that of the Alexandrian. Mr. Biglow, in the present instance, has only made use of a license assumed by all the historians of antiquity, who put into the mouths of various characters such words as seem to them most fitting to the occasion and to the speaker. If it be objected that no such oration could ever have been delivered, I answer, that there are few assemblages for speech-making which do not better deserve the title of Parliamentum Indoctorum than did the sixth Parliament of Henry the Fourth, and that men still continue to have as much faith in the Oracle of Fools as ever Pantagruel had. Howell, in his letters, recounts a merry tale of a certain ambassador of Queen Elizabeth, who, having written two letters, — one to her Majesty, and the other to his wife, — directed them at cross-purposes, so that the Queen was beducked and bedared and requested to send a change of hose, and the wife was beprincessed and otherwise unwontedly besuperlatived, till the one feared for the wits of her ambassador, and the other for those of her husband. In like manner it may be presumed that our speaker has misdirected some of his thoughts, and given to the whole theatre what he would have wished to confide only to a select auditory at the back of the curtain. For it is seldom that we can get any frank utterance from men, who address, for the most part, a Buncombe either in this world or the next. As for their audiences, it may be truly said of our people, that they enjoy one political institution in common with the ancient Athenians: I mean a certain profitless kind of ostracism, wherewith, nevertheless, they seem hitherto well enough content. For in Presidential elections, and other affairs of the sort, whereas I observe that the oysters fall to the lot of comparatively few, the shells (such as the privileges of voting as they are told to do by the ostrivori aforesaid, and of huzzaing at public meetings) are very liberally distributed among the people, as being their prescriptive and quite sufficient portion.

The occasion of the speech is supposed to be Mr. Falfrey's refusal to vote for the Whig candidate for the Speakership. — H. W.]

No? Hez he? He haint, though? Wut?

Voted agin him?

Ef the bird of our country could ketch him, she'd skin him;

I seem 's though I see her, with wrath in each quill,

Like a chancery lawyer, aflin' her bill, An' grindin' her talents ez sharp ez all nater,

To pounce like a writ on the back o' the traitor.

Forgive me, my friends, ef I seem to be het, But a crisis like this must with vigor be met;

Wen an Arnold the star-spangled banner bestains,

Holl Fourth o' Julys seem to bile in my veins.

Who ever 'd ha' thought sech a pisonous rig Would be run by a chap thet wuz chose fer a Wig?

"We knowed wut his princerples wuz 'fore we sent him"?

Wut wuz there in them from this vote to pervert him?

A marcful Providence fashioned us holler O' purpose thet we might our princerples swaller;

It can hold any quantity on 'em, the belly can,

An' bring 'em up ready fer use like the pelican,

Or more like the kangaroo, who (wich is stranger)

Puts her family into her pouch wen there's danger.

Aint princerple precious? then, who's goin' to use it

Wen there's resk o' some chap's gittin' up to abuse it?

I can't tell the wy on't, but nothin' is so sure

Ez thet princerple kind o' gits spiled by exposure;¹

¹ The speaker is of a different mind from Tully, who, in his recently discovered tractate De Republica, tells us, Nec vero habere virtutem satis est, quasi artem aliquam, nisi utare, and from our Milton, who says: "I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, un-exercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and sees her adversary, but slinks out of the race where that immortal garland is to be run for, not without dust and heat." — Areop. He had taken the words out of the Roman's mouth, without knowing it, and might well

A man thet lets all sorts o' folks git a sight on 't 'Ugh' to hev it all took right away, every nite on 't;
Ef he can't keep it all to himself wen it 's wise to,
He aint one it's fit to trust nothin' so nice to.

Besides, ther 's a wonderful power in latitude

To shift a man's morril relations an' attitude;

Some flossifers think thet a fakkilty 's granted

The minnit it 's proved to be thoroughly wanted,

Thet a change o' demand makes a change
o' condition,

An' thet everythin' 's nothin' except by position;

Ez, fer instance, thet rubber-trees fust begun bearin'

Wen p'litikle consunnces come into wear-
in',

Thet the fears of a monkey, whose holt chanced to fail,

Drawed the vertibry out to a prehensile tail;

So, wen one 's chose to Congriss, ez soon ez he 's in it,

A collar grows right round his neck in a minnit,

An' sartin it is thet a man cannot be strict In bein' himself, wen he gits to the Deestrict,

Fer a coat thet sets wal here in ole Massachusetts,

Wen it gits on to Washinton, somehow askew sets.

Resolves, do you say, o' the Springfield Convention?

Thet 's percisely the pint I was goin' to mention;

Resolves air a thing we most gen'ally keep
ill,

They 're a cheap kind 'o dust fer the eyes
o' the people;

A parcel o' delligits jest git together An' chat fer a spell o' the crops an' the weather,

exclaim with Donatus (if Saint Jerome's tutor may stand sponsor for a curse), Pereant qui ante nos nostra dixerint! — H. W.

Then, comin' to order, they squabble awile An' let off the speeches they 're ferful 'll spile;

Then — Resolve, — Thet we wunt hev an inch o' slave territory;

Thet President Polk's holl perceedins air very tory;

Thet the war is a damned war, an' them thet enlist in it

Should hev a cravat with a dreffle tight twist in it;

Thet the war is a war fer the spreadin' o'
slavery;

Thet our army desarnes our best thanks fer their bravery;

Thet we 're the original friends o' the nation,

All the rest air a paltry an' base fabrica-
tion;

Thet we highly respect Messrs. A, B, an' C,

An' ez deeply despise Messrs. E, F, an' G.

In this way they go to the eend o' the chapter,

An' then they bust out in a kind of a raptur

About their own vartoo, an' folks's stoneblindness

To the men thet 'ould actilly do 'em a kindness, —

The American eagle, — the Pilgrims thet landed, —

Till on ole Plymouth Rock they git finally stranded.

Wal, the people they listen an' say, "Thet 's the ticket;

Ez fer Mexico, 't aint no great glory to lick it,

But 't would be a darned shame to go pull-in' o' triggers

To extend the aree of abusin' the niggers."

So they march in percession, an' git up hooraws,

An' tramp thru the mud fer the good o' the cause,

An' think they 're a kind o' fulfillin' the prophecies,

Wen they 're on'y jest changin' the holders of offices;

Ware A sot afore, B is comf'tably seated,
One humbug 's victor'ous an' t' other defeated,

Each honnable doughface gits jest wut he axes,
An' the people, — their annooal soft-sodder an' taxes.

Now, to keep unimpaired all these glorious feeturs Thet characterize morril an' reasonin' cree-turs,
Thet give every paytriot all he can cram, Thet oust the untrustworthy Presidunt Flam,
An' stick honest Presidunt Sham in his place,
To the manifest gain o' the holl human race,
An' to some indervidgewals on 't in par-tickler,
Who love Public Opinion an' know how to tickle her, —
I say thet a party with gret aims like these Must stick jest ez close ez a hive full o'
bees.

I 'm willin' a man should go tollable strong Agin wrong in the abstract, fer thet kind o' wrong
Is ollers unpop'lar an' never gits pitied, Because it's a crime no one never committed;
But he mus' n't be hard on partickler sins, Coz then he'll be kickin' the people's own
shins;
On'y look at the Demmercrats, see wut they've done
Jest simply by stickin' together like fun; They've sucked us right into a mis'able
war
Thet no one on airth aint responsible for; They've run us a hundred cool millions in debt (An' fer Demmercrat Horners ther's good plums left yet);
They talk agin tayriffs, but act fer a high
one,
An' so coax all parties to build up their Zion;
To the people they're ollers ez slick ez molasses,
An' butter their bread on both sides with The Masses,
Half o' whom they've persuaded, by way of a joke,
Thet Washinton's mantelpiece fell upon Polk.

Now all o' these blessin's the Wigs might enjoy,
Ef they 'd gumption enough the right means to employ;¹
Fer the silver spoon born in Dermoc'acy's mouth
Is a kind of a sringe thet they hev to the South;
Their masters can cuss 'em an' kick 'em an'
wale 'em,
An' they notice it less 'an the ass did to Balaam;
In this way they screw into second-rate offices
Wich the slaveholder thinks 'ould substract too much off his ease;
The file-leaders, I mean, du, fer they, by their wiles,
Unlike the old viper, grow fat on their files.
Wal, the Wigs hev been tryin' to grab all this prey frum 'em An' to hook this nice spoon o' good fortin' away frum 'em,
An' they might ha' succeeded, ez likely ez
not,
In lickin' the Demmercrats all round the lot, Ef it warn't the't, wile all faithful Wigs were their knees on,
Some stuffy old codger would holler out, —
"Treason!
You must keep a sharp eye on a dog thet hez bit you once, An' I aint agoin' to cheat my constitoounts," —
Wen every fool knows thet a man represents
Not the fellers thet sent him, but them on the fence, —
Impartially ready to jump either side An' make the fust use of a turn o' the
tide, —
The waiters on Providence here in the city, Who compose wut they call a State Centerl Committy.
Constitoounts air hendy to help a man in,
But afterwards don't weigh the heft of a pin.
Wy, the people can't all live on Uncle Sam's pus,
So they've nothin' to du with 't fer better or wus;

¹ That was a pithy saying of Persius, and fits out politicians without a wrinkle, — Magister artis, ingenique largitor venter. — H. W.

It's the folks thet air kind o' brought up to depend on 't Thet hev any consarn in 't, an' thet is the end on 't.
Now here wuz New England abevin' the honor
Of a chance at the Speakership showered upon her;—
Do you say, "She don't want no more Speakers, but fewer;
She's hed plenty o' them, wut she wants is a doer"?
Fer the matter o' thet, it's notorous in town Thet her own representatives du her quite brown.
But thet's nothin' to du with it; wut right hed Palfrey To mix himself up with fanatical small fry?
Warn't we gittin' on prime with our hot an' cold blowin', Acondemnin' the war wilst we kep' it
agoin'?
We'd assumed with gret skill a command-in' position,
On this side or thet, no one could n't tell wich one,
So, wutever side whipped, we'd a chance at the plunder
An' could sue fer infringin' our paytented thunder;
We were ready to vote fer whoever wuz eligible,
Ef on all pints at issuo he'd stay unintelligible.
Wal, sposin' we hed to gulp down our perfessions,
We were ready to come out next mornin' with fresh ones;
Besides, ef we did, 't was our business alone, Fer could n't we du wut we would with our own?
An' ef a man can, wen pervisions hev riz so,
Eat up his own words, it's a marcy it is so.
Wy, these chaps frum the North, with back-bones to 'em, darn 'em,
'Ould be wuth more 'an Gennle Tom Thumb is to Barnum:
Ther's enough thet to office on this very plan grow,
By exhibitin' how very small a man can
grow;
But an M. C. frum here ollers hastens to state he Belongs to the order called invertebraty,

Wence some gret filologists judge primy fashy Thet M. C. is M. T. by paronomashy; An' these few exceptions air loosus naytury Folks 'ould put down their quarters to stare at, like fury.

It's no use to open the door o' success,
Ef a member can bolt so fer nothin' or less;
Wy, all o' them grand constitootional billers Our fore-fathers fetched with 'em over the billers,
Them pillers the people so soundly hev slep' on,
Wile to slav'ry, invasion, an' debt they were swep' on,
Wile our Destiny higher an' higher kep' mountin' (Though I guess folks 'll stare wen she hends her account in),
Ef members in this way go kickin' agin 'em, They wunt hev so much ez a feather left in
'em.

An', ez fer this Palfrey,¹ we thought wen we'd gut him in,
He'd go kindly in wutever harness we put him in;
Supposin' we did know thet he wuz a peace
man?
Doos he think he can be Uncle Sammle's policeman,
An' wen Sam gits tipsy an kicks up a riot, Lead him off to the lockup to snooze till he's quiet?
Wy, the war is a war thet true paytriots can bear, ef
It leads to the fat promised land of a tayriff;
We don't go an' fight it, nor aint to be driv
on,
Nor Demmercerats nuther, thet hev wut to live on;
Ef it aint jest the thing thet 's well pleasin'
to God,
It makes us thought highly on elsewhere
abroad;
The Rooshian black eagle looks blue in his eerie
An' shakes both his heads wen he hears o' Monteery;
In the Tower Victory sets, all of a fluster,

¹ There is truth vet in this of Juvenal, —

"Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas."—EL. VI.

An' reads, with locked doors, how we won Cherry Buster;
 An' old Philip Lewis—thet come an' kep' school here
 Fer the mere sake o' scorin' his ryalist

 On the tenderest part of our kings in futuro—
 Hides his crown underneath an old shut in his bureau,
 Breaks off in his brags to a suckle o' merry
 kings,
 How he often hed hidid young native
 Amerrikins,
 An' turnin' quite faint in the midst of his fooleries, Sneaks down stairs to bolt the front door o' the Tooleries.¹
 You say, "We 'd ha' scared 'em by grow-in' in peace,
 A plaguy more then by bobberies like these" ?
 Who is it dares say thet our naytional eagle Wun't much longer be classed with the birds thet air regal, Coz theirn be hooked beaks, an' she, arter this slaughter,
 'll bring back a bill ten times longer 'n she 'd ough' to ?
 Wut's your name ? Come, I see ye, you up-country feller, You've put me out several times with your beller;
 Out with it ! Wut ? Biglow ? I say nothin' furdur, Thet feller would like nothin' better 'n a murder;
 He's a traider, blasphemur, an' wut ruther worse is,
 He puts all his ath'ism in drefle bad verses; Society aint safe till sech raonsters air out on it,
 Refer to the Post, ef you hev the least doubt on it;
 Wy, he goes agin war, agin indirect taxes, Agin sellin' wild lands 'cept to settlers with axes,

¹ Jortin is willing to allow of other miracles besides those recorded in Holy Writ, and why not of other prophecies ? It is granting too much to Satan to suppose him, as divers of the learned have done, the inspirer of the ancient oracles. Wiser, I esteem it, to give chance the credit of the successful ones. What is said here of Louis Philippe was verified in some of its minute particulars within a few months' time. Enough to have made the fortune of Delphi or Hammon, and

Agin holdin' o' slaves, though he knows it's the corner
 Our libbatty rests on, the mis'able scorner !
 In short, he would wholly upset with his

 All thet keeps us above the brute critters

 An' pitch into all kinds o' briles an' con-

 tions;

 I 'll be —, thet is, I mean I 'll be blest.
 Ef I hark to a word frum so noted a pest;
 I sha'n't talk with him, my religion's too fervent.
 Good mornin', my friends, I 'm your most humble servant.

[Into the question whether the ability to express ourselves in articulate language has been productive of more good or evil, I shall not here enter at large. The two faculties of speech and of speech-making are wholly diverse in their natures. By the first we make ourselves intelligible, by the last unintelligible, to our fellows. It has not seldom occurred to me (noting how in our national legislature everything runs to talk, as lettuce, if the season or the soil be unpropitious, shoot up lankly to seed, instead of forming handsome heads) that Babel was the first Congress, the earliest mill erected for the manufacture of gabble. In these days, what with Town Meetings, School Committees, Boards (lumber) of one kind and another, Congresses, Parliaments, Diets, Indian Councils, Palavers, and the like, there is scarce a village which has not its factories of this description driven by milk-and-water power. I cannot conceive the confusion of tongues to have been the curse of Babel, since I esteem my ignorance of other languages as a kind of Martello-tower, in which I am safe from the furious bombardments of foreign garrulity. For this reason I have ever preferred the study of the dead languages, those primitive formations being Ararat upon whose silent peaks I sit secure and watch this new deluge without fear, though it rain figures (simulacra, semblances) of speech no thanks to Beelzebub neither ! That of Seneca in Medea will suit here :—

"Ravida fortuna ac levis Præcepsque regno eripuit, exsilio dedit."

Let us allow, even to richly deserved misfortune, our commiseration, and be not over-hasty meanwhile in our censure of the French people, left for the first time to govern themselves, remembering that wise sentence of Æschylus, —

*Αρας δὲ τραχὺς ὄστις αὐτὸν νέον κρατῆ. — H. W.

forty days and nights together, as it not uncommonly happens. Thus is my coat, as it were, without buttons by which any but a vernacular wild bore can seize me. Is it not possible that the Shakers may intend to convey a quiet reproof and hint, in fastening their outer garments with hooks and eyes?

This reflection concerning Babel, which I find in no Commentary, was first thrown upon my mind when an excellent deacon of my congregation (being infected with the Second Advent delusion) assured me that he had received a first instalment of the gift of tongues as a small earnest of larger possessions in the like kind to follow. For, of a truth, I could not reconcile it with my ideas of the Divine justice and mercy that the single wall which protected people of other languages from the incursions of this otherwise well-meaning propagandist should be broken down.

In reading Congressional debates, I have fancied, that, after the subsidence of those painful buzzings in the brain which result from such exercises, I detected a slender residuum of valuable information. I made the discovery that nothing takes longer in the saying than anything else, for as ex nihilo nihil fit, so from one polypus nothing any number of similar ones may be produced. I would recommend to the attention of viva voce debaters and controversialists the admirable example of the monk Copres, who, in the fourth century, stood for half an hour in the midst of a great fire, and thereby silenced a Manichean antagonist who had less of the salamander in him. As for those who quarrel in print, I have no concern with them here, since the eyelids are a divinely granted shield against all such. Moreover, I have observed in many modern books that the printed portion is becoming gradually smaller, and the number of blank or fly-leaves (as they are called) greater. Should this fortunate tendency of literature continue, books will grow more valuable from year to year, and the whole Serbonian bog yield to the advances of firm arable land.

The sagacious Lacedæmonians, hearing that Tesephone had bragged that he could talk all day long on any given subject, made no more ado, but forthwith banished him, whereby they supplied him a topic and at the same time took care that his experiment upon it should be tried out of earshot.

I have wondered, in the Representatives' Chamber of our own Commonwealth, to mark how little impression seemed to be produced by that emblematic fish suspended over the heads of the members. Our wiser ancestors, no doubt, hung it there as being the animal which the Pythagoreans revered for its silence, and which certainly in that particular does not so well merit the epithet cold-blooded, by which naturalists distinguish it, as certain bipeds, afflicted with ditch-water on the brain, who take occasion to tap themselves in Faneuil Halls, meeting-houses, and other places of public resort. — H. THE DEBATE IN THE SENNIT

SOT TO A NUSRY RHYME

[THE incident which gave rise to the debate satirized in the following verses was the unsuccessful attempt of Drayton and Sayres to give freedom to seventy men and women, fellow-beings and fellow-Christians. Had Tripoli, instead of Washington, been the scene of this undertaking, the unhappy leaders in it would have been as secure of the theoretic as they now are of the practical part of martyrdom. I question whether the Dey of Tripoli is blessed with a District Attorney so benighted as ours at the seat of government. Very fitly is he named Key, who would allow himself to be made the instrument of locking the door of hope against sufferers in such a cause. Not all the waters of the ocean can cleanse the vile smutch of the jailer's fingers from off that little Key. Athena clavis, a brazen Key indeed!]

Mr. Calhoun, who is made the chief speaker in this burlesque, seems to think that the light of the nineteenth century is to be put out as soon as he tinkles his little cow-bell curfew. Whenever slavery is touched, he sets up his scarecrow of dissolving the Union. This may do for the North, but I should conjecture that something more than a pumpkin-lantern is required to scare manifest and irretrievable Destiny out of her path. Mr. Calhoun cannot let go the apron-string of the Past. The Past is a good nurse, but we must be weaned from her sooner or later, even though, like Plotinus, we should run home from school to ask the breast, after we are tolerably well-grown youths. It will not do for us to hide our faces in her lap, whenever the strange Future holds out her arms and asks us to come to her.

But we are all alike. We have all heard it said, often enough, that little boys must not play with fire; and yet, if the matches be taken away from us, and put out of reach upon the shelf, we must needs get into our little corner, and scowl and stamp and threaten the dire revenge of going to bed without our supper. The world shall stop till we get our dangerous plaything again. Dame Earth, meanwhile, who has more than enough household matters to mind, goes bustling hither and thither as a hiss or a sputter tells her that this or that kettle of hers is boiling over, and before bedtime we are glad to eat our porridge cold, and gulp down our dignity along with it.

Mr. Calhoun has somehow acquired the name of a great statesman, and, if it be great statesmanship to put lance in rest and run a tilt at the Spirit of the Age with the certainty of being next moment hurled neck and heels into the dust amid universal laughter, he deserves the title. He is the Sir Kay of our modern chivalry. He should remember the old Scandinavian mythus. Thor was the strongest of gods, but he could not wrestle with Time, nor so much as lift up a fold of the great snake which bound the universe together; and when he smote the Earth, though with his terrible mallet, it was but as if a leaf had fallen. Yet all the while it seemed to Thor that he had only been wrestling with an old woman, striving to lift a cat, and striking a stupid giant on the head.

And in old times, doubtless, the giants were stupid, and there was no better sport for the Sir Lancelots and Sir Gawains than to go about cutting off their great blundering heads with enchanted swords. But things have wonderfully changed. It is the giants, nowadays, that have the science and the intelligence, while the chivalrous Don Quixotes of Conservatism still cumber themselves with the clumsy armor of a bygone age. On whirls the restless globe through unsounded time, with its cities and its silences, its births and funerals, half light, half shade, but never wholly dark, and sure to swing round into the happy morning at last. With an involuntary smile, one sees Mr. Calhoun letting slip his pack-thread cable with a crooked pin at the end of it to anchor South Carolina upon the bank and shoal of the Past. — H. W.]

Right to come on this floor,

No more 'n the man in the moon," sez he.

"The North haint no kind o' bisness with nothin',

An' you've no idee how much bother it saves;

We aint none riled by their frettin' a frothin',

We're used to layin' the string on o' slaves,"

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he;—

Sez Mister Foote,

"I should like to shoot

The holl gang, by the gret holl spoon!" sez he.

"Freedom's Keystone is Slavery, the ther's no doubt on,

It's sutthin' thet's—wha' d'ye call it—divine,—

An' the slaves thet we ollers make thet most out on Air them north o' Mason an' Dixon line,"

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he;—

"Fer all that," sez Mangum,

"'T would be better to hang 'em

An' so git red on 'em soon," sez he.

"The mass ough' to labor an' we lay o' sof'es,

Thet's the reason I want to spread Freedom's aree;

It puts all the cunningest on us in office, An' reelises our Maker's original idee,"

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he;—

"Thet's ez plain," sez Cass,

"Ez thet some one's an ass, It's ez clear ez the sun is at noon," sez he.

"Now don't go to say I'm the friend oppression,

But keep all your spare breath fer coolin' your broth,

Fer I ollers hev strove (at least thet's my impression)

To make cussed free with the rights the North,"

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he;—

"Yes," sez Davis o' Miss.,

"The perfection o' bliss

Is in skinnin' thet same old coon," sez he.

"Slavery's a thing thet depends on complexion,

It's God's law thet fetters on black skin don't chafe;

Ef brains wuz to settle it (horrid reflection) Wich of our onnable body'd be safe?

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he; — Sez Mister Hannagan, Afore he began agin,
 "Thet exception is quite oppertoon," sez he.

"Gen'le Cass, Sir, you need n't be twitchin' your collar,
 Your merit's quite clear by the dut on your knees,
 At the North we don't make no distinctions o' color;
 You can all take a lick at our shoes wen you please,"
 Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he; — Sez Mister Jarnagin,
 "They wun't hev to larn agin, They all on 'em know the old toon,"
 sez he.

"The slavery question aint no ways bewil-derin', North an' South hev one int'rest, it's plain to a glance;
 No'thern men, like us patriarchs, don't sell their childrin,
 But they du sell themselves, ef they git a good chance,"
 Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he; — Sez Atherton here,
 "This is gittin' severe,
 I wish I could dive like a loon," sez he.

"It 'll break up the Union, this talk about freedom,
 An' your fact'ry gals (soon ez we split)
 'll make head,
 An' gittin' some Miss chief or other to lead
 'em,
 'll go to work raisin' permiscoous Ned,"
 Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he; —
 "Yes, the North," sez Colquitt,
 "Ef we Southeners all quit, Would go down like a busted balloon,"
 sez he.

"Jest look wut is doin', wut annyky's brewin'
 In the beautiful clime o' the olive an'
 vine,
 All the wise aristoxys's atumblin' to ruin, An' the sankylots drorin' an' drinkin' their wine,"
 Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he; —
 "Yes," sez Johnson, "in France

They're beginnin' to dance Beëlzebub's own rigadood," sez he.

"The South's safe enough, it don't feel a mite skeery,
 Our slaves in their darkness an' dut air tu blest
 Not to welcome with proud hallylугers the ery Wen our eagle kicks yourn from the nay-tional nest,"
 Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he; —
 "Oh," sez Westcott o' Florida,
 "Wut treason is horrid Than our priv'leges tryin' to proon?"
 sez he.

"It's 'coz they're so happy, thet, wen crazy sarpints Stick their nose in our bizness, we git so darned riled;
 We think it's our dooty to give pooty sharp hints,
 Thet the last crumb of Edin on airth sha'n't be spiled,"
 Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he; —
 "Ah," sez Dixon H. Lewis,
 "It perfectly true is Thet slavery's airth's grettest boon,"
 sez he.

[It was said of old time, that riches have wings; and, though this be not applicable in a literal strictness to the wealth of our patriarchal brethren of the South, yet it is clear that their possessions have legs, and an unaccountable propensity for using them in a northerly direction. I marvel that the grand jury of Washington did not find a true bill against the North Star for aiding and abetting Drayton and Sayres.
 It would have been quite of a piece with the intelligence displayed by the South on other questions connected with slavery. I think that no ship of state was ever freighted with a more veritable Jonah than this same domestic institution of ours. Mephistopheles himself could not feign so bitterly, so satirically sad a sight as this of three millions of human beings crushed beyond help or hope by this one mighty argument, — Our fathers knew no better! Nevertheless, it is the unavoidable destiny of Jonahs to be cast overboard sooner or later. Or shall we try the experiment of hiding our Jonah in a safe place, that none may lay hands on him to make jetsam of him? Let us, then, with equal forethought and wisdom, lash ourselves to the anchor, and await, in pious confidence, the certain result. Perhaps our suspicious passenger is no Jonah after all, being black. For it is well known that a superintending Providence made a kind of sandwich of Ham and his descendants, to be devoured by the Caucasian race.

In God's name, let all, who hear nearer and nearer the hungry moan of the storm and the growl of the breakers, speak out! But, alas! we have no right to interfere. If a man pluck an apple of mine, he shall be in danger of the justice; but if he steal my brother, I must be silent. Who says this? Our Constitution, consecrated by the callous consuetude of sixty years, and grasped in triumphant argument by the left hand of him whose right hand clutches the clotted slave-whip. Justice, venerable with the undethronable majesty of countless æons, says, —SPEAK! The Fast, wise with the sorrows and desolations of ages, from amid her shattered fanes and wolf-housing palaces, echoes, —SPEAK! Nature, through her thousand trumpets of freedom, her stars, her sunrises, her seas, her winds, her cataracts, her mountains blue with cloudy pines, blows jubilant encouragement, and cries, —SPEAK! From the soul's trembling abysses the still, small voice not vaguely murmurs, —SPEAK! But, alas! the Constitution and the Honorable Mr. Bagowind, M. C., say — BE DUMB!

It occurs to me to suggest, as a topic of inquiry in this connection, whether, on that momentous occasion when the goats and the sheep shall be parted, the Constitution and the Honorable Mr. Bagowind, M. C., will be expected to take their places on the left as our hireine vicars,

*Quid sum miser tunc dicturus?
Quem patronum rogaturus?*

There is a point where toleration sinks into sheer baseness and poltroonery. The toleration of the worst leads us to look on what is barely better as good enough, and to worship what is only moderately good. Woe to that man, or that nation, to whom mediocrity has become an ideal!

Has our experiment of self-government succeeded, if it barely manage to rub and go? Here, now, is a piece of barbarism which Christ and the nineteenth century say shall cease, and which Messrs. Smith, Brown, and others say shall not cease. I would by no means deny the eminent respectability of these gentlemen, but I confess, that, in such a wrestling-match, I cannot help having my fears for them.

Discite justitiam, moniti, et non temnere divos.

THE PIOUS EDITOR'S CREED

[AT the special instance of Mr. Biglow, I preface the following satire with an extract from a sermon preached during the past summer, from Ezekiel xxxiv. 2: "Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel." Since the Sabbath on which this discourse was delivered, the editor of the "Jaalam Independent Bluderbuss" has unaccountably absented himself from our house of worship.

"I know of no so responsible position as that of the public journalist. The editor of our dailies bears the same relation to his time that the clerk bore to the age before the invention of printing. Indeed, the position which he holds is that which the clergyman should hold even now. But the clergyman chooses to walk off the extreme edge of the world, and to throw such seed as he has clear over into that darkness which he calls the Next Life. As if now did not mean nearest, and as if any life were nearer than that immediately present one which boils and eddies all around him at the caucus, the ratification meeting, and the polls! We taught him to exhort men to prepare for eternity, as for some future era of which the present forms no integral part? The furrow which Time is even now turning runs through the Everlasting, and in that must he plant, or not where. Yet he would fain believe and teach that we are going to have more of eternity than we have now. This going of his is like that of the auctioneer, on which gone follows before we have made up our minds to bid, —in what manner, not three months back, I lost an excellent copy of Chappelow on Job. So it has come to pass that the preacher, instead of being a living force, has faded into an emblematic figure at christenings, weddings, and funerals. Or, if he exercise any other function, it is as keeper and feeder of certain theologic dogmas, which, when occasion offers, he unkenels with a staboy! 'to bark and bite as 't is their nature,' whence that reproach of odium theologicum has arisen.

"Meanwhile, see what a pulpit the editor mounts daily, sometimes with a congregation of fifty thousand within reach of his voice, and never so much as a nodder, even, among them. And from what a Bible can he choose his text — a Bible which needs no translation, and which no priestcraft can shut and clasp from the laity — the open volume of the world, upon which with a pen of sunshine or destroying fire, the inspired Present is even now writing the annals of God! Methinks the editor who should understand his calling, and be equal thereto, would truly deserve that title of πομπήν λαόν, which Homer bestows upon princes. He would be to Moses of our nineteenth century; and where the old Sinai, silent now, is but a common mountain stared at by the elegant tourist and crawled over by the hammering geologist, he must find his tables of the new law here among factories and cities in this Wilderness of Sin (Numbers xxxiii. 12) called Progress of Civilization, and be the captain of our Exodus into the Canaan of a truer social order.

"Nevertheless, our editor will not come far within even the shadow of Sinai as Mahomet did, but chooses rather to construe Moses as Joe Smith. He takes up the crook, not the sheep may be fed, but that he may never want a warm woollen suit and a joint of mutton.

Immemor, O, fidei, pecorumque oblite tuorum!

For which reason I would derive the name editor not so much from edo, to publish, as from edo, to eat, that being the peculiar profession to which he esteems himself called. He blows up the flames of political discord for no other occasion than that he may thereby handily boil his own pot. I believe there are two thousand of these mutton-loving shepherds in the United States, and of these, how many have even the dimmest perception of their immense power, and the duties consequent thereon? Here and there, haply, one. Nine hundred and ninety-nine labor to impress upon the people the great principles of Tweedledum, and other nine hundred and ninety-nine preach with equal earnestness the gospel according to Tweedledee. — H. W.]

I du believe in Freedom's cause, Ez fur away ez Payris is ;
I love to see her stick her claws
In them infarnal Phayrisees ;
It's wal enough agin a king To dror resolves an' triggers, — But libbaty's a kind o' thing Thet don't agree with niggers.

I du believe the people want
A tax on teas an' coffees, Thet nothin' aint extravagunt, — Purvidin' I'm in office ;
Fer I hev loved my country sence
My eye-teeth filled their sockets, An' Uncle Sam I reverence, Partic'larly his pockets.

I du believe in any plan
O' levyin' the texes, Ez long ez, like a lumberman,
I git jest wut I axes ;
I go free-trade thru thick an' thin, Because it kind o' rouses
The folks to vote, — an' keeps us in Our quiet custom-houses.

I du believe it's wise an' good To sen' out furrin missions, Thet is, on sartin understood An' orthydox conditions ; —
I mean nine thousan' dolls. per ann., Nine thousan' more fer outfit,
An' me to recommend a man
The place 'ould jest about fit.

I du believe in special ways
O' prayin' an' convartin' ;
The bread comes back in many days,

An' buttered, tu, fer sartin ;
I mean in preyin' till one busts
On wut the party chooses,
An' in convartin' public trusts
To very privit uses.

I du believe hard coin the stuff Fer 'lectioneers to spout on ;
The people's ollers soft enough To make hard money out on ;
Dear Uncle Sam pervides fer his,
An' gives a good-sized junk to all, — I don't care how hard money is, Ez long ez mine 's paid punctooal.

I du believe with all my soul
In the gret Press's freedom, To pint the people to the goal
An' in the traces lead 'em ;
Palsied the arm thet forges yokes
At my fat contracts squintin', An' withered be the nose thet pokes Inter the gov'ment printin' !

I du believe thet I should give Wut 's his'n unto Cæsar, Fer it 's by him I move an' live, Frum him my bread an' cheese air ;
I du believe thet all o' me Doth bear his superscription, — Will, conscience, honor, honesty, An' things o' thet description.

I du believe in prayer an' praise
To him thet hez the grantin' O' jobs, — in every thin' thet pays,
But most of all in CANTIN' ;
This doth my cup with marcies fill,
This lays all thought o' sin to rest,
I don't believe in princeprle,
But oh, I du in interest.

I du believe in bein' this Or thet, ez it may happen
One way or 't other hendiest is To ketch the people nappin' ;
It aint by princeprles nor men
My preudunt course is steadied, —
I scent wich pays the best, an' then Go into it baldheaded.

I du believe thet holdin' slaves Comes nat'ral to a President, Let 'lone the rowdowed it saves To hev a wal-broke precedunt ;

Fer any office, small or gret,
 I could n't ax with no face,
 'uthout I'd ben, thru dry an' wet,
 Th' unrizzest kind o' doughface.

I du believe wutever trash
 'Il keep the people in blindness,— Thet we the Mexicuns can thrash Right inter brotherly kindness, Thet bombshells, grape, an' powder 'n' ball Air good-will's strongest magnets, Thet peace, to make it stick at all,
 Must be druv in with bagnets.

In short, I firmly du believe In Humbug generally, Fer it's a thing thet I perceive
 To hev a solid vally;
 This heth my faithful shepherd ben,
 In pasturs sweet heth led me, An' this 'Il keep the people green To feed ez they hev fed me.

[I subjoin here another passage from my before-mentioned discourse.

"Wonderful, to him that has eyes to see it rightly, is the newspaper. To me, for example, sitting on the critical front bench of the pit, in my study here in Jaalam, the advent of my weekly journal is as that of a strolling theatre, or rather of a puppet-show, on whose stage, narrow as it is, the tragedy, comedy, and farce of life are played in little. Behold the whole huge earth sent to me hebdomadally in a brown-paper wrapper!

"Hither, to my obscure corner, by wind or steam, on horseback or dromedary-back, in the pouch of the Indian runner, or clicking over the magnetic wires, troop all the famous performers from the four quarters of the globe. Looked at from a point of criticism, tiny puppets they seem all, as the editor sets up his booth upon my desk and officiates as showman. Now I can truly see how little and transitory is life. The earth appears almost as a drop of vinegar, on which the solar microscope of the imagination must be brought to bear in order to make out anything distinctly. That animalcule there, in the pea-jacket, is Louis Philippe, just landed on the coast of England. That other, in the gray surtout and cocked hat, is Napoleon Bonaparte Smith, assuring France that she need apprehend no interference from him in the present alarming juncture. At that spot, where you seem to see a speck of something in motion, is an immense mass-meeting. Look sharper, and you will see a mite brandishing his mandibles in an excited manner. That is the great Mr. Soando, defining his position amid tumultuous and irrepressible cheers. That infinitesimal creatura, upon whom some score of others, as minute as he, are gazing in open-mouthed admiration, is a famous philosopher, expounding to a select audience their capacity for the Infinite. That scarce discernible pufflet of smoke and dust is a revolution. That speck there is a reformer, just arranging the lever with which he is to move the world. And lo, there creeps forward the shadow of a skeleton that blows one breath between its grinning teeth, and all our distinguished actors are whisked off the slippery stage into the dark Beyond.

"Yes, the little show-box has its solemn suggestions. Now and then we catch a glimpse of a grim old man, who lays down a scythe and hour-glass in the corner while he shifts the scenes. There, too, in the dim background, a weird shape is ever delving. Sometimes he leans upon his mattock, and gazes, as a coach whirls by, bearing the newly married on their wedding jaunt, or glances carelessly at a babe brought home from christening. Suddenly (for the scene grows larger and larger as we look) a bony hand snatches back a performer in the midst of his part, and him, whom yesterday two infinities (past and future) would not suffice, a handful of dust is enough to cover and silence forever. Nay, we see the same fleshless fingers opening to clutch the showman himself, and guess, not without a shudder, that they are lying in wait for spectator also.

"Think of it: for three dollars a year I buy a season-ticket to this great Globe Theatre, for which God would write the dramas (only that we like farces, spectacles, and the tragedies of Apollon better), whose scene-shifter is Time, and whose curtain is rung down by Death.

"Such thoughts will occur to me sometimes as I am tearing off the wrapper of my newspaper. Then suddenly that otherwise too often vacant sheet becomes invested for me with a strange kind of awe. Look! deaths and marriages, notices of inventions, discoveries, and books, lists of promotions, of killed, wounded, and missing, news of fires, accidents, of sudden wealth and as sudden poverty;—I hold in my hand the ends of myriad invisible electric conductors, along which tremble the joys, sorrows, wrongs, triumphs, hopes, and despairs of as many men and women everywhere. So that upon that mood of mind which seems to isolate me from mankind as a spectator of their puppet-pranks, another supervenes, in which I feel that I, too, unknown and unheard of, am yet of some import to my fellows. For, through my newspaper here, do not families take pains to send me, an entire stranger, news of a death among them? Are not here two who would have me know of their marriage? And, strangest of all, is not this singular person anxious to have me informed that he has received a fresh supply of Dimitry Bruisgins? But to none of us does the Present continue miraculous (even if for a moment discerned as such). We glance carelessly at the sunrise, and get used to Orion and the Pleiades. The wonder wears off, and to-morrow this sheet, (Acts x. 11, 12,) in which a vision was let down to me from Heaven, shall be the wrappage to a bar of soap or the platter for a beggar's broken victuals."—H. W.]

FROM A CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY IN ANSWER TO SUTTIN QUESTIONS PROPOSED BY MR. HOSEA BIGLOW, INCLOSED IN A NOTE FROM MR. BIGLOW TO S. H. GAY, ESQ., EDITOR OF THE NATIONAL ANTI-SLAVERY STANDARD

[CURIOSITY may be said to be the quality which preëminently distinguishes and segregates man from the lower animals. As we trace the scale of animated nature downward, we find this faculty (as it may truly be called) of the mind diminished in the savage, and wellnigh extinct in the brute. The first object which civilized man proposes to himself I take to be the finding out whatsoever he can concerning his neighbors. Nihil humanum a me alienum puto; I am curious about even John Smith. The desire next in strength to this (an opposite pole, indeed, of the same magnet) is that of communicating the unintelligence we have carefully picked up.

Men in general may be divided into the inquisitive and the communicative. To the first class belong Peeping Toms, eaves-droppers, navel-contemplating Brahmins, metaphysicians, travellers, Empedoclezes, spies, the various societies for promoting Rhinohism, Columbuses, Yankées, discoverers, and men of science, who present themselves to the mind as so many marks of interrogation wandering up and down the world, or sitting in studies and laboratories. The second class I should again subdivide into four. In the first subdivision I would rank those who have an itch to tell us about themselves,—as keepers of diaries, insignificant persons generally, Montaignes, Horace Walpoles, autobiographers, poets. The second includes those who are anxious to impart information concerning other people,—as historians, barbers, and such. To the third belong those who labor to give us intelligence about nothing at all,—as novelists, political orators, the large majority of authors, preachers, lecturers, and the like. In the fourth come those who are communicative from motives of public benevolence,—as finders of mares'-nests and bringers of ill news. Each of us two-legged fowls without feathers embraces all these subdivisions in himself to a greater or less degree, for none of us so much as lays an egg, or incubates a chalk one, but straightway the whole barnyard shall know it by our cackle or our cluck. Omnibus hoc vitium est. There are different grades in all these classes. One will turn his telescope toward a back-yard, another toward Uranus; one will tell you that he dined with Smith, another that he supped with Plato. In one particular, all men may be considered as belonging to the first grand division, inasmuch as they all seem equally desirous of discovering the mote in their neighbor's eye.

To one or another of these species every human being may safely be referred. I think it beyond a peradventure that Jonah prosecuted some inquiries into the digestive apparatus of whales, and that Noah sealed up a letter in an empty bottle, that news in regard to him might not be wanting in case of the worst. They had else been super or subter human. I conceive, also, that, as there are certain persons who continually peep and pry at the keyhole of that mysterious door through which, sooner or later, we all make our exits, so there are doubtless ghosts fidgeting and fretting on the other side of it, because they have no means of conveying back to this world the scraps of news they have picked up in that. For there is an answer ready somewhere to every question, the great law of give and take runs though all nature, and if we see a hook, we may be sure that an eye is waiting for it. I read in every face I meet a standing advertisement of information wanted in regard to A. B., or that the friends of C. D. can hear something to his disadvantage by application to such a one.

It was to gratify the two great passions of asking and answering that epistolary correspondence was first invented. Letters (for by this usurped title epistles are now commonly known) are of several kinds. First, there are those which are not letters at all—as letters-patent, letters dimissory, letters enclosing bills, letters of administration, Pliny's letters, letters of diplomacy, of Cato, of Mentor, of Lords Lyttelton, Chesterfield, and Orrery, of Jacob Behmen, Seneca (whom St. Jerome includes in his list of sacred writers), letters from abroad, from sons in college to their fathers, letters of marque, and letters generally, which are in no wise letters of mark. Second, are real letters, such as those of Gray, Cowper, Walpole, Howell, Lamb, D. Y., the first letters from children (printed in staggering capitals), Letters from New York, letters of credit, and others, interesting for the sake of the writer or the thing written. I have read also letters from Europe by a gentleman named Pinto, containing some curious gossip, and which I hope to see collected for the benefit of the curious. There are, besides, letters addressed to posterity,—as epitaphs, for example, written for their own monuments by monarchs, whereby we have lately become possessed of the names of several great conquerors and kings of kings, hitherto unheard of and still unpronounceable, but valuable to the student of the entirely dark ages. The letter of our Saviour to King Abgarus, that which St. Peter sent to King Pepin in the year of grace 755, that of the Virgin to the magistrates of Messina, that of the Sanhedrim of Toledo to Annas and Caiaphas. A. D. 35, that of Galeazzo Sforza's spirit to his brother Lodovico, that of St. Gregory Thaumaturgus to the D——I, and that of this last-mentioned active police-magistrate to a nun of Cirgenti, I would place in a class by themselves, as also the letters of candidates, concerning which I shall dilate more fully in a note at the end of the following poem. At present sai prata biberunt. Only, concerning the shape of letters, they are all either square or oblong, to which general figures circular letters and round-robins also conform themselves. — H. W.]

DEER SIR its gut to be the fashun now

I got hed the saim, I sposed it wus best. times has gretly changed. Formaly to knock a man into a cocked hat wus to use him up, but now it ony gives him a chance fur the cheef madgustracy. — H. B.

DEAR SIR, — You wish to know my notions On sartin pints thet rile the land ;
There's nothin' thet my natur so shuns Ez bein' mum or underhand ;
I'm a straight-spoken kind o' creetur Thet blurts right out wut's in his head, An' ef I've one peccoler feetur, It is a nose thet wunt be led.

So, to begin at the beginnin'
An' come direcly to the pint,
I think the country's underpinnin'
Is some consid'ble out o' jint ;
I aint agoin' to try your patience
By tellin' who done this or thet,
I don't make no insinocations,
I jest let on I smell a rat.

Thet is, I mean, it seems to me so,
But, ef the public think I'm wrong,
I wunt deny but wut I be so, —
An', fact, it don't smell very strong ;
My mind's tu fair to lose its balance An' say wich party hez most sense ;
There may be folks o' greater talence Thet can't set stiddier on the fence.

I'm an eclectic ; ez to choosin'
'Twixt this an' thet, I'm plaguy lawth ;

I leave a side thet looks like losin',
But (wile there's doubt) I stick to both ;
I stan' upon the Constitution, Ez preundt statesmun say, who've planned
A way to git the most profusion O' chances ez to ware they'll stand.

Ez fer the war, I go agin it, — I mean to say I kind o' du, — Thet is, I mean thet, bein' in it,
The best way wuz to fight it thru ;
Not but wut abstract war is horrid,
I sign to thet with all my heart, — But civlyzation doos git forrid Sometimes upon a powder-cart.

About thet darned Proviso matter
I never hed a grain o' doubt, Nor I aint one my sense to scatter
So 'st no one could n't pick it out ;
My love fer North an' South is equil, So I'll jest answer plump an' frank,
No matter wut may be the sequil, — Yes, Sir, I am agin a Bank.

Ez to the answerin' o' questions,
I'm an off ox at bein' druv, Though I aint one thet any test shuns
'Ill give our folks a helpin' shove ; Kind o' permisscoons I go it Fer the holl country, an' the ground
I take, ez nigh ez I can show it, Is pooty gen'ally all round.

I don't appruve o' givin' pledges ;
You 'd ough' to leave a feller free,
An' not go knockin' out the wedges
To ketch his fingers in the tree ;
Pledges air awfle breachy cattle Thet preundt farmers don't turn out, — Ez long 'z the people git their rattle, Wut is there fer 'm to grout about ?

Ez to the slaves, there's no confusion
In my idees consarnin' them, —
I think they air an Institution, A sort of — yes. jest so, — ahem :
Do I own any ? Of my merit
On thet pint you yourself may jedge ;
All is, I never drink no sperit, Nor I haint never signed no pledge.

Ez to my princerples, I glory
In bevin' nothin' o' the sort :

I aint a Wig, I aint a Tory, I'm jest a canderdate, in short;
 Thet's fair an' square an' perpendicler But, ef the Public cares a fig
 To hev me an' thin' in particler, Wy, I'm a kind o' peri-Wig.

P. S.

Ez we're a sort o' privateerin', O' course, you know, it's sheer an' sheer,
 An' there is sutthin' wuth your hearin' I'll mention in your privit ear;
 Ef you git me inside the White House,
 Your head with ile I'll kin' o' 'nint
 By gittin' you inside the Light-house Down to the eend o' Jaalam Pint.

An' ez the North hez took to Brustlin'
 At bein' scrouged frum off the roost, I'll tell ye wut 'll save all tusslin'
 An' give our side a harnsome boost, — Tell 'em ritht on the Slavery question I'm RIGHT, although to speak I'm lawth;
 This gives you a safe pint to rest on,
 An' leaves me frontin' South by North.

[And now of epistles candidatal, which are of two kinds, — namely, letters of acceptance, and letters definitive of position. Our republic, on the eve of an election, may safely enough be called a republic of letters. Epistolary composition becomes then an epidemic, which seizes one candidate after another, not seldom cutting short the thread of political life. It has come to such a pass, that a party dreads less the attacks of its opponents than a letter from its candidate. Litera scripta manet, and it will go hard if something bad cannot be made of it. General Harrison, it is well understood, was surrounded, during his candidacy, with the coron sanitaire of a vigilance committee. No prisoner in Spielberg was ever more cautiously deprived of writing materials. The soot was scraped carefully from the chimney-places; outposts of expert rifle-shooters rendered it sure death for any goose (who came clad in feathers) to approach within a certain limited distance of North Bend; and all domestic fowls about the premises were reduced to the condition of Plato's original man. By these precautions the General was saved. Parva componere magnis, I remember, that, when party-spirit once ran high among my people, upon occasion of the choice of a new deacon, I, having my preferences, yet not caring too openly to express them, made use of an innocent fraud to bring about that result which I deemed most desirable. My stratagem was no other than the throwing a copy of the Complete Letter-Writer in the way of the candidate whom I wished to defeat. He caught the infection, and addressed a short note to his constituents, in which the opposite party detected so many and so grave improprieties (he had modelled it upon the letter of a young lady accepting a proposal of marriage), that he not only lost his election, but, falling under a suspicion of Sabellianism and I know not what (the widow Endive assured me that he was a Parali-pomenon, to her certain knowledge), was forced to leave the town. Thus it is that the letter killeth.

The object which candidates propose to themselves in writing is to convey no meaning at all. And here is a quite unsuspected pitfall into which they successively plunge headlong. For it is precisely in such cryptographies that mankind are prone to seek for and find a wonderful amount and variety of significance. Omne ignotum pro mirifico. How do we admire at the antique world striving to crack those oracular nuts from Delphi, Hammon, and elsewhere, in only one of which can I so much as surmise that any kernel had ever lodged; that, namely, wherein Apollo confessed that he was mortal. One Didymus is, moreover, related to have written six thousand books on the single subject of grammar, a topic rendered only more tenebri-fic by the labors of his successors, and which seems still to possess an attraction for authors in proportion as they can make nothing of it. A singular loadstone for theologians, also, is the Beast in the Apocalypse, whereof, in the course of my studies, I have noted two hundred and three several interpretations, each lethiferal to all the rest. Non nostrum est tantas componere lites, yet I have myself ventured upon a two hundred and fourth, which I embodied in a discourse preached on occasion of the demise of the late usurper, Napoleon Bonaparte, and which quieted, in a large measure, the minds of my people. It is true that my views on this important point were ardently controverted by Mr. Shearjashub Holden, the then preceptor of our academy, and in other particulars a very deserving and sensible young man, though possessing a somewhat limited knowledge of the Greek tongue. But his heresy struck down no deep root, and, he having been lately removed by the hand of Providence, I had the satisfaction of reaffirming my cherished sentiments in a sermon preached upon the Lord's day immediately succeeding his funeral. This might seem like taking an unfair advantage, did I not add that he had made provision in his last will (being celibate) for the publication of a posthumous tractate in support of his own dangerous opinions.

I know of nothing in our modern times which approaches so nearly to the ancient oracle as the letter of a Presidential candidate. Now, among the Greeks, the eating of beans was strictly forbidden to all such as had it in mind to consult those expert amphibologists, and this same prohibition on the part of Pythagoras to his disciples is understood to imply an abstinence from politics, beans having been used as ballots. That other explication, quod videlicet sensus eo cibo obtundi existimaret, though supported pugnis et calcibus by many of the learned, and not wanting the countenance of Cicero, is confuted by the larger experience of New England. On the whole, I think it safer to apply here the rule of interpretation which now generally obtains in regard to antique cosmogonies, myths, fables, proverbial expressions, and knotty points generally, which is, to find a common-sense meaning, and then select whatever can be imagined the most opposite thereto. In this way we arrive at the conclusion, that the Greeks objected to the questioning of candidates. And very properly, if, as I conceive, the chief point be not to discover what a person in that position is, or what he will do, but whether he can be elected. Vos exempla Græca nocturna versate manu, versate diurna.

But, since an imitation of the Greeks in this particular (the asking of questions being one chief privilege of freemen) is hardly to be hoped for, and our candidates will answer, whether they are questioned or not, I would recommend that these ante-electionary dialogues should be carried on by symbols, as were the diplomatic correspondences of the Scythians and Macrobian, or confined to the language of signs, like the famous interview of Panurge and Goatsnose. A candidate might then convey a suitable reply to all committees of inquiry by closing one eye, or by presenting them with a phial of Egyptian darkness to be speculated upon by their respective constituencies. These answers would be susceptible of whatever retrospective construction the exigencies of the political campaign might seem to demand, and the candidate could take his position on either side of the fence with entire consistency. Or, if letters must be written, profitable use might be made of the Dighton rock hieroglyphic or the cuneiform script, every fresh decipherer of which is enabled to educe a different meaning, whereby a sculptured stone or two supplies us, and will probably continue to supply posterity, with a very vast and various body of authentic history. For even the briefest epistle in the ordinary chirography is dangerous. There is scarce any style so compressed that superfluous words may not be detected in it. A severe critic might curtail that famous brevity of Cesar's by two thirds, drawing his pen through the supererogatory veni and vidi. Perhaps, after all, the surest footing of hope is to be found in the rapidly increasing tendency to demand less and less of qualification in candidates. Already have statesmanship, experience, and the possession (nay, the profession, even) of principles been rejected as superfluous, and may not the patriot reasonably hope that the ability to write will follow? At present, there may be death in pot-hooks as well as pots, the loop of a letter may suffice for a bow-string, and all the dreadful heresies of Antislavery may lurk in a flourish. — H. W.]

A SECOND LETTER FROM
B. SAWIN, ESQ.

[In the following epistle, we behold Mr. Sawin returning, a miles emeritus, to the bosom of his family. Quantum mutatus! The good Father of us all had doubtless intrusted to the keeping of this child of his certain faculties of a constructive kind. He had put in him a share of that vital force, the nicest economy of every minute atom of which is necessary to the perfect development of Humanity. He had given him a brain and heart, and so had equipped his soul with the two strong wings of knowledge and love, whereby it can mount to hang its nest under the eaves of heaven. And this child, so dowered, he had intrusted to the keeping of his vicar, the State. How stands the account of that stewardship? The State, or Society (call her by what name you will), had taken no manner of thought of him till she saw him swept out into the street, the pitiful leavings of last night's debauch, with cigar-ends, lemon-parings, tobacco-quids, slops, vile stench, and the whole loathsome next-morning of the bar-room, — an own child of the Almighty God! I remember him as he was brought to be christened, a ruddy, rugged babe; and now there he wallows, reeking, seething, — the dead corpse, not of a man, but of a soul, — a putrefying lump, horrible for the life that is in it. Cometh the wind of heaven, that good Samaritan, and he parts the hair upon his forehead, nor is too nice to kiss those parched, cracked lips; the morning opens upon him her eyes full of pitying sunshine, the sky yearns down to him, — and there he lies fermenting. O sleep! let me not profane thy holy name by calling that stertorous unconsciousness a slumber! By and by comes along the State, God's vicar. Does she say, "My poor, forlorn foster-child! Behold here a force which I will make dig and plant and build for me"? Not so, but, "Here is a recruit ready-made to my hand, a piece of destroying energy lying unprofitably idle." So she claps an ugly gray suit on him, puts a musket in his grasp, and sends him off, with gubernatorial and other godspeeds, to do duty as a destroyer.

I made one of the crowd at the last Mechanics' Fair, and, with the rest, stood gazing in wonder at a perfect machine, with its soul of fire, its boiler-heart that sent the hot blood pulsing along the iron arteries, and its thews of steel. And while I was admiring the adaptation of means to end, the harmonious involutions of contrivance, and the never-bewildered complexity, I saw a grimed and greasy fellow, the imperious engine's lackey and drudge, whose sole office was to let fall, at intervals, a drop or two of oil upon a certain joint. Then my soul said within me, See there a piece of mechanism to which that other you marvel at it but as the rude first effort of a child, — a force which not merely suffices to set a few wheels in motion, but which can send an impulse all through the infinite future, — a contrivance, not for turning out pins, or stitching button-holes, but for making Hamlets and Lears. And yet this thing of iron shall be housed, waited on, guarded from rust and dust, and it shall be a crime but so much as to scratch it with a pin; while the other, with its fire of God in it, shall be buffeted hither and thither, and finally sent carefully a thousand miles to be the target for a Mexican cannon-ball. Unthrifty Mother State! My heart burned within me for pity and indignation, and I renewed this covenant with my own soul, — In aliis mansuetus ero, at, in blasphemis contra Christum, non ita. — H. W.

I SPOSE you wonder ware I be; I can't tell, fer the soul o' me, Exactly ware I be myself, — meanin' by thet the holl o' me.
Wen I left hum, I hed two legs, an' they worn't bad ones neither, (The scaliest trick they ever played wuz bringin' on me hither,) Now one on 'em's I dunno ware; — they thought I wuz adyin', An' sawed it off because they said 't wuz kin' o' mortifyin';
I 'm willin' to believe it wuz, an' yit I don't see, nuther, Wy one shoud take to feelin' cheap a minnit sooner 'n t' other, Sence both wuz equilly to blame; but things is ez they be;
It took on so they took it off, an' thet's enough fer me:
There's one good thing, though, to be said about my wooden new one, — The liquor can't git into it ez 't used to in the true one;
So it saves drink; an' then, besides, a feller could n't beg A gretter blessin' then to hev one ollers sober peg;
It's true a chap's in want o' two fer fol-lerin' a drum,
But all the march I'm up to now is jest to Kingdom Come.
I've lost one eye, but thet's a loss it's easy to supply
Out o' the glory thet I've gut, fer thet is all my eye;
An' one is big enough, I guess, by diligently usin' it,
To see all I shall ever git by way o' pay fer losin' it;

Offeers I notice, who git paid fer all our thumps an' kickins, Du wal by keepin' single eyes arter the fattest pickins;
So, ez the eye's put fairly out, I'll larn to go without it,
An' not allow myself to be no gret put out about it.
Now, le' me see, thet is n't all; I used, 'fore leavin' Jaalam, To count things on my finger-eends, but sutthin' seems to ail 'em:
Ware's my left hand? Oh, darn it, yes,
I recollect wut's come on 't;
I haint no left arm but my right, an' thet's gut jest a thumb on 't;
It aint so hendy ez it wuz to cal'late a sum
on 't.
I've hed some ribs broke, — six (I b'lieve),
— I haint kep' no account on 'em; Wen pensions git to be the talk, I'll settle the amount on 'em.
An' now I'm speakin' about ribs, it kin' o' brings to mind
One thet I could n't never break, — the one I lef' behind;
Ef you shoud see her, jest clear out the spout o' your invention An' pour the longest sweetnin' in about an annooal pension, An' kin' o' hint (in case, you know, the critter shoud refuse to be Consoled) I aint so 'xpensive now to keep ez wut I used to be;
There's one arm less, ditto one eye, an' then the leg thet's wooden Can be took off an' sot away wenever ther's a puddin'.

I spose you think I'm comin' back ez opperlunt ez thunder,
With shiploads o' gold images an' varus sorts o' plunder;
Wal, 'fore I vullinteeded, I thought this country wuz a sort o' Canaan, a reg'lar Promised Land flowin' with rum an' water, Ware propaty growed up like time, without no cultivation,
An' gold wuz dug ez taters be among our Yankee nation,
Ware nateral advantages were puffily amazin', Ware every rock there wuz about with precious stuns wuz blazin',

Ware mill-sites filled the country up ez thick ez you could cram 'em, An' desput rivers run about a beggin' folks to dam 'em;
 Then there were meetin'houses, tu, chockful o' gold an' silver Thet you could take, an' no one could n't hand ye in no bill fer;— Thet's wut I thought afore I went, thet's wut them fellers told us Thet stayed to hum an' speechified an' to the buzzards sold us; I thought thet gold-mines could be gut cheaper than Chiny asters, An' see myself acomin' back like sixty Jacob Astors;
 But sech ideas soon melted down an' did n't leave a grease-spot;
 I vow my holl sheer o' the spiles would n't come nigh a V spot; Although, most anywares we've ben, you need n't break no locks, Nor run no kin' o' risks, to fill your pocket full o' rocks.
 I xpect I mentioned in my last some o' the nateral feeturs
 O' this all-fiered buggy hole in th' way o' awfle creeturs, But I fergut to name (new things to speak on so abounded)
 How one day you'll most die o' thust, an'
 'fore the next git drowned.
 The clym't seems to me jest like a teapot made o' pewter
 Our Preudence hed, thet would n't pour (all she could du) to suit her; Fust place the leaves 'ould choke the spout, so's not a drop 'ould dreen
 out, Then Prude 'ould tip an' tip an' tip, till the holl kit bust clean out, The kiver-hinge-pin bein' lost, tea-leaves an' tea an' kiver
 'ould all come down kerswosh! ez though the dam bust in a river.
 Jest so 't is here; holl months there aint a day o' rainy weather, An' jest ez th' officers 'ould be a layin' heads together Ez t' how they'd mix their drink at sech a milingtary deepot, —
 'T would pour ez though the lid wuz off the everlastin' teapot.
 The cons'quence is, thet I shall take, wen I'm allowed to leave here,

One piece o' propaty along, an' thet's the shakin' fever;
 It's reggular employment, though, an' thet aint thought to harm one, Nor 't aint so tiresome ez it wuz with t'other leg an' arm on;
 An' it's a consolation, tu, although it does n't pay,
 To hev it said you're some gret shakes in any kin' o' way.
 'T worn't very long, I tell ye wut, I thought o' fortin-makin', —
 One day a reg'lar shiver-de-freeze, an' next ez good ez bakin', —
 One day abrin' in the sand, then smoth'rin' in the mashes, — Git up all sound, be put to bed a mess o' hacks an' smashes.
 But then, thinks I, at any rate there's glory to be hed, — Thet's an investment, arter all, thet may n't turn out so bad; But somehow, wen we'd fit an' licked, I ollers found the thanks Gut kin' o' lodged afore they come ez low down ez the ranks;
 The Gin'als gut the biggest sheer, the Cunnles next, an' so on, — We never gut a blasted mite o' glory ez I know on;
 An' spose we hed, I wonder how you're goin' to contrive its Division so's to give a piece to twenty thousand privits;
 Ef you should multiply by ten the portion o' the brav'st one,
 You would n't git more 'n half enough to speak of on a grave-stun; We git the licks, — we're jest the grist thet's put into War's hoppers; Leftenants is the lowest grade thet helps pick up the coppers.
 It may suit folks thet go agin a body with a soul in 't, An' aint contented with a hide without a bagnet hole in 't;
 But glory is a kin' o' thing I sha' n't pursue no furdur, Coz thet's the offe'ers' parquisite, — yourn's on'y jest the murder.
 Wal, arter I gin glory up, thinks I at least there's one Thing in the bills we aint hed yit, an' thet's
 the GLORIOUS FUN;

Ef once we git to Mexico, we fairly may persume we
 All day an' night shall revel in the halls o' Montezumy.
 I'll tell ye wut my revels wuz, an' see how you would like 'em;
 We never gut inside the hall: the nighest ever I come Wuz stan'in' sentry in the sun (an', fact, it seemed a cent'ry)
 A ketchin' smells o' biled an' roast thet come out thru the entry, An' hearin' ez I sweltered thru my passes an' repasses,
 A rat-tat-too o' knives an' forks, a clinktyclink o' glasses:
 I can't tell off the bill o' fare the Gin'ral's hed inside;
 All I know is, thet out o' doors a pair o' soles wuz fried,
 An' not a hunderd miles away frum ware this child wuz posted,
 A Massachusetts citizen wuz baked an' biled an' roasted;
 The on'y thing like revellin' thet ever come
 to me
 Wuz bein' routed out o' sleep by thet darned revelee.
 They say the quarrel's settled now; fer my part I've some doubt on 't, 't 'll take more fish-skin than folks think to take the rile clean out on 't; At any rate I'm so used up I can't do no more fightin',
 The on'y chance thet's left to me is politics or writin';
 Now, ez the people's gut to hev a milingtary man,
 An' I aint nothin' else jest now, I've hit upon a plan;
 The can'idatin' line, you know, 'ould suit me to a T, An' ef I lose, 't wunt hurt my ears to lodge another flea;
 So I'll set up ez can'idate fer any kin' o' office, (I mean fer any thet includes good easy-cheers an' soffies; Fer ez tu runnin' fer a place ware work's the time o' day,
 You know thet's wut I never did, — except the other way;)
 Ef it's the Presidential cheer fer wich I'd better run,

Wut two legs anywares about could keep up with my one?
 There aint no kin' o' quality in can'idates, it's said,
 So useful ez a wooden leg, — except a wooden head;
 There's nothin' aint so poppylar — (wy, it's a perfect sin
 To think wut Mexico hez paid fer Santy Anny's pin;) —
 Then I haint gut no princerples, an', sence I wuz knee-high,
 I never did hev any gret, ez you can testify;
 I'm a decided peace-man, tu, an' go agin the war, —
 Fer now the holl on 't's gone an' past, wut is there to go for?
 Ef, wile you're 'lectioneerin' round, some curus chaps should beg To know my views o' state affairs, jest answer WOODEN LEG!
 Ef they aint settisfied with thet, an' kin' o' pry an' doubt
 An' ax fer sutthin' deffynit, jest say ONE EYE PUT OUT!
 Thet kin' o' talk I guess you'll find 'll answer to a charm,
 An' wen you're druv tu nigh the wall, hol' up my missin' arm;
 Ef they should nose round fer a pledge, put on a vartuous look An' tell 'em thet's percisely wut I never gin nor — took!
 Then you can call me "Timbertoes," — thet's wut the people likes; Sutthin' combinin' morril truth with phrases sech ez strikes;
 Some say the people's fond o' this, or thet, or wut you please, — I tell ye wut the people want is jest correct idees;
 "Old Timbertoes," you see, 's a creed it's safe to be quite bold on, There's nothin' in 't the other side can any ways git hold on;
 It's a good tangible idee, a sutthin' to embody Thet valooable class o' men who look thru brandy-toddy;
 It gives a Party Platform, tu, jest level with the mind
 Of all right-thinkin', honest folks thet mean to go it blind:

Then there air other good hooraws to dror on ez you need 'em, Sech ez the ONE-EYED SLARTERER, the BLOODY BIRDOFREDUM: Them 's wut takes hold o' folks thet think,
ez well ez o' the masses,
An' makes you sartin o' the aid o' good men of all classes.

There 's one thing I 'm in doubt about; in order to be Presidunt, It 's absolutely ne'ssary to be a Southern residunt;

The Constitution settles thet, an' also thet a feller

Must own a nigger o' some sort, jet black, or brown, or yellor.

Now I haint no objections agin particklar climes,

Nor agin ownin' anythin' (except the truth sometimes),

But, ez I haint no capital, up there among ye, maybe,

You might raise funds enough fer me to buy a low-priced baby,

An' then to suit the No'thern folks, who feel obleeged to say

They hate an' cus the very thing they vote fer every day,

Say you 're assured I go full but fer Lib-baty's diffusion

An' made the purchis on'y jest to spite the Institootion; —

But, golly ! there 's the currier's boss upon the pavement pawin' !

I 'll be more 'xplicit in my next.

Yourn,

BIRDOFREDUM SAWIN.

[We have now a tolerably fair chance of estimating how the balance-sheet stands between

It should appear that Mr. Sawin found the actual feast curiously the reverse of the bill of fare advertised in Faneuil Hall and other places. His primary object seems to have been the making of his fortune. Quærenda pecunia primum, virtus post nummos. He hoisted sail for Eldorado, and shipwrecked on Point Tribulation. Quid non mortalia pectora cogis, auri sacra fames? The speculation has sometimes crossed my mind, in that dreary interval of drought which intervenes between quarterly stipendiary showers, that Providence, by the creation of a money-tree, might have simplified wonderfully the sometimes perplexing problem of human life. We read of bread-trees, the butter for which lies ready-churned in Irish bogs. Milk-trees we are assured of in South America, and stout Sir John Hawkins testifies to water-trees in the Canaries. Boot-trees bear abundantly in Lynn and elsewhere; and I have seen, in the entries of the wealthy, hat-trees with a fair show of fruit. A family-tree I once cultivated myself, and found therefrom but a scanty yield, and that quite tasteless and in-nutritious. Of trees bearing men we are not without examples; as those in the park of Louis the Eleventh of France. Who has forgotten, moreover, that olive-tree, growing in the Athenian's back-garden, with its strange uxorious crop, for the general propagation of which, as of a new and precious variety, the philosopher Diogenes, hitherto uninterested in arboriculture, was so zealous? In the sylva of our own Southern States, the females of my family have called my attention to the china-tree. Not to multiply examples, I will barely add to my list the birch-tree, in the smaller branches of which has been implanted so miraculous a virtue for communicating the Latin and Greek languages, and which may well, therefore, be classed among the trees producing necessities of life, — venerabile donum fatalis virgæ. That money-trees existed in the golden age there want not prevalent reasons for our believing. For does not the old proverb, when it asserts that money does not grow on every bush, imply a fortiori that there were certain bushes which did produce it? Again, there is another ancient saw to the effect that money is the root of all evil. From which two adages it may be safe to infer that the aforesaid species of tree first degenerated into a shrub, then absconded underground, and finally, in our iron age, vanished altogether. In favorable exposures it may be conjectured that a specimen or two survived to a great age, as in the garden of the Hesperides; and, indeed, what else could that tree in the Sixth Æneid have been, with a branch whereof the Trojan hero procured admission to a territory, for the entering of which money is a surer passport than to a certain other more profitable and too foreign kingdom? Whether these speculations of mine have any force in them, or whether they will not rather, by most readers, be deemed impertinent to the matter in hand, is a question which I leave to the determination of an indulgent posterity. That there were, in more primitive and happier times, shops where money was sold, — and that, too, on credit and at a bargain, — I take to be matter of demonstration. For what but a dealer in this article was that Æolus who supplied Ulysses with motive-power for his fleet in bags? what that Ericus, King of Sweden, who is said to have kept the winds in his cap? what, in more recent times, those Lapland Nornas who traded in favorable breezes? All which will appear the more clearly when we consider, that, even to this day, raising the wind is proverbial for raising money, and that brokers and banks were invented by the Venetians at a later period.

And now for the improvement of this digression. I find a parallel to Mr. Sawin's fortune in an adventure of my own. For, shortly after I had first broached to myself the before-stated natural-historical and archaeological theories, as I was passing, hæc negotia penitus mecum revolvens, through one of the obscure suburbs of our New England metropolis, my eye was attracted by these words upon a signboard, — CHEAP CASH-STORE. Here was at once the confirmation of my speculations, and the substance of my hopes. Here lingered the fragment of a happier past, or stretched out the first tremulous organic filament of a more fortunate future. Thus glowed the distant Mexico to the eyes of Sawin, as he looked through the dirty pane of the recruiting-office window, or speculated from the summit of that mirage-Pisgah which the imps of the bottle are so cunning to raise up. Already had my Alnaschar-fancy (even during that first half-believing glance) expended in various useful directions the funds to be obtained by pledging the manuscript of a proposed volume of discourses. Already did a clock ornament the tower of the Jaalam meeting-house, a gift appropriately, but modestly, commemorated in the parish and town records, both, for now many years, kept by myself. Already had my son Seneca completed his course at the University. Whether, for the moment, we may not be considered as actually lording it over those Baratarias with the viceroyalty of which Hope invests us, and whether we are ever so warmly housed as in our Spanish castles, would afford matter of argument. Enough that I found that signboard to be no other than a bait to the trap of a decayed grocer. Nevertheless, I bought a pound of dates (getting short weight by reason of immense flights of harpy flies who pursued and lighted upon their prey even in the very scales), which purchase I made not only with an eye to the little ones at home, but also as a figurative reproof of that too frequent habit of my mind, which, forgetting the due order of chronology, will often persuade me that the happy sceptre of Saturn is stretched over this Astræa-forsaken nineteenth century.

Having glanced at the ledger of Glory under the title Sawin, B., let us extend our investigations, and discover if that instructive volume does not contain some charges more personally interesting to ourselves. I think we should be more economical of our resources, did we thoroughly appreciate the fact, that, whenever Brother Jonathan seems to be thrusting his hand into his own pocket, he is, in fact, picking ours. I confess that the late muck which the country has been running has materially changed my views as to the best method of raising revenue. If, by means of direct taxation, the bills for every extraordinary outlay were brought under our immediate eye, so that, like thrifty housekeepers, we could see where and how fast the money was going, we should be less likely to commit extravagances. At present, these things are managed in such a hugger-mugger way, that we know not what we pay for; the poor man is charged as much as the rich; and, while we are saving and scrimping at the spigot, the government is drawing off at the bung. If we could know that a part of the money we expend for tea and coffee goes to buy powder and balls, and that it is Mexican blood which makes the clothes on our backs more costly, it would set some of us athinking. During the present fall, I have often pictured to myself a government official entering my study and handing me the following bill: —

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30, 1848.

N. B. Thankful for former favors, U. S. requests a continuance of patronage. Orders executed with neatness and despatch. Terms as low as those of any other contractor for the same kind and style of work.

I can fancy the official answering my look of horror with — "Yes, Sir, it looks like a high charge, Sir; but in these days slaughtering is slaughtering." Verily, I would that every one understood that it was; for it goes about obtaining money under the false pretence of being glory. For me, I have an imagination which plays me uncomfortable tricks. It happens to me sometimes to see a slaughterer on his way home from his day's work, and forthwith my imagination puts a cocked-hat upon his head and epaulettes upon his shoulders, and sets him up as a candidate for the Presidency. So, also, on a recent public occasion, as the place assigned to the "Reverend Clergy" is just behind that of "Officers of the Army and Navy" in processions, it was my fortune to be seated at the dinner-table over against one of these respectable persons. He was arrayed as (out of his own profession) only kings, court-officers, and footmen are in Europe, and Indians in America. Now what does my over-officious imagination but set to work upon him, strip him of his gay livery, and present him to me coatless, his trousers thrust into the tops of a pair of boots thick with clotted blood, and a basket on his arm out of which lolled a gore-smear'd axe, thereby destroying my relish for the temporal mercies upon the board before me! — H. No. IX

A THIRD LETTER FROM B. SAWIN, ESQ.

[UPON the following letter slender comment will be needful. In what river Seleemnus has Mr. Sawin bathed, that he has become so swiftly oblivious of his former loves? From an ardent and (as befits a soldier) confident wooer of that coy bride, the popular favor, we see him subside of a sudden into the (I trust not jilted) Cneinnatus, returning to his plough with a goodly sized branch of willow in his hand; figuratively returning, however, to a figurative plough, and from no profound affection for that honored implement of husbandry (for which, indeed, Mr. Sawin never displayed any decided predilection), but in order to be gracefully summoned therefrom to more congenial labors. It should seem that the character of the ancient Dictator had become part of the recognized stock of our modern political comedy, though, as our term of office extends to a quadrennial length, the parallel is not so minutely exact as could be desired. It is sufficiently so, however, for purposes of scenic representation. An humble cottage (if built of logs, the better) forms the Arcadian background of the stage. This rustic paradise is labelled Ashland, Jaalam, North Bend, Marshfield, Kinderhook, or Bâton Rouge, as occasion demands. Before the door stands a something with one handle (the other painted in proper perspective), which represents, in happy ideal vagueness, the plough. To this the defeated candidate rushes with delirious joy, welcomed as a father by appropriate groups of happy laborers, or from it the successful one is torn with difficulty, sustained alone by a noble sense of public duty. Only I have observed, that, if the scene be laid at Bâton Rouge or Ashland, the laborers are kept carefully in the background, and are heard to shout from behind the scenes in a singular tone resembling ululation, and accompanied by a sound not unlike vigorous clapping. This, however, may be artistically in keeping with the habits of the rustic population of those localities. The precise connection between agricultural pursuits and statesmanship I have not been able, after diligent inquiry, to discover. But, that my investigations may not be barren of all fruit, I will mention one curious statistical fact, which I consider thoroughly established, namely, that no real farmer ever attains practically beyond a seat in the General Court, however theoretically qualified for more exalted station.

It is probable that some other prospect has been opened to Mr. Sawin, and that he has not made this great sacrifice without some definite understanding in regard to a seat in the cabinet or a foreign mission. It may be supposed that we of Jaalam were not untouched by a feeling of villatic pride in beholding our townsman occupying so large a space in the public eye. And to me, deeply revolving the qualifications necessary to a candidate in these frugal times, those of Mr. S. seemed peculiarly adapted to a successful campaign. The loss of a leg, an arm, an eye, and four fingers reduced him so nearly to the condition of a vox et præterea nihil that I could think of nothing but the loss of his head by which his chance could have been bettered. But since he has chosen to balk our suffrages, we must content ourselves with what we can get, remembering lactucas non esse dandas, dum cardui sufficient. — H. W.]

I SPOSE you recollect that I explained my gennle views In the last billet thet I writ, 'way down frum Veery Cruze, Jest arter I'd a kin' o' ben spontaneously sot up To run unannermously fer the Preserden-tial cup;

O' course it worn't no wish o' mine, 't wuz fertilely distressin', But poppler enthusiasm gut so almighty pressin' Thet, though like sixty all along I fumed an' fussed an' sorrered, There didn't seem no ways to stop their bringin' on me forrerd: Fact is, they udged the matter so, I could n't help admittin' The Father o' his Country's shoes no feet but mine 'ould fit in,
Besides the savin' o' the soles fer ages to succeed,
Seein' thet with one wannut foot, a pair'd be more 'n I need;
An', tell ye wut, them shoes 'll want a thund'r in sight o' patchin', Ef this ere fashion is to last we've gut into o' hatchin'
A pair o' second Washintons fer every new election, — Though, fer ez number one's consarned, I don't make no objection.

I wuz agoin' on to say thet wen at fust I saw The masses would stick to 't I wuz the Country's father-'n-law, (They would ha' hed it Father, but I told 'em 't would n't du, Coz thet wuz suthin' of a sort they could n't split in tu, An' Washinton hed hed the thing laid fairly to his door, Nor dars n't say 't worn't his'n, much ez sixty year afore,)
But 't aint no matter ez to thet; wen I wuz nomernated,
'T worn't natur but wut I should feel con-sid'able elated,
An' wile the hooraw o' the thing wuz kind o' noo an' fresh,
I thought our ticket would ha' caird the country with a resh.

Sence I've come hum, though, an' looked round, I think I seem to find Strong argimunts ez thick ez fleas to make me change my mind;
It's clear to any one whose brain aint fur gone in a pthisis, Thet hail Columby's happy land is goin'
thru a crisis,
An' 't would n't no ways du to hev the people's mind distracted

By bein' all to once by sev'ral pop'lar names attacked;
'T would save holl haycartloads o' fuss an'
three four months o' jaw, Ef some illustrious paytriot should back out an' withdraw;
So, ez I aint a crooked stick, jest like — like ole (I swow, I dunno ez I know his name) — I'll go back to my plough.
Wenever an Amerikin distinguished poli-tishin Begins to try et wut they call definin' his posishin,
Wal, I, fer one, feel sure he aint gut nothin' to define;
It's so nine cases out o' ten, but jest that tenth is mine;
An' 't aint no more 'n is proper 'n right in sech a sitooation
To hint the course you think 'll be the savin' o' the nation;
To funk right out o' p'lit'cal strife aint thought to be the thing, Without you deacon off the toon you want your folks should sing;
So I edvise the noomrous friends thet's in one boat with me To jest up killick, jam right down their hellum hard ale, Haul the sheets taut, an', layin' out upon the Suthun tack, Make fer the safest port they can, wich, I think, is Ole Zack.

Next thing you 'll want to know, I spose, wut argimunts I seem To see thet makes me think this ere 'll be the strongest team; Fust place, I've ben consid'ble round in bar-rooms an' saloons Agetherin' public sentiment, 'mongst Demmercrats and Coons, An' 't aint ve'y often thet I meet a chap but wut goes in Fer Rough an' Ready, fair an' square, hufs, taller, horns, an' skin;
I don't deny but wut, fer one, ez fur ez I could see,
I did n't like at fust the Pheladelphia nom-ernee:
I could ha' pintoed to a man thet wuz, I guess, a peg Higher than him, — a soger, tu, an' with a wooden leg;

But every day with more an' more o' Taylor zeal I'm burnin', Seein' wich way the tide thet sets to office is aturnin'; Wy, into Bellers's we notched the votes down on three sticks, —
 'T wuz Birdofredum one, Cass aught, an' Taylor twenty-six,
 An' bein' the on'y canderdate thet wuz upon the ground,
 They said 't wuz no more 'n right thet I should pay the drinks all round; Ef I'd expected sech a trick, I would n't ha' cut my foot
 By goin' an' votin' fer myself like a consumed coot;
 It did n't make no deff'rence, though; I wish I may be cust, Ef Bellers wuz n't slim enough to say he would n't trust!

Another pint thet influences the minds o' sober jedges
 Is thet the Gin'ral hez n't gut tied hand an' foot with pledges;
 He hez n't told ye wut he is, an' so there aint no knowin'
 But wut he may turn out to be the best there is agoin';
 This, at the on'y spot thet pinched, the shoe directly eases, Coz every one is free to 'xpect percisely wut he pleases:
 I want free-trade; you don't; the Gin'ral is n't bound to neither; — I vote my way; you, yourn; an' both air sooted to a T there.
 Ole Rough an' Ready, tu, 's a Wig, but without bein' ultry; He's like a holsome hayin' day, thet's warm, but is n't sultry; He's jest wut I should call myself, a kin' o' scratch ez 't ware, Thet aint exacly all a wig nor wholly your own hair;
 I've ben a Wig three weeks myself, jest o'
 this mod'rate sort,
 An' don't find them an' Demmercrats so defferent ez I thought; They both act pooty much alike, an' push an' scrouge an' eus; They're like two pickpockets in league fer Uncle Samwell's pus;
 Each takes a side, an' then they squeeze the ole man in between 'em,

Turn all his pockets wrong side out an' quick ez lightnin' clean 'em;
 To nary one on 'em I'd trust a secon'- handed rail
 No furdur off 'an I could sling a bullock by the tail.

Webster sot matters right in thet air Mashfiel' speech o' his'n; —
 "Taylor," sez he, "aint nary ways the one thet I'd a chizzen, Nor he aint fittin' fer the place, an' like ez not he aint No more 'n a tough ole bullethead, an' no gret of a saint;
 But then," sez he, "obsarve my pint, he's jest ez good to vote fer Ez though the greasin' on him worn't a thing to hire Choate fer; Aint it ez easy done to drop a ballot in a box
 Fer one ez 't is fer t' other, fer the bull-dog ez the fox?"
 It takes a mind like Dannel's, fact, ez big ez all on' doors,
 To find out thet it looks like rain arter it fairly pours;
 I'gree with him, it aint so drefle troublesome to vote
 Fer Taylor arter all, — it's jest to go an' change your coat;
 Wen he's once greased, you'll swaller him an' never know on 't, seource, Unless he scratches, goin' down, with them
 'ere Gin'ral's spurs.
 I've ben a votin' Demmercrat, ez reg'lar as a clock,
 But don't find goin' Taylor gives my narves no gret 'f a shock; Truth is, the cutest leadin' Wigs, ever sence fust they found Wich side the bread gut buttered on, hev kep' a edgin' round;
 They kin' o' slipt the planks frum out th' ole platform one by one An' made it gradooally noo, 'fore folks know'd wut wuz done, Till, fur 'z I know, there aint an inch thet I could lay my han' on,
 But I, or any Demmercrat, feels comf'table to stan' on,
 An' ole Wig doctrines act'lly look, their occ'pants bein' gone, Lonesome ez steddles on a mash without no hayricks on.

I spose it's time now I should give my thoughts upon the plan, Thet chipped the shell at Buffalo, o' settin' up ole Van.
 I used to vote fer Martin, but, I swan, I'm clean disgusted, —
 He aint the man thet I can say is fittin' to be trusted;
 He aint half antislav'ry 'nough, nor I aint sure, ez some be,
 He 'd go in fer abolishin' the Deestrick o' Columby;
 An', now I come to racollec', it kin' o' makes me sick 'z
 A horse, to think o' wut he wuz in eighteen thirty-six.
 An' then, another thing; — I guess, though mebbly I am wrong,
 This Buff'lo plaster aint agoin' to dror almighty strong;
 Some folks, I know, hev gut th' idee thet No'thun dough 'll rise, Though, 'fore I see it riz an' baked, I would n't trust my eyes;
 'T will take more emptins, a long chalk, than this noo party's gut,
 To give sech heavy cakes ez them a start, I tell ye wut.
 But even ef they caird the day, there would n't be no endurin'
 To stan' upon a platform with sech critters ez Van Buren; —
 An' his son John, tu, I can't think how thet 'ere chap should dare To speak ez he doos; wy, they say he used to cuss an' swear!
 I spose he never read the hymn thet tells how down the stairs
 A feller with long legs wuz throwed thet would n't say his prayers.
 This brings me to another pint: the leaders o' the party Aint jest sech men ez I can act along with free an' hearty;
 They aint not quite respectable, an' wen a feller's morrils Don't toe the straightest kin' o' mark, wy, him an' me jest quarrels.
 I went to a free soil meetin' once, an' wut d' ye think I see?
 A feller wuz asputuin' there thet act'lly come to me,
 About two year ago last spring, ez nigh ez I can judge,

An' axed me ef I didn't want to sign the Temprunce pledge!
 He 's one o' them that goes about an' sez you hed n't oughter Drink nothin', mornin', noon, or night, stronger 'an Taunton water.
 There 's one rule I've ben guided by, in settlin' how to vote, ollers, —
 I take the side thet is n't took by them consarned teetotallers.
 Ez fer the niggers, I've ben South, an' thet hez changed my min';
 A lazier, more ongrateful set you could n't nowers fin'.
 You know I mentioned in my last thet I should buy a nigger, Ef I could make a purchase at a pooty mod'rate figger;
 So, ez there 's nothin' in the world I'm fonder o' 'an gunnin', I closed a bargain finally to take a feller runnin'.
 I shou'dered queen's-arm an' stumped out, an' wen I come t' th' swamp,
 'T worn't very long afore I gut upon the nest o' Pomp;
 I come acrost a kin' o' hut, an', playin round the door,
 Some little woolly-headed cubs, ez many 'z six or more.
 At fust I thought o' firin', but think twice is safest ollers;
 There aint, thinks I, not one on 'em but 's wuth his twenty dollars, Or would be, ef I hed 'em back into a Christian land, — How temptin' all on 'em would look upon an auction-stand!
 (Not but wut I hate Slavery, in th' abstract, stem to starn, — I leave it ware our fathers did, a privit State consarn.) Soon 'z they see me, they yelled an' run, but Pomp wuz out aboein'
 A leetle patch o' corn he hed, or else there aint no knowin'
 He would n't ha' took a pop at me; but I hed gut the start,
 An' wen he looked, I vow he groaned ez though he 'd broke his heart;
 He done it like a wite man, tu, ez nat'ral ez a pictur,
 The imp'dunt, pis'nous hypocrite! wus 'an a boy constrictur.

"You can't gum me, I tell ye now, an' so you need n't try,
 I 'xpect my eye-teeth every mail, so jest shet up," sez I.
 "Don't go to actin' ugly now, or else I'll let her strip, You'd best draw kindly, seein' 'z how I've gut ye on the hip;
 Besides, you darned ole fool, it aint no gret of a disaster
 To be benev'lently druv back to a contented master, Ware you hed Christian priv'ledges you don't seem quite aware on,
 Or you'd ha' never run away from bein' well took care on;
 Ez fer kin' treatment, wy, he wuz so fond on ye, he said He'd give a fifty spot right out, to git ye,
 'live or dead;
 Wite folks aint sot by half ez much; 'member I run away, Wen I wuz bound to Cap'n Jakes, to Mattysqumscot Bay;
 Don' know him, likely? Spose not; wal, the mean old codger went An' offered — wut reward, think? Wal, it worn't no less 'n a cent." Wal, I jest gut 'em into line, an' druv 'em on afore me;
 The pis'nous brutes, I'd no idee o' the ill-will they bore me;
 We walked till som'ers about noon, an' then it grew so hot I thought it best to camp awile, so I chose out a spot
 Jest under a magnoly tree, an' there right down I sot;
 Then I unstrapped my wooden leg, coz it begun to chafe,
 An' laid it down 'longside o' me, supposin' all wuz safe;
 I made my darkies all set down around me in a ring,
 An' sot an' kin' o' eiphered up how much the lot would bring;
 But, wile I dranked the peaceful cup of a pure heart an' min' (Mixed with some whiskey, now an' then),
 Pomp he snaked up behin', An' creepin' grad'lly close tu, ez quiet ez a mink,
 Jest grabbed my leg, an' then pulled foot, quicker 'an you could wink,

An', come to look, they each on 'em hed gut behin' a tree,
 An' Pomp poked out the leg a piece, jest so ez I could see,
 An' yelled to me to throw away my pistils an' my gun,
 Or else thet they'd cair off the leg, an' fairly cut an' run.
 I vow I did n't b'lieve there wuz a decent alligatur Thet hed a heart so destitoot o' common human natur;
 However, ez there worn't no help, I finally give in An' heft my arms away to git my leg safe back agin.
 Pomp gethered all the weapins up, an' then he come an' grinned,
 He showed his ivory some, I guess, an' sez,
 "You're fairly pinned;
 Jest buckle on your leg agin, an' git right up 'come,
 'Twon't du fer fammerly men like me to be so long frum hum."
 At fust I put my foot right down an' swore I would n't budge.
 "Jest ez you choose," sez he, quite cool,
 "either be shot or trudge."
 So this black-hearted monster took an' act'lly druv me back Along the very footmarks o' my happy mornin' track,
 An' kep' me pris'ner 'bout six months, an'
 worked me, tu, like sin, Till I hed gut his corn an' his Carliny taters in;
 He made me larn him readin', tu (although the crittur saw How much it hut my morril sense to act agin the law), So'st he could read a Bible he'd gut; an' axed ef I could pint
 The North Star out; but there I put his nose some out o' jint, Fer I weeled roun' about sou'west, an',
 lookin' up a bit,
 Picked out a middlin' shiny one an' tole him thet wuz it.
 Fin'lly he took me to the door, an' givin' me a kick, Sez, "Ef you know wut's best fer ye, be off, now, double-quick;
 The winter-time 's a comin' on, an' though I gut ye cheap,

You're so darned lazy, I don't think you're hardly with your keep;
 Besides, the childrin's growin' up, an' you aint jest the model I'd like to hev 'em immertate, an' so you'd better toddle !"

Now is there anythin' on airth 'll ever prove to me

Thet renegader slaves like him air fit fer bein' free ?

D' you think they 'll suck me in to jine the Buff'lo chaps, an' them Rank infidels thet go agin the Scriptur' cus o' Shem ?

Not by a jugfull ! sooner 'n thet, I'd go thru fire an' water;

Wen I hev once made up my mind, a meet'nhus aint sotter;

No, not though all the crows thet flies to pick my bones wuz cawin', —

I guess we're in a Christian land, —

Yourn,

BIRDOFREDUM SAWIN.

It may seem to some that too much space has been usurped by my own private lucubrations, and some may be fain to bring against me that old jest of him who preached all his hearers out of the meeting-house save only the sexton, who, remaining for yet a little space, from a sense of official duty, at last gave out also, and, presenting the keys, humbly requested our preacher to lock the doors, when he should have wholly relieved himself of his testimony. I confess to a satisfaction in the self act of preaching, nor do I esteem a discourse to be wholly thrown away even upon a sleeping or unintelligent auditory. I cannot easily believe that the Gospel of Saint John, which Jacques Cartier ordered to be read in the Latin tongue to the Canadian savages, upon his first meeting with them, fell altogether upon stony ground. For the earnestness of the preacher is a sermon appreciable by dumbest intellects and most alien ears. In this wise did Episcopus convert many to his opinions, who yet understood not the language in which he discoursed. The chief thing is that the messenger believe that he has an authentic message to deliver. For counterfeit messengers that mode of treatment which Father John de Plano Carпинi relates to have prevailed among the Tartars would seem effectual, and, perhaps, deserved enough. For my own part, I may lay claim to so much of the spirit of martyrdom as would have led me to go into banishment with those clergymen whom Alphonso the Sixth of Portugal drove out of his kingdom for refusing to shorten their pulpit eloquence. It is possible, that, having been invited into my brother Biglow's desk, I may have been too little scrupulous in using it for the venting of my own peculiar doctrines to a congregation drawn together in the expectation and with the desire of hearing him.

I am not wholly unconscious of a peculiarity of mental organization which impels me, like the railroad-engine with its train of cars, to run backward for a short distance in order to obtain a fairer start. I may compare myself to one fishing from the rocks when the sea runs high, who, misinterpreting the suction of the undertow for the biting of some larger fish, jerks suddenly, and finds that he has caught bottom, hauling in upon the end of his line a trail of various algæ, among which, nevertheless, the naturalist may haply find somewhat to repay the disappointment of the angler. Yet have I conscientiously endeavored to adapt myself to the impatient temper of the age, daily degenerating more and more from the high standard of our pristine New England. To the catalogue of lost arts I would mournfully add also that of listening to two-hour sermons. Surely we have been abridged into a race of pygmies. For, truly, in those of the old discourses yet subsisting to us in print, the endless spinal column of divisions and subdivisions can be likened to nothing so exactly as to the vertebrae of the saurians, whence the theorist may conjecture a race of Anakim proportionate to the withstanding of these other monsters. I say Anakim rather than Nephelim, because there seem reasons for supposing that the race of those whose heads (though no giants) are constantly enveloped in clouds (which that name imports) will never become extinct. The attempt to vanquish the innumerable heads of one of those afore-mentioned discourses may supply us with a plausible interpretation of the second labor of Hercules, and his successful experiment with fire affords us a useful precedent.

But while I lament the degeneracy of the age in this regard, I cannot refuse to succumb to its influence. Looking out through my study-window, I see Mr. Biglow at a distance busy in gathering his Baldwins, of which, to judge by the number of barrels lying about under the trees, his crop is more abundant than my own, — by which sight I am admonished to turn to those orchards of the mind wherein my labors may be more prospered, and apply myself diligently to the preparation of my next Sabbath's discourse. — H. THE best introduction to the Second Series of the Biglow Papers is to be found in Lowell's prose papers on political topics contributed to the Atlantic Monthly and the North American Review from 1858 to 1860, some of which have been reprinted in the fifth volume of the Riverside edition of his Writings. Just before Mr. Lincoln's election in 1860 he wrote: "We are approaching a crisis in our domestic policy more momentous than any that has arisen since we became a nation." The crisis arrived, and during 1861 his political sagacity, his ardent patriotism, his moral genius were displayed in a series of essays which did much to enlighten and confirm the roused spirit of the Northern people. But more was wanting of him. His verse could reach more ears than his or any other writer's prose. He was urged to write fresh Biglow Papers, and in a letter dated the last day of the year 1860, Lowell wrote: "As for new Biglow Papers, God knows how I should like to write them, if they would only make me as they did before. But I am so occupied and bothered that I have no time to brood, which with me is as needful a preliminary to hatching anything as with a clucking hen. However, I am going to try my hand, and see what comes of it." It was a year, however, before the first of the new series appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, and he wrote of it to Miss Norton: "I have been writing a Biglow Paper, and I feel as nervous about it as a young author not yet weaned of public favor. It was clean against my critical judgment, for I don't believe in resuscitations, — we hear no good of the posthumous Lazarus, — but I may get into the vein and do some good." The first of the series was published in January, 1862, and the stimulus Lowell needed came quickly in the Trent affair, which drew out of him at once Mason and Slidell: a Yankee Idyl, which appeared in February. "If I am not mistaken," he wrote to Mr. Fields on sending it, "it will take." The third followed in March, and Lowell wrote again to Mr. Fields: "As for the Biglow — glad you like it. If not so good as the others, the public will be sure to. I think well of the Fable and believe there is nothing exotic therein. I am going to kill Wilbur before long, and give a 'would-have-been' obituary on him in the American style. That is, for example, 'he wrote no epic, but if he had, he would have been,' etc. I don't know how many of these future-conditional geniuses we have produced — many score, certainly. . . . Good-by-yours — with a series of Biglows rising, like the visionary kings before Macbeth, to destroy all present satisfaction."

Lowell did not kill Parson Wilbur immediately. Three more numbers followed, the fourth, fifth, and sixth, in April, May, and June. Then there was an interval when the rustic muse refused to come at a call. "It's no use," the poet wrote June 5, 1862, to Fields, who had evidently been asking for the July portion; "I reverse the gospel difficulty, and while the flesh is willing enough the spirit is weak. My brain must lie fallow a spell — there is no superphosphate for those worn-out fields. Better no crop than small potatoes. I want to have the passion of the thing on me again and beget lusty Biglows. I am all the more dejected because you have treated me so well. But I must rest awhile. My brain is out of kilter." Mr. Fields returned to the attack the next month, and Lowell wrote him a humorous letter in which he expressed his amazement at having kept his word about the six already written, and had some hopes that two ideas he cherished might come to something. At last he seems to have fallen back on his scheme for putting Parson Wilbur to death, and made it an excuse for the seventh paper, Latest Views of Mr. Biglow, which appeared in The Atlantic for February, 1863. Other occupations at this time engrossed him, and he again wrote to Mr. Fields, October 18, 1864: "Firstly, whar's Biglow? Let echo repeat her customary observation, adding only that I began one, but it would not go. I had idees in plenty, but all I could do, they would not marry themselves to immortal worse. Not only did I wish to write, for there was a chance of a thousand, but I wanted money — so there can be no doubt I was in earnest." It was not till peace was imminent that he wrote again, the moving tenth satire, which was published in April, 1865. The final paper, called out by the Johnson retrograde movement, was published in The Atlantic for May, 1866. The papers numbered VIII. and IX. did not appear in print until the book was published in the fall of the same year.

Lowell more than once spoke of this second series of Biglow Papers as in his judgment better than the first. In a letter to Thomas Hughes twenty years after the book appeared, he wrote as follows: "Pray, who is 'F. T.,' who has been writing about me in so friendly a way in the Cornhill? He is a little out now and then, but strikes me as in the main judicious. He is wrong about the second part of the Biglow Papers. I think had he read these first, he would have seen they had more permanent qualities than their predecessors, less fun and more humor perhaps. And pray what natural scenery would he have me describe but my own? If you know him, tell him I think two European birds beat any of ours, the nightingale and the blackbird. The lark beats any of them also by sentiment and association, though not vocally. I suppose I should have been a more poetical poet if I had not been a professor. A poet should feed on nothing but poetry as they used to say a drone could be turned into a queen-bee by a diet of bee-bread."

When the book appeared it bore a dedication to E. R. Hoar, and was introduced by the essay on the Yankee form of English speech, which, as we have seen, he had long ago proposed writing. This Introduction is so distinctly an essay that it has been thought best to print it as an appendix to this volume, rather than allow it to break in upon the pages of verse. There is, however, one passage in it which may be repeated here, since it bears directly upon the poem which serves as a sort of prelude to the series.

"The only attempt I had ever made at anything like a pastoral (if that may be called an attempt which was the result almost of pure accident) was in The Courtin'. While the introduction to the First Series was going through the press. I received word from the printer that there was a blank page left which must be filled. I sat down at once and improvised another fictitious 'notice of the press,' in which, because verse would fill up space more cheaply than prose, I inserted an extract from a supposed ballad of Mr. Biglow. I kept no copy of it, and the printer, as directed, cut it off when the gap was filled. Presently I began to receive letters asking for the rest of it, sometimes for the balance of it. I had none, but to answer such demands, I patched a conclusion upon it in a later edition. Those who had only the first continued to importune me. Afterward, being asked to write it out as an autograph for the Baltimore Sanitary Commission Fair, I added other verses, into some of which I infused a little more sentiment in a homely way, and after a fashion completed it by sketching in the characters and making a connected story. Most likely I have spoiled it, but I shall put it at the end of this Introduction, to answer once for all those kindly importunings."

THE COURTIN'

God makes sech nights, all white an' still Fur 'z you can look or listen, Moonshine an' snow on field an' hill,
All silence an' all glisten.

Zekle crep' up quite unbeknown
An' peeked in thru' the winder, An' there sot Huldy all alone,
'ith no one nigh to hender.

A fireplace filled the room's one side With half a cord o' wood in — There war n't no stoves (tell comfort died)
To bake ye to a puddin'.

The wa'nut logs shot sparkles out Towards the pootiest, bless her,
An' leetle flames danced all about The chiny on the dresser.

Agin the chimbley crook-necks hung,
An' in amongst 'em rusted
The ole queen's-arm thet gran'ther Young Fetched back f'om Concord busted.

The very room, coz she was in,
Seemed warr' f'om floor to ceilin',
An' she looked full ez rosy agin Ez the apples she was peelin'.

'T was kin' o' kingdom-come to look On sech a blessed cretur,
A dogrose blushin' to a brook Ain't modester nor sweeter.

He was six foot o' man, A 1,
Clear grit an' human natur', None could n't quicker pitch a ton Nor dror a furrer straighter.

He 'd sparked it with full twenty gals, Hed squired 'em, danced 'em, druv 'em, Fust this one, an' then thet, by spells —
All is, he could n't love 'em.

But long o' her his veins 'ould run
All crinkly like curled maple,
The side she breshed felt full o' sun Ez a south slope in Ap'il.

She thought no v'ice hed sech a swing Ez hisn in the choir;
My! when he made Ole Hunderd ring,
She knowed the Lord was nigher.

An' she 'd blush scarlit, right in prayer,
When her new meetin'-bunnet Felt somehow thru' its crown a pair O' blue eyes sot upun it.

Thet night, I tell ye, she looked some!
She seemed to 've gut a new soul,
For she felt sartin-sure he 'd come, Down to her very shoe-sole.

She heered a foot, an' knowed it tu,
A-raspin' on the scraper, —
All ways to once her feelins flew Like sparks in burnt-up paper.

He kin' o' l'itered on the mat,
Some doubtfle o' the sekle,
His heart kep' goin' pity-pat,
But hern went pity Zekle.

An' yit she gin her cheer a jerk Ez though she wished him further,
An' on her apples kep' to work,
Parin' away like murder.

"You want to see my Pa, I s'pose?"
"Wal . . . no . . . I come dasignin'" —
"To see my Ma? She's sprinklin' clo'es Agin to-morrer's i'nin'."

To say why gals acts so or so,
Or don't, 'ould be persumin'; Mebby to mean yes an' say no
Comes nateral to women.

He stood a spell on one foot fust,
Then stood a spell on t' other,
An' on which one he felt the wust
He could n't ha' told ye nuther.

Says he, "I 'd better call agin;"
Says she, "Think likely, Mister:"
Thet last word pricked him like a pin, An' . . . Wal, he up an' kist her.

When Ma bimeby upon 'em slips, Huldy sot pale ez ashes,
All kin' o' smily roun' the lips
An' teary roun' the lashes.

For she was jes' the quiet kind Whose natures never vary,
Like streams that keep a summer mind Snowhid in Jenooary.

The blood clost roun' her heart felt glued Too tight for all expressin', Tell mother see how metters stood,
An' gin 'em both her blessin'.

Then her red come back like the tide Down to the Bay o' Fundy,
An' all I know is they was cried
In meetin' come nex' Sunday.

SECOND SERIES

NO. I

BIRDOFREDUM SAWIN, ESQ., TO
MR. HOSEA BIGLOW

LETTER FROM THE REVEREND HOMER
WILBUR, M. A., ENCLOSING THE EPISTLE AFORESAID

JAALAM, 15th Nov., 1861.

It is not from any idle wish to obtrude my humble person with undue prominence upon the publick view that I resume my pen upon the present occasion. Juniores ad labores. But having been a main instrument in rescuing the talent of my young parishioner from being buried in the ground, by giving it such warrant with the world as could be derived from a name already widely known by several printed discourses (all of which I may be permitted without immodesty to state have been deemed worthy of preservation in the Library of Harvard College by my esteemed friend Mr. Sibley), it seemed becoming that I should not only testify to the genuineness of the following production, but call attention to it, the more as Mr. Biglow had so long been silent as to be in danger of absolute oblivion. I insinuate no claim to any share in the authorship (vix ea nostra voco) of the works already published by Mr. Biglow, but merely take to myself the credit of having fulfilled toward them the office of taster (experto crede), who, having first tried, could afterward bear witness (credenzen) it was aptly named by the Germans), an office always arduous, and sometimes even dangerous, as in the case of those devoted persons who venture their lives in the deglutition of patent medicines (dolus latet in generalibus, there is deceit in the most of them) and thereafter are wonderfully preserved long enough to append their signatures to testimonials in the diurnal and hebdomadal prints. I say not this as covertly glancing at the authors of certain manuscripts which have been submitted to my literary judgment (though an epick in twenty-four books on the "Taking of Jericho" might, save for the prudent forethought of Mrs. Wilbur in secreting the same just as I had arrived beneath the walls and was beginning a catalogue of the various horns and their blowers, too ambitiously emulous in longanimity of Homer's list of ships, might, I say, have rendered frustrate any hope I could entertain vacare Musis for the small remainder of my days), but only the further to secure myself against any imputation of unseemly forthputting. I will barely subjoin, in this connexion, that, whereas Job was left to desire, in the soreness of his heart, that his adversary had written a book, as perchance misanthropically wishing to indite a review thereof, yet was not Satan allowed so far to tempt him as to send Bildad, Eliphaz, and Zophar each with an unprinted work in his wallet to be submitted to his censure. But of this enough. Were I in need of other excuse, I might add that I write by the express desire of Mr. Biglow himself, whose entire winter leisure is occupied, as he assures me, in answering demands for autographs, a labor exacting enough in itself, and egregiously so to him, who, being no ready penman, cannot sign so much as his name without strange contortions of the face (his nose, even, being essential to complete success) and painfully suppressed Saint-Vitus-dance of every muscle in his body. This, with his having been put in the Commission of the Peace by our excellent Governor (O, si sic omnes!) immediately on his accession to office, keeps him continually employed. Haud inexpertus loquor, having for many years written myself J. P., and being not seldom applied to for specimens of my chirography, a request to which I have sometimes over weakly assented, believing as I do that nothing written of set purpose can properly be called an autograph, but only those unpremeditated sallies and lively runnings which betray the fireside Man instead of the hunted Notoriety doubling on his pursuers. But it is time that I should bethink me of St. Austin's prayer, libera me a meipso, if I would arrive at the matter in hand.

Moreover, I had yet another reason for taking up the pen myself. I am informed that "The Atlantic Monthly" is mainly indebted for its success to the contributions and editorial supervision of Dr. Holmes, whose excellent "Annals of America" occupy an honored place upon my shelves. The journal itself I have never seen; but if this be so, it might seem that the recommendation of a brother-clergyman (though par magis quam similis) should carry a greater weight. I suppose that you have a department for historical lucubrations, and should be glad, if deemed desirable, to forward for publication my "Collections for the Antiquities of Jaalam," and my (now happily complete) pedigree of the Wilbur family from its fons et origo, the Wild Boar of Ardennes. Withdrawn from the active duties of my profession by the settlement of a colleague-pastor, the Reverend Jeduthun Hitchcock, formerly of Brutus Four-Corners, I might find time for further contributions to general literature on similar topics. I have made large advances towards a completer genealogy of Mrs. Wilbur's family, the Pilcoxes, not, if I know myself, from any idle vanity, but with the sole desire of rendering myself useful in my day and generation. Nulla dies sine lineâ. I inclose a meteorological register, a list of the births, deaths, and marriages, and a few memorabilia of longevity in Jaalam East Parish for the last half-century. Though spared to the unusual period of more than eighty years, I find no diminution of my faculties or abatement of my natural vigor, except a scarcely sensible decay of memory and a necessity of recurring to younger eyesight or spectacles for the finer print in Cruden. It would gratify me to make some further provision for declining years from the emoluments of my literary labors. I had intended to effect an insurance on my life, but was deterred therefrom by a circular from one of the offices, in which the sudden death of so large a proportion of the insured was set forth as an inducement, that it seemed to me little less than a tempting of Providence. Neque in summâ inopiâ levis esse senectus potest, ne sapienti quidem.

Thus far concerning Mr. Biglow; and so much seemed needful (brevis esse laboro) by way of preliminary, after a silence of fourteen years. He greatly fears lest he may in this essay have fallen below himself, well knowing that, if exercise be dangerous on a full stomach, no less so is writing on a full reputation. Beset as he has been on all sides, he could not refrain, and would only imprecate patience till he shall again have "got the hang" (as he calls it) of an accomplishment long disused. The letter of Mr. Sawin was received some time in last June, and others have followed which will in due season be submitted to the publick. How largely his statements are to be depended on, I more than merely dubitate. He was always distinguished for a tendency to exaggeration, — it might almost be qualified by a stronger term. Fortiter mentire, aliquid hæret, seemed to be his favorite rule of rhetoric. That he is actually where he says he is the postmark would seem to confirm; that he was received with the publick demonstrations he describes would appear consonant with what we know of the habits of those regions; but further than this I venture not to decide. I have sometimes suspected a vein of humor in him which leads him to speak by contraries; but since, in the unrestrained intercourse of private life, I have never observed in him any striking powers of invention, I am the more willing to put a certain qualified faith in the incidents and the details of life and manners which give to his narratives some portion of the interest and entertainment which characterizes a Century Sermon.

It may be expected of me that I should say something to justify myself with the world for a seeming inconsistency with my well-known principles in allowing my youngest son to raise a company for the war, a fact known to all through the medium of the publick prints. I did reason with the young man, but expellas naturam furcâ, tamen usque recurrit. Having myself been a chaplain in 1812, I could the less wonder that a man of war had sprung from my loins. It was, indeed, grievous to send my Benjamin, the child of my old age; but after the discomfiture of Manassas, I with my own hands did buckle on his armor, trusting in the great Comforter and Commander for strength according to my need. For truly the memory of a brave son dead in his shroud were a greater staff of my declining years than a living coward (if those may be said to have lived who carry all of themselves into the grave with them), though his days might be long in the land, and he should get much goods. It is not till our earthen vessels are broken that we find and truly possess the treasure that was laid up in them. Migravi in animam meam, I have sought refuge in my own soul; nor would I be shamed by the heathen comedian with his Nequam illud verbum, bene vult, nisi bene facit. During our dark days, I read constantly in the inspired book of Job, which I believe to contain more food to maintain the fibre of the soul for right living and high thinking than all pagan literature together, though I would by no means vilipend the study of the classicks. There I read that Job said in his despair, even as the fool saith in his heart there is no God, — "The tabernacles of robbers prosper, and they that provoke God are secure." (Job xii. 6.) But I sought farther till I found this Scripture also, which I would have those perpend who have striven to turn our Israel aside to the worship of strange gods: "If I did despise the cause of my man-servant or of my maid-servant when they contended with me, what then shall I do when God riseth up? and when he visiteth, what shall I answer him?" (Job xxxi. 13, 14.) On this text I preached a discourse on the last day of Fasting and Humiliation with general acceptance, though there were not wanting one or two Laodiceans who said that I should have waited till the President announced his policy. But let us hope and pray, remembering this of Saint Gregory, Vult Deus rogari, vult cogi, vult quâdam importunitate vinci.

We had our first fall of snow on Friday last. Frosts have been unusually backward this fall. A singular circumstance occurred in this town on the 20th October, in the family of Deacon Pelatiah Tinkham. On the previous evening, a few moments before family prayers,

[The editors of the "Atlantic" find it necessary here to cut short the letter of their valued correspondent, which seemed calculated rather on the rates of longevity in Jaalam than for less favored localities. They have every encouragement to hope that he will write again.]

With esteem and respect,

Your obedient servant,

HOMER WILBUR, A. M.

It's some consid'ble of a spell sence I hain't writ no letters,
An' ther' 's gret changes hez took place in all polit'cle metters;
Some canderdates air dead an' gone, an' some hez ben defeated, Which 'mounts to pooty much the same; fer it's ben proved repeated A betch o' bread thet hain't riz once ain't goin' to rise agin, An' it's jest money throwed away to put the emptins in:

But thet's wut folks wun't never larn; they dunno how to go, Arter you want their room, no more 'n a bullet-headed beau;
Ther' 's ollers chaps a-hangin' roun' thet can't see peatime's past, Mis'ble as roosters in a rain, heads down an' tails half-mast:
It ain't disgraceful bein' beat, when a holl nation doos it But Chance is like an amberill, — it don't take twice to lose it.

I spose you 're kin' o' cur'ous, now, to know why I hain't writ.

Wal, I've ben where a litt'ry taste don't somehow seem to git Th' encouragement a feller'd think, thet 's used to public schools, An' where sech things ez paper 'n' ink air clean agin the rules:
A kind o' vicyvarsy house, built drefle strong an' stout,
So 's 't honest people can't get in, ner t' other sort git out,
An' with the winders so contrived, you'd prob'ly like the view Better alookin' in than out, though it seems sing'lar, tu;
But then the landlord sets by ye, can't bear ye out o' sight,
And locks ye up ez reg'lar ez an outside door at night.

This world is awfle contrary: the rope may stretch your neck Thet mebbey kep' another chap frum washin' off a wreck;
An' you may see the taters grow in one poor feller's patch,
So small no self-respectin' hen thet vallied time 'ould scratch,
So small the rot can't find 'em out, an' then agin, nex' door, Ez big ez wut hogs dream on when they're 'most too fat to snore.
But gROUTIN' ain't no kin' o' use; an' ef the fust throw fails, Why, up an' try agin, thet's all, — the cop-pers ain't all tails, Though I hev seen 'em when I thought they hed n't no more head Than 'd sarve a nussin' Brigadier thet gits some ink to shed.

When I writ last, I 'd ben turned loose by thet blamed nigger, Pomp, Ferlornor than a musquash, ef you 'd took an' dreened his swamp:
But I ain't o' the meechin' kind, thet sets an' thinks fer weeks
The bottom's out o' th' univarse coz their own gillpot leaks.
I hed to cross bayous an' criks, (wal, it did beat all natur'), Upon a kin' o' corderoy, fust log, then alligator; Luck'ly, the critters warn't sharp-sot; I guess 't wuz overruled

They 'd done their mornin's marketin' an' gut their hunger cooled; Fer missionaries to the Creeks an' runaways are viewed
 By them an' folks ez sent express to be their reg'lar food; Wutever 't wuz, they laid an' snoozed ez peacefully ez sinners, Meek ez disgustin' deacons be at ordination dinners;
 Ef any on 'em turned an' snapped, I let 'em kin' o' taste
 My live-oak leg, an' so, ye see, ther' warn't no gret o' waste;
 Fer they found out in quicker time than ef they 'd ben to college
 'T warn't heartier food then though 't wuz made out o' the tree o' knowledge.
 But I tell you my other leg hed larned wut pizon-nettle meant,
 An' various other usefel things, afore I reached a settlement, An' all o' me thet wuz n't sore an' sendin' prickles thru me
 Wuz jest the leg I parted with in lickin'
 Montezumy:
 A useful limb it's ben to me, an' more of a support Than wut the other hez ben, — coz I dror my pension for 't.

Wal, I gut in at last where folks wuz civer-lized an' white, Ez I diskivered to my cost afore 't warn't hardly night;
 Fer 'z I wuz settin' in the bar a-takin' sun-thin' hot,
 An' feelin' like a man agin, all over in one spot,
 A feller thet sot oppersite, arter a squint at
 me, Lep' up an' drewed his peacemaker, an',
 "Dash it, Sir," suz he,
 "I 'm doubledashed ef you ain't him thet stole my yaller chettle, (You 're all the stränger thet's around,) so now you 've gut to settle;
 It ain't no use to argerfy ner try to cut up frisky, I know ye ez I know the smell of ole chainlightnin' whiskey;
 We 're lor-abidin' folks down here, we 'll fix ye so 's 't a bar
 Would n' tech ye with a ten-foot pole; (Judge, you jest warm the tar;)

You 'll think you 'd better ha' gut among a tribe o' Mongrel Tartars,
 'fore we 've done showin' how we raise our Southun prize tar-martyrs; A moultin' fallen cherubim, ef he should see ye, 'd snicker, Thinkin' he warn't a suckemstance. Come, genlemun, le' 's liquor;
 An', Gin'ral, when you 've mixed the drinks an' chalked 'em up, tote roun' An' see ef ther' 's a feather-bed (thet 's borryable) in town.
 We 'll try ye fair, ole Grafted-Leg, an' ef the tar wun't stick,
 Th' ain't not a juror here but wut 'll 'quit ye double-quick."

To cut it short, I wun't say sweet, they gi' me a good dip, (They ain't perfessin' Bahptists here,) then give the bed a rip, —
 The jury 'd sot, an' quicker thin a flash they hetched me out, a livin' Extemp'ry mammoth turkey-chick fer a Fejee Thanksgivin'.

Thet I felt some stuck up is wut it's nat'ral to suppose,
 When poppylar enthusiasm hed funnished me sech clo'es; (Ner 't ain't without edvantiges, this kin' o' suit, ye see,
 It's water-proof, an' water's wut I like kep' out o' me;)
 But nut content with thet, they took a kerridge from the fence An' rid me roun' to see the place, entirely free 'f expense,
 With forty-leven new kines o' sarse without no charge acquainted me, Gi' me three cheers, an' vowed thet I wuz all their fahney painted me; They treated me to all their eggs; (they keep 'em I should think, Fer sech ovations, pooty long, for they wuz mos' distine';)
 They starred me thick 'z the Milky-Way with indiscerim'nit cherity, Fer wut we call reception eggs air sunthin' of a rearity;
 Green ones is plentiful enough, skurce wuth a nigger's getherin', But your dead-ripe ones ranges high fer treatin' Nothun bretherin;
 A spottedder, ring streakeder child thet warn't in Uncle Sam's

Holl farm, — a cross of striped pig an' one o' Jacob's lambs;

'T wuz Dannil in the lions' den, new an'
enlarged edition,

An' everythin' fust-rate o' 'ts kind; the'
warn't no imperfection.

People 's impulsiver down here than wut our folks to home be,

An' kin' o' go it 'ith a resh in raisin' Hail Columby:

Thet 's so: an' they swarmed out like bees, for your real Southun men's

Time is n't o' much more account than an ole settin' hen's;

(They jest work semioccashnally, or else don't work at all,

An' so their time an' 'tention both air at sac'ity's call.)

Talk about hospatality! wut Nothun town d' ye know

Would take a tole stranger up an' treat him gratis so?

You'd better b'lieve ther' 's nothin' like this spendin' days an' nights

Along 'ith a dependent race fer civerlizin' whites.

But this wuz all prelin'nary; it's so Gran' Jurors here

Fin' a true bill, a hendier way than oun, an' nut so dear;

So arter this they sentenced me, to make all tight 'n' snug,

Afore a reg'lar court o' law, to ten years in the Jug.

I did n't make no gret defence: you don't feel much like speakin',

When, ef you let your clamshells gape, a quart o' tar will leak in:

I hev hearn tell o' winged words, but pint o' fact it tethers

The spoutin' gift to hev your words tu thick sot on with feathers,

An' Choate ner Webster would n't ha' made an A 1 kin' o' speech

Astride a Southun chestnut horse sharper
'n a baby's screech.

Two year ago they ketched the thief, 'n' seein' I wuz innercent,

They jest uncorked an' le' me run, an' in my stid the sinner sent

To see how he liked pork 'n' pone flavored with wa'nut saplin',

An' nary social priv'ledge but a one-hoss, starn-wheel chaplin.

When I come out, the folks behaved mos' gen'manly an' harnsome;

They 'lowed it would n't be more 'n right, ef I should cuss 'n' darn some:

The Cunnle he apologized; suz he, "I'll du wut's right,

I'll give ye settisfaction now by shootin' ye at sight,

An' give the nigger (when he 's caught), to pay him fer his trickin'

In gittin' the wrong man took up, a most H fired lickin', —

It 's jest the way with all on 'em, the inconsistent critters,

They 're 'most enough to make a man blaspheme his mornin' bitters;

I'll be your frien' thru thick an' thin an'
in all kines o' weathers,

An' all you'll hev to pay fer 's jest the waste o' tar an' feathers:

A lady owned the bed, ye see, a widder, tu,
Miss Shennon;

It wuz her mite; we would ha' took another,
ef ther 'd ben one:

We don't make no charge for the ride an'
all the other fixins.

Le' 's liquor; Gin'ral, you can chalk our friend for all the mixins."

A meetin' then wuz called, where they
"RESOLVED, Thet we respec'

B. S. Esquire for quallerties o' heart an' intellec'

Peculiar to Columby's sile, an' not to no one else's,

Thet makes Európean tyrans seringe in all their gilded pel'ces,

An' doos gret honor to our race an'
Southun institootions: "

(I give ye jest the substance o' the leadin' resolootions:)

"RESOLVED, Thet we revere in him a soger 'thout a flor,

A martyr to the princerples o' libbaty an'
lor:

RESOLVED, Thet other nations all, ef sot
'longtoo, o' us,

For vartoo, larnin', chivverlry, ain't noways wuth a cuss."

They gut up a subscription, tu, but no gret come o' thet;

I 'xpect in cairin' of it roun' they took a leaky hat;

Though Southun genelmun ain't slow at puttin' down their name,

(When they can write,) fer in the eend it comes to jes' the same, Because, ye see, 't 's the fashion here to sign an' not to think A critter 'd be so sordid ez to ax 'em for the chink:
 I did n't call but jest on one, an' he drewd tooth-pick on me, An' reckoned he warn't goin' to stan' no sech dog-gauned econ'my;
 So nothin' more wuz realized, 'ceptin' the good-will shown,
 Than ef 't had ben from fust to last a regular Cotton Loan.
 It 's a good way, though, come to think, coz ye enjy the sense O' lendin' lib'rally to the Lord, an' nary red o' xpense: Sence then I've gut my name up for a gin'rous-hearted man
 By jes' subscribin' right an' left on this high-minded plan;
 I've gin away my thousans so to every Southun sort O' missions, colleges, an' sech, ner ain't no poorer for 't.
 I warn't so bad off, arter all; I need n't hardly mention That Guv'ment owed me quite a pile for my arrears o' pension,— I mean the poor, weak thing we hed: we run a new one now, Thet strings a feller with a claim up ta the nighes' bough,
 An' prectises the right o' man, purtectes down-trodden debtors, Ner wun't hev creditors about ascringin' o' their betters:
 Jeff's gut the last idees ther' is, poscrip', fourteenth edition, He knows it takes some enterprise to run an oppersition; Ourn 's the fust thru-by-daylight train, with all ou'doors for deepot; Yourn goes so slow you'd think 't wuz drawed by a las' cent'y teapot;— Wal, I gut all on 't paid in gold afore our State seceded, An' done wal, for Confed'rit bonds warn't jest the cheese I needed:
 Nut but wut they're ez good ez gold, but then it's hard a-breakin' on 'em,
 An' ignorant folks is ollers sot an' wun't git used to takin' on 'em;

They 're wuth ez much ez wut they wuz afore ole Mem'nger signed 'em,
 An' go off middlin' wal for drinks, when ther' 's a knife behind 'em;
 We du miss silver, jes' fer thet an' ridin' in a bus, Now we've shook off the desputs thet wuz suckin' at our pus;
 An' it's because the South's so rich; 't wuz nat'ral to expect Supplies o' change wuz jes' the things we should n't recollect; We'd ough' to ha' thought aforehan', though, o' thet good rule o' Crockett's, For 't 's tiresome cairin' cotton-bales an' niggers in your pockets, Ner 't ain't quite hendy to pass off one o' your six-foot Guineas An' git your halves an' quarters back in gals an' pickaninnies:
 Wal, 't ain't quite all a feller 'd ax, but then ther' 's this to say, It's on'y jest among ourselves thet we expect to pay;
 Our system would ha' caird us thru in any Bible cent'y,
 'fore this onscripterl plan come up o' books by double entry;
 We go the patriarkle here out o' all sight an' hearin',
 For Jacob warn't a suckemstance to Jeff at financierin';
 He never 'd thought o' borryin' from Esau like all nater An' then confiscatin' all debts to sech a small pertater;
 There 's p'litickle econ'my, now, combined 'ith morril beauty Thet saycrifices privit eends (your in'my's, tu) to dooty!
 Wy, Jeff 'd ha' gin him five an' won his eye-teeth 'fore he knowed it,
 An', stid o' wastin' pottage, he'd ha' eat it up an' owed it.
 But I wuz goin' on to say how I come here to dwell;—
 'Nough said, thet, arter lookin' roun', I liked the place so wal, Where niggers doos a double good, with us atop to stiddy 'em,
 By bein' proofs o' prophecy an' suckleatin' medium,
 Where a man's sunthin' coz he 's white, an' whiskey 's cheap ez fleas,

An' the financial pollerey jes' sooted my idees,
Thet I friz down right where I wuz, mer-ried the Widder Shennon, (Her thirds wuz part in cotton-land, part in the curse o' Canaan.) An' here I be ez lively ez a chipmunk on a wall,
With nothin' to feel riled about much later
'n Eddam's fall.

Ez fur ez human foresight goes, we made an even trade:
She gut an overseer, an' I a fem'ly ready-
made,
The youngest on 'em s' 'mos' growed up, rugged an' spry ez weazles, So s't ther' 's no resk o' doctors' bills fer hoopin'-cough an' measles.
Our farm 's at Turkey-Buzzard Roost, Little Big Boosy River, Wal located in all respex, — fer 't ain't the chills 'n' fever Thet makes my writin' seem to squirm; a Southuner 'd allow I 'd Some call to shake, for I've jest hed to meller a new cowhide.
Miss S. is all 'f a lady; th' ain't no better on Big Boosy
Ner one with more accomplishmunts 'twixt here an' Tuscaloosy; She's an F. F., the tallest kind, an' prouder
'n the Gran' Turk,
An' never hed a relative thet done a stroke
o' work;
Hern ain't a scrimpin' fem'ly sech ez you git up Down East,
Th' ain't a growed member on 't but owes his thousuns et the least:
She is some old; but then agin ther' 's drawbacks in my sheer:
Wut's left o' me ain't more 'n enough to make a Brigadier:
Wust is, thet she hez tantrums; she 's like Seth Moody's gun (Him thet wuz nicknamed frum his limp Ole Dot an' Kerry One); He'd left her loaded up a spell, an' hed to git her clear,
So he onhitched, — Jeerusalem! the middie o' last year
Wuz right nex' door compared to where she kicked the critter tu (Though jest where he brought up wuz wut no human never knew);

His brother Asaph picked her up an' tied her to a tree,
An' then she kicked an hour 'n' a half afore she 'd let it be:
Wal, Miss S. doos hev cuttins-up an' pourins-out o' vials,
But then she hez her widder's thirds, an'
all on us hez trials.
My objec', though, in writin' now warn't to allude to sech,
But to another suckemstance more dellykit to tech, —
I want thet you should grad'lly break my merriage to Jerushy, An' there 's a heap of argymunts thet 's emple to indooce ye:
Fust place, State's Prison, — wal, it 's true it warn't fer crime, o' course, But then it 's jest the same fer her in gittin' a disvorce;
Nex' place, my State 's secedin' out hez leg'lly lef' me free To merry any one I please, pervidin' it 's a
she;
Fin'lly, I never wun't come back, she need n't hev no fear on 't,
But then it 's wal to fix things right fer fear Miss S. should hear on 't; Lastly, I've gut religion South, an' Rushy she 's a pagan Thet sets by th' graven imiges o' the gret Nothun Dagon; (Now I hain't seen one in six munts, for, sence our Treashry Loan, Though yaller boys is thick enough, eagles hez kind o' flown;)
An' ef J wants a stronger pint than them thet I hev stated, Wy, she 's an aliun in'my now, an' I've been confiscated, — For sence we've entered on th' estate o' the late nayshnul eagle, She hain't no kin' o' right but jes' wut I allow ez legle:
Wut doos Secedin' mean, ef 't ain't thet nat'rul rights hez riz, 'n' Thet wut is mine 's my own, but wut 's another man's ain't his'n?

Besides, I could n't do no else; Miss S. suz she to me,
"You 've sheered my bed," [thet 's when I paid my interduction fee To Southun rites,] "an' kep' your sheer," [wal, I allow it sticked

So 's 't I wuz most six weeks in jail afore I gut me picked,]
 "Ner never paid no demmiges; but thet wun't do no harm, Pervidin' thet you 'll undertake to oversee the farm: (My eldes' boy he 's so took up, wut with the Ringtail Rangers An' settin' in the Jestice-Court for welcomin' o' strangers;")
 [He sot on me]; "an' so, ef you 'll jest on-dertake the care
 Upon a mod'rit sellery, we 'll up an' call it square;
 But ef you can't conclude," suz she, an' give a kin' o' grin,
 "Wy, the Gran' Jurymen, I 'xpect, 'll hev to set agin."
 That 's the way metters stood at fust; now wut wuz I to du,
 But jes' to make the best on 't an' off coat an' buckle tu?
 Ther' ain't a livin' man thet finds an income necessarier Than me,—bimeby I 'll tell ye how I fin'ly come to merry her.

She hed another motive, tu: I mention of it
 here

T' encourage lads thet 's growin' up to study 'n' persevere, An' show 'em how much better 't pays to mind their winter-schoolin' Than to go off on benders 'n' sech, an' waste their time in foolin'; Ef 't warn't for studyin' evenins, why, I never 'd ha' ben here A orn'ment o' sacity, in my appropriut spear:

She wanted somebody, ye see, o' taste an'
 cultivation,

To talk along o' preachers when they stopt to the plantation;

For folks in Dixie th't read an' rite, onless it is by jarks,

Is skurree ez wut they wuz among th' ori-genule patriarchs;

To fit a feller f' wut they call the soshle higherhierarchy,

All thet you 've gut to know is jes' beyund an evrage darcy;

Schoolin' 's wut they can't seem to stan', they 're tu consarned high-pressure,

An' knowin' t' much might spile a boy for bein' a Secesher.

We hain't no settled preachin' here, ner ministeril taxes;

The min'ster's only settlement 's the carpet-bag he packs his

Razor an' soap-brush intu, with his hymbook an' his Bible,—

But they du preach, I swan to man, it 's pufkly indescrib'le!

They go it like an Eriesson's ten-hoss-power colerie ingine,

An' make Ole Split-Foot winch an' squirm, for all he 's used to singein';

Hawkins's whetstone ain't a pinch o' primin' to the innards

To hearin' on 'em put free grace t' a lot o' tough old sinhards!

But I must eend this letter now: 'fore long I 'll send a fresh un;

I 've lots o' things to write about, perticklerly Seceshun:

I 'm called off now to mission-work, to let a leetle law in

To Cynthy's hide: an' so, till death, Yourn,

BIRDOFREDUM SAWIN.

MASON AND SLIDELL: A YANKEE IDYLL

TO THE EDITORS OF THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

JAALAM, 6th Jan., 1862.

GENTLEMEN,—I was highly gratified by the insertion of a portion of my letter in the last number of your valuable and entertaining Miscellany, though in a type which rendered its substance inaccessible even to the beautiful new spectacles presented to me by a Committee of the Parish on New Year's Day. I trust that I was able to bear your very considerable abridgment of my lucubrations with a spirit becoming a Christian. My third granddaughter, Rebekah, aged fourteen years, and whom I have trained to read slowly and with proper emphasis (a practice too much neglected in our modern systems of education), read aloud to me the excellent essay upon "Old Age," the author of which I cannot help suspecting to be a young man who has never yet known what it was to have snow (canities morosa) upon his own roof. Dissolve frigus, large super foco ligna reponens, is a rule for the young, whose wood-pile is yet abundant for such cheerful lenitives. A good life behind him is the best thing to keep an old man's shoulders from shivering at every breath of sorrow or ill-fortune. But methinks it were easier for an old man to feel the disadvantages of youth than the advantages of age. Of these latter I reckon one of the chiefest to be this: that we attach a less inordinate value to our own productions, and, distrusting daily more and more our own wisdom (with the conceit whereof at twenty we wrap ourselves away from knowledge as with a garment), do reconcile ourselves with the wisdom of God. I could have wished, indeed, that room might have been made for the residue of the anecdote relating to Deacon Tinkham, which would not only have gratified a natural curiosity on the part of the publick (as I have reason to know from several letters of inquiry already received), but would also, as I think, have largely increased the circulation of your Magazine in this town. Nihil humani alienum, there is a curiosity about the affairs of our neighbors which is not only pardonable, but even commendable. But I shall abide a more fitting season.

As touching the following literary effort of Esquire Biglow, much might be profitably said on the topik of Idyllick and Pastoral Poetry, and concerning the proper distinctions to be made between them, from Theocritus, the inventor of the former, to Collins, the latest authour I know of who has emulated the classicks in the latter style. But in the time of a Civil War worthy a Milton to defend and a Lucan to sing, it may be reasonably doubted whether the publick, never too studious of serious instruction, might not consider other objects more deserving of present attention. Concerning the title of Idyll, which Mr. Biglow has adopted at my suggestion, it may not be improper to animadvert, that the name properly signifies a poem somewhat rustick in phrase (for, though the learned are not agreed as to the particular dialect employed by Theocritus, they are univarsanious both as to its rusticity and its capacity of rising now and then to the level of more elevated sentiments and expressions), while it is also descriptive of real scenery and manners. Yet it must be admitted that the production now in question (which here and there bears perhaps too plainly the marks of my correcting hand) does partake of the nature of a Pastoral, inasmuch as the interlocutors therein are purely imaginary beings, and the whole is little better than καπνοῦ σκιάς ὄψαρ. The plot was, as I believe, suggested by the "Twa Briggs" of Robert Burns, a Scottish poet of the last century, as that found its prototype in the "Mutual Complaint of Plainstaes and Causey" by Fergusson, though the metre of this latter be different by a foot in each verse. Perhaps the Two Dogs of Cervantes gave the first hint. I reminded my talented young parishioner and friend that Concord Bridge had long since yielded to the edacious tooth of Time. But he answered me to this effect: that there was no greater mistake of an authour than to suppose the reader had no fancy of his own; that, if once that faculty was to be called into activity, it were better to be in for the whole sheep than the shoulder; and that he knew Concord like a book, — an expression questionable in propriety, since there are few things with which he is not more familiar than with the printed page. In proof of what he affirmed, he showed me some verses which with others he had stricken out as too much delaying the action, but which I communicate in this place because they rightly define "punkin-seed" (which Mr. Bartlett would have a kind of perch, — a creature to which I have found a rod or pole not to be so easily equivalent in our inland waters as in the books of arithmetic), and because it conveys an eulogium on the worthy son of an excellent father, with whose acquaintance (eheu, fugaces anni!) I was formerly honoured.

"But nowadays the Bridge ain't wut they show, So much ez Em'son, Hawthorne, an' Thoreau.
I know the village, though; was sent there once A-schoolin', 'cause to home I played the dunce;
An' I've ben sence a visitin' the Jedge, Whose garding whispers with the river's edge, Where I've sot mornin's lazy as the bream, Whose on'y business is to head up-stream, (We call 'em punkin-seed,) or else in chat Along 'th the Jedge, who covers with his hat More wit an' gumption an' shrewd Yankee sense Than there is mosses on an ole stone fence."

Concerning the subject-matter of the verses, I have not the leisure at present to write so fully as I could wish, my time being occupied with the preparation of a discourse for the forthcoming bicentenary celebration of the first settlement of Jaa-lam East Parish. It may gratify the public interest to mention the circumstance, that my investigations to this end have enabled me to verify the fact (of much historical importance, and hitherto hotly debated) that Shearjashub Tarbox was the first child of white parentage born in this town, being named in his father's will under date August 7th, or 9th, 1662. It is well known that those who advocate the claims of Mehetable Goings are unable to find any trace of her existence prior to October of that year. As respects the settlement of the Mason and Slidell question, Mr. Biglow has not incorrectly stated the popular sentiment, so far as I can judge by its expression in this locality. For myself, I feel more sorrow than resentment: for I am old enough to have heard those talk of England who still, even after the unhappy estrangement, could not unschool their lips from calling her the Mother-Country. But England has insisted on ripping up old wounds, and has undone the healing work of fifty years; for nations do not reason, they only feel, and the spretæ injuria formæ rankles in their minds as bitterly as in that of a woman. And because this is so, I feel the more satisfaction that our Government has acted (as all Governments should, standing as they do between the people and their passions) as if it had arrived at years of discretion. There are three short and simple words, the hardest of all to pronounce in any language (and I suspect they were no easier before the confusion of tongues), but which no man or nation that cannot utter can claim to have arrived at manhood. Those words are, I was wrong; and I am proud that, while England played the boy, our rulers had strength enough from the People below and wisdom enough from God above to quit themselves like men.

The sore points on both sides have been skilfully exasperated by interested and unscrupulous persons, who saw in a war between the two countries the only hope of profitable return for their investment in Confederate stock, whether political or financial. The always supercilious, often insulting, and sometimes even brutal tone of British journals and public men has certainly not tended to soothe whatever resentment might exist in America.

"Perhaps it was right to dissemble your love, But why did you kick me down stairs?"

We have no reason to complain that England, as a necessary consequence of her clubs, has become a great society for the minding of other people's business, and we can smile good-naturedly when she lectures other nations on the sins of arrogance and conceit; but we may justly consider it a breach of the political convenances which are expected to regulate the intercourse of one well-bred government with another when men holding places in the ministry allow themselves to dictate our domestic policy, to instruct us in our duty, and to stigmatize as unholy a war for the rescue of whatever a high-minded people should hold most vital and most sacred. Were it in good taste, that I may use the mildest term, for Earl Russell to expound our own Constitution to President Lincoln, to make a new and fallacious application of an old phrase for our benefit, and tell us that the Rebels were fighting for independence and we for empire? As if all wars for independence were by nature just and deserving of sympathy, and all wars for empire ignoble and worthy only of reprobation, or as if these easy phrases in any way characterized this terrible struggle — terrible not so truly in any superficial sense, as from the essential and deadly enmity of the principles that underlie it. His Lordship's bit of borrowed rhetoric would justify Smith O'Brien, Nana Sahib, and the Maori chieftains, while it would condemn nearly every war in which England has ever been engaged. Was it very presumptuous in us to think that it would be decorous in English statesmen they spared time enough to acquire some kind of knowledge, though of the most elementary kind, in regard to this country, and the questions at issue here, before they pronounced so off-hand a judgment? Or is political information expected to come in Dogberry-fashion in England, like reading and writing, by nature?

And now all respectable England is wondering at our irritability, and sees a quite satisfactory explanation of it in our national vanity. Suave mari magno, it is pleasant, sitting in the easy-chairs of Downing Street, to sprinkle pepper on the raw wounds of a kindred people struggling for life, and philosophical to find in self-conceit the cause of our instinctive resentment. Surely we were of all nations the least liable to any temptation of vanity at a time when the gravest anxiety and the keenest sorrow were never absent from our hearts. Nor is conceit the exclusive attribute of any one nation. The earliest of English travelers, Sir John Mandeville, took a less provincial view of the matter when he said, "For fro what partie of the erthe that men duellen, other aboven or beneathen, it semethe always to hem that duellen that they gon more righte than any other folke." The English have always had their fair share of this amiable quality. We may say of them still, as the authour of the "Lettres Cabalistiques" said of them more than a century ago, "Ces derniers disent naturellement qu'il n'y a qu'eux qui soient estimables." And, as he also says, "J'aimerois presque autant tomber entre les mains d'un Inquisiteur que d'un Anglois qui me fait sentir sans cesse combien il s'estime plus que moi, et qui ne daigne me parler que pour injurier ma Nation et pour m'ennuyer du récit des grandes qualités de la sienne." Of this Bull we may safely say with Horace, habet fœnum in cornu. What we felt to be especially insulting was the quiet assumption that the descendants of men who left the Old World for the sake of principle, and who had made the wilderness into a New World patterned after an Idea, could not possibly be susceptible of a generous or lofty sentiment, could have no feeling of nationality deeper than that of a tradesman for his shop. One would have thought, in listening to England, that we were presumptuous in fancying that we were a nation at all, or had any other principle of union than that of booths at a fair, where there is no higher notion of government than the constable, or better image of God than that stamped upon the current coin.

It is time for Englishmen to consider whether there was nothing in the spirit of their press and of their leading public men calculated to rouse a just indignation, and to cause a permanent estrangement on the part of any nation capable of self-respect, and sensitively jealous, as ours then was, of foreign interference. Was there nothing in the indecent haste with which belligerent rights were conceded to the Rebels, nothing in the abrupt tone assumed in the Trent case, nothing in the fitting out of Confederate privateers, that might stir the blood of a people already overcharged with doubt, suspicion, and terrible responsibility? The laity in any country do not stop to consider points of law, but they have an instinctive perception of the animus that actuates the policy of a foreign nation; and in our own case they remembered that the British authorities in Canada did not wait till diplomacy could send home to England for her slow official tinder-box to fire the "Caroline." Add to this, what every sensible American knew, that the moral support of England was equal to an army of two hundred thousand men to the Rebels, while it insured us another year or two of exhausting war. It was not so much the spite of her words (though the time might have been more tastefully chosen) as the actual power for evil in them that we felt as a deadly wrong. Perhaps the most immediate and efficient cause of mere irritation was the sudden and unaccountable change of manner on the other side of the water. Only six months before, the Prince of Wales had come over to call us cousins; and everywhere it was nothing but "our American brethren," that great offshoot of British institutions in the New World, so almost identical with them in laws, language, and literature, — this last of the alliterative compliments being so bitterly true, that perhaps it will not be retracted even now. To this outburst of long-repressed affection we responded with genuine warmth, if with something of the awkwardness of a poor relation bewildered with the sudden tightening of the ties of consanguinity when it is rumored that he has come into a large estate. Then came the Rebellion, and, presto! a flaw in our titles was discovered, the plate we were promised at the family table is flung at our head, and we were again the scum of creation, intolerably vulgar, at once cowardly and overbearing, — no relations of theirs, after all, but a dreggy hybrid of the basest bloods of Europe. Panurge was not quicker to call Friar John his former friend. I cannot help thinking of Walter Mapes's jingling paraphrase of Petronius, —

"Dummodo sim splendidis vestibis ornatus, Et multa familia sim circumvallatus, Prudens sum et sapiens et morigeratus, Et tuus nepos sum et tu meus cognatus," — which I may freely render thus: —

So long as I was prosperous, I'd dinners by the dozen, Was well-bred, witty, virtuous, and everybody's cousin;
If luck should turn, as well she may, her fancy is so flexible,
Will virtue, cousinship, and all return with her from exile?

There was nothing in all this to exasperate a philosopher, much to make him smile rather; but the earth's surface is not chiefly inhabited by philosophers, and I revive the recollection of it now in perfect good-humour, merely by way of suggesting to our ci-devant British cousins, that it would have been easier for them to hold their tongues than for us to keep our tempers under the circumstances.

The English Cabinet made a blunder, unquestionably, in taking it so hastily for granted that the United States had fallen forever from their position as a first-rate power, and it was natural that they should vent a little of their vexation on the people whose inexplicable obstinacy in maintaining freedom and order, and in resisting degradation, was likely to convict them of their mistake. But if bearing a grudge be the sure mark of a small mind in the individual, can it be a proof of high spirit in a nation? If the result of the present estrangement between the two countries shall be to make us more independent of British twaddle (Indomito nec dira ferens stipendia Tauro), so much the better; but if it is to make us insensible to the value of British opinion in matters where it gives us the judgment of an impartial and cultivated outsider, if we are to shut ourselves out from the advantages of English culture, the loss will be ours, and not theirs. Because the door of the old homestead has been once slammed in our faces, shall we in a huff reject all future advances of conciliation, and cut ourselves foolishly off from any share in the humanizing influences of the place, with its ineffable riches of association, its heirloom of immemorial culture, its historic monuments, ours no less than theirs, its noble gallery of ancestral portraits? We have only to succeed, and England will not only respect, but, for the first time, begin to understand us. And let us not, in our justifiable indignation at wanton insult, forget that England is not the England only of snobs who dread the democracy they do not comprehend, but the England of history, of heroes, statesmen, and poets, whose names are dear, and their influence as salutary to us as to her.

Let us strengthen the hands of those in authority over us, and curb our own tongues, remembering that General Washington commonly proves in the end more than a match for General Headlong, and that the Good Book ascribes safety to a multitude, indeed, but not to a mob, of counsellors. Let us remember and perpend the words of Paulus Emilius to the people of Rome, that, "if they judged they could manage the war to more advantage by any other, he would willingly yield up his charge; but if they confided in him, they were not to make themselves his colleagues in his office, to raise reports, or criticise his actions, but, without talking, supply him with means and assistance necessary to the carrying on of the war; for, if they proposed to command their own commander, they would render this expedition more ridiculous than the former." (Vita Plutarchum in Vita P. E.) Let us also not forget what the same excellent author says concerning Perseus's fear of spending money, and not permit the covetousness of Brother Jonathan to be the good fortune of Jefferson Davis. For my own part, I am ready to admit the Commander-in-Chief to my pulpit, I shall abstain from planning his battles. If courage be the sword, yet is patience the armour of a nation; and in our desire for peace, let us never be willing to surrender the Constitution bequeathed us by fathers at least as wise as ourselves (even with Jefferson Davis to help us), and, with those degenerate Romans, tuta et præsentia quam vetera periculosa malle.

And not only should we bridle our own tongues, but the pens of others, which are swift to convey useful intelligence to t enemy. This is no new inconvenience ; for, under date, 3d June, 1745, General Pepperell wrote thus to Governor Shirley from Louisbourg : " What your Excellency observes of the army's being made acquainted with any plans proposed, until ready to be put in execution, has always been disagreeable to me, and I have given many cautions relating to it. But when your Excellency considers that our Council of War consists of more than twenty members, I am persuaded you will think it impossible for me to hinder it, if any of them will persist in communicating to inferior officers and soldiers what ought to be kept secret. I am informed that the Boston newspapers are filled with paragraphs from private letters relating to the expedition. Will your Excellency permit me to say I think it may be of ill consequence ? Would it not be convenient, if your Excellency should forbid the Printers' inserting such news ? " Verily, if tempora mutantur, we may question the et nos mutantur in illis ; and if tongues be leaky, it will need all hands at the pumps to save the Ship of State. Our history dotes and repeats itself. If Sassycus (rather than Alcibiades) find a parallel in Beauregard, so Weakwash, as he is called by the brave Lieutenant Lion Gardiner, need not seek far among our own Sachems for his anti-type.

With respect,

Your ob' humble serv',

HOMER WILBUR, A. M.

I LOVE to start out arter night's begun,
An' all the chores about the farm are done,
The critters milked an' foddered, gates shet fast,
Tools cleaned aginst to-morrer, supper
past,
An' Nancy darnin' by her ker'sene lamp, —
I love, I say, to start upon a tramp,
To shake the kinkles out o' back an' legs,
An' kind o' rack my life off from the dregs Thet's apt to settle in the buttery-hutch Of folks thet foller in one rut too much :
Hard work is good an' wholesome, past all
doubt ;
But 't ain't so, ef the mind gits tuckered
out.

Now, bein' born in Middlesex, you know, There's certin spots where I like best to go :

The Concord road, for instance (I, for
one,

Most gin'lly ollers call it John Bull's Run),
The field o' Lexin'ton where England tried The fastest colours thet she ever dyed, An' Concord Bridge, thet Davis, when he
came,

Found was the bee-line track to heaven an'
fane,

Ez all roads be by natur', ef your soul

Don't sneak thru shun-pikes so's to save the toll.

They're 'most too fur away, take too much time

To visit of'en, ef it ain't in rhyme ;

But thet's a walk thet's hendier, a sight,
An' suits me fust-rate of a winter's night, —
I mean the round whale's-back o' Prospect Hill.

I love to l'iter there while night grows
still,

An' in the twinklin' villages about,

Fust here, then there, the well-saved lights goes out,

An' nary sound but watch-dogs' false alarms,

Or muffled cock-crows from the drowsy farms,

Where some wise rooster (men act jest thet way)

Stands to't thet moon-rise is the break o'
day :

(So Mister Seward sticks a three-months'
pin

Where the war'd oughto eend, then tries agin ;

My gran'ther's rule was safer'n 'tis to crow :

Don't never prophesy — unless ye know.)

I love to muse there till it kind o' seems

Ez ef the world went eddyin' off in dreams ;

The northwest wind thet twitches at my baird

Blows out o' sturdier days not easy scared, An' the same moon thet this December shines

Starts out the tents an' booths o' Putnam's lines ;

The rail-fence posts, acrost the hill thet runs,

Turn ghosts o' sogers should'rin' ghosts o'
guns ;

Ez wheels the sentry, glints a flash o' light,
Along the firelock won at Concord Fight,

An', 'twixt the silences, now fur, now nigh, Rings the sharp challenge, hums the low reply.

Ez I was settin' so, it warn't long sence, Mixin' the puffict with the present tense,
I heerd two voices som'ers in the air, Though, ef I was to die, I can't tell where:
Voices I call 'em: 't was a kind o' sough Like pine-trees thet the wind's ageth'rin'
through;

An', fact, I thought it was the wind a spell, Then some misdoubted, could n't fairly tell, Fust sure, then not, jest as you hold an eel, I knowed, an' did n't, — fin'ly seemed to feel

'T was Concord Bridge a talkin' off to kill With the Stone Spike thet 's druv thru Bunker's Hill;

Whether 't was so, or ef I on'y dreamed,
I could n't say; I tell it ez it seemed.

THE BRIDGE

Wal, neighbor, tell us wut 's turned up thet 's new?

You 're younger 'n I be, — nigher Boston, tu:

An' down to Boston, ef you take their showin',

Wut they don't know ain't hardly wuth the knowin'.

There's sunthin' goin' on, I know: las'
night

The British sogers killed in our gret fight (Nigh fifty year they hed n't stirred nor spoke)

Made sech a coil you 'd thought a dam hed broke:

Why, one he up an' beat a revellee

With his own crossbones on a holler tree,

Till all the graveyards swarmed out like a hive

With faces I hain't seen sence Seventy-five.

Wut is the news? 'Tain't good, or they 'd be cheerin'.

Speak slow an' clear, for I'm some hard o' hearin'.

THE MONIMENT

I don't know hardly ef it's good or bad, —

THE BRIDGE

At wust, it can't be wus than wut we've had

You know them envys thet the Rebbles sent,

An' Cap'n Wilkes he borried o' the Trent?

THE BRIDGE

Wut! they ha'n't hanged 'em? Then their wits is gone!

Thet's the sure way to make a goose a swan!

THE MONIMENT

No: England she would hev 'em, Fee, Faw, Fum!

(Ez though she hed n't fools enough to home.)

So they've returned 'em —

THE BRIDGE

Hev they? Wal, by heaven, Thet's the wust news I've heerd sence Seventy-seven!

By George, I meant to say, though I declare

It's 'most enough to make a deacon swear.

Now don't go off half-cock: folks never gains

By usin' pepper-sarse instid o' brains.

Come, neighbor, you don't understan' —

THE BRIDGE

How? Hey?
Not understan'? Why, wut 's to hender, pray?

Must I go huntin' round to find a chap

To tell me when my face bez hed a slap?

See here: the British they found out a flaw

In Cap'n Wilkes's readin' o' the law:

(They make all laws, you know, an' so, o' course,

It's nateral they should understan' their force:)

He 'd oughto ha' took the vessel into port,
An' hed her sot on by a reg'lar court;

She was a mail-ship, an' a steamer, tu,
An' thet, they say, hez changed the pint o'
view,

Coz the old practice, bein' meant for sails,
Ef tried upon a steamer, kind o' fails;

You may take out despatches, but you mus' n't
Take nary man —

THE BRIDGE

You mean to say, you dus' n't !
Changed pint o' view ! No, no, — it 's overboard
With law an' gospel, when their ox is gored !
I tell ye, England's law, on sea an' land, Hez ollers ben, "I've gut the heaviest hand." Take nary man ? Fine preachin' from her lips !

Why, she hez taken hunderds from our ships,
An' would agin, an' swear she had a right to, Ef we warn't strong enough to be perlite to.

Of all the sarse thet I can call to mind, England doos make the most onpleasant
kind :

It 's you 're the sinner ollers, she 's the saint ;

Wut 's good 's all English, all thet is n't ain't ;

Wut profits her is ollers right an' just,
An' ef you don't read Scriptur so, you must ;

She 's praised herself ontill she fairly thinks There ain't no light in Natur when she winks ;

Hain't she the Ten Comman'ments in her
pus ?

Could the world stir 'thout she went, tu, ez nus ?

She ain't like other mortals, thet 's a fact :
She never stopped the habus-corpus act, Nor specie payments, nor she never yet Cut down the int'rest on her public debt ;
She don't put down rebellions, lets 'em breed,

An' 's ollers willin' Ireland should secede ;
She 's all thet 's honest, honnable, an' fair, An' when the vartoos died they made her heir.

Wal, wal, two wrongs don't never make a
right ;

Ef we 're mistaken, own up, an' don't fight :

For gracious' sake, ha'n't we enough to du
'thout gettin' up a fight with England, tu ?
She thinks we 're rabble-rid —

THE BRIDGE

An' so we can't Distinguish 'twixt You ought n't an' You sha'n't!

She jedges by herself ; she 's no idear How 't stiddies folks to give 'em their fair sheer :

The odds 'twixt her an' us is plain 's a steeple, —

Her People's turned to Mob, our Mob 's turned People.

She 's riled jes' now —

THE BRIDGE

Plain proof her cause ain't strong, —
The one thet fust gits mad 's 'most ollers
wrong.

Why, sence she helped in lickin' Nap the Fust,

An' pricked a bubble jest agoin' to bust,
With Rooshy, Prooshy, Austray, all assist-
in',

Th' ain't nut a face but wut she 's shook her fist in,

Ez though she done it all, an' ten times
more,

An' nothin' never hed gut done afore, Nor never could agin, 'thout she wuz spliced
On to one eend an' gin th' old airth a hoist.
She is some punkins, thet I wun't deny,
(For ain't she some related to you 'n' I ?) But there 's a few small intrists here below

Outside the counter o' John Bull an' Co, An' though they can't conceit how 't should be so,

I guess the Lord druv down Creation's spiles

'thout no gret helpin' from the British Isles, An' could contrive to keep things pooty stiff

Ef they withdrewed from business in a miff ;

I ha'n't no patience with sech swellin' fellers ez

Think God can't forge 'thout them to blow the bellerses.

THE MONIMENT

You 're ollers quick to set your back aridge.
Though 't suits a tom-cat more 'n a sober
bridge :

Don't you git het : they thought the thing was planned ;
They 'll cool off when they come to understand.

Ef thet's wut you expect, you 'll hev to wait ;
Folks never understand the folks they hate :
She 'll fin' some other grievance jest ez good,
'fore the month's out, to git misunderstood.
England cool off ! She 'll do it, ef she sees She's run her head into a swarm o' bees.
I ain't so prejudiced ez wut you spose :
I hev thought England was the best thet goes ;

Remember (no, you can't), when I was reared,
God save the King was all the tune you heerd :

But it's enough to turn Wachuset roun' This stumpin' fellers when you think they're down.

THE MONIMENT

But, neighbor, ef they prove their claim at
law,

The best way is to settle, an' not jaw.
An' don't le' 's mutter 'bout the awfle bricks
We 'll give 'em, ef we ketch 'em in a fix :
That 'ere's most frequently the kin' o' talk Of critters can't be kicked to toe the chalk ;
Your "You 'll see nex time !" an' "Look out bumby !"

'Most ollers ends in eatin' umble-pie.

'T wun't pay to sringe to England : will it pay

To fear thet meaner bully, old "They 'll
say" ?

Suppose they du say : words are drefle
bores,

But they ain't quite so bad ez seventy-fours.
Wut England wants is jest a wedge to fit Where it 'll help to widen out our split : She's found her wedge, an' 't ain't for us to come

An' lend the beetle thet's to drive it home.
For growed-up folks like us 't would be a scandle,

When we git sarsed, to fly right off the handle.

England ain't all bad, coz she thinks us
blind :

Ef she can't change her skin, she can her
mind ;

An' we shall see her change it double-quick,

Soon ez we've proved thet we're a-goin' to lick.

She an' Columby's gut to be fas' friends :
For the world prospers by their privit ends.
'T would put the clock back all o' fifty years :
Ef they should fall together by the ears.

THE BRIDGE

I 'gree to thet ; she's nigh us to wut France is ;

But then she 'll hev to make the fust advances ;

We've gut pride, tu, an' gut it by good
rights,

An' ketch me stoopin' to pick up the mites
O' condescension she 'll be lettin' fall

When she finds out we ain't dead arter all !
I tell ye wut, it takes more 'n one good week

Afore my nose forgits it's hed a tweak.

She 'll come out right bumby, thet I 'll engage,

Soon ez she gits to seein' we're of age ;
This talkin' down o' hers ain't wuth a fuss ;

It's nat'ral ez nut likin' 'tis to us ;
Ef we're agoin' to prove we be growed-up,

'T wun't be by barkin' like a tarrier pup,
But turnin' to an' makin' things ez good

Ez wut we're ollers braggin' that we could ;
We're boun' to be good friends, an' so we'd oughto,

In spite of all the fools both sides the water.

THE BRIDGE

I b'lieve thet's so : but hearken in your ear, —

I'm older 'n you, — Peace wun't keep house with Fear :

Ef you want peace, the thing you've gut tu du

Is jes' to show you're up to fightin', tu.
I recollect how sailors' rights was won,

Yard locked in yard, hot gun-lip kissin' gun :

Why, afore thet, John Bull sot up thet he Hed gut a kind o' mortgage on the sea ;

You 'd thought he held by Gran'ther Adam's will,

An' ef you knuckle down, he 'll think so still Better thet all our ships an' all their crews

Should sink to rot in ocean's dreamless ooze Each torn flag wavin' challenge ez it went

An' each dumb gun a brave man's moni-
ment,

Than seek sech peace ez only cowards crave :

Give me the peace of dead men or of brave!

THE MONIMENT

I say, ole boy, it ain't the Glorious Fourth: You'd oughto larned 'fore this wut talk wuz
worth.

It ain't our nose thet gits put out o' jint;
It's England thet gives up her dearest pint.

We 've gut, I tell ye now, enough to du In our own fem'ly fight, afore we 're thru.

I hoped, las' spring, jest arter Sumter's shame,

When every flag-staff flapped its tethered
flame,

An' all the people, startled from their
doubt,

Come must'rin' to the flag with sech a shout, —

I hoped to see things settled 'fore this fall, The Rebbles licked, Jeff Davis hanged, an'
all;

Then come Bull Run, an' sence then I 've ben waitin'

Like boys in Jennoary thaw for skatin', Nothin' to du but watch my shadder's trace Swing, like a ship at anchor, roun' my base, With daylight's flood an' ebb: it's gittin'
slow,

An' I 'most think we 'd better let 'em go.
I tell ye wut, this war's a-goin' to cost —

THE BRIDGE

An' I tell you it wun't be money lost; Taxes milks dry, but, neighbor, you 'll allow Thet havin' things onsettled kills the cow:
We 've gut to fix this thing for good an' all;
It's no use buildin' wut's a-goin' to fall.
I 'm older 'n you, an' I 've seen things an'
men,

An' my experunce, — tell ye wut it 's ben:
Folks thet worked thorough was the ones thet thriv,

But bad work follers ye ez long 's ye live;
You can't git red on 't; jest ez sure ez sin,
It's ollers askin' to be done agin:

Ef we should part, it would n't be a week
'Fore your soft-soddered peace would spring aleak.

We 've turned our cuffs up, but, to put her thru,

We must git mad an' off with jackets, tu;
'T wun't du to think thet killin' ain't perlite, —

You 've gut to be in airnest, ef you fight; Why, two thirds o' the Rebbles 'ould cut dirt,

Ef they once thought thet Guv'ment meant to hurt;

An' I du wish our Gin'rails hed in mind The folks in front more than the folks behind;

You wun't do much until you think it 's God,
An' not constitooounts, thet holds the rod;

We want some more o' Gideon's sword, I jedge,

For proclamations ha'n't no gret of edge;
There 's nothin' for a cancer but the knife,
Unless you set by 't more than by your life.

I 've seen hard times; I see a war begun Thet folks thet love their bellies never 'd won;

Pharo's lean kine hung on for seven long
year;

But when 't was done, we did n't count it
dear;

Why, law an' order, honor, civil right,
Ef they ain't wuth it, wut is wuth a fight?

I 'm older 'n you: the plough, the axe, the mill,

All kin's o' labor an' all kin's o' skill,
Would be a rabbit in a wile-cat's claw,

Ef 't warn't for thet slow critter, 'stablished
law;

Onsettle thet, an' all the world goes whiz,
A screw's gut loose in everythin' there is:

Good buttresses once settled, don't you fret
An' stir 'em; take a bridge's word for thet!

Young folks are smart, but all ain't good thet 's new;

I guess the gran'thers they knowed sunthin', tu.

Amen to thet! build sure in the beginnin':
An' then don't never tech the underpinnin':

Th' older a guv'ment is, the better 't suits;
New ones hunt folks's corns out like new boots:

Change jes' for change, is like them big hotels

Where they shift plates, an' let ye live on smells.

Wal, don't give up afore the ship goes
down:

It's a stiff gale, but Providence wun't drown;

An' God wun't leave us yit to sink or swim, Ef we don't fail to du wut 's right by Him.
This land o' ourn, I tell ye, 's gut to be A better country than man ever see.
I feel my sperit swellin' with a cry Thet seems to say, "Break forth an' prophesy!"

O strange New World, thet yit wast never young,

Whose youth from thee by gripin' need was wrung,

Brown foundlin' o' the woods, whose baby-bed

Was prowled roun' by the Injun's cracklin' tread,

An' who grew'st strong thru shifts an' wants an' pains,

Nussed by stern men with empires in their brains,

Who saw in vision their young Ishmel strain
With each hard hand a vassal ocean's mane, Thou, skilled by Freedom an' by gret events To pitch new States ez Old-World men pitch tents,

Thou, taught by Fate to know Jehovah's
plan

Thet man's devices can't unmake a man, An' whose free latch-string never was drawed in

Against the poorest child of Adam's kin, — The grave 's not dug where traitor hands shall lay

In fearful haste thy murdered corse away!
I see —

Jest here some dogs begun to bark,
So thet I lost old Concord's last remark:
I listened long, but all I seemed to hear Was dead leaves gossipin' on some birch-trees near;

But ez they hed n't no gret things to say,
An' sed 'em often, I come right away, An', walkin' home'ards, jest to pass the
time,

I put some thoughts thet bothered me in rhyme;

I hain't hed time to fairly try 'em on,
But here they be — it 's

JONATHAN TO JOHN

It don't seem hardly right, John,
When both my hands was full,
To stump me to a fight, John, — Your cousin, tu, John Bull!

Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess
We know it now," sez he,
"The lion's paw is all the law, Accordin' to J. B., Thet 's fit for you an' me!"

You wonder why we're hot, John?
Your mark wuz on the guns,
The neutral guns, thet shot, John,
Our brothers an' our sons:
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess
There 's human blood," sez he,
"By fits an' starts, in Yankee hearts, Though 't may surprise J. B., More 'n it would you an' me."

Ef I turned mad dogs loose, John,
On your front-parlor stairs,
Would it jest meet your views, John,
To wait an' sue their heirs?
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess, I only guess," sez he,
"Thet ef Vattel on his toes fell,
'T would kind o' rile J. B., Ez wal ez you an' me!"

Who made the law thet hurts, John,
Heads I win, — ditto tails?
"J. B." was on his shirts, John,
Onless my memory fails.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess (I 'm good at thet)," sez he,
"Thet sauce for goose ain't jest the juice For ganders with J. B., No more 'n with you or me!"

When your rights was our wrongs, John,
You did n't stop for fuss, — Britanny's trident prongs, John,
Was good 'nough law for us.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess, Though physie 's good," sez he,
"It does n't foller thet he can swaller Prescriptions signed 'J. B.,' Put up by you an' me!"

We own the ocean, tu, John:
You mus' n' take it hard,
Ef we can't think with you, John,
It 's jest your own back-yard.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess, Ef thet 's his claim," sez he,
"The fencin'-stuff 'll cost enough To bust up friend J. B., Ez wal ez you an' me!"

Why talk so drefle big, John,
Of honor when it meant
You did n't care a fig, John,
But jest for ten per cent?
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess
He 's like the rest," sez he :
"When all is done, it 's number one Thet 's nearest to J. B., Ez wal ez t' you an' me !"

We give the critters back, John,
Cos Abram thought 't was right ;
It warn't your bullyin' clack, John,
Provokin' us to fight.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess
We 've a hard row," sez he,
"To hoe jest now ; but thet, somehow,
May happen to J. B., Ez wal ez you an' me !"

We ain't so weak an' poor, John,
With twenty million people,
An' close to every door, John,
A school-house an' a steeple.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess, It is a fact," sez he,
"The surest plan to make a Man Is, think him so, J. B., Ez much ez you or me !"

Our folks believe in Law, John ;
An' it 's for her sake, now,
They 've left the axe an' saw, John,
The anvil an' the plough.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess, Ef 't warn't for law," sez he,
"There 'd be one shindy from here to Indy ;
An' thet don't suit J. B.
(When 't ain't 'twixt you an' me !)"

We know we 've got a cause, John, Thet 's honest, just, an' true ;
We thought 't would win applause, John,
Ef nowhere else, from you.
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess His love of right," sez he,
"Hangs by a rotten fibre o' cotton :
There 's natur' in J. B., Ez wal 's in you an' me !"

The South says, "Poor folks down !" John, An' "All men up !" say we, — White, yaller, black, an' brown, John :
Now which is your idee ?

Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess, John preaches wal," sez he ;
"But, sermon thru, an' come to du,
Why, there 's the old J. B.
A-crowdin' you an' me !"

Shall it be love, or hate, John ?
It 's you thet 's to decide ;
Ain't your bonds held by Fate, John,
Like all the world's beside ?
Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess Wise men forgive," sez he,
"But not forgit ; an' some time yit Thet truth may strike J. B., Ez wal ez you an' me !"

God means to make this land, John,
Clear thru, from sea to sea, Believe an' understand, John,
The wuth o' bein' free.

Ole Uncle S. sez he, "I guess, God's price is high," sez he ;
"But nothin' else than wut He sells Wears long, an' thet J. B.
May larn, like you an' me !"

NO. III

BIRDOFREDUM SAWIN, ESQ., TO

With the following Letter from the REV-EREND HOMER WILBUR, A. M.

JAALAM, 7th Feb., 1862.

RESPECTED FRIENDS, — If I know myself, — and surely a man can hardly be supposed to have overpassed the limit of fourscore years without attaining to some proficiency in that most useful branch of learning (e cælo descendit, says the pagan poet), — I have no great smack of that weakness which would press upon the publick attention any matter pertaining to my private affairs. But since the following letter of Mr. Sawin contains not only a direct allusion to myself, but that in connection with a topick of interest to all those engaged in the publick ministrations of the sanctuary, I may be pardoned for touching briefly thereupon. Mr. Sawin was never a stated attendant upon my preaching, — never, as I believe, even an occasional one, since the erection of the new house (where we now worship) in 1845. He did, indeed, for a time, supply a not unacceptable bass in the choir; but, whether on some umbrage (omnibus hoc vitium est cantoribus) taken against the bass-viol, then, and till his decease in 1850 (æt. 77,) under the charge of Mr. Asaph Perley, or, as was reported by others, on account of an imminent subscription for a new bell, he thenceforth absented himself from all outward and visible communion. Yet he seems to have preserved (altâ mente repostum), as it were, in the pickle of a mind soured by prejudice, a lasting scunner, as he would call it, against our staid and decent form of worship; for I would rather in that wise interpret his fling, than suppose that any chance tares sown by my pulpit discourses should survive so long, while good seed too often fails to root itself. I humbly trust that I have no personal feeling in the matter; though I know that, if we sound any man deep enough, our lead shall bring up the mud of human nature at last. The Bretons believe in an evil spirit which they call ar c'houkezik, whose office it is to make the congregation drowsy; and though I have never had reason to think that he was specially busy among my flock, yet have I seen enough to make me sometimes regret the hinged seats of the ancient meeting-house, whose lively clatter, not unwillingly intensified by boys beyond eyeshot of the tithing-man, served at intervals as a wholesome réveil. It is true, I have numbered among my parishioners some who are proof against the prophylactic fennel, nay, whose gift of somnolence rivalled that of the Cretan Rip Van Winkle, Epimenides, and who, nevertheless, complained not so much of the substance as of the length of my (by them unheard) discourses. Some ingenious persons of a philosophick turn have assured us that our pulpits were set too high, and that the soporifick tendency increased with the ratio of the angle in which the hearer's eye was constrained to seek the preacher. This were a curious topic for investigation. There can be no doubt that some sermons are pitched too high, and I remember many struggles with the drowsy fiend in my youth. Happy Saint Anthony of Padua, whose finny acolytes, however they might profit, could never murmur! Quare fremuerunt gentes? Who is he that can twice a week be inspired, or has eloquence (ut ita dicam) always on tap? A good man, and, next to David, a sacred poet (himself, haply, not inexpert of evil in this particular), has said, —

“The worst speak something good: if all want sense.

God takes a text and preacheth patience.”

There are one or two other points in Mr. Sawin's letter which I would also briefly animadvert upon. And first, concerning the claim he sets up to a certain superiority of blood and lineage in the people of our Southern States, now unhappily in rebellion against lawful authority and their own better interests. There is a sort of opinions, anachronisms at once and anachorisms, foreign both to the age and the country, that maintain a feeble and buzzing existence, scarce to be called life, like winter flies, which in mild weather crawl out from obscure nooks and crannies to expatiate in the sun, and sometimes acquire vigor enough to disturb with their enforced familiarity the studious hours of the scholar. One of the most stupid and pertinacious of these is the theory that the Southern States were settled by a class of emigrants from the Old World socially superior to those who founded the institutions of New England. The Virginians especially lay claim to this generosity of lineage, which were of no possible account, were it not for the fact that such superstitions are sometimes not without their effect on the course of human affairs. The early adventurers to Massachusetts at least paid their passages; no felons were ever shipped thither, and though it be true that many debosched younger brothers of what are called good families may have sought refuge in Virginia, it is equally certain that a great part of the early deportations thither were the sweepings of the London streets and the leavings of the London stews. It was this my Lord Bacon had in mind when he wrote: “It is a shameful and unblesst thing to take the scum of people and wicked condemned men to be the people with whom you plant.” That certain names are found there is nothing to the purpose, for, even had an alias been beyond the invention of the knaves of that generation, it is known that servants were often called by their masters' names, as slaves are now. On what the heralds call the spindle side, some, at least, of the oldest Virginian families are descended from matrons who were exported and sold for so many hogsheads of tobacco the head. So notorious was this, that it became one of the jokes of contemporary playwrights, not only that men bankrupt in purse and character were "food for the Plantations" (and this before the settlement of New England), but also that any drab would suffice to wive such pitiful adventurers. "Never choose a wife as if you were going to Virginia," says Middleton in one of his comedies. The mule is apt to forget all but the equine side of his pedigree. How early the counterfeit nobility of the Old Dominion became a topic of ridicule in the Mother Country may be learned from a play of Mrs. Behn's, founded on the Rebellion of Bacon: for even these kennels of literature may yield a fact or two to pay the raking. Mrs. Flirt, the keeper of a Virginia ordinary, calls herself the daughter of a baronet, "undone in the late rebellion,"—her father having in truth been a tailor,—and three of the Council, assuming to themselves an equal splendor of origin, are shown to have been, one "a broken exciseman who came over a poor servant," another a tinker transported for theft, and the third "a common pickpocket often flogged at the cart's tail." The ancestry of South Carolina will as little pass muster at the Herald's Visitation, though I hold them to have been more reputable, inasmuch as many of them were honest tradesmen and artisans, in some measure exiles for conscience' sake, who would have smiled at the high-flying nonsense of their descendants. Some of the more respectable were Jews. The absurdity of supposing a population of eight millions all sprung from gentle loins in the course of a century and a half is too manifest for confutation. But of what use to discuss the matter? An expert genealogist will provide any solvent man with a gens et proavos to order. My Lord Burleigh used to say, with Aristotle and the Emperor Frederick II. to back him, that

"nobility was ancient riches," whence also the Spanish were wont to call their nobles ricos hombres, and the aristocracy of America are the descendants of those who first became wealthy, by whatever means. Petroleum will in this wise be the source of much good blood among our posterity. The aristocracy of the South, such as it is, has the shallowest of all foundations, for it is only skin-deep,—the most odious of all, for, while affecting to despise trade, it traces its origin to a successful traffick in men, women, and children, and still draws its chief revenues thence. And though, as Doctor Chamberlayne consolingly says in his "Present State of England," "to become a Merchant of Foreign Commerce, without serving any Apprentisage, hath been allowed no disparagement to a Gentleman born, especially to a younger Brother," yet I conceive that he would hardly have made a like exception in favour of the particular trade in question. Oddly enough this trade reverses the ordinary standards of social respectability no less than of morals, for the retail and domestick is as creditable as the wholesale and foreign is degrading to him who follows it. Are our morals, then, no better than mores after all? I do not believe that such aristocracy as exists at the South (for I hold with Marius, fortissimum quemque generosissimum) will be found an element of anything like persistent strength in war,—thinking the saying of Lord Bacon (whom one quaintly called inductionis dominus et Verulamii) as true as it is pithy, that "the more gentlemen, ever the lower books of subsidies." It is odd enough as an historical precedent, that, while the fathers of New England were laying deep in religion, education, and freedom the basis of a polity which has substantially outlasted any then existing, the first work of the founders of Virginia, as may be seen in Wingfield's "Memorial," was conspiracy and rebellion,—odder yet, as showing the changes which are wrought by circumstance, that the first insurrection in South Carolina was against the aristocratical scheme of the Proprietary Government. I do not find that the cuticular aristocracy of the South has added anything to the refinements of civilization except the carrying of bowie-knives and the chewing of tobacco,—a high-toned Southern gentleman being commonly not only quadrumanous but quidruminant.

I confess that the present letter of Mr. Sawin increases my doubts as to the sincerity of the convictions which he professes, and I am inclined to think that the triumph of the legitimate Government, sure sooner or later to take place, will find him and a large majority of his newly adopted fellow-citizens (who hold with Dædalus, the primal sitter-on-the-fence, that medium tenere tutissimum) original Union men. The criticisms towards the close of his letter on certain of our failings are worthy to be seriously perpended; for he is not, as I think, without a spice of vulgar shrewdness. Fas est et ab hoste doceri: there is no reckoning without your host. As to the good-nature in us which he seems to gird at, while I would not consecrate a chapel, as they have not scrupled to do in France, to Nôtre Dame de la Haine (Our Lady of Hate), yet I cannot forget that the corruption of good-nature is the generation of laxity of principle. Good-nature is our national characteristic; and though it be, perhaps, nothing more than a culpable weakness or cowardice, when it leads us to put up tamely with manifold impositions and breaches of implied contracts (as too frequently in our publick conveyances) it becomes a positive crime when it leads us to look unresentfully on speculation, and to regard treason to the best Government that ever existed as something with which a gentleman may shake hands without soiling his fingers. I do not think the gallows-tree the most profitable member of our Sylvæ; but, since it continues to be planted, I would fain see a Northern limb ingrafted on it, that it may bear some other fruit than loyal Tennesseans.

A relic has recently been discovered on the east bank of Bushy Brook in North Jaalam, which I conceive to be an inscription in Runick characters relating to the early expedition of the Northmen to this continent. I shall make fuller investigations, and communicate the result in due season. Respectfully,

Your obedient servant,
HOMER WILBUR, A. M.

P. S. — I inclose a year's subscription from Deacon Tinkham.

I HED it on my min' las' time, when I t write ye started, To tech the leadin' featur's o' my gittin' m converted;
But, ez my letters hez to go clearn roun by way o' Cuby,
'T wun't seem no staler now than then, b th' time it gits where you be.
You know up North, though sees an' thing air plenty ez you please, Ther' warn't nut one on 'em thet come jes square with my ideas:
They all on 'em wuz too much mixed with Covenants o' Works,
An' would hev answered jest ez wal fo Afrikins an' Turks, Fer where's a Christian's privilege an' hi rewards ensuin', Ef 't ain't perfessin' right and eend 'thou nary need o' doin' ?
I dessay they suit workin'-folks thet ain noways pertic'lar, But nut your Southun gen'leman the keeps his parpendic'lar;
I don't blame nary man thet casts his lo along o' his folks, But ef you callate to save me, 't must b with folks thet is folks; Cov'nants o' works go 'ginst my grain, bu down here I've found out The true fus'-fem'ly A 1 plan, — here how it come about.
When I fus' sot up with Miss S., sez she t me, sez she,
"Without you git religion, Sir, the thin can't never be;
Nut but wut I respec," sez she, "you intellectle part,
But you wun't noways du for me athout change o' heart: Nothun religion works wal North, but it ez soft ez spruce, Compared to urn, for keepin' sound," se she, "upon the goose;
A day's experunce 'd prove to ye, ez easy pull a trigger,
It takes the Southun pint o' view to rais ten bales a nigger;
You 'll fin' thet human natur', South, ain wholesome more 'n skin-deep, An' once 't a darkie's took with it, he wun be wuth his keep."
"How shell I git it, Ma'am ?" — se I. "Attend the nex' camp-meet
in,"

Sez she, "an' it 'll come to ye ez cheap ez onbleached sheetin'."

Wal, so I went along an' hearn most an impressive sarmon

About besprinklin' Afriky with fourth-proof dew o' Harmon :

He did n't put no weaknin' in, but gin it tu us hot,

Z ef he an' Satan 'd ben two bulls in one five-acre lot :

I don't purtend to foller him, but give ye jes' the heads;

For pulpit ellerkence, you know, 'most ollers kin' o' spreads.

Ham's seed wuz gin to us in chairge, an' should n't we be li'ble

In Kingdom Come, ef we kep' back their priv'lege in the Bible ?

The cusses an' the promerses make one gret chain, an' ef

You snake one link out here, one there, how much on 't ud be lef' ?

All things wuz gin to man for 's use, his sarvice, an' delight;

An' don't the Greek an' Hebrew words thet mean a Man mean White ?

Ain't it belittlin' the Good Book in all its proudes' featur's

To think 't wuz wrote for black an' brown an' an' 'lasses-colored creaturs,

Thet could n' read it, ef they would, nor ain't by lor allowed to,

But ough' to take wut we think suits their natures, an' be proud to ?

Warn't it more prof'table to bring your raw materil thru

Where you can work it inta grace an' inta cotton, tu,

Than sendin' missionaries out where fevers might defeat 'em,

An' ef the butcher did n' call, their p'rishioners might eat 'em ?

An' then, agin, wut airthly use ? Nor 'twarn't our fault, in so fur

Ez Yankee skippers would keep on atotin' on 'em over.

T improved the whites by savin' 'em from ary need o' workin',

An' kep' the blacks from bein' lost thru idleness an' shirkin' ;

We took to 'em ez nat'ral ez a barn-owl doos to mice,

An' hed our hull time on our hands to keep us out o' vice;

It made us feel ez pop'lar ez a hen doos with one chicken,

An' fill our place in Natur's scale by givin'
'em a lickin' :

For why should Cæsar git his dues more 'n Juno, Pomp, an' Cuffy ?

It 's justifyin' Ham to spare a nigger when he 's stuffy.

Where 'd their soles go tu, like to know, ef we should let 'em ketch

Freeknowledgism an' Fourierism an' Speri-toolism an' sech ?

When Satan sets himself to work to raise his very bes' muss,

He scatters roun' onscriptur'l views relatin' to Ones'mus.

You 'd ough' to seen, though, how his facs an' argymunce an' figgers

Drawed tears o' real conviction from a lot o' pen'tent niggers!

It warn't like Wilbur's meetin', where you 're shet up in a pew,

Your dickeys sorrin' off your ears, an' bilin' to be thru;

Ther' wuz a tent clost by thet hed a kag o' sunthin' in it,

Where you could go, ef you wuz dry, an'
damp ye in a minute;

An' ef you did dror off a spell, ther' wuz n't no occasion

To lose the thread, because, ye see, he bellered like all Bashan.

It's dry work follerin' argymunce an' so,
'twix' this an' thet,

I felt conviction weighin' down somehow inside my hat;

It growed an' grewed like Jonah's gourd, a kin' o' whirlin' ketched me,

Ontil I fin'ly clean gin out an' owned up thet he 'd fetched me;

An' when nine tenths o' th' perrish took to tumblin' roun' an' hollerin',

I did n' fin' no gret in th' way o' turnin' tu an' follerin'.

Soon ez Miss S. see thet, sez she, "Thet 's wut I call wuth seein' !

Thet 's actin' like a reas'nable an' intellectle bein' !"

An' so we fin'ly made it up, concluded to hitch hosses,

An' here I be 'n my ellermunt among crea-tion's bosses;

Arter I 'd drawed sech heaps o' blanks, Fortin at last hez sent a prize,

An' chose me for a shinin' light o' missionary entraprise.

This leads me to another pint on which I've changed my plan

O' thinkin' so 's 't I might become a straight-out Southun man.

Miss S. (her maiden name wuz Higgs, o' the fus' fem'ly here)

On her Ma's side 's all Juggernot, on Pa's all Cavileer,

An' sence I've merried into her an' stept into her shoes,

It ain't more 'n nateral thet I should modderfy my views:

I've ben a-readin' in Debow until I've fairly gut

So 'nlightened thet I'd full ez lives ha' ben a Dook ez nut;

An' when we've laid ye all out stiff, an'
Jeff hez gut his crown,

An' comes to pick his nobles out, wun't this child be in town!

We 'll hev an Age o' Chivverly surpassin' Mister Burke's,

Where every fem'ly is fus'-best an' nary white man works:

Our system 's sech, the thing 'll root ez easy ez a tater;

For while your lords in furrin parts ain't noways marked by natur',

Nor sot apart from ornery folks in featur's nor in figgers,

Ef ourn 'll keep their faces washed, you 'll know 'em from their niggers.

Ain't sech things wuth secedin' for, an' gittin' red o' you

Thet waller in your low idees, an' will tell all is blue?

Fact is, we air a diff'rent race, an' I, for one, don't see,

Sech havin' ollers ben the case, how w' ever did agree.

It's sunthin' thet you lab'r in'-folks up North hed ough' to think on,

Thet Higgses can't bemean themselves to rulin' by a Lincoln,—

Thet men, (an' guv'nors, tu,) thet hez sech Normal names ez Pickens,

Accustomed to no kin' o' work, 'thout 't is to givin' lickins,

Can't measure votes with folks thet get their livins from their farms,

An' probly think thet Law 's ez good ez hevin' coats o' arms.

Sence I've ben here, I've hired a chap to look about for me

To git me a transplantable an' thrifty fem'ly-tree,

An' he tells me the Sawins is ez much o' Normal blood

Ez Pickens an' the rest on 'em, an' older r' Noah's flood.

Your Normal schools wun't turn ye into Normals, for it 's clear,

Ef eddykatin' done the thing, they'd be some skurcer here.

Pickenses, Boggsses, Pettuses, Magoffins
Letchers, Polks,—

Where can you scare up names like them among your mudsill folks?

Ther 's nothin' to compare with 'em, you'd fin', ef you should glance,

Among the tip-top femerlies in Englan' nor in France:

I've hearn frum 'sponsible men whose word wuz full ez good 's thei-

note,
Men thet can run their face for drinks, an'

keep a Sunday coat, That they wuz all on 'em come down, an'

come down pooty fur, From folks thet, 'thout their crown, wuz on, ou' doors would n' never

stir,

Nor thet ther' warn't a Southun man bu' wut wuz primy fashy

O' the bes' blood in Europe, yis, an' Afrik' an' Ashy:

Sech bein' the case, is 't likely we shoul' bend like cotton wickin',

Or set down under anythin' so low-lived ez a lickin'?

More 'n this,—hain't we the literatoor an' science, tu, by gorry?

Hain't we them intellectle twins, then giants, Simms an' Maury,

Each with full twice the ushle brains, lik' nothin' thet I know,

'thout 't wuz a double-headed calf I see once to a show?

For all thet, I warn't jest at fust in favo'
o' secedin' ;

I wuz for layin' low a spell to find ou' where 't wuz leadin',

For hevin' South-Carliny try her hand at sepritationin',

She takin' resks an' findin' funds, an' we co' operationin',—

I mean a kin' o' hangin' roun' an' settin' on the fence, Till Prov'dunce pinte how to jump an' save the most expense;
 I recollected thet 'ere mine o' lead to Shiraz Centre Thet bust up Jabez Pettibone, an' did n't want to ventur'
 'Fore I wuz sartin wut come out ud pay for wut went in,
 For swappin' silver off for lead ain't the sure way to win;
 (An', fact, it doos look now ez though — but folks must live an' larn — We should git lead, an' more 'n we want, out o' the Old Consarn;)
 But when I see a man so wise an' honest ez Buchanan
 A-lettin' us hev all the forts an' all the arms an' cannon, Admittin' we wuz nat'lly right an' you wuz nat'lly wrong, Coz you wuz lab'rin'-folks an' we wuz wut they call bong-tong, An' coz there warn't no fight in ye more 'n in a mashed potater, While two o' us can't skurcely meet but wut we fight by natur',
 An' th' ain't a bar-room here would pay for openin' on 't a night, Without it giv the priverlege o' bein' shot at sight, Which proves we 're Natur's noblemen, with whom it don't surprise
 The British aristoxty should feel boun' to sympathize, — Seein' all this, an' seein', tu, the thing wuz strikin' roots While Uncle Sam sot still in hopes thet some one'd bring his boots, I thought th' ole Union's hoops wuz off, an' let myself be sucked in To rise a peg an' jine the crowd thet went for reconstructin', — Thet is to hev the pardnership under th' ole name continner Jest ez it wuz, we drorrin' pay, you findin' bone an' sinner, — On'y to put it in the bond, an' enter 't in the journals, Thet you 're the nat'ral rank an' file, an' we the nat'ral kurnels.
 Now this I thought a fees'ble plan, thet 'ud work smooth ez grease,

Sutin' the Nineteenth Century an' Upper Ten ideas,
 An' there I meant to stick, an' so did most o' th' leaders, tu, Coz we all thought the chance wuz good o' puttin' on it thru;
 But Jeff he hit upon a way o' helpin' on us forrard
 By bein' unannermous, — a trick you ain't quite up to, Norrard.
 A Baldin hain't no more 'f a chance with them new apple-corers Than folks's oppersition views against the Ringtail Roarers; They'll take 'em out on him 'bout east, — one canter on a rail Makes a man feel unannermous ez Jonah in the whale;
 Or ef he's a slow-moulded cuss thet can't seem quite t' 'gree,
 He gits the noose by tellergraph upon the nighes' tree:
 Their mission-work with Afrikins hez put 'em up, thet's sartin,
 To all the mos' across-lot ways o' preachin' an' convartin';
 I'll bet my hat th' ain't nary priest, nor all on 'em together, Thet cairs conviction to the min' like Reveren' Taranfeather;
 Why, he sot up with me one night, an' labored to sech purpose, Thet (ez an owl by daylight 'mongst a flock o' teazin' chirpers Sees clearer 'n mud the wickedness o' eatin' little birds)
 I see my error an' agreed to shew it arterwards;
 An' I should say, (to jedge our folks by facts in my possession,) Thet three's Unannermous where one's a 'Riginal Secession; So it's a thing you fellers North may safely bet your chink on,
 Thet we're all water-proofed agin th' usurpin' reign o' Lincoln.
 Jeff's some. He's gut another plan thet hez pertic'lar merits,
 In givin' things a cheerfle look an' stiffnain' loose-hung sperits;
 For while your million papers, wut with lyin' an' diseussin', Keep folks's tempers all on eend a-fumin' an' a-fussin',

A-wondrin' this an' guessin' thet, an' dreadin' every night
 The breechin' o' the Univarse 'll break afore it's light,
 Our papers don't purtend to print on'y wut Guv'ment choose,
 An' thet insures us all to git the very best o' noose :
 Jeff hez it of all sorts an' kines, an' sarves it out ez wanted,
 So 's 't every man gits wut he likes an' nobody ain't scant ; Sometimes it's vict'ries (they're 'bout all ther' is that's cheap down
 here,) Sometimes it's France an' England on the jump to interfere.
 Fact is, the less the people know o' wut ther' is a-doin', The hendier 't is for Guv'ment, sence it henders trouble brewin' ;
 An' noose is like a shipplaster, — it's good,
 ef you believe it,
 Or, wut's all same, the other man thet's goin' to receive it :
 Ef you 've a son in th' army, wy, it's com-fortin' to hear
 He 'll hev no gretter resk to run than seein'
 th' in'my's rear, Coz, ef an F. F. looks at 'em, they ollers break an' run,
 Or wilt right down ez debtors will thet stumble on a dun, (An' this, ef an'thin', proves the wuth o' proper fem'ly pride, Fer sech mean shucks ez creditors are all on Lincoln's side) ; Ef I hev scrip thet wun't go off no more 'n a Belgin rifle, An' read thet it's at par on 'Change, it makes me feel deli'fe ; It's cheerin', tu, where every man mus' fortify his bed,
 To hear thet Freedom's the one thing our darkies mos'ly dread,
 An' thet experunce, time 'n' agin, to Dixie's Land hez shown Ther' 's nothin' like a powder-cask fer a stiddy corner-stone ;
 Ain't it ez good ez nuts, when salt is sellin' by the ounce
 For its own weight in Treash'ry-bons, (ef bought in small amounts,) When even whiskey's gittin' skurce an sugar can't be found,

To know thet all the ellerments o' luxury abound ?
 An' don't it glorify sal'-pork, to come to understand It's wut the Richimon' editors call fatness o' the land !
 Nex' thing to knowin' you 're well off is nut to know when y' ain't ; An' ef Jeff says all's goin' wal, whe 'll ventur' t' say it ain't ?

This cairn the Constitooshun roun' ez Jeff doos in his hat
 Is hendier a drefle sight, an' comes more kin' o' pat.
 I tell ye wut, my jedgment is you 're pooty sure to fail, Ez long 'z the head keeps turnin' back for counsel to the tail :
 Th' advantiges of our consarn for bein' prompt air gret, While, 'long o' Congress, you can't strike,
 'f you git an iron het ;
 They bother roun' with argooin', an' var'ous sorts o' foolin', To make sure ef it's leg'lly het, an' all the while it's coolin', So 's 't when you come to strike, it ain't no gret to wish ye j'y on,
 An' hurts the hammer 'z much or more ez wut it doos the iron, Jeff don't allow no jawin'-sprees for three months at a stretch.
 Knowin' the ears long speeches suits air mostly made to metch ;
 He jes' ropes in your tonguey chaps an' reglar ten-inch bores An' lets 'em play at Congress, ef they 'll du it with closed doors ;
 So they ain't no more bothersome than ef we 'd took an' sunk 'em, An' yit enj'y th' exclusive right to one another's Buncombe
 'thout doin' nobody no hurt, an' 'thout its costin' nothin', Their pay bein' jes' Confedrit funds, they findin' keep an' clothin' ;
 They taste the sweets o' public life, an'
 plan their little jobs, An' suck the Treash'ry (no gret harm, for it's ez dry ez cobs,) An' go thru all the motions jest ez safe ez in a prison,
 An' hev their business to themselves, while Buregard hez hisn :

Ez long 'z he gives the Hessians fits, committees can't make bother
'bout whether 't's done the legle way or whether 't's done tother.
An' I tell you you 've gut to larn thet War ain't one long teeter Betwixt I wan' to an' 'T wun't du, debatin' like a skeetur Afore he lights, — all is, to give the other side a millin', An' arter thet's done, th' ain't no resk but wut the lor 'll be willin' ;
No metter wut the gov'ment is, ez nigh ez
I can hit it,
A lickin' 's constitooshunal, pervidin' We don't git it.
Jeff don't stan' dilly-dallyin', afore he takes a fort,
(With no one in,) to git the leave o' the nex' Soopreme Court, Nor don't want forty-'leven weeks o' jawin' an' expoundin',
To prove a nigger hez a right to save him, ef he 's drowndin' ;
Whereas ole Abe 'ud sink afore he 'd let a darkie boost him, Ef Taney should n't come along an' hed n't interdooced him.
It ain't your twenty millions thet 'll ever block Jeff's game, But one Man thet wun't let 'em jog jest ez he 's takin' aim :
Your numbers they may strengthen ye or weaken ye, ez 't heppens They 're willin' to be helpin' hands or wuss-'n-nothin' cap'ns.
I've chose my side, an' 't ain't no odds ef I wuz drawed with magnets, Or ef I thought it prudenter to jine the nighes' bagnets ;
I've made my ch'ice, an' ciphered out,
from all I see an' heard, Th' ole Constitooshun never 'd git her decks for action cleared, Long 'z you elect for Congressmen poor shots thet want to go Coz they can't seem to git their grub no otherways than so,
An' let your bes' men stay to home coz they wun't show ez talkers, Nor can't be hired to fool ye an' sof'-soap ye at a caucus, — Long 'z ye set by Rotashun more 'n ye do by folks's merits,

Ez though experunce thriv by change o' sile, like corn an' kerrits, — Long 'z you allow a critter's "claims" coz, spite o' shoves an' tippins, He 's kep' his private pan jest where
't would ketch mos' public drippin's, —
Long 'z A. 'll turn tu an' grin' B. 's exe, ef
B. 'll help him grin' hisn, (An' thet's the main idee by which your leadin' men hev risen,) — Long 'z you let ary exe be groun', 'less 't is to cut the weasan'
O' sneaks thet dunno till they 're told wut is an' wut ain't Treason, — Long 'z ye give out commissions to a lot o' peddlin' drones Thet trade in whiskey with their men an' skin 'em to their bones, — Long 'z ye sift out "safe" canderdates thet no one ain't afeard on Coz they 're so thund'rin' eminent for bein' never heard on,
An' hain't no record, ez it's called, for folks to pick a hole in, Ez ef it hurt a man to hev a body with a soul in,
An' it wuz ostentashun to be showin' on 't about,
When half his feller-citizens contrive to du without, —
Long 'z you suppose your votes can turn biled kebbage into brain, An' ary man thet 's pop'lar 's fit to drive a lightnin'-train, —
Long 'z you believe democracy means I'm ez good ez you be,
An' that a feller from the ranks can't be a knave or booby, — Long 'z Congress seems purvided, like yer street-cars an' yer 'busses, With ollers room for jes' one more o' your spiled-in-bakin' cusses, Dough 'thout the emptins of a soul, an' yit with means about 'em (Like essence-peddlers¹) thet 'll make folks long to be without 'em, Jes heavy 'nough to turn a scale thet 's doubtfle the wrong way, An' make their nat'ral arsenal o' bein' nasty pay, — Long 'z them things last, (an' I don't see no gret signs of improvin',)

¹ A rustic euphemism for the American variety of the Mephitis. H. W.

I shan't up stakes, not hardly yit, nor 't would n't pay for movin'; For, 'fore you lick us, it 'll be the long'st day ever you see.
Yours, (as I 'spects to be nex' spring.)

A MESSAGE OF JEFF DAVIS IN SECRET SESSION

Conjecturally reported by H. BIGLOW

JAALAM, 10 March, 1862.

GENTLEMEN, — My leisure has been so entirely occupied with the hitherto fruitless endeavour to decypher the Runick inscription whose fortunate discovery I mentioned in my last communication, that I have not found time to discuss, as I had intended, the great problem of what we are to do with slavery, — a topic on which the public mind in this place is at present more than ever agitated. What my wishes and hopes are I need not say, but for safe conclusions I do not conceive that we are yet in possession of facts enough on which to bottom them with certainty. Acknowledging the hand of Providence, as I do, in all events, I am sometimes inclined to think that they are wiser than we, and am willing to wait till we have made this continent once more a place where freemen can live in security and honour, before assuming any further responsibility. This is the view taken by my neighbour Habakkuk Sloansure, Esq., the president of our bank, whose opinion in the practical affairs of life has great weight with me, as I have generally found it to be justified by the event, and whose counsel, had I followed it, would have saved me from an unfortunate investment of a considerable part of the painful economies of half a century in the Northwest-Passage Tunnel. After a somewhat animated discussion with this gentleman a few days since, I expanded, on the main altimus partem principle, something which he happened to say by way of illustration, into the following fable.

FESTINA LENTE

Once on a time there was a pool Framed all about with flag-leaves cool
And spotted with cow-fishes garish,
Of frogs and pouts the ancient parish.
Alders the creaking redwings sunk on,
Tussocks that house blithe Bob o' Lincoln Hedged round the massailed seclusion;
Where muskrats piled their cells Carthusian;
And many a moss-embroidered log,
The warbling piece of summer frog, Slept and decayed with patient skill, As watering-places sometimes will.

Now in this Abbey of Theleme, Which realized the fairest dream That overgrowing ball-twig had,
Sunned on a half-sunk lily-pad,
There rose a party with a mission To mend the polliwogs' condition,
Who notified the selectmen
To call a meeting, they and then.
"Some kind of steps," they said, "are needed;
They don't come on so fast as we did:
Let's dock their tails, if that don't make 'em Frogs to breed, the Old One take 'em!
That boy, that came the other day To dig some fine root down this way,
His sack knife left, and 't is a sign That Heaven approves of our design:
'T were wicked not to urge the step on,
When Providence has sent the weapon."

Old creakers, deacons of the mire,
That led the deep barnachian choir,
"Aye, 't is a goodly bass that might Have left balinche's out of sight, Shook nobby heads, and said, "No go!
You 'd better let 'em try to grow:
Old Doctor Time is slow, but still He does know how to make a pill."

But vain was all their hoarsest bass,
Their old experience out of place,
And spite of creaking and entreating,
The vote was carried in marsh-meeting.

"Lord knows," protest the polliwogs,
"We 're anxious to be grown-up frogs;
But don't push in to do the work Of Nature till she prove a shirk;
'T is not by jumps that she advances,
But wags her way by circumstances:
Pray, wait awhile, until you know We 're so contrived as not to grow;
Let Nature take her own direction,
And she 'll absorb our impertinence;
You might n't like 'em to appear with,
But we must have the things to steer with."

"No," piped the party of reform,
"All great results are ta'en by storm;
Fate holds her best gifts till we show
We 've strength to make her let them go;
The Providence that works in history,

And seems to some folks such a mystery,
Does not creep slowly on incog,
But moves by jumps, a mighty frog;
No more reject the Age's chrism,
Your queues are an anachronism;
No more the Future's promise mock,
But lay your tails upon the block, Thankful that we the means have voted To have you thus to frogs promoted."

The thing was done, the tails were cropped,
And home each philotadpole hopped,
In faith rewarded to exult,
And wait the beautiful result.
Too soon it came; our pool, so long
The theme of patriot bull-frog's song, Next day was reeking, fit to smother, With heads and tails that missed each other,— Here snoutless tails, there tailless snouts;
The only gainers were the pouts.

MORAL

From lower to the higher next,
Not to the top, is Nature's text;
And embryo Good, to reach full stature, Absorbs the Evil in its nature.

I think that nothing will ever give permanent peace and security to this continent but the extirpation of Slavery therefrom, and that the occasion is nigh; but I would do nothing hastily or vindictively, nor presume to jog the elbow of Providence. No desperate measures for me till we are sure that all others are hopeless, — flectere si nequeo SUPEROS, Acheronta movebo. To make Emancipation a reform instead of a revolution is worth a little patience, that we may have the Border States first, and then the non-slaveholders of the Cotton States, with us in principle, — a consummation that seems to be nearer than many imagine. Fiat justitia, ruat cælum, is not to be taken in a literal sense by statesmen, whose problem is to get justice done with as little jar as possible to existing order, which has at least so much of heaven in it that it is not chaos. Our first duty toward our enslaved brother is to educate him, whether he be white or black. The first need of the free black is to elevate himself according to the standard of this material generation. So soon as the Ethiopian goes in his chariot, he will find not only Apostles, but Chief Priests and Scribes and Pharisees willing to ride with him.

"Nil habet infelix paupertas durius in se Quam quod ridiculos homines facit."

I rejoice in the President's late Message, which at last proclaims the Government on the side of freedom, justice, and sound policy.

As I write, comes the news of our disaster at Hampton Roads. I do not understand the supineness which, after fair warning, leaves wood to an unequal conflict with iron. It is not enough merely to have the right on our side, if we stick to the old flint-lock of tradition. I have observed in my parochial experience (haud ignarus mali) that the Devil is prompt to adopt the latest inventions of destructive warfare, and may thus take even such a three-decker as Bishop Butler at an advantage. It is curious, that, as gunpowder made armour useless on shore, so armour is having its revenge by baffling its old enemy at sea; and that, while gunpowder robbed land warfare of nearly all its picturesqueness to give even greater stateliness and sublimity to a sea-fight, armour bids fair to degrade the latter into a squabble between two iron-shelled turtles.

Yours, with esteem and respect,
HOMER WILBUR, A. M.

P. S. — I had wellnigh forgotten to say that the object of this letter is to enclose a communication from the gifted pen of Mr. Biglow.

I SENT you a messige, my friens, t' other
day,

To tell you I'd nothin' pertickler to say:
't wuz the day our new nation gut kin' o' stillborn,

So 't wuz my pleasant dooty t' acknowledge the corn,

An' I see clearly then, ef I did n't before, Thet the augur in inauguration means bore.
I need n't tell you thet my messige wuz written

To diffuse corree' notions in France an'
Gret Britten,

An' agin to impress on the poppylar mind
The comfort an' wisdom o' goin' it blind, — To say thet I did n't abate not a hooter O' my faith in a happy an' glorious futur', Ez rich in each soshle an' p'litickle blessin', Ez them thet we now hed the joy o' possessin',

With a people united, an' longin' to die For wut we call their country, without askin' why,

An' all the gret things we concluded to slope for Ez much within reach now ez ever—to hope for.
We 've gut all the ellerments, this very
hour,
Thet make up a fus'-class, self-governin'
power:
We 've a war, an' a debt, an' a flag; an' ef
this Ain't to be interpendunt, why, wut on airth
is ?
An' nothin' now hendes our takin' our station Ez the freest, enlightenedest, civerlized
nation,
Built up on our bran'-new politickle thesis Thet a Gov'ment's fust right is to tumble to pieces,—
I say nothin' hendes our takin' our place Ez the very fus'-best o' the whole human race,
A spittin' tobacker ez proud ez you please On Victory's bes' carpets, or loafin' at ease
In the Tool'ries front-parlor, discussin' affairs
With our heels on the backs o' Napoleon's new chairs,
An' princes a-mixin' our cocktails an'
slings,— Excep', wal, excep' jest a very few things, Sech ez navies an' armies an' wherewith to
pay,
An' gettin' our sogers to run t' other way,
An' not be too over-pertickler in tryin'
To hunt up the very las' ditches to die in.

Ther' are critters so base thet they want it explained Jes' wut is the totle amount thet we 've gained,
Ez ef we could maysure stupenjious events By the low Yankee stan'ard o' dollars an' cents:
They seem to forgit, thet, sence last year revolved,
We 've succeeded in gittin' seceshed an'
dissolved,
An' thet no one can't hope to git thru dis-solutoon
'thout some kin' o' strain on the best Constitootoon.
Who asks for a prospec' more flettrin' an'
bright,

When from here clean to Texas it's all one free fight ?
Hain't we rescued from Seward the gret leadin' featur Thet makes it wuth while to be reasonin' creatur ?
Hain't we saved Habus Coppers, improved it in fact,
By suspendin' the Unionists 'stid o' the Act ?
Ain't the laws free to all ? Where on airth else d' ye see Every freeman improvin' his own rope an'
tree ?
Ain't our piety sech (in our speeches an' messiges)
Ez t' astonish ourselves in the bes'-composed pessiges,
An' to make folks thet knowed us in th' ole state o' things Think convarsion ez easy ez drinkin' gin-slings ?

It's ne'ssary to take a good confident tone With the public; but here, jest amongst us, I own Things look blacker 'n thunder. Ther' 's no use denyin'
We're clean out o' money, an' 'most out o' lyin' ;
Two things a young nation can't mennage
without,
Ef she wants to look wal at her fust comin'
out;
For the fust supplies physickle strength, while the second
Gives a morril edvantage thet 's hard to be reckoned:
For this latter I 'm willin' to du wut I can;
For the former you 'll hev to consult on a plan,— Though our fust want (an' this pint I want your best views on)
Is plausible paper to print I. O. U. s. on.
Some gennlemen think it would cure all our cankers
In the way o' finance, ef we jes' hanged the bankers;
An' I own the proposle 'ud square with my views,
Ef their lives wuz n't all thet we 'd left
'em to lose.
Some say thet more confidence might be inspired,

Ef we voted our cities an' town's to be fired, —
 A plan thet 'ud suttently tax our endurance, Coz 't would be our own bills we should git for th' insurance; But cinders, no metter how sacred we think 'em,
 Might n't strike furrin minds ez good sources of income,
 Nor the people, perhaps, would n't like the eclaw
 O' bein' all turned into paytriots by law.
 Some want we should buy all the cotton an' burn it,
 On a pledge, when we've gut thru the war, to return it, — Then to take the proceeds an' hold them ez security
 For an issue o' bonds to be met at maturity With an issue o' notes to be paid in hard cash
 On the fus' Monday follerin' the 'tarnal Allsmash:
 This hez a safe air, an', once hold o' the
 gold,
 'ud leave our vile plunderers out in the cold,
 An' might temp' John Bull, ef it warn't for the dip he Once gut from the banks o' my own Massissippi.
 Some think we could make, by arrangin' the figgers,
 A hendy home-currency out of our niggers;
 But it wun't du to lean much on ary sech
 staff,
 For they 're gittin' tu current a'ready, by half.
 One gennleman says, ef we lef' our loan
 out Where Floyd could git hold on 't he 'd take it, no doubt;
 But 't ain't jes' the takin, though 't hez a good look,
 We mus' git sunthin' out on it arter it's took,
 An' we need now more 'n ever, with sorrer
 I own,
 Thet some one another should let us a loan, Sence a soger wun't fight, on'y jes' while he draws his Pay down on the nail, for the best of all causes,

'thout askin' to know wut the quarrel 's about, —
 An' once come to thet, why, our game is played out.
 It 's ez true ez though I should n't never hev said it, Thet a hitch hez took place in our system
 o' credit;
 I swear it's all right in my speeches an'
 messiges,
 But ther' 's idees afloat, ez ther' is about sessiges:
 Folks wun't take a bond ez a basis to trade
 on,
 Without nosin' round to find out wut it's made on,
 An' the thought more an' more thru the public min' crosses Thet our Treshry hez gut 'mos' too many dead hosses.
 Wut's called credit, you see, is some like a balloon,
 Thet looks while it's up 'most ez harnsome 'z a moon,
 But once git a leak in 't, an' wut looked so grand Caves righ' down in a jiffy ez flat ez your hand.
 Now the world is a dreffle mean place, for our sins,
 Where ther' ollus is critters about with long pins
 A-prickin' the bubbles we've blowed with sech care,
 An' provin' ther' 's nothin' inside but bad
 air:
 They 're all Stuart Millses, poor-white trash, an' sneaks,
 Without no more chivverly 'n Choctaws or Creeks,
 Who think a real gennleman's promise to pay
 Is meant to be took in trade's ornery way:
 Them fellers an' I could n' never agree;
 They 're the nateral foes o' the Southun Idee;
 I 'd gladly take all of our other resks on
 me
 To be red o' this low-lived politikle 'con-
 'my!
 Now a dastardly notion is gittin' about Thet our bladder is bust an' the gas oozi-
 out,

An' unless we can mennage in some way to stop it,
Why, the thing's a gone coon, an' we might ez wal drop it.
Brag works wal at fust, but it ain't jes' the
thing
For a stiddy inves'ment the shiners to bring,
An' votin' we're prosp'rous a hundred times over Wun't change bein' starved into livin' in clover.
Manassas done sunthin' tow'rd's drawin' the wool
O'er the green, antislavery eyes o' John Bull:
Oh, warn't it a godsend, jes' when sech tight fixes Wuz crowdin' us mourners, to throw double-sixes!
I wuz tempted to think, an' it wuz n't no wonder,
Ther' wuz reelly a Providence, — over or under, —
When, all packed for Nashville, I fust ascertained
From the papers up North wut a victory we'd gained.
't wuz the time for diffusin' corree' views
abroad
Of our union an' strength an' relyin' on
God;
An', fact, when I'd gut thru my fust big surprise,
I much ez half b'lieved in my own tallest lies,
An' conveyed the idee thet the whole Southun popperlace Wuz Spartans all on the keen jump for Thermopperlies, Thet set on the Lincolnites' bombs till they bust,
An' fight for the privilege o' dyin' the
fust;
But Roanoke, Bufort, Millspring, an' the rest
Of our recent starn-foremost successes out West, Hain't left us a foot for our swellin' to stand on, —
We've showed too much o' wut Buregard calls abandon,
For all our Thermopperlies (an' it's a marey

We hain't hed no more) hev ben clean vicy-varsy,
An' wut Spartans wuz lef' when the battle wuz done
Wuz them thet wuz too unambitious to run.
Oh, ef we hed on'y jes' gut Reecognition, Things now would ha' ben in a different position!
You'd ha' hed all you wanted: the paper blockade Smashed up into toothpicks; unlimited trade
In the one thing thet's needfle, till niggers, I swow,
Hed ben thicker 'n provisional shin-plasters
now;
Quinine by the ton 'ginst the shakes when they seize ye;
Nice paper to coin into C. S. A. specie;
The voice of the driver'd be heerd in our land,
An' the univarse scringe, ef we lifted our
hand:
Would n't thet be some like a fulfillin' the prophecies,
With all the fusc' fem'lies in all the fust
offices?
't wuz a beautiful dream, an' all sorrer is idle, —
But ef Lincoln would ha' hanged Mason an'
Slidell!
For would n't the Yankees hev found they'd ketched Tartars,
Ef they'd raised two sech critters as them into martyrs?
Mason wuz F. F. V., though a cheap card to win on,
But t'other was jes' New York trash to begin on;
They ain't o' no good in Européan pellices, But think wut a help they'd ha' ben on their gallowses!
They'd ha' felt they wuz truly fulfillin' their mission,
An' oh, how dog-cheap we'd ha' gut Reecognition!
But somehow another, wutever we've tried,
Though the the'ry's fust-rate, the facts wun't coincide:
Facts are contrary 'z mules, an' ez hard in the mouth,

An' they allus hev showed a mean spite to the South.

Sech bein' the case, we hed best look about For some kin' o' way to slip our necks out : Le's vote our las' dollar, ef one can be found,

(An', at any rate, votin' it hez a good sound,) —

Le's swear thet to arms all our people is flyin',

(The critters can't read, an' wun't know how we're lyin',) —

Thet Toombs is advancin' to sack Cincinnati,

With a rovin' commission to pillage an' slaughter, —

Thet we've throwed to the winds all regard for wut's lawfle,

An' gone in for sunthin' promiscu'sly awfle. Ye see, hitherto, it's our own knaves an' fools

Thet we've used, (those for whetstones, an' t'others ez tools,)

An' now our las' chance is in puttin' to test The same kin' o' cattle up North an' out West, —

Your Belmonts, Vallandighams, Woodses, an' sech,

Poor shotes thet ye could n't persuade us to tech,

Not in ornery times, though we're willin' to feed 'em

With a nod now an' then, when we happen to need 'em ;

Why, for my part, I'd rather shake hands with a nigger

Than with cusses that load an' don't darst dror a trigger ;

They're the wust wooden nutmegs the Yankees perdooce,

Shaky everywheres else, an' jes' sound on the goose ;

They ain't wuth a cuss, an' I set nothin' by 'em,

But we're in sech a fix thet I s'pose we mus' try 'em.

I — But, Gennlemen, here's a despatch jes' come in Which shows thet the tide's begun turnin' agin', —

Gret Cornfedrit success ! C'lumbus eeva-coated !

I mus' run down an' hev the thing properly stated,

An' show wut a triumph it is, an' how lucky

To fin'ly git red o' thet cussed Kentucky, — An' how, sence Fort Donelson, winnin' the day Consists in triumphantly gittin' away.

SPEECH OF HONOURABLE PRESERVED DOE IN SECRET CAUCUS

TO THE EDITORS OF THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

JAALAM, 12th April, 1862.

GENTLEMEN, — As I cannot but hope that the ultimate, if not speedy, success of the national arms is now sufficiently ascertained, sure as I am of the righteousness of our cause and its consequent claim on the blessing of God, (for I would not show a faith inferior to that of the Pagan historian with his Facile evenit quod Dis cordi est,) it seems to me a suitable occasion to withdraw our minds a moment from the confusing din of battle to objects of peaceful and permanent interest. Let us not neglect the monuments of preterite history because what shall be history is so diligently making under our eyes. Cras ingens iterabimus æquor ; to-morrow will be time enough for that stormy sea ; to-day let me engage the attention of your readers with the Runick inscription to whose fortunate discovery I have heretofore alluded. Well may we say with the poet, Multa renascuntur quæ jam cecidere. And I would premise, that, although I can no longer resist the evidence of my own senses from the stone before me to the ante-Columbian discovery of this continent by the Northmen, gens inclytissima, as they are called in a Palermitan inscription, written fortunately in a less debatable character than that which I am about to decipher, yet I would by no means be understood as wishing to vilipend the merits of the great Genoese, whose name will never be forgotten so long as the inspiring strains of "Hail Columbia" shall continue to be heard. Though he must be stripped also of whatever praise may belong to the experiment of the egg, which I find proverbially attributed by Castilian authors to a certain Juanito or Jack, (perhaps an offshoot of our giant-killing mythus,) his name will still remain one of the most illustrious of modern times. But the impartial historian owes a duty likewise to obscure merit, and my solicitude to render a tardy justice is perhaps quickened by my having known those who, had their own field of labour been less secluded, might have found a readier acceptance with the reading publick. I could give an example, but I forbear: forsitan nostris ex ossibus oritur ultor.

Touching Runick inscriptions, I find that they may be classed under three general heads: 1°. Those which are understood by the Danish Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries, and Professor Rafn, their Secretary; 2°. Those which are comprehensible only by Mr. Rafn; and 3°. Those which neither the Society, Mr. Rafn, nor anybody else can be said in any definite sense to understand, and which accordingly offer peculiar temptations to enucleating sagacity. These last are naturally deemed the most valuable by intelligent antiquaries, and to this class the stone now in my possession fortunately belongs. Such give a picturesque variety to ancient events, because susceptible oftentimes of as many interpretations as there are individual archæologists; and since facts are only the pulp in which the Idea or event-seed is softly imbedded till it ripen, it is of little consequence what colour or flavour we attribute to them, provided it be agreeable. Availing myself of the obliging assistance of Mr. Arphaxad Bowers, an ingenious photographick artist, whose house-on-wheels has now stood for three years on our Meeting-House Green, with the somewhat contradictory inscription,—"our motto is onward,"—I have sent accurate copies of my treasure to many learned men and societies, both native and European. I may hereafter communicate their different and (me jndice) equally erroneous solutions. I solicit also, Messrs. Editors, your own acceptance of the copy herewith enclosed. I need only premise further, that the stone itself is a goodly block of metamorphick sandstone, and that the Runes resemble very nearly the ornithichnites or fossil bird-tracks of Dr. Hitchcock, but with less regularity or apparent design than is displayed by those remarkable geological monuments. These are rather the non bene junctarum discordia semina rerum. Resolved to leave no door open to cavil, I first of all attempted the elucidation of this remarkable example of lithick literature by the ordinary modes, but with no adequate return for my labour. I then considered myself amply justified in resorting to that heroick treatment the felicity of which, as applied by the great Bentley to Milton, had long ago enlisted my admiration. Indeed, I had already made up my mind, that, in case good fortune should throw any such invaluable record in my way, I would proceed with it in the following simple and satisfactory method. After a cursory examination, merely sufficing for an approximative estimate of its length, I would write down a hypothetical inscription based upon antecedent probabilities, and then proceed to extract from the characters engraven on the stone a meaning as nearly as possible conformed to this a priori product of my own ingenuity. The result more than justified my hopes, inasmuch as the two inscriptions were made without any great violence to tally in all essential particulars. I then proceeded, not without some anxiety, to my second test, which was, to read the Runick letters diagonally, and again with the same success. With an excitement pardonable under the circumstances, yet tempered with thankful humility, I now applied my last and severest trial, my experimentum crucis. I turned the stone, now doubly precious in my eyes, with scrupulous exactness upside down. The physical exertion so far displaced my spectacles as to derange for a moment the focus of vision. I confess that it was with some tremulousness that I readjusted them upon my nose, and prepared my mind to bear with calmness any disappointment that might ensue. But, O albo dies notanda lapillo! what was my delight to find that the change of position had effected none in the sense of the writing, even by so much as a single letter! I was now, and justly, as I think, satisfied of the conscientious exactness of my interpretation. It is as follows:

BJARNA GRIMOLFSSON
FIRST DRANK CLOUD-BROTHER THROUGH CHILD-OF-LAND-AND-WATER:

that is, drew smoke through a reed stem. In other words, we have here a record of the first smoking of the herb Nicotiana Ta-

vacum by an European on this continent. The probable results of this discovery are so vast as to baffle conjecture. If it be objected, that the smoking of a pipe would hardly justify the setting up of a memorial stone, I answer, that even now the Moquis Indian, ere he takes his first whiff, bows reverently toward the four quarters of the sky in succession, and that the loftiest monuments have been reared to perpetuate fame, which is the dream of the shadow of smoke. The Saga, it will be remembered, leaves this Bjarna to a fate something like that of Sir Humphrey Gilbert, on board a sinking ship in the "wormy sea," having generously given up his place in the boat to a certain Iclander. It is doubly pleasant, therefore, to meet with this proof that the brave old man arrived safely in Vinland, and that his declining years were cheered by the respectful attentions of the dusky denizens of our then uninvaded forest. Most of all was I gratified, however, in thus linking forever the name of my native town with one of the most momentous occurrences of modern times. Hitherto Jaalam, though in soil, climate, and geographical position as highly qualified to be the theatre of remarkable historical incidents as any spot on the earth's surface, has been, if I may say it without seeming to question the wisdom of Providence, almost maliciously neglected, as it might appear, by occurrences of world-wide interest in want of a situation. And in matters of this nature it must be confessed that adequate events are as necessary as the vates sacer to record them. Jaalam stood always modestly ready, but circumstances made no fitting response to her generous intentions. Now, however, she assumes her place on the historick roll. I have hitherto been a zealous opponent of the Circean herb, but I shall now reëxamine the question without bias.

I am aware that the Rev. Jonas Tutchel, in a recent communication to the "Bogus Four Corners Weekly Meridian," has endeavored to show that this is the sepulchral inscription of Thorwald Eriksson, who, as is well known, was slain in Vinland by the natives. But I think he has been misled by a preconceived theory, and cannot but feel that he has thus made an ungracious return for my allowing him to inspect the stone with the aid of my own glasses (he having by accident left his at home) and in my own study. The heathen ancients might have instructed this Christian minister in the rites of hospitality; but much is to be pardoned to the spirit of self-love. He must indeed be ingenious who can make out the words hær hvílir from any characters in the inscription in question, which, whatever else it may be, is certainly not mortuary. And even should the reverend gentleman succeed in persuading some fantastical wits of the soundness of his views, I do not see what useful end he will have gained. For if the English Courts of Law hold the testimony of gravestones from the burial-grounds of Protestant dissenters to be questionable, even where it is essential in proving a descent, I cannot conceive that the epitaphial assertions of heathens should be esteemed of more authority by any man of orthodox sentiments.

At this moment, happening to cast my eyes upon the stone, whose characters a transverse light from my southern window brings out with singular distinctness, another interpretation has occurred to me, promising even more interesting results. I hasten to close my letter in order to follow at once the clue thus providentially suggested.

I inclose, as usual, a contribution from Mr. Biglow, and remain,

Gentlemen, with esteem and respect,
Your Obedient Humble Servant,
HOMER WILBUR, A. M.

I THANK ye, my frien's, for the warmth o' your greetin':

Ther' 's few airthly blessin's but wut 's vain an' fleetin';

But ef ther' is one thet hain't no cracks an'
flaws,

An' is wuth goin' in for, it 's pop'lar applause;

It sends up the sperits ez lively ez rockets,
An' I feel it — wal, down to the eend o' my pockets.

Jes' lovin' the people is Canaan in view, But it 's Canaan paid quarterly t' hev 'em love you;

It 's a blessin' thet 's breakin' out ollus in fresh spots;

It 's a-follerin' Moses 'thout losin' the fleshpots.

But, Gennlemen, 'scuse me, I ain't sech a raw cus

Ez to go luggin' ellerkence into a caucus, — Thet is, into one where the call comprehen's

Nut the People in person, but on'y their frien's;

I'm so kin' o' used to convincin' the masses Of th' edvantage o' bein' self-governin' asses,

I forgut that we 're all o' the sort thet pull wires

An' arrange for the public their wants an'
desires,

An' thet wut we hed met for wuz jes' to agree

Wut the People's opinions in futur' should
be.

Now, to come to the nub, we 've ben all disappointed,

An' our leadin' ideas are a kind o' disjinted, Though, fur ez the nateral man could discern,

Things ough' to ha' took most an oppersite turn.

But The'ry is jes' like a train on the rail, Thet, weather or no, puts her thru without fail,

While Fac' 's the ole stage thet gits sloughed in the ruts,

An' hez to allow for your darned efs an'
buts,

An' so, nut intendin' no pers'nal reflections, They don't — don't nut allus, thet is, — make connections:

Sometimes, when it really doos seem thet they 'd oughter

Combine jest ez kindly ez new rum an'
water,

Both 'll be jest ez sot in their ways ez a bagnet,

Ez otherwise-minded ez th' eends of a magnet,

An' folks like you 'n' me, thet ain't ept to be sold,

Git somehow or 'nother left out in the cold.

I expected 'fore this, 'thout no gret of a row, Jeff D. would ha' ben where A. Lincoln is now,

With Taney to say 't wuz all legle an' fair,
An' a jury o' Deemocrats ready to swear

Thet the ingin o' State gut throwed into the ditch

By the fault o' the North in misplacin' the switch.

Things wuz ripenin' fust-rate with Buchanan to nuss 'em;

But the People — they would n't be Mexicans, cuss 'em!

Ain't the safeguards o' freedom upsot, 'z you may say,

Ef the right o' rev'lution is took clean
away?

An' doos n't the right primy-fashy include
The bein' entitled to nut be subdued?

The feet is, we 'd gone for the Union so
strong,

When Union meant South ollus right an'
North wrong,

Thet the People gut fooled into thinkin' it might

Worry on middlin' wal with the North in the right.

We might ha' ben now jest ez prosp'rous ez France,

Where p'litikle enterprise hez a fair chance, An' the People is heppy an' proud et this
hour,

Long ez they hev the votes, to let Nap hev
the power;

But our folks they went an' believed wut we 'd told 'em

An', the flag once insulted, no mortle could hold 'em.

'T wuz pervokin' jest when we wuz cert'in to win, —

An' I, for one, wun't trust the masses agin:
For a People thet knows much ain't fit to be free

In the self-cockin', back-action style o'
J. D.

I can't believe now but wut half on 't is lies;

For who 'd thought the North wuz agoin' to rise,

Or take the pervokin'est kin' of a stump,
'thout 't wuz sunthin' ez pressin' ez Gabr'el's las' trump?

Or who 'd ha' supposed, arter sech swell an' bluster

'bout the lick-ary-ten-on-ye fighters they 'd muster,

Raised by hand on bried lightnin', ez op'lent 'z you please

In a primitive furrest o' femmily-trees, — Who 'd ha' thought thet them Southun-ers ever 'ud show

Starns with pedigrees to 'em like theirs to the foe,

Or, when the vamosin' come, ever to find Nat'ral masters in front an' mean white folks behind?

By ginger, ef I'd ha' known half I know now,

When I wuz to Congress, I would n't, I swow,

Hev let 'em cair on so high-minded an' sarsy,

'thout some show o' wut you may call vicy-varsy.

To be sure, we wuz under a contrac' jes' then To be dreffle forbearin' towards Southun men;

We hed to go sheers in preservin' the bel-lance:

An' ez they seemed to feel they wuz wastin' their tellents

'thout some un to kick, 't warn't more 'n proper, you know,

Each should funnish his part; an' sence they found the toe,

An' we wuz n't cherubs — wal, we found the buffer,

For fear thet the Compromise System should suffer.

I wun't say the plan hed n't onpleasant featur, —

For men are perverse an' onreasonin' creaturs,

An' forgit thet in this life 't ain't likely to heppen

Their own privit fancy should ollus be cappen, —

But it worked jest ez smooth ez the key of a safe,

An' the gret Union bearin's played free from all chafe.

They warn't hard to suit, ef they hed their own way,

An' we (thet is, some on us) made the thing pay:

't wuz a fair give-an'-take out of Uncle Sam's heap;

Ef they took wut warn't theirs, wut we give come ez cheap;

The elect gut the offices down to tide-waiter,

The people took skinnin' ez mild ez a tater,

Seemed to choose who they wanted tu, footed the bills,

An' felt kind o' 'z though they wuz havin' their wills,

Which kep' 'em ez harmless an' cherfle ez crickets,

While all we invested wuz names on the tickets:

Wal, ther' 's nothin', for folks fond o' lib'ral consumption

Free o' charge, like democ'acy tempered with gumption!

Now warn't thet a system wuth pains in presarvin',

Where the people found jints an' their frien's done the carvin', —

Where the many done all o' their thinkin' by proxy,

An' were proud on 't ez long ez 't wuz christened Democ'cy, —

Where the few let us sap all o' Freedom's foundations,

Ef you call it reformin' with prudence an' patience,

An' were willin' Jeff's snake-egg should hetch with the rest,

Ef you writ "Constitootional" over the nest?

But it 's all out o' kilter, ('t wuz too good to last,)

An' all jes' by J. D.'s perceedin' too fast;

Ef he 'd on'y hung on for a month or two more,

We 'd ha' gut things fixed nicer 'n they hed ben before:

Afore he drawed off an' lef' all in confusion,

We wuz safely entrenched in the ole Con-stitootion,

With an outlyin', heavy-gun, casemated fort

To rake all assailants, — I mean th' S. J. Court.

Now I never 'll acknowledge (nut ef you should skin me)

't wuz wise to abandon sech works to the in'my,

An' let him fin' out thet wut scared him so long,

Our whole line of argyments, lookin' so strong,

All our Scriptur an' law, every the'ry an' fac',

Wuz Quaker-guns daubed with Pro-sla-very black.

Why, ef the Republicans ever should git

Andy Johnson or some one to lend 'em the wit
 An' the spunk jes' to mount Constitootion an' Court With Columbiad guns, your real ekle-rights sort,
 Or drill out the spike from the ole Declaration
 Thet can kerry a solid shot clearn roun' creation,
 We 'd better take maysures for shettin' up shop,
 An' put off our stock by a vendoo or swop.
 But they wun't never dare tu ; you'll see 'em in Edom
 'fore they ventur' to go where their doctrines 'ud lead 'em :
 They 've ben takin' our princerples up ez we dropt 'em,
 An' thought it wuz terrible 'cute to adopt
 'em ;
 But they 'll fin' out 'fore long thet their hope's ben deceivin' 'em, An' thet princerples ain't o' no good, ef you b'lieve in 'em ;
 It makes 'em tu stiff for a party to use,
 Where they 'd ough' to be easy 'z an ole pair o' shoes.
 If we say 'n our pletform thet all men are brothers,
 We don't mean thet some folks ain't more so 'n some others ;
 An' it's wal understood thet we make a selection,
 An' thet brotherhood kin' o' subsides arter
 'lection.
 The fust thing for sound politicians to larn is,
 Thet Truth, to dror kindly in all sorts o' harness,
 Mus' be kep' in the abstract, — for, come to apply it, You're ept to hurt some folks's interists
 by it.
 Wal, these 'ere Republicans (some on 'em) ect Ez though general mexims 'ud suit speshle facts ;
 An' there's where we 'll nick 'em, there's where they 'll be lost :
 For applyin' your princerples wut makes it eost,
 An' folks don't want Fourth o' July t' interfere

With the business-consarns o' the rest o'
 the year,
 No more 'n they want Sunday to pry an'
 to peek
 Into wut they are doin' the rest o' the week.
 A ginooine statesman should be on his guard,
 Ef he must hev beliefs, nut to b'lieve 'em tu hard ;
 For, ez sure ez he does, he 'll be blartin'
 'em out
 'thout regardin' the natur' o' man more 'n a spout, Nor it don't ask much gumption to pick out a flaw
 In a party whose leaders are loose in the jaw :
 An' so in our own case I ventur' to hint Thet we 'd better nut air our perceedin's in print,
 Nor pass resserlootions ez long ez your arm Thet may, ez things heppen to turn, du us harm ;
 For when you 've done all your real mean-in' to smother,
 The darned things 'll up an' mean sunthin' or 'nother.
 Jeff'son probly meant wal with his "born free an' ekle," But it's turned out a real crooked stick in the sekle ;
 It's taken full eighty-odd year — don't you
 see ? —
 From the pop'lar belief to root out thet
 idee,
 An', arter all, suckers on't keep buddin'
 forth
 In the nat'ly onprincipled mind o' the North.
 No, never say nothin' without you 're compelled tu,
 An' then don't say nothin' thet you can be held tu,
 Nor don't leave no friction-idees layin' loose
 For the ign'ant to put to incend'ary use.
 You know I 'm a feller thet keeps a skinned
 eye
 On the leetle events thet go skurryin' by, Coz it's of'ner by them than by gret ones you 'll see Wut the p'litickle weather is likely to be.

Now I don't think the South's more 'n begun to be licked, But I du think, ez Jeff says, the wind-bag's gut pricked;
 It'll blow for a spell an' keep puffin' an'
 wheezin',
 The tighter our army an' navy keep squeezin',—
 For they can't help spread-eaglein' long 'z ther' 's a mouth
 To blow Enfield's Speaker thru lef' at the South.
 But it's high time for us to be settin' our faces
 Towards reconstructin' the national basis, With an eye to beginnin' agin on the jolly ticks
 We used to chalk up 'hind the back-door o' politics;
 An' the fus' thing's to save wut of Slav'ry ther' 's lef' Arter this (I mus' call it) imprudence o'
 Jeff:
 For a real good Abuse, with its roots fur an' wide,
 Is the kin' o' thing I like to hev on my
 side;
 A Scriptur' name makes it ez sweet ez a rose,
 An' it's tougher the older an' uglier it grows—(I ain't speakin' now o' the righteousness of it,
 But the p'litickle purchase it gives an' the profit).
 Things look pooty squally, it must be allowed,
 An' I don't see much signs of a bow in the cloud:
 Ther' 's too many Deemocrats—leaders wut's wuss—
 Thet go for the Union 'thout carin' a cuss
 Ef it helps ary party thet ever wuz heard
 on,
 So our eagle ain't made a split Austrian bird on.
 But ther' 's still some consarvative signs to be found Thet shows the gret heart o' the People is sound:
 (Excuse me for usin' a stump-phrase agin, But, once in the way on't, they will stick like sin:)

There 's Phillips, for instance, hez jes' ketched a Tartar
 In the Law-'n'-Order Party of ole Cincin-
 nater;
 An' the Compromise System ain't gone out o' reach,
 Long 'z you keep the right limits on freedom o' speech.
 'T warn't none too late, neither, to put on the gag,
 For he's dangerous now he goes in for the flag.
 Nut thet I altogether approve o' bad eggs, They 're mos' gin'ly argymunt on its las' legs,—
 An' their logic is ept to be tu indiscriminate,
 Nor don't ollus wait the right objecs to
 'liminate;
 But there is a variety on 'em, you'll find, Jest ez usefule an' more, besides bein' refined,—
 I mean o' the sort thet are laid by the dictionary, Sech ez sophisms an' cant, thet'll kerry conviction ary Way thet you want to the right class o'
 men,
 An' are staler than all 't ever come from a hen:
 "Disunion" done wal till our resh Southun
 friends
 Took the savor all out on't for national ends;
 But I guess "Abolition" 'll work a spell yit,
 When the war's done, an' so will "Forgive-an'-forgit."
 Times mus' be pooty thoroughly out o' all jint, Ef we can't make a good constitootional pint;
 An' the good time 'll come to be grindin' our exes,
 When the war goes to seed in the nettle o'
 texes:
 Ef Jon'than don't squirm, with sech helps to assist him,
 I give up my faith in the free-suffrage system;
 Democ'y wun't be nut a mite interestin', Nor p'litikle capital much wuth investin';
 An' my notion is, to keep dark an' lay low Till we see the right minute to put in our blow.—

But I've talked longer now'n I hed any
 idee,
 An' ther's others you want to hear more'n you du me;
 So I'll set down an' give thet 'ere bottle a skrimmage,
 For I've spoke till I'm dry ez a real graven image.

NO. VI

SUNTHIN' IN THE PASTORAL LINE

JAALAM, 17th May, 1862.

GENTLEMEN,—At the special request of Mr. Biglow, I intended to inclose, together with his own contribution, (into which, at my suggestion, he has thrown a little more of pastoral sentiment than usual,) some passages from my sermon on the day of the National Fast, from the text, "Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them," Heb. xiii. 3. But I have not leisure sufficient at present for the copying of them, even were I altogether satisfied with the production as it stands. I should prefer, I confess, to contribute the entire discourse to the pages of your respectable miscellany, if it should be found acceptable upon perusal, especially as I find the difficulty in selection of greater magnitude than I had anticipated. What passes without challenge in the fervour of oral delivery, cannot always stand the colder criticism of the closet. I am not so great an enemy of Eloquence as my friend Mr. Biglow would appear to be from some passages in his contribution for the current month. I would not, indeed, hastily suspect him of covertly glancing at myself in his somewhat caustick animadversions, albeit some of the phrases he girds at are not entire strangers to my lips. I am a more hearty admirer of the Puritans than seems now to be the fashion, and believe, that, if they Hebraized a little too much in their speech, they showed remarkable practical sagacity as statesmen and founders. But such phenomena as Puritanism are the results rather of great religious than of merely social convulsions, and do not long survive them. So soon as an earnest conviction has cooled into a phrase, its work is over, and the best that can be done with it is to bury it. Ite, missa est. I am inclined to agree with Mr. Biglow that we cannot settle the great political questions which are now presenting themselves to the nation by the opinions of Jeremiah or Ezekiel as to the wants and duties of the Jews in their time, nor do I believe that an entire community with their feelings and views would be practicable or even agreeable at the present day. At the same time I could wish that their habit of subordinating the actual to the moral, the flesh to the spirit, and this world to the other, were more common. They had found out, at least, the great military secret that soul weighs more than body.—But I am suddenly called to a sick-bed in the household of a valued parishioner.

With esteem and respect,

Your obedient servant,

HOMER WILBUR.

ONCE git a smell o' musk into a draw,
 An' it clings hold like precerents in law:
 Your gra'ma'am put it there, — when, goodness knows, —
 To jes' this-worldify her Sunday-clo'es;
 But the old chist wun't sarve her gran'son's wife, (For, 'thout new funnitooor, wut good in life?)
 An' so ole clawfoot, from the precinks dread
 O' the spare chamber, slinks into the shed Where, dim with dust, it fust or last subsides
 To holdin' seeds an' fifty things besides;
 But better days stick fast in heart an' husk,
 An' all you keep in 't gits a scent o' musk.
 Jes' so with poets: wut they 've airly read Gits kind o' worked into their heart an'
 head,
 So 's 't they can't seem to write but jest on sheers
 With furrin countries or played-out ideers, Nor hev a feelin', ef it doos n't smack O' wut some critter chose to feel 'way
 back:
 This makes 'em talk o' daisies, larks, an'
 things,

Ez though we 'd nothin' here that blows an' sugs, — (Why, I 'd give more for one live bobolink Than a square mile o' larks in printer's ink,) —
This makes 'em think our fust o' May is
May,
Which 't ain't, for all the almanicks can
say.

O little city-gals, don't never go it Blind on the word o' noospaper or poet!
They 're apt to puff, an' May-day seldom looks

Up in the country ez it doos in books;
They 're no more like than hornets'-nests an' hives,

Or printed sarmons be to holy lives.

I, with my trousers perched on cowhide
boots,

Tuggin' my foundered feet out by the roots, Hev seen ye come to fling on April's hearse Your muslin nose-gays from the milliner's, Puzzlin' to find dry ground your queen to choose,

An' dance your throats sore in morocker shoes:

I 've seen ye an' felt proud, thet, come wut would,

Our Pilgrim stock wuz pethed with hardi-hood.

Pleasure doos make us Yankees kind o' winch,

Ez though 't wuz sunthin' paid for by the inch;

But yit we du contrive to worry thru,
Ef Dooty tells us thet the thing 's to du,
An' kerry a hollerday, ef we set out,
Ez stiddily ez though 't wuz a redoubt.

I, country-born an' bred, know where to find

Some blooms thet make the season suit the
mind,

An' seem to metch the doubtin' bluebird's notes, —

Half-vent'r'in' liverworts in furry coats, Bloodroots, whose rolled-up leaves ef you oocurl,

Each on 'em 's cradle to a baby-pearl, —
But these are jes' Spring's pickets; sure ez
sin,

The rebble frosts 'll try to drive 'em in;
For half our May 's so awfully like May n't,
't would rile a Shaker or an evrige saint;

Though I own up I like our back'ard springs

Thet kind o' haggle with their greens an'
things,

An' when you 'most give up, 'uthout more
words

Toss the fields full o' blossoms, leaves, an'
birds;

Thet 's Northun natur', slow an' apt to doubt,

But when it doos git stirred, ther' 's no gin-
out!

Fust come the blackbirds clatt'r'in' in tall
trees,

An' settlin' things in windy Congresses, — Queer politicians, though, for I 'll be skinned

Ef all on 'em don't head against the wind.
'fore long the trees begin to show belief, —

The maple crimsons to a coral-reef, Then saffern swarms swing off from all the willers

So plump they look like yaller caterpil-lars,

Then gray hossches'nuts leetle hands unfold Softer 'n a baby's be at three days old:

Thet 's robin-redbreast's almanick; he knows

Thet arter this ther' 's only blossom-snows;
So, choosin' out a handy crotch an' spouse,

He goes to plast'r'in' his adobe house.

Then seems to come a hitch, — things lag behind,

Till some fine mornin' Spring makes up her
mind,

An' ez, when snow-swelled rivers cresh their dams

Heaped-up with ice thet dovetails in an' jams,

A leak comes spirtin' thru some pin-hole cleft,

Grows stronger, fereer, tears out right an'
left.

Then all the waters bow themselves an'
come,

Suddin, in one gret slope o' shedderin' foam, Jes' so our Spring gits everythin' in tune

An' gives one leap from Aperl into June; Then all comes crowdin' in; afore you think,

Young oak-leaves mist the side-hill woods with pink;

The catbird in the laylock-bush is loud:

The orchards turn to heaps o' rosy cloud ; Red-cedars blossom tu, though few folks
know it,

An' look all dipt in sunshine like a poet ;
The lime-trees pile their solid stacks o'
shade

An' drows'ly simmer with the bees' sweet
trade ;

In ellum-shrouds the flashin' hangbird
clings

An' for the summer vy'ge his hammock
slings ;

All down the loose-walled lanes in archin'
bowers

The barb'ry droops its strings o' golden
flowers,

Whose shrinkin' hearts the school-gals love to try

With pins, — they 'll worry youn so, boys, bineby !

But I don't love your cat'logue style, — do
you ? —

Ez ef to sell off Natur' by vendoo ;

One word with blood in 't 's twice ez good ez two :

'nuff sed, June's bridesman, poet o' the
year,

Gladness on wings, the bobolink, is here ;
Half-hid in tip-top apple-blooms he swings,

Or climbs against the breeze with quiverin'
wings,

Or, givin' way to 't in a mock despair, Runs down, a brook o' laughter, thru the
air.

I ollus feel the sap start in my veins In Spring, with curus heats an' prickly pains,

Thet drive me, when I git a chance, to walk

Off by myself to hev a privit talk

With a queer critter thet can't seem to 'gree

Along o' me like most folks, — Mister
Me.

Ther' 's times when I 'm unsoshle ez a stone, An' sort o' suffercate to be alone, —

I 'm crowded jes' to think thet folks are nigh,

An' can't bear nothin' closer than the sky ;

Now the wind 's full ez shifty in the mind

Ez wut it is ou'-doors, ef I ain't blind,

An' sometimes, in the fairest sou'west
weather

My innard vane pints east for weeks together,

My natur' gits all goose-flesh, an' my sins Come drizzlin' on my conscience sharp ez
pins :

Wal, et sech times I jes' slip out o' sight An' take it out in a fair stan'-up fight With the one cuss I can't lay on the shelf, The crook'dest stick in all the heap, — Myself.

'T wuz so las' Sabbath arter meetin'-time :
Findin' my feelin' would n't noways rhyme With nobody's, but off the hendle flew An' took things from an east-wind pint o'
view,

I started off to lose me in the hills
Where the pines be, up back o' 'Siah's Mills :

Pines, ef you 're blue, are the best friends
I know,

They mope an' sigh an' sheer your feelin's
so, —

They besh the ground beneath so, tu, I
swan,

You half-forgit you 've gut a body on.
Ther' 's a small school'us' there where four roads meet,

The door-steps boller'd out by little feet, An' side-posts carved with names whose owners grew

To gret men, some on 'em, an' deacons, tu ;
't ain't used no longer, coz the town hez gut A high-school, where they teach the Lord knows wut :

Three-story larnin' 's pop'lar now ; I guess
We thriv' ez wal on jes' two stories less,

For it strikes me ther' 's sech a thing ez sinnin'

By overloadin' children's underpinnin' :
Wal, here it wuz I larned my A B C,

An' it 's a kind o' favorite spot with me.

We're curus critters : Now ain't jes' the minute

Thet ever fits us easy while we 're in it ;

Long ez 't wuz futur', 't would be perfect
bliss, —

Soon ez it 's past, thet time 's wuth ten o'
this ;

An' yit there ain't a man thet need be told Thet Now 's the only bird lays eggs o' gold.

A knee-high lad, I used to plot an' plan An' think 't wuz life's cap-sheaf to be a
man ;

Now, gittin' gray, there 's nothin' I enjoy Like dreamin' back along into a boy :
So the ole school'us' is a place I choose Afore all others, ef I want to muse ;
I set down where I used to set, an' git My boyhood back, an' better things with
it, —

Faith, Hope, an' sunthin', ef it is n't Cherrity,
It's want o' guile, an' thet's ez gret a rer-rity, —

While Fancy's cushin', free to Prince and Clown,
Makes the hard bench ez soft ez milkweed-down.

Now, 'fore I knowed, thet Sabbath arternoon

When I sot out to tramp myself in tune,
I found me in the school'us' on my seat, Drummin' the march to No-wheres with my feet.

Thinkin' o' nothin', I've heerd ole folks
say

Is a hard kind o' dooty in its way:
It's thinkin' everythin' you ever knew,
Or ever hearn, to make your feelin's blue.
I sot there tryin' thet on for a spell :
I thought o' the Rebellion, then o' Hell, Which some folks tell ye now is jest a met-terfor

(A the'ry, p'raps, it wun't feel none the better for);

I thought o' Reconstruction, wut we 'd win Patchin' our patent self-blow-up agin :
I thought ef this 'ere milkin' o' the wits,
So much a month, warn't givin' Natur'
fits, —

Ef folks warn't druv, findin' their own milk
fail,

To work the cow thet hez an iron tail,
An' ef idees 'thout ripenin' in the pan Would send up cream to humor ary man :
From this to thet I let my worryin' creep, Till finally I must ha' fell asleep.

Our lives in sleep are some like streams thet glide

'twixt flesh an' sperrit boundin' on each side, Where both shores' shadders kind o' mix an' mingle

In sunthin' thet ain't jes' like either single;

An' when you cast off moorin's from To-
day,

An' down towards To-morrer drift away,
The imiges thet tingle on the stream Make a new upside-down'ard world o'
dream :

Sometimes they seem like sunrise-streaks an' warnin's

O' wut 'll be in Heaven on Sabbath-mornin's,

An', mixed right in ez ef jest out o' spite, Sunthin' thet says your supper ain't gone
right.

I 'm gret on dreams, an' often when I
wake,

I've lived so much it makes my mem'ry ache,

An' can't skurce take a cat-nap in my cheer

'thout hevin' 'em, some good, some bad, all queer.

Now I wuz settin' where I 'd ben, it seemed,

An' ain't sure yit whether I r'ally dreamed,
Nor, ef I did, how long I might ha' slep', When I hearn some un stompin' up the step,

An' lookin' round, ef two an' two make four,
I see a Pilgrim Father in the door.

He wore a steeple-hat, tall boots, an' spurs
With rowels to 'em big ez ches'nut-burrs, An' his gret sword behind him sloped away Long 'z a man's speech thet dunno wut to
say. —

"Ef your name 's Biglow, an' your given-
name

Hosee," sez he, "it 's arter you I came;
I 'm your gret-gran'ther multiplied by three." —

"My wut?" sez I. — "Your gret-gretgret," sez he:

"You would n't ha' never ben here but for
me.

Two hundred an' three year ago this May
The ship I come in sailed up Boston Bay;

I 'd been a cunnle in our Civil War, — But wut on airth hev you gut up one for ?

Coz we du things in England, 't ain't for
you

To git a notion you can du 'em tu:

I 'm told you write in public prints: ef
true,

It 's natural you should know a thing or two." —

"Thet air 's an argymunt I can't endorse, —

't would prove, coz you wear spurs, you kep' a horse:
 For brains," sez I, "wutever you may think,
 Ain't bou'n' to cash the draf's o' pen-an'- ink, —
 Though mos' folks write ez ef they hoped jes' quickenin'
 The churn would argoo skim-milk into thickenin';
 But skim-milk ain't a thing to change its view
 O' wut it's meant for more 'n a smoky flue.
 But du pray tell me, 'fore we further go,
 How in all Natur' did you come to know
 'bout our affairs," sez I, "in Kingdom-Come?" —
 "Wal, I worked round at sperrit-rappin' some,
 An' danced the tables till their legs wuz
 gone,
 In hopes o' larnin' wut wuz goin' on," Sez he, "but mejums lie so like all-split Thet I concluded it wuz best to quit.
 But, come now, ef you wun't confess to knowin', You've some conjectures how the thing's
 a-goin'." —
 "Gran'ther," sez I, "a vane warn't never known
 Nor asked to hev a jedgment of its own;
 An' yit, ef 't ain't gut rusty in the jints, It's safe to trust its say on certin pints:
 It knows the wind's opinions to a T, An' the wind settles wut the weather'll be."
 "I never thought a scion of our stock Could grow the wood to make a weathercock;
 When I wuz younger 'n you, skurce more
 'n a shaver,
 No airthly wind," sez he, "could make me waver!" (Ez he said this, he clinched his jaw an' forehead.
 Hitehin' his belt to bring his sword-hilt forrard.) —
 "Jes so it wuz with me," sez I, "I swow, When I wuz younger 'n wut you see me
 now, —
 Nothin' from Adam's fall to Huldys bonnet,
 Thet I warn't full-cocked with my jedgment on it;
 But now I'm gittin' on in life, I find

It's a sight harder to make up my mind, — Nor I don't often try tu, when events Will du it for me free of all expense.
 The moral question's ollus plain enough, — It's jes' the human-natur' side thet's tough;
 Wut's best to think may n't puzzle me nor
 you, —
 The pinch comes in decidin' wut to du;
 Ef you read History, all runs smooth ez grease, Coz there the men ain't nothin' more 'n ideas, —
 But come to make it, ez we must to-day, Th' ideas hev arms an' legs an' stop the
 way:
 It's easy fixin' things in facts an' figgers, —
 They can't resist, nor warn't brought up with niggers;
 But come to try your the'ry on, — why.
 then
 Your facts an' figgers change to ign'ant
 men Actin' ez ugly —" — "Smite 'em hip an' thigh!" Sez gran'ther, "and let every man-child
 die!
 Oh for three weeks o' Crommle an' the Lord!
 Up, Isr'el, to your tents an' grind the sword!" —
 "Thet kind o' thing worked wal in ole Judee,
 But you forgit how long it's ben A. D.; You think thet's ellerkence, — I call it shoddy,
 A thing," sez I, "wun't cover soul nor body;
 I like the plain all-wool o' common-sense, Thet warms ye now, an' will a twelvemonth hence.
 You took to follerin' where the Prophets beckoned,
 An', fust you knowed on, back come Charles the Second;
 Now wut I want's to hev all we gain stick,
 An' not to start Millennium too quick;
 We hain't to punish only, but to keep,
 An' the cure's gut to go a cent'ry deep."
 "Wall, milk-an'-water ain't the best o' glue," Sez he, "an' so you'll find afore you're thru;
 Ef reshnness venters sunthin', shilly-shally

Loses ez often wut 's ten times the vally.
Thet exe of urn, when Charles's neck gut split,

Opened a gap thet ain't bridged over yit: Slav'ry's your Charles, the Lord hez gin the exe" —

"Our Charles," sez I, "hez gut eight million necks.

The hardest question ain't the black man's
right,

The trouble is to 'mancipate the white ;
One 's chained in body an' can be sot free,
But t' other 's chained in soul to an idee:
It 's a long job, but we shall worry thru it; Ef bagnets fail, the spellin'-book must du it."

"Hosee," sez he, "I think you're goin' to fail:

The rattlesnake ain't dangerous in the tail;
This 'ere rebellion 's nothing but the rettle,—

You 'll stomp on thet an' think you've won the bettle;

It's Slavery thet 's the fangs an' thinkin'
head,

An' ef you want selvation, cresh it dead, — An' cresh it suddin, or you 'll larn by waitin'

Thet Chance wun't stop to listen to de-batin'!" —

"God's truth!" sez I, — "an' ef I held the club,

An' knowed jes' where to strike, — but there 's the rub!" —

"Strike soon," sez he, "or you 'll be deadly ailin', —

Folks thet 's afeared to fail are sure o' failin';

God hates your sneakin' creturs thet believe

He'll settle things they run away an'
leave!"

He brought his foot down fercely, ez he spoke,

An' give me sech a startle thet I woke.

NO. VII

LATEST VIEWS OF MR. BIGLOW

PRELIMINARY NOTE

[It is with feelings of the liveliest pain that we inform our readers of the death of the Reverend Homer Wilbur, A. M., which took place suddenly, by an apoplectic stroke, on the afternoon of Christmas day, 1862. Our venerable friend (for so we may venture to call him, though we never enjoyed the high privilege of his personal acquaintance) was in his eighty-fourth year, having been born June 12, 1779, at Pigsgusset Precinct (now West Jerusha) in the then District of Maine. Graduated with distinction at Hubville College in 1805, he pursued his theological studies with the late Reverend Preserved Thacker, D. D., and was called to the charge of the First Society in Jaalam in 1809, where he remained till his death.

"As an antiquary he has probably left no superior, if, indeed, an equal," writes his friend and colleague, the Reverend Jeduthun Hitchcock, to whom we are indebted for the above facts; "in proof of which I need only allude to his 'History of Jaalam, Genealogical, Topographical, and Ecclesiastical,' 1849, which has won him an eminent and enduring place in our more solid and useful literature. It is only to be regretted that his intense application to historical studies should have so entirely withdrawn him from the pursuit of poetical composition, for which he was endowed by Nature with a remarkable aptitude. His well-known hymn, beginning 'With clouds of care encompassed round,' has been attributed in some collections to the late President Dwight, and it is hardly presumptuous to affirm that the simile of the rainbow in the eighth stanza would do no discredit to that polished pen."

We regret that we have not room at present for the whole of Mr. Hitchcock's exceedingly valuable communication. We hope to lay more liberal extracts from it before our readers at an early day. A summary of its contents will give some notion of its importance and interest. It contains: 1st, A biographical sketch of Mr. Wilbur, with notices of his predecessors in the pastoral office, and of eminent clerical contemporaries; 2d, An obituary of deceased, from the Punkin-Falls "Weekly Parallel;" 3d, A list of his printed and manuscript productions and of projected works; 4th, Personal anecdotes and recollections, with specimens of table-talk; 5th, A tribute to his relict, Mrs. Dorcas (Pilcox) Wilbur; 6th, A list of graduates fitted for different colleges by Mr. Wilbur, with biographical memoranda touching the more distinguished; 7th, Concerning learned, charitable, and other societies, of which Mr. Wilbur was a member, and of those with which, had his life been prolonged, he would doubtless have been associated, with a complete catalogue of such Americans as have been Fellows of the Royal Society; 8th, A brief summary of Mr. Wilbur's latest conclusions concerning the Tenth Horn of the Beast in its special application to recent events, for which the public, as Mr. Hitchcock assures us, have been waiting with feelings of lively anticipation; 9th, Mr. Hitchcock's own views on the same topic; and, 10th, A brief essay on the importance of local histories. It will be apparent that the duty of preparing Mr. Wilbur's biography could not have fallen into more sympathetic hands.

In a private letter with which the reverend gentleman has since favored us, he expresses the opinion that Mr. Wilbur's life was shortened by our unhappy civil war. It disturbed his studies, dislocated all his habitual associations and trains of thought, and unsettled the foundations of a faith, rather the result of habit than conviction, in the capacity of man for self-government. "Such has been the felicity of my life," he said to Mr. Hitchcock, on the very morning of the day he died, "that, through the divine mercy, I could always say, Summum nec metuo diem, nec opto. It has been my habit, as you know, on every recurrence of this blessed anniversary, to read Milton's 'Hymn of the Nativity' till its sublime harmonies so dilated my soul and quickened its spiritual sense that I seemed to hear that other song which gave assurance to the shepherds that there was One who would lead them also in green pastures and beside the still waters. But to-day I have been unable to think of anything but that mournful text, 'I came not to send peace, but a sword,' and, did it not smack of Pagan presumptuousness, could almost wish I had never lived to see this day."

Mr. Hitchcock also informs us that his friend "lies buried in the Jaalam graveyard, under a large red-cedar which he specially admired. A neat and substantial monument is to be erected over his remains, with a Latin epitaph written by himself; for he was accustomed to say, pleasantly, 'that there was at least one occasion in a scholar's life when he might show the advantages of a classical training.'"

The following fragment of a letter addressed to us, and apparently intended to accompany Mr. Biglow's contribution to the present number, was found upon his table after his decease. — EDITORS ATLANTIC MONTHLY.]

TO THE EDITORS OF THE ATLANTIC

JAALAM, 24th Dec., 1862.

RESPECTED SIRS, — The infirm state of my bodily health would be a sufficient apology for not taking up the pen at this time, wholesome as I deem it for the mind to appricate in the shelter of epistolary confidence, were it not that a considerable, I might even say a large, number of individuals in this parish expect from their pastor some publick expression of sentiment at this crisis. Moreover, Qui tacitus ardet magis uritur. In trying times like these, the besetting sin of undisciplined minds is to seek refuge from inexplicable realities in the dangerous stimulant of angry partisanship or the indolent narcotick of vague and hopeful vaticination: fortunamque suo temperat arbitrio. Both by reason of my age and my natural temperament, I am unfitted for either. Unable to penetrate the inscrutable judgments of God, I am more than ever thankful that my life has been prolonged till I could in some small measure comprehend His mercy. As there is no man who does not at some time render himself amenable to the one, — quum vix justus sit securus, — so there is none that does not feel himself in daily need of the other.

I confess I cannot feel, as some do, a personal consolation for the manifest evils of this war in any remote or contingent advantages that may spring from it. I am old and weak, I can bear little, and can scarce hope to see better days; nor is it any adequate compensation to know that Nature is young and strong and can bear much. Old men philosophize over the past, but the present is only a burthen and a weariness. The one lies before them like a placid evening landscape; the other is full of the vexations and anxieties of house-keeping. It may be true enough that miscet hæc illis, prohibetque Clotho fortunam stare, but he who said it was fain at last to call in Atropos with her shears before her time; and I cannot help selfishly mourning that the fortune of our Republic could not at least stay till my days were numbered.

Tibullus would find the origin of wars in the great exaggeration of riches, and does not stick to say that in the days of the beechen trencher there was peace. But averse as I am by nature from all wars, the more as they have been especially fatal to libraries, I would have this one go on till we are reduced to wooden platters again, rather than surrender the principle to defend which it was undertaken. Though I believe Slavery to have been the cause of it, by so thoroughly demoralizing Northern politics for its own purposes as to give opportunity and hope to treason, yet I would not have our thought and purpose diverted from their true object, — the maintenance of the idea of Government. We are not merely suppressing an enormous riot, but contending for the possibility of permanent order coexisting with democratical fickleness; and while I would not superstitiously venerate form to the sacrifice of substance, neither would I forget that an adherence to precedent and prescription can alone give that continuity and coherence under a democratical constitution which are inherent in the person of a despotick monarch and the selfishness of an aristocratical class. Stet pro ratione voluntas is as dangerous in a majority as in a tyrant.

I cannot allow the present production of my young friend to go out without a protest from me against a certain extremeness in his views, more pardonable in the poet than in the philosopher. While I agree with him, that the only cure for rebellion is suppression by force, yet I must animadvert upon certain phrases where I seem to see a coincidence with a popular fallacy on the subject of compromise. On the one hand there are those who do not see that the vital principle of Government and the seminal principle of Law cannot properly be made a subject of compromise at all, and on the other those who are equally blind to the truth that without a compromise of individual opinions, interests, and even rights, no society would be possible. In medio tutissimus. For my own part, I would gladly —

Er I a song or two could make Like rockets druv by their own burnin', All leap an' light, to leave a wake Men's hearts an' faces skyward turn-
in'! —

But, 'l strikes me, 't ain't jest the time Fer stringin' words with settisfaction:
Wut 's wanted now 's the silent rhyme
'Twixt upright Will an' downright Action.

Words, ef you keep 'em, pay their keep,
But gabble 's the short cut to ruin;
It 's gratis, (gals half-price,) but cheap
At no rate, ef it henders doin';
Ther' 's nothin' wuss, 'less 't is to set A martyr-prem'um upon jawrin'; Teapots git dangerous, ef you shet Their lids down on 'em with Fort Warren.

'Bout long enough it 's ben discussed Who sot the magazine afire, An' whether, ef Bob Wickliffe bust,
'T would scare us more or blow us
higher.

D' ye s'pose the Gret Foreseer's plan Wuz settled fer him in town-meetin'?

Or thet ther' 'd ben no Fall o' Man, Ef Adam 'd on'y bit a sweetin'?

Oh, Jon'than, ef you want to be A rugged chap agin an' hearty,
Go fer wutever 'll hurt Jeff D., Nut wut 'll boost up ary party.
Here 's hell broke loose, an' we lay flat With half the univarse a-singin', Till Sen'tor This an' Gov'nor Thet Stop squabblin' fer the garding-ingin.

It 's war we 're in, not politics;
It 's systems wrastlin' now, not parties;
An' victory in the ecad 'll fix Where longest will an' truest heart is.
An' wut 's the Guv'ment folks about?
Tryin' to hope ther' 's nothin' doin',
An' look ez though they did n't doubt Sunthin' pertickler wuz a-brewin'.

Ther' 's critters yit thet talk an' act Fer wut they call Conciliation;
They 'd hand a buff'lo-drove a tract When they wuz madder than all Bashan.

Conciliate? it jest means be kicked,
No metter how they phrase an' tone it;
It means that we 're to set down licked, Thet we 're poor shotes an' glad to own
it!

A war on tick 's ez dear 'z the deuce,
But it wun't leave no lastin' traces,
Ez 't would to make a sneakin' truce Without no moral specie-basis:
Ef greenbacks ain't nut jest the cheese,
I guess ther' 's evils thet 's extremere, — Fer instance, — shinplaster idees Like them put out by Gov'nor Seymour.

Last year, the Nation, at a word, When tremblin' Freedom cried to shield
her,
Flamed weldin' into one keen sword Waitin' an' longin' fer a wielder:
A splendid flash! — but how 'd the grasp With sech a chance ez thet wuz tally?
Ther' warn't no meanin' in our clasp, —
Half this, half thet, all shilly-shally.

More men? More Man! It 's there we fail;

Weak plans grow weaker yit by length-enin':

Wut use in addin' to the tail,
When it 's the head 's in need o' strength-
enin'?

We wanted one thet felt all Chief From roots o' hair to sole o' stockin', Square-sot with thousan'-ton belief In him an' us, ef earth went rockin'!

Ole Hick'ry would n't ha' stood see-saw 'Bout doin' things till they wuz done
with,—

He'd smashed the tables o' the Law In time o' need to load his gun with;
He could n't see but jest one side,— Ef his, 't wuz God's, an' thet wuz plenty;
An' so his "Forrards!" multiplied An army's fightin' weight by twenty.

But this 'ere histin', creak, creak, creak,
Your cappen's heart up with a derrick,
This tryin' to coax a lightnin'-streak
Out of a half-discouraged hay-rick,
This hangin' on mont' arter mont' Fer one sharp purpose 'mongst the twitter,—

I tell ye, it doos kind o' stunt
The peth and sperit of a critter.

In six months where 'll the People be, Ef leaders look on revolution Ez though it wuz a cup o' tea,— Jest social el'ments in solution?
This weighin' things doos wal enough When war cools down, an' comes to writin';

But while it 's makin', the true stuff Is pison-mad, pig-headed fightin'

Democ'acy gives every man
The right to be his own oppressor;
But a loose Gov'ment ain't the plan, Helpless ez spilled beans on a dresser:
I tell ye one thing we might larn From them smart critters, the Seced-
ers,—

Ef bein' right 's the fust consarn,
The 'fore-the-fust 's cast-iron leaders.

But 'pears to me I see some signs That we 're a-goin' to use our senses:
Jeff druv us into these hard lines,
An' ough' to bear his half th' expenses; Slavery 's Secession's heart an' will, South, North, East, West, where'er you find it,

An' ef it drors into War's mill, D' ye say them thunder-stones sha'n't grind it?

D' ye s'pose, ef Jeff giv him a lick, Ole Hick'ry 'd tried his head to sof'n
So 's 't would n't hurt thet ebony stick Thet 's made our side see stars so of'n?
"No!" he'd ha' thundered, "on your knees,
An' own one flag, one road to glory!
Soft-heartedness, in times like these,
Shows sof'ness in the upper story!"

An' why should we kick up a muss
About the Pres'dunt's proclamation?
It ain't a-goin' to lib'rate us,
Ef we don't like emancipation.
The right to be a cussed fool Is safe from all devices human,
It's common (ez a gin'l rule)
To every critter born o' woman.

So we 're all right, an' I, fer one,
Don't think our cause 'll lose in valiy
By rammin' Scriptur' in our gun,
An' gittin' Natur' fer an ally:
Thank God, say I, fer even a plan To lift one human bein's level, Give one more chance to make a man,
Or, anyhow, to spile a devil!

Not thet I'm one thet much expec' Millennium by express to-morrer;
They will miscarry, — I rec'lec' Tu many on 'em, to my sorrer:
Men ain't made angels in a day,
No matter how you mould an' labor
'em,
Nor 'riginal ones, I guess, don't stay With Abe so of'n ez with Abraham.

The'ry thinks Fact a pooty thing, An' wants the banns read right en-suin';
But fact wun't nowadays wear the ring,
'Thout years o' settin' up an' wooin':
Though, arter all, Time's dial-plate Marks cent'ries with the minute-finger, An' Good can't never come tu late,
Though it doos seem to try an' linger.

An' come wut will, I think it 's grand Abe 's gut his will et last bloom-fusnaced

In trial-flames till it'll stand
 The strain o' bein' in deadly earnest :
 Thet's wut we want, — we want to know
 The folks on our side hez the bravery
 To b'lieve ez hard, come weal, come woe, In Freedom ez Jeff doos in Slavery.

Set the two forces foot to foot,
 An' every man knows who'll be winner,
 Whose faith in God hez ary root Thet goes down deeper than his dinner:
 Then 't will be felt from pole to pole,
 Without no need o' proclamation,
 Earth's biggest Country 's gut her soul An' risen up Earth's Greatest Nation !

KETTELOPOTOMACHIA

[In the month of February, 1866, the editors of the "Atlantic Monthly" received from the Rev. Mr. Hitchcock of Jaalam a letter enclosing the macaronic verses which follow, and promising to send more, if more should be communicated. "They were rapped out on the evening of Thursday last past," he says, "by what claimed to be the spirit of my late predecessor in the ministry here, the Rev. Dr. Wilbur, through the medium of a young man at present domiciled in my family. As to the possibility of such spiritual manifestations, or whether they be properly so entitled, I express no opinion, as there is a division of sentiment on that subject in the parish, and many persons of the highest respectability in social standing entertain opposing views. The young man who was improved as a medium submitted himself to the experiment with manifest reluctance, and is still unprepared to believe in the authenticity of the manifestations. During his residence with me his deportment has always been exemplary; he has been constant in his attendance upon our family devotions and the public ministrations of the Word, and has more than once privately stated to me, that the latter had often brought him under deep concern of mind. The table is an ordinary quadrupedal one, weighing about thirty pounds, three feet seven inches and a half in height, four feet square on the top, and of beech or maple, I am not definitely prepared to say which. It had once belonged to my respected predecessor, and had been, so far as I can learn upon careful inquiry, of perfectly regular and correct habits up to the evening in question. On that occasion the young man previously alluded to had been sitting with his hands resting carelessly upon it, while I read over to him at his request certain portions of my last Sabbath's discourse. On a sudden the rappings, as they are called, commenced to render themselves audible, at first faintly, but in process of time more distinctly and with violent agitation of the table. The young man expressed himself both surprised and pained by the wholly unexpected, and, so far as he was concerned, unprecedented occurrence. At the earnest solicitation, however, of several who happened to be present, he consented to go on with the experiment, and with the assistance of the alphabet commonly employed in similar emergencies, the following communication was obtained and written down immediately by myself. Whether any, and if so, how much weight should be attached to it, I venture no decision. That Dr. Wilbur had sometimes employed his leisure in Latin versification I have ascertained to be the case, though all that has been discovered of that nature among his papers consists of some fragmentary passages of a version into hexameters of portions of the Song of Solomon. These I had communicated about a week or ten days previous[ly] to the young gentleman who officiated as medium in the communication afterwards received. I have thus, I believe, stated all the material facts that have any elucidative bearing upon this mysterious occurrence."

So far Mr. Hitchcock, who seems perfectly master of Webster's unabridged quarto, and whose flowing style leads him into certain further expatiations for which we have not room. We have since learned that the young man he speaks of was a sophomore, put under his care during a sentence of rustication from — College, where he had distinguished himself rather by physical experiments on the comparative power of resistance in window-glass to various solid substances, than in the more regular studies of the place. In answer to a letter of inquiry, the professor of Latin says, "There was no harm in the boy that I know of beyond his loving mischief more than Latin, nor can I think of any spirits likely to possess him except those commonly called animal. He was certainly not remarkable for his Latinity, but I see nothing in the verses you enclose that would lead me to think them beyond his capacity, or the result of any special inspiration whether of beech or maple. Had that of birch been tried upon him earlier and more faithfully, the verses would perhaps have been better in quality and certainly in quantity." This exact and thorough scholar then goes on to point out many false quantities and barbarisms. It is but fair to say, however, that the author, whoever he was, seems not to have been unaware of some of them himself, as is shown by a great many notes appended to the verses as we received them, and purporting to be by Scaliger, Bentley, and others, — among them the Esprit de Voltaire! These we have omitted as clearly meant to be humorous and altogether failing therein.

Though entirely satisfied that the verses are altogether unworthy of Mr. Wilbur, who seems to have been a tolerable Latin scholar after the fashion of his day, yet we have determined to print them here, partly as belonging to the res gestæ of this collection, and partly as a warning to their putative author which may keep him from such indecorous pranks for the future.

No. IX

[THE Editors of the "Atlantic" have received so many letters of inquiry concerning the literary remains of the late Mr. Wilbur, mentioned by his colleague and successor, Rev.

Jeduthun Hitchcock, in a communication from which we made some extracts in our number for February, 1863, and have been so repeatedly urged to print some part of them for the gratification of the public, that they felt it their duty at least to make some effort to satisfy so urgent a demand. They have accordingly carefully examined the papers intrusted to them, but find most of the productions of Mr. Wilbur's pen so fragmentary, and even chaotic, written as they are on the backs of letters in an exceedingly cramped chirography, — here a memorandum for a sermon; there an observation of the weather; now the measurement of an extraordinary head of cabbage, and then of the cerebral capacity of some reverend brother deceased; a calm inquiry into the state of modern literature, ending in a method of detecting if milk be impoverished with water, and the amount thereof; one leaf beginning with a genealogy, to be interrupted halfway down with an entry that the brindle cow had calved, — that any attempts at selection seemed desperate. His only complete work, "An Enquiry concerning the Tenth Horn of the Beast," even in the abstract of it given by Mr. Hitchcock, would, by a rough computation of the printers, fill five entire numbers of our journal, and as he attempts, by a new application of decimal fractions, to identify it with the Emperor Julian, seems hardly of immediate concern to the general reader. Even the Table-Talk, though doubtless originally highly interesting in the domestic circle, is so largely made up of theological discussion and matters of local or preterite interest, that we have found it hard to extract anything that would at all satisfy expectation. But, in order to silence further inquiry, we subjoin a few passages as illustrations of its general character.]

I think I could go near to be a perfect Christian if I were always a visitor, as I have sometimes been, at the house of some hospitable friend. I can show a great deal of self-denial where the best of everything is urged upon me with kindly importunity. It is not so very hard to turn the other cheek for a kiss. And when I meditate upon the pains taken for our entertainment in this life, on the endless variety of seasons, of human character and fortune, on the costliness of the hangings and furniture of our dwelling here, I sometimes feel a singular joy in looking upon myself as God's guest, and cannot but believe that we should all be wiser and happier, because more grateful, if we were always mindful of our privilege in this regard. And should we not rate more cheaply any honor that men could pay us, if we remembered that every day we sat at the table of the Great King? Yet must we not forget that we are in strictest bonds His servants also; for there is no impiety so abject as that which expects to be dead-headed (ut ita dicam) through life, and which, calling itself trust in Providence, is in reality asking Provi-ence to trust us and taking up all our goods in false pretences. It is a wise rule to take the world as we find it, not always to leave it so.

It has often set me thinking when I find that can always pick up plenty of empty nuts under my shagbark-tree. The squirrels know them by their lightness, and I have seldom seen one with the marks of their teeth in it. What a school-house is the world, if our wits could only not play truant! For I observe that men set most store by forms and symbols in proportion as they are mere shells. It is the outside they want and not the kernel. What stores of such do not many, who in material things are as shrewd as the squirrels, lay up for the spiritual winter-supply of themselves and their children! I have seen churches that seemed to me garners of these withered nuts, and it is wonderful how prosaic is the apprehension of symbols by the minds of most men. It is not one sect nor another, but all, who, like the dog of the fable, have let drop the spiritual substance of symbols for their material shadow. If one attribute miraculous virtues to mere holy water, that beautiful emblem of inward purification at the door of God's house, another cannot comprehend the significance of baptism without being ducked over head and ears in the liquid vehicle thereof.

[Perhaps a word of historical comment may be permitted here. My late revered predecessor, as, I would humbly affirm, as free from prejudice as falls to the lot of the most highly favored individuals of our species. To be sure, I have heard him say that "what were called wrong prejudices were in fact only the repulsion of sensitive organizations from that moral and even physical effluvia through which some natures by providential appointment, like certain unsavory quadrupeds, gave warning of their neighborhood. Better ten mistaken suspicions of this kind than one close encounter." This he said somewhat in heat, on being questioned as to his motives for always refusing his pulpit to those itinerant professors of vicarious benevolence who end their discourses by taking up a collection. But at another time I remember his saying, "that there was one large thing which small minds always found room for, and that was great prejudices." This, however, by the way. The statement which I purposed to make was simply this. Down to A. D. 1830, Jaalam had consisted of a single parish, with the house set apart for religious services. In that year the foundations of a Baptist Society were laid by the labors of Elder Joash Q. Balm, 2d. As the members of the new body were drawn from the First Parish, Mr. Wilbur was for a time considerably exercised in mind. He even went so far as on one occasion to follow the reprehensible practice of the earlier Puritan divines in choosing a punning text, and preached from Hebrews xiii. 9: "Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines." He afterwards, in accordance with one of his own maxims,—"to get a dead injury out of the mind as soon as is decent, bury it, and then ventilate,"—in accordance with this maxim, I say, he lived on very friendly terms with Rev. Shearjashub Seringour, present pastor of the Baptist Society in Jaalam. Yet I think it was never displeasing to him that the church edifice of that society (though otherwise a creditable specimen of architecture) remained without a bell, as indeed it does to this day. So much seemed necessary to do away with any appearance of acerbity toward a respectable community of professing Christians, which might be suspected in the conclusion of the above paragraph.—J. H.]

In lighter moods he was not averse from an innocent play upon words. Looking up from his newspaper one morning, as I entered his study, he said, "When I read a debate in Congress, I feel as if I were sitting at the feet of Zeno in the shadow of the Portico." On my expressing a natural surprise, he added, smiling, "Why, at such times the only view which honorable members give me of what goes on in the world is through their intercalumniation." I smiled at this after a moment's reflection, and he added gravely, "The most punctilious refinement of manners is the only salt that will keep a democracy from stinking; and what are we to expect from the people, if their representatives set them such lessons? Mr. Everett's whole life has been a sermon from this text. There was, at least, this advantage in duelling, that it set a certain limit on the tongue. When Society laid by the rapier, it buckled on the more subtle blade of etiquette wherewith to keep obtrusive vulgarity at bay." In this connection, I may be permitted to recall a playful remark of his upon another occasion. The painful divisions in the First Parish, A. D. 1844, occasioned by the wild notions in respect to the rights of (what Mr. Wilbur, so far as concerned the reasoning faculty, always called) the unfairest part of creation, put forth by Miss Parthenia Almira Fitz, are too well known to need more than a passing allusion. It was during these heats, long since happily allayed, that Mr. Wilbur remarked that "the Church had more trouble in dealing with one heresiarch than with twenty heresiarchs," and that the men's conscia recti, or certainty of being right, was nothing to the women's.

When I once asked his opinion of a poetical composition on which I had expended no little pains, he read it attentively, and then remarked, "Unless one's thought pack more neatly in verse than in prose, it is wiser to refrain. Commonplace gains nothing by being translated into rhyme, for it is something which no hocus-pocus can transubstantiate with the real presence of living thought. You entitle your piece, 'My Mother's Grave,' and expend four pages of useful paper in detailing your emotions there. But, my dear sir, watering does not improve the quality of ink, even though you should do it with tears. To publish a sorrow to Tom, Dick, and Harry is in some sort to advertise its unreality, for I have observed in my intercourse with the afflicted that the deepest grief instinctively hides its face with its hands and is silent. If your piece were printed, I have no doubt it would be popular, for people like to fancy that they feel much better than the trouble of feeling. I would put all poets on oath whether they have striven to say everything they possibly could think of, or to leave out all they could not help saying. In your own case, my worthy young friend, what you have written is merely a deliberate exercise, the gymnastic of sentiment. For your excellent maternal relative is still alive, and is to take tea with me this evening, D. V. Beware of simulated feeling; it is hypocrisy's first cousin; it is especially dangerous to a preacher; for he who says one day, 'Go to, let me seem to be pathetic,' may be nearer than he thinks to saying, 'Go to, let me seem to be virtuous, or earnest, or under sorrow for sin.' Depend upon it, Sappho loved her verses more sincerely than she did Phæon, and Petrarch his sonnets better than Laura, who was indeed but his poetical stalking-horse. After you shall have once heard that muffled rattle of clods on the coffin-lid of an irreparable loss, you will grow acquainted with a pathos that will make all elegies hateful. When I was of your age, I also for a time mistook my desire to write verses for an authentic call of my nature in that direction. But one day as I was going forth for a walk, with my head full of an 'Elegy on the Death of Flirtilla,' and vainly groping after a rhyme for lily that should not be silly or chilly, I saw my eldest boy Homer busy over the rain-water hogshhead, in that childish experiment at parthenogenesis, the changing a horse-hair into a water-snake. An immersion of six weeks showed no change in the obstinate filament. Here was a stroke of unintended sarcasm. Had I not been doing in my study precisely what my boy was doing out of doors? Had my thoughts any more chance of coming to life by being submerged in rhyme than his hair by soaking in water? I burned my elegy and took a course of Edwards on the Will. People do not make poetry; it is made out of them by a process for which I do not find myself fitted. Nevertheless, the writing of verses is a good rhetorical exercitation, as teaching us what to shun most carefully in prose. For prose bewitched is like window-glass with bubbles in it, distorting what it should show with pellucid veracity."

It is unwise to insist on doctrinal points a vital to religion. The Bread of Life is whole some and sufficing in itself, but gulped down with these kickshaws cooked up by theologians it is apt to produce an indigestion, nay, even at last an incurable dyspepsia of scepticism.

One of the most inexcusable weaknesses of Americans is in signing their names to what are called credentials. But for my interposition, a person who shall be nameless would have taken from this town a recommendation for an office of trust subscribed by the select men and all the voters of both parties, ascribing to him as many good qualities as if it had been his tombstone. The excuse was that it would be well for the town to be rid of him as it would ere long be obliged to maintain him. I would not refuse my name to modest merit, but I would be as cautious as in signing a bond. [I trust I shall be subjected to no imputation of unbecoming vanity, if I mention the fact that Mr. W. indorsed my own qualifications as teacher of the high-school at Pequash Junction. J. H.] When I see a certificate of character with everybody's name to it, I regard it as a letter of introduction from the Devil. Never give a man your name unless you are willing to trust him with your reputation.

There seem nowadays to be two sources of literary inspiration,—fulness of mind and emptiness of pocket.

I am often struck, especially in reading Montaigne, with the obviousness and familiarity of a great writer's thoughts, and their freshness they gain because said by him. The truth is, we mix their greatness with all the say and give it our best attention. Johannes Faber sic cogitavit would be no enticing preface to a book, but an accredited name gives credit like the signature to a note of hand. It is the advantage of fame that it is always privileged to take the world by the button, and a thing is weightier for Shakespeare's uttering it by the whole amount of his personal ality.

It is singular how impatient men are with overpraise of others, how patient with overpraise of themselves; and yet the one does them no injury while the other may be their ruin.

People are apt to confound mere alertness of mind with attention. The one is but the trying abroad of all the faculties to the open doors and windows at every passing rumor; the other is the concentration of every one of them in a single focus, as in the alchemist over his alembic at the moment of expected precipitation. Attention is the stuff that memory is made of, and memory is accumulated genius.

Do not look for the Millennium as imminent. One generation is apt to get all the wear it can out of the cast clothes of the last, and is always sure to use up every paling of the old fence that will hold a nail in building the new.

You suspect a kind of vanity in my genealogical enthusiasm. Perhaps you are right; but it is a universal foible. Where it does not show itself in a personal and private way, it becomes public and gregarious. We flatter ourselves in the Pilgrim Fathers, and the Virginian offshoot of a transported convict swells with the fancy of a cavalier ancestry. Pride of birth, I have noticed, takes two forms. One complacently traces himself up to a coronet; another, defiantly, to a lapstone. The sentiment is precisely the same in both cases, only that one is the positive and the other the negative pole of it.

Seeing a goat the other day kneeling in order to graze with less trouble, it seemed to me a type of the common notion of prayer. Most people are ready enough to go down on their knees for material blessings, but how few for those spiritual gifts which alone are an answer to our orisons, if we but knew it!

Some people, nowadays, seem to have hit upon a new moralization of the moth and the candle. They would lock up the light of truth, lest poor Psyche should put it out in her effort to draw nigh to it.

MR. HOSEA BIGLOW TO THE EDITOR OF THE ATLANTIC
MONTHLY

DEAR SIR, — Your letter come to han' Requestin' me to please be funny;
but I ain't made upon a plan Thet knows wut's comin', gall or honey; her's times the world doos look so queer, Odd fancies come afore I call 'em;

An' then agin, for half a year,
No preacher 'thout a call's more solemn

You're 'n want o' sunthin' light an' cute, Rattlin' an' shrewd an' kin' o' jingle-ish,

An' wish, pervidin' it 'ould suit, I'd take an' citify my English
I ken write long-tailed, ef I please, — But when I'm jokin', no, I thankee;
Then, 'fore I know it, my idees Run helter-skelter into Yankee.

Sence I begun to scribble rhyme,
I tell ye wut, I hain't ben foolin';
The parson's books, life, death, an' time Hev took some trouble with my school-
in';
Nor th' airth don't git put out with me, Thet love her'z though she wuz a wo-
man;
Why, th' ain't a bird upon the tree
But half forgives my bein' human.

An' yit I love th' unhighschool'd way Ol' farmers hed when I wuz younger;
Their talk wuz meatier, an' 'ould stay, While book-froth seems to whet your hunger;
For puttin' in a downright lick
'twixt Humbug's eyes, ther' 's few can metch it,
An' then it helves my thoughts ez slick Ez stret-grained hickory doos a hetchet.

But when I can't, I can't, thet 's all,
For Natur' won't put up with gullin'; Idees you hev to shove an' haul Like a druv pig ain't wuth a mullein:
Live thoughts ain't sent for; thru all rifts
O' sense they pour an' resh ye onwards, Like rivers when south-lyin' drifts Feel thet th' old airth 's a-wheelin' sun-wards.

Time wuz, the rhymes come crowdin' thick Ez office-seekers arter' lection, An' into ary place 'ould stick Without no bother nor objection;
But sence the war my thoughts hang back Ez though I wanted to enlist 'em, An' subs'tutes, — they don't never lack,
But then they 'll slope afore you 'v mist 'em.

Nothin' don't seem like wut it wuz;
 I can't see wut there is to hender,
 An' yit my brains jes' go buzz, buzz, Like bumblebees agin a winder;
 'fore these times come, in all airth's row, Ther' wuz one quiet place, my head in,
 Where I could hide an' think, — but now It's all one teeter, hopin', dreadin'.

Where 's Peace? I start, some clear-blown night,

When gaunt stone walls grow numb an'
 number,

An', creakin' 'cross the snow-crus' white,
 Walk the col' starlight into summer;

Up grows the moon, an' swell by swell Thru the pale pasturs silvers dimmer Than the last smile thet strives to tell O' love gone heavenward in its shimmer.

I hev been gladder o' sech things Than cocks o' spring or bees o' clover, They filled my heart with livin' springs,
 But now they seem to freeze 'em over;
 Sights immercent ez babes on knee, Peaceful ez eyes o' pastur'd cattle, Jes' coo' they be so, seem to me To rile me more with thoughts o' battle.

Indoors an' out by spells I try; Ma'am Natur' keeps her spin-wheel goin',

But leaves my natur' stiff and dry Ez fiels o' clover arter mowin';
 An' her jes' keepin' on the same,
 Calmer 'n a clock, an' never carin',
 An' findin' nary thing to blame,
 Is wus than ef she took to swearin'.

Snow-flakes come whisperin' on the pane
 The charm makes blazin' logs so pleasant,

But I can't hark to wut they're say'n',
 With Grant or Sherman ollers present;
 The chimbleys shudder in the gale, Thet hulls, then suddin takes to flap-
 pin'

Like a shot hawk, but all 's ez stale
 To me ez so much spirit-rappin'.

Under the yaller-pines I house, When sunshine makes 'em all sweet-scented,

An' hear among their furry boughs
 The baskin' west-wind purr contented, While 'way o'erhead, ez sweet an' low Ez distant bells thet ring for meetin',
 The wedged wil' geese their bugles blow, Further an' further South retreatin'.

Or up the slippery knob I strain
 An' see a hundred hills like islan's Lift their blue woods in broken chain Out o' the sea o' snowy silence;
 The farm-smokes, sweetes' sight on airth, Slow thru the winter air a-shrinkin' Seem kin' o' sad, an' roun' the hearth
 Of empty places set me thinkin'.

Beaver roars hoarse with meltin' snows,
 An' rattles di'mon's from his granite;
 Time wuz, he snatched away my prose,
 An' into psalms or satires ran it;
 But he, nor all the rest thet once Started my blood to country-dances, Can't set me goin' more 'n a dunce Thet hain't no use for dreams an' fancies.

Rat-tat-tat-tattle thru the street
 I hear the drummers makin' riot,
 An' I set thinkin' o' the feet Thet follered once an' now are quiet, — White feet ez snowdrops innercent, Thet never knowed the paths o' Satan, Whose comin' step ther' 's ears thet won't No, not lifelong, leave off awaitin'.

Why, hain't I held 'em on my knee?
 Did n't I love to see 'em growin',
 Three likely lads ez wal could be,
 Hahnsome an' brave an' not tu knowin'
 I set an' look into the blaze Whose natur', jes' like theirn, keep climbin', Ez long 'z it lives, in shinin' ways,
 An' half despise myself for rhymain'.

Wut 's words to them whose faith an'
 truth

On War's red techstone rang true meta Who ventered life an' love an' youth For the gret prize o' death in battle?
 To him who, deadly hurt, agen
 Flashed on afore the charge's thunder, Tippin' with fire the bolt of men Thet rived the Rebel line asunder?

'Tain't right to hev the young go fust,
 All tarobin' full o' gifts an' graces, Leavin' life's paupers dry ez dust
 To try an' make b'lieve fill their places: Nothin' but tells us wut we miss, Ther' 's gaps our lives can't never fay in,
 An' thet world seems so fur from this Lef' for us loafers to grow gray in !

My eyes cloud up for rain; my mouth
 Will take to twitchin' roun' the corners;
 I pity mothers, tu, down South,
 For all they sot among the scornors:
 I 'd sooner take my chance to stan'
 At Judgment where your meanest slave
 is,
 Than at God's bar hol' up a han' Ez drippin' red ez yourn, Jeff Davis !

Come, Peace ! not like a mourner bowed For honor lost an' dear ones wasted,
 But proud, to meet a people proud,
 With eyes that tell o' triumph tasted !
 Come, with han' grippin' on the hilt, An' step that proves ye Victory's daughter !
 Longin' for you, our sperits wilt Like shipwrecked men's on raf's for water.

Come, while our country feels the lift
 Of a gret instinct shoutin' "Forwards !"
 An' knows thet freedom ain't a gift Thet tarries long in han's o' cowards !
 Come, sech ez mothers prayed for, when They kissed their cross with lips thet quivered,
 An' bring fair wages for brave men,
 A nation saved, a race delivered !

NO. XI

MR. HOSEA BIGLOW'S SPEECH IN MARCH MEETING

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ATLANTIC

JAALAM, April 5, 1866.

MY DEAR SIR, —

(an' noticin' by your kiver thet you're some dearer than wut you wuz, I enclose the deffrence) I dunno ez I know jest how to interdooce this las' perduction of my mews, ez Parson Willber allus called 'em, which is goin' to be the last an' stay the last onless sunthin' pertikler sh'd interfeer which I don't expec' ner I wun't yield tu ef it wuz ez pressin' ez a deppity Shiriff.

 Sence Mr. Wilbur's disease I hev n't hed no one thet could dror out my talons. He ust to kind o' wine me up an' set the penderlum agoin' an' then somehow I seemed to go on tick as it wear tell I run down, but the noo minister ain't of the same brewin' nor I can't seem to git ahold of no kine of huming nater in him but sort of slide rite off as you du on the eedge of a mow. Minnysteiril natur is wal enough an' a site better 'n most other kines I know on, but the other sort sech as Welbor hed wuz of the Lord's makin' an' naterally more wonderfle an' sweet tastin' leastways to me so fur as heerd from. He used to interdooce 'em smooth ez ile athout sayin' nothin' in pertickler an' I misdoubt he did n't set so much by the sec'nd Ceres as wut he done by the Fust, fact, he let on onct thet his mine misgive him of a sort of fallin' off in spots. He wuz as outspoken as a norwester he wuz, but I tole him I hoped the fall wuz from so high up thet a feller could ketch a good many times fust afore comin' bunt onto the ground as I see Jethro C. Swett from the meetin' house steeple up to th' old perrish, an' took up for dead but he's alive now an' spry as wut you be. Turnin' of it over I reclected how they ust to put wut they called Argy-munce onto the frunts of poymns, like porches afore housen where you could rest ye a spell whilst you wuz concludin' whether you 'd go in or nut espeshully ware tha wuz darters, though I most allus found it the best plen to go in fust an' think afterwards an' the gals likes it best tu. I dno as speechis ever hez any argimunts to 'em, I never see none thet hed an' I guess they never du but tha must allus be a B'ginnin' to everythin' athout it is Eternity so I'll begin rite away an' anybody may put it afore any of his speeches ef it soots an' welcome. I don't claim no paytent.

THE ARGYMUNT

Interducshin, w'ich may be skipt. Begins by talkin' about himself: thet's jest natur an' most gin'allly allus pleasin', I b'leeve I've notist, to one of the company, an' thet's more than wut you can say of most speshes of talkin'. Nex' comes the guttin' the goodwill of the orjungee by lettin' 'em gether from wut you kind of ex-dentally let drop thet they air about East, A one, an' no mistaik, skare 'em up an' take 'em as they rise. Spring interdoosed with a few approput flours. Speech finally begins witch nobuddy need n't feel obologated to read as I never read 'em an' never shell this one ag'in. Subjick staited; expanded; delayed; extended. Pump lively. Subjick staited ag'in so 's to avide all mistaiks. Gimble remarks; continued; kerried on; pushed furdur; kind o' gin out. Subjick restaited; dislooted; stirred up permiscuous. Pump ag'in. Gits back to where he sot out. Can't seem to stay thair. Ketches into Mr. Seaward's hair. Breaks loose ag'in an' stait his subjick; stretches it; turns it; folds it; unfolds it; folds it ag'in so 's 't no one can't find it. Argoos with an imedjinary bean thet ain't aloud to say nothin' in repleye. Gives him a real good dressin' an' is settystide he's rite. Gits into Johnson's hair. No use tryin' to git into his head. Gives it up. Hez to stait his subjick ag'in; does it backhards, sideways, eendways, criss-cross, bevellin', noways. Gits finally red on it. Concloods. Concloods more. Reads some xtrax. Sees his subjick a-nosin' round arter him ag'in. Tries to avide it. Wun't du. Mistates it. Can't conjectur' no other plawsable way of staytin' on it. Tries pump. No fx. Finely concloods to conclood. Yeels the flore.

You kin spall an' punetooate thet as you please. I allas do, it kind of puts a noo sort of close outo a word, thisere funattick spellin' does an' takes 'em out of the prison dress they wair in the Dixonary. Ef I squeeze the cents out of 'em it's the main thing, an' wut they wuz made for; wut's left's jest punmis.

Mistur Wilbur sez he to me onet, sez he, "Hosee," sez he, "in litterytoor the only good thing is Natur. It's amazin' hard to come at," sez he, "but onet git it an' you've got ever'thin'. Wut's the sweetest small on airth?" sez he. "Noomone hay," sez i, pooty bresk, for he wuz allus hankerin' round in hayin'. "Nawthin' of the kine," sez he. "My leetle Huddy's breath," sez I ag'in. "You're a good lad," sez he, his eyes sort of ripplin' like, for he lost a babe onet nigh about her age,

"you're a good lad; but 'tain't thet mather," sez he. "Ef you want to know," sez he, "open your winder of a mornin' et ary season, and you'll larn thet the best of perfooms is jest fresh air, fresh air," sez he, emphysizin', "athout no mixtur. Thet's wut I call natur in writin', and it bathes my lungs and washes 'em sweet whenever I git a whiff on 't," sez he. I offen think o' thet when I set down to write, but the winders air so ept to git stuck, an' breakin' a pane costs sunthin'.

Yourn for the last time,

Nut to be continued.

HOSEA BIGLOW.

I DON'T much s'pose, hows'ever I should plen it,

I could git boosted into th' House or Senat,—

Nut while the twolegged gab-machine's so plenty,

'nablin' one man to du the talk o' twenty; I'm one o' them thet finds it rather hard To mannyfactur' wisdom by the yard, An' maysure off, accordin' to demand, The piece-goods ol'kence that I keep on hand,

The same ole pattern runnin' thru an' thru,

An' nothin' but the customer thet's new. I sometimes think, the furdur on I go, Thet it gits harder to feel sure I know, An' when I've settled my ideas, I find 't warn't I sheered most in makin' up my mind;

't wuz this an' thet an' t' other thing thet done it,

Sunthin' in th' air, I could n' seek nor shun it.

Mos' folks go off so quick now in discussion,

All th' ole flint-locks seems altered to percussion,

Whilst I in agin' sometimes git a hint, Thet I'm percussion changin' back to flint; Wal, ef it's so, I ain't agoin' to werrit, For th' ole Queen's-arm hez this pertickler merit,—

It gives the mind a hahnsome wedth o' margin

To kin' o' make its will afore dischargin'.

I can't make out but jest one ginnle rule, —

No man need go an' make himself a fool, Nor judgment ain't like mutton, thet can't bear

Cookin' tu long, nor be took up tu rare.

Ez I wuz say'n', I hain't no chance to speak

So's 't all the country dreads me onet a week,

But I've consid'ble o' thet sort o' head Thet sets to home an' thinks wut might be said,

The sense thet grows an' werrits under-neath,

Comin' belated like your wisdom-teeth,
An' git so el'kent, sometimes, to my gardin Thet I don' vally public life a fardin'.

Our Parson Wilbur (blessin's on his head !)
'mongst other stories of ole times he hed, Talked of a feller thet rehearsed his spreads

Beforehan' to his rows o' kebbige-heads, (Ef't warn't Demossenes, I guess 't wuz Sistro,) Appealin' fust to thet an' then to this row,

Accordin' ez he thought thet his ideas
Their diff'runt ev'riges o' brains 'ould please ;

"An'," sez the Parson, "to hit right, you must Git used to maysurin' your hearers fust ;

For, take my word for 't, when all's come an' past,

The kebbige-heads 'll cair the day et last ;
Th' ain't ben a meetin' sence the worl' begun

But they made (raw or biled ones) ten to one."

I've allus foun' 'em, I allow, sence then About ez good for talkin' tu ez men ;

They 'll take edvice, like other folks, to keep,

(To use it 'ould be holdin' on 't tu cheap,) They listen wal, don't kick up when you scold 'em,

An' ef they've tongues, hev sense enough to hold 'em ;

Though th' ain't no denger we shall lose the breed,

I gin'lly keep a score or so for seed,
An' when my sappiness gits spry in spring,

So's 't my tongue itches to run on full swing,

I fin' 'em ready-planted in March-meetin', Warm ez a lycéeum - audience in their greetin',

An' pleased to hear my spoutin' frum the fence, —

Comin', ez 't doos, entirely free 'f expense.
This year I made the follerin' observations Extrump'ry, like most other tri'ls o' patience,

An', no reporters bein' sent express To work their abstrac's up into a mess Ez like th' oridg'nal ez a woodcut pictur' Thet chokes the life out like a boy-constrictor,

I've writ 'em out, an' so avide all jeal'sies
'twixt nonsense o' my own an' some one's else's.

(N. B. Reporters gin'lly git a hint To make dull orjunes seem 'live in print, An', ez I hev t' report myself, I vum,
I 'll put th' applauses where they 'd ough to come !)

MY FELLER KEBBIGE-HEADS, who look so green,

I vow to gracious thet ef I could dreem
The world of all its hearers but jest you,
't would leave 'bout all tha' is wuth talkin' to,

An' you, my ven'able ol' frien's, thet show Upon your crowns a sprinklin' o' March snow,

Ez ef mild Time had christened every sense For wisdom's church o' second innocence, Nut Age's winter, no, no sech a thing, But jest a kin' o' slippin'-back o' spring, —

[Sev'ril noses blowed.]

We've gathered here, ez ushle, to decide Which is the Lord's an' which is Satan's side,

Coz all the good or evil thet can heppen
Is 'long o' which on 'em you choose for Cappen.

[Cries o' "Thet 's so."]

Aprul's come back ; the swellin' buds of oak

Dim the fur hillsides with a purplish smoke ;

The brooks are loose an', singing to be seen, (Like gals,) make all the hollers soft an' green ;

The birds are here, for all the season's late;
They take the sun's height an' don't never wait;

Soon 'z he officially declares it's spring
Their light hearts lift 'em on a north'ard wing,

An' th' ain't an acre, fur ez you can hear,
Can't by the music tell the time o' year;
But thet white dove Carliny scared away, Five year ago, jes' sech an April day;
Peace, that we hoped 'ould come an' build last year

An' coo by every housedoor, is n't here, —
No, nor wun't never be, for all our jaw, Till we're ez brave in pol'tics ez in war!
O Lord, ef folks wuz made so's't they could see

The begnet-pint there is to an idee!

[Sensation.]

Ten times the danger in 'em th' is in steel;
They run your soul thru an' you never feel,
But crawl about an' seem to think you're livin',

Poor shells o' men, nut wuth the Lord's forgivin',

Tell you come bunt ag'in a real live fect,
An' go to pieces when you'd ough't to ect!
Thet kin' o' begnet's wut we're crossin' now,

An' no man, fit to nevvigate a scow,
'ould stan' expectin' help from Kingdom Come,

While t'other side druv their cold iron home.

My frien's, you never gethered from my mouth,

No, nut one word ag'in the South ez South, Nor th' ain't a livin' man, white, brown, nor black,

Gladder'n wut I should be to take 'em back;

But all I ask of Uncle Sam is fust
To write up on his door, "No goods on trust";

[Cries o' "Thet's the ticket!"]

Give us cash down in ekle laws for all,
An' they'll be snug inside afore nex' fall.
Give wut they ask, an' we shell hev Jama-ker,

Wuth minus some consid'able an acre;
Give wut they need, an' we shell git 'fore long

A nation all one piece, rich, peacefule, strong;

Make 'em Amerikin, an' they'll begin To love their country ez they loved their sin;

Let 'em stay Southun, an' you've kep' a sore

Ready to fester ez it done afore.

No mortle man can boast of perfic' vision,
But the one moleblin' thing is Indecision,
An' th' ain't no futur' for the man nor state Thet out of j-u-s-t can't spell great.
Some folks 'ould call thet reddikle; do you?

'Twas commonsense afore the war wuz thru;

Thet loaded all our guns an' made 'em speak

So's 't Europe heared 'em clearn acrost the creek;

"They're drivin' o' their spiles down now," sez she,

"To the hard grennit o' God's fust idee; Ef they reach thet, Democ'y need n't fear
The tallest airthquakes we can git up here."

Some call 't insultin' to ask ary pledge,
An' say 't will only set their teeth on edge,
But folks you've jest licked, fur 'z I ever see,

Are 'bout ez mad 'z they wal know how to be;
It's better than the Rebs themselves expected

'fore they see Uncle Sam wilt down hen-pected;

Be kind 'z you please, but fustly make things fast,

For plain Truth's all the kindness thet'll last;

Ef treason is a crime, ez some folks say, How could we punish it in a milder way Than sayin' to 'em, "Brethren, lookee here, We'll jes' divide things with ye, sheer an' sheer,

An' sence both come o' pooty strong-backed daddies,

You take the Darkies, ez we've took the Paddies;

Ign'ant an' poor we took 'em by the hand,
An' they're the bones an' sinners o' the land."

I ain't o' them thet fancy there's a loss on Every inves'tment thet don't start from Bos'on;

But I know this: our money's safest trusted
In sunthin', come wut will. thet can't be busted,

An' thet's the old Amerikin idee,

To make a man a Man an' let him be.

[Gret applause.]

Ez for their l'yalty, don't take a goad to 't, But I do' want to block their only road to 't

By lettin' 'em believe that they can git Mor 'n wut they lost, out of our little wit:
I tell ye wut, I 'm 'fraid we 'll drif' to leeward

'thout we can put more stiffenin' into Seward;

He seems to think Columby 'd better eet Like a scared widder with a boy stiff-necked

Thet stomps an' swears he wun't come in to supper;

She mus' set up for him, ez weak ez Tupper,

Keepin' the Constitootion on to warm,
Tell he 'll ecept her 'pologies in form:
The neighbors tell her he 's a cross-grained
cuss

Thet needs a hidin' 'fore he comes to wus;
"No," sez Ma Seward, "he 's ez good 'z the best,

All he wants now is sugar-plums an' rest;"
"He sarsed my Pa," sez one; "He stoned my son,"

Another edds. "Oh wal, 't wus jes' his fun."

"He tried to shoot our Uncle Samwell
dead."

"T wuz only tryin' a noo gun he hed."

"Wal, all we ask's to hev it understood You'll take his gun away from him for
good;

We don't, wal, nut exac'y, like his play, Seein' he allus kin' o' shoots our way.

You kill your fatted calves to no good eend,

'thout his fust sayin', 'Mother, I hev sinned!'"

["Amen!" frum Deac'n Greenleaf.]

The Pres'dunt he thinks that the slickest plan

'ould be t' allow that he 's our on'y man, An' thet we fit thru all thet drefle war Jes' for his private glory an' eclor;

"Nobody ain't a Union man," sez he,
"thout he agrees, thru thick an' thin, with
me;

Warn't Andrew Jackson's 'nitals jes' like
mine?

An' ain't thet sunthin like a right divine

To cut up ez kentenkerous ez I please, An' treat your Congress like a nest o' fleas?"

Wal, I expee' the People would n' care, if The question now wuz techin' bank or tariff,

But I conclude they've 'bout made up their min'

This ain't the fittest time to go it blin', Nor these ain't metters thet with pol'tics swings,

But goes 'way down amongst the roots o'
things;

Coz Sumner talked o' whitewashin' one
day

They wun't let four years' war be throwed
away.

"Let the South hev her rights?" They say, "Thet's you!

But nut greb hold of other folks's tu."

Who owns this country, is it they or Andy?
Leastways it ough' to be the People and he;

Let him be senior pardner, ef he 's so,
But let them kin' o' smuggle in ez Co;

[Laughter.]

Did he diskiver it? Consid'ble numbers Think thet the job wuz taken by Columbus.
Did he set tu an' make it wut it is?

Ef so, I guess the One-Man-power hez riz.
Did he put thru the rebbles, clear the docket,

An' pay th' expenses out of his own pocket?
Ef thet 's the case, then everythin' I exes Is t'hev him come an' pay my ennooal
texes.

[Profoun' sensation.]

Was 't he thet shou'dered all them million guns?

Did he lose all the fathers, brothers, sons?
Is this ere pop'lar gov'ment thet we run
A kin' o' sulky, made to kerry one?

An' is the country goin' to knuckle down To hev Smith sort their letters 'stid o'
Brown?

Who wuz the 'Nited States 'fore Richmon' fell?

Wuz the South needfle their full name to spell?

An' can't we spell it in thet short-han' way Till th' underpinnin' 's settled so 's to stay?

Who cares for the Resolves of '61, Thet tried to coax an airthquake with a bun?

Hez act'ly nothin' taken place sence then

To larn folks they must hendle feets like
men ?

Ain't this the true p'int ? Did the Rebs accep' 'em ?

Ef nut, whose fault is 't thet we hev n't kep 'em ?

War n't there two sides ? an' don't it stend to reason

Thet this week's 'Nited States ain't las' week's treason ?

When all these sums is done, with nothin'
missed,

An' nut afore, this school 'll be dismissed.

I knowed ez wal ez though I 'd seen 't with
eyes

Thet when the war wuz over copper 'd
rise,

An' thet we 'd hev a rile-up in our kettle
't would ned Leviathan's whole skin to settle:

I thought 't would take about a generation
'fore we could wal begin to be a nation, But I allow I never did imegine
't would be our Pres'dunt thet 'ould drive a wedge in

To keep the split from closin' ef it could,
An' healin' over with new wholesome wood;
For th' ain't no chance o' healin' while they think

Thet law an' gov'ment 's only printer's ink;
I mus' confess I thank him for discoverin'
The curus way in which the States are sovereign;

They ain't nut quite enough so to rebel,
But, when they fin' it's costly to raise h—, [A groan from Deac'n G.]

Why, then, for jes' the same superl'tive reason,

They're 'most too much so to be tetched for treason;

They can't go out, but ef they somehow du,
Their sovereignty don't noways go out tu;
'The State goes out, the sovereignty don't
stir,

But stays to keep the door ajar for her.
He thinks secession never took 'em out,
An' mebbey he's correc', but I misdoubt; Ef they war'n't out, then why, 'n the name
o' sin,

Make all this row 'bout lettin' of 'em in ?
In law, p'raps nut; but there 's a diffur-ence, ruther,

Betwixt your mother-'n-law an' real mother, [Derisive cheers.]

An' I, for one, shall wish they 'd all ben son'eres,

Long 'z U. S. Texes are sech reg'lar comers.
But, O my patience ! must we wriggle
back

Into th' ole crooked, pettyfoggin' track,
When our artill'ry-wheels a road hev cut Stret to our purpose ef we keep the rut ?
War 's jes' dead waste excep' to wipe the slate

Clean for the cyph'r'in' of some nobler fate.
[Applause.]

Ez for dependin' on their oaths an' thet,
't wun't bind 'em mor 'n the ribbin roun' my het:

I heared a fable once from Othniel Starns, That pints it slick ez weatherecocks do barns:

Onct on a time the wolves hed certing
rights

Inside the fold ; they used to sleep there
nights,

An', bein' cousins o' the dogs, they took Their turns et watchin', reg'lar ez a book; But somehow, when the dogs hed gut asleep,

Their love o' mutton beat their love o'
sheep,

Till gradilly the shepherds come to see Things war'n't agoin' ez they 'd ough' to be;
So they sent off a deacon to remonstrate Along 'th the wolves an' urge 'em to go on straight;

They did n' seem to set much by the deacon,

Nor preachin' did n' cow 'em, nut to speak
on;

Fin'ly they swore thet they 'd go out an'
stay,

An' hev their fill o' mutton every day;
Then dogs an' shepherds, after much hard dammin',

[Groan from Deac'n G.]

Turned tu an' give 'em a tormented lammin',

An' sez, "Ye sha'n't go out, the murrain rot ye,

To keep us wastin' half our time to watch ye ! "

But then the question come, How live together

'thout losin' sleep, nor nary yew nor wether ?

Now there wuz some dogs (noways wuth their keep)

Thet sheered their cousins' tastes an'
sheered the sheep;
They sez, "Be gin'rous, let 'em swear right
in,
An', ef they backslide, let 'em swear ag'in; Jes' let 'em put on sheep-skins whilst they 're swearin' ;
To ask for more 'ould be beyond all bear-
in'."

"Be gin'rous for yourselves, where you 're to pay, Thet 's the best prectice," sez a shepherd
gray;
"Ez for their oaths they wun't be wuth a button,
Long 'z you don't cure 'em o' their taste for mutton;
Th' ain't but one solid way, howe'er you puzzle:
Tell they 're convarted, let 'em wear a muzzle." [Cries of "Bully for you!"]

I 've noticed that each half-baked scheme's abetters
Are in the hebbit o' producin' letters Writ by all sorts o' never-heard-on fellers,
'bout ez oridge'nal ez the wind in bellers;
I 've noticed, tu, it 's the quack med'cine gits
(An' needs) the grettest heaps o' stiffykits; [Two pothekeries goes out.]

Now, sence I lef' off creepin' on all fours, I hain't ast no man to endorse my course;
It 's full ez cheap to be your own endorser, An' ef I 've made a cup, I 'll fin' the saucer;

But I 've some letters here from t' other side,
An' them 's the sort thet helps me to decide;
Tell me for wut the copper-comp'nies hanker,

An' I 'll tell you jest where it 's safe to anchor. [Faint hiss.]

Fus'ly the Hon'ble B. O. Sawin writes Thet for a spell he could n't sleep o'
nights,
Puzzlin' which side wuz preudentest to pin
to,

Which wuz th' ole homestead, which the temp'ry leanto;

Et rust he jedged 't would right-side-up his pan

To come out ez a 'ridge'nal Union man, "But now," he sez, "I ain't nut quite so fresh;

The winnin' horse is goin' to be Secesh;
You might, las' spring, hev eas'ly walked the course,
'fore we contrived to doctor th' Union horse;
Now we 're the ones to walk aroun' the nex' track:
Jest you take hol' an' read the follerin' extrac',
Out of a letter I received last week From an ole frien' thet never sprung a leak,
A Nothun Dem'crat o' th' ole Jarsey blue, Born copper-sheathed an' copper-fastened tu."

"These four years past it hez ben tough To say which side a feller went for;
Guideposts all gone, roads muddy 'n' rough,
An' nothin' duin' wut 't wuz meant for;
Pickets a-firin' left an' right, Both sides a lettin' rip et sight, — Life warn't wuth hardly payin' rent for.

"Columby gut her back up so,
It warn't no use a-tryin' to stop her, — War's emptin's riled her very dough An' made it rise an' act improper;
'T wuz full ez much ez I could du To jes' lay low an' worry thru,
'Thout hevin' to sell out my copper.

"Afore the war your mod'rit men Could set an' sun 'em on the fences, Cyph'rin' the chances up, an' then Jump off which way bes' paid expenses;
Sence, 't wuz so resky ary way,
I did n't hardly darst to say I 'greed with Paley's Evidences.

[Groan from Deac'n G.]

"Ask Mac ef tryin' to set the fence Warn't like bein' rid upon a rail on 't, Headin' your party with a sence
O' bein' tipjint in the tail on 't, An' tryin' to think thet, on the whole,
You kin' o' quasi own your soul
When Belmont 's gut a bill o' sale on 't ?

[Three cheers for Grant and Sherman.]

"Come peace, I sposed thet folks 'ould
like

Their pol'tics done ag'in by proxy Give their noo loves the bag an' strike
A fresh trade with their reg'lar doxy;

But the drag 's broke, now slavery 's gone,
An' there 's gret resk they 'll blunder on,
Ef they ain't stopped, to real Democ'cy.

"We 've gut an awful row to hoe
In this 'ere job o' reconstructin'; Folks dunno skurree which way to go, Where th' ain't some boghole to be ducked
in;

But one thing 's clear; there is a crack, Ef we pry hard, 'twixt white an' black,
Where the ole makebate can be tucked in.

"No white man sets in airth's broad aisle Thet I ain't willin' t' own ez brother, An' ef he 's heppened to strike ile,
I dunno, fin'ly, but I 'd ruther;
An' Paddies, long 'z they vote all right, Though they ain't jest a nat'ral white,
I hold one on 'em good 'z another.

[Applause.]

"Wut is there lef' I 'd like to know, Ef 't ain't the defference o' color,
To keep up self-respec' an' show
The human natur' of a fullah?
Wut good in bein' white, unless It 's fixed by law, nut lef' to guess, We 're a heap smarter an' they duller?

"Ef we 're to hev our ekle rights,
't wun't du to 'low no competition;
Th' ole debt doo us for bein' whites Ain't safe unless we stop th' emission O' these noo notes, whose specie base Is human natur', 'thout no trace O' shape, nor color, nor condition.

[Continood applause.]

"So fur I 'd writ an' could n' jedge Aboard wut boat I 'd best take pessige, My brains all mincemeat, 'thout no edge Upon 'em more than tu a sessige, But now it seems ez though I see Sunthin' resemblin' an' idee, Sence Johnson's speech an' veto message.

"I like the speech best, I confess,
The logic, preudence, an' good taste on 't, An' it 's so mad, I ruther guess
There 's some dependence to be placed on' t;

[Laughter.]

It 's narrer, but 'twixt you an' me, Out o' the allies o' J. D.
A temp'ry party can be based on 't.

"Jes' to hold on till Johnson 's thru An' dug his Presidential grave is, An' then! — who knows but we could slew

The country roun' to put in — ?
Wun't some folks rare up when we pull Out o' their eyes our Union wool An' larn 'em wut a p'lit'cle shave is!

"Oh, did it seem 'z ef Providence Could ever send a second Tyler?
To see the South all back to once, Reapin' the spiles o' the Freesiler, Is cute ez though an' engineer Should claim th' old iron for his sheer Coz 't was himself that bust the biler!"

[Gret laughter.]

Thet tells the story! Thet 's wut we shall git

By tryin' squirtguns on the burnin' Pit;
For the day never comes when it 'll du
To kick off Dooty like a worn-out shoe.
I seem to hear a whisperin' in the air,
A sighin' like, of unconsolated despair, Thet comes from nowhere an' from everywhere,

An' seems to say, "Why died we? warn't it, then,

To settle, once for all, thet men wuz men?
Oh, airth's sweet cup snatched from us barely tasted,
The grave's real chill is feelin' life wuz wasted!

Oh, you we lef', long-lingerin' et the door, Lovin' you best, coz we loved Her the
more,

Thet Death, not we, had conquered, we should feel

Ef she upon our memory turned her heel,
An' unregretful throwed us all away To flaunt it in a Blind Man's Holiday!"

My frien's, I 've talked nigh on to long enough.

I hain't no call to bore ye coz ye 're tough;
My lungs are sound, an' our own vice delights

Our ears, but even kebbige-heads hez rights.

It 's the las' time thet I shell e'er address ye,
But you 'll soon fin' some new tormentor:
bless ye!

[Tumult'ous applause and cries of "Go on!" "Don't stop!"]

UNDER THE WILLOWS AND OTHER POEMS

"THE WILLOWS," as was pointed out in the introductory note to An Indian-Summer Revue, was a clump of trees not far from Elmwood. Lowell took a peculiar pleasure in their gnarled and umbrageous forms, and wrote to Fields while the volume which took its title from the trees was in press: "My heart was almost broken yesterday by seeing nailed to my willow a board with these words on it, 'These trees for sale.' The wretch is going to peddle them for firewood! If I had the money, I would buy the piece of ground they stand on to save them — the dear friends of a lifetime. They would be a loss to the town. But what can one do? They belong to a man who values them by the cord. I wish Fenn had sketched them at least. One of them I hope will stand a few years yet in my poem — but he might just as well have outlasted me and my works, making his own green ode every summer." Not all the trees have been destroyed, for some yet remain, and it is a pleasure to record the refusal of a new comer into the neighborhood to have one destroyed which was inconveniently near the site of the house she was to build. She changed, instead, the site.

The varying minds Lowell was in regarding the title of the volume may be learned from the following letter to C. E. Norton, dated

ELMWOOD, October 7, 1868.

... "The summer is past, the harvest is ended," and I have not yet written to you! Well, I was resolved I would not write till the printers had in their hands all the copy of my new volume of old poems. And that has taken longer than I expected. I have been Marthaized by many small troubles. But last night I fairly ended my work. . . . I had decided to put the "June Idyl" in the forefront and call it "A June Idyl, and Other Poems." But Fields told me that Whittier's new volume was to be called "A Summer Idyl" — so I was blocked there. Then I took "Appledore," merely because it was a pretty name, though I did not wish to put that in the van. So it was all settled for the second time. Then I was suddenly moved to finish my "Voyage to Vinland," . . . and, as I liked the poem, thought no title so good as "The Voyage to Vinland, and Other Poems." But Fields would not hear of it, and proposed that I should rechristen the Idyl "Elmwood," and name the book after that. But the more I thought of it the less I liked it. It was throwing my sanctuary open and making a show-house of my hermitage. It was indecent. So I fumed and worried. I was riled. Then it occurred to me that I had taken the name of "June Idyl" as a pis-aller, because in my haste I could think of nothing else. Why not name it over? So I hit upon "Under the Willows," and that it is to be. . . . But it is awfully depressing work. They call back so many moods, and they are so bad. I think, though, there is a suggestion of something good in them at least, and they are not silly. But how much the public will stand! I sometimes wonder they don't drive all us authors into a corner and make a battue of the whole concern at once.

In making the collection, the first miscellaneous one since the Poems published in 1849, Lowell gathered not only those published meanwhile in magazines and other periodicals, but went back and recovered some earlier verses.

TO CHARLES ELIOT NORTON

AGRO DOLCE

THE wind is roistering out of doors,
My windows shake and my chimney roars;
My Elmwood chimneys seem crooning to
me,

As of old, in their moody, minor key,
And out of the past the hoarse wind blows,
As I sit in my arm-chair, and toast my toes.

"Ho! ho! nine-and-forty," they seem to sing,

"We saw you a little toddling thing.

We knew you child and youth and man,
A wonderful fellow to dream and plan, With a great thing always to come, — who knows?

Well, well! 't is some comfort to toast one's toes.

"How many times have you sat at gaze Till the mouldering fire forgot to blaze, Shaping among the whimsical coals Fancies and figures and shining goals!
What matters the ashes that cover those?
While hickory lasts you can toast your toes.

"O dream-ship-builder! where are they
 all,
 Your grand three-deckers, deep-chested
 and tall,
 That should crush the waves under canvas piles,
 And anchor at last by the Fortunate Isles?
 There's gray in your beard, the years turn
 foes, While you muse in your arm-chair, and toast your toes."

I sit and dream that I hear, as of yore, My Elmwood chimneys' deep-throated roar;
 If much be gone, there is much remains;
 By the embers of loss I count my gains, You and yours with the best, till the old hope glows
 In the fanciful flame, as I toast my toes.

Instead of a fleet of broad-browed ships,
 To send a child's armada of chips!
 Instead of the great guns, tier on tier,
 A freight of pebbles and grass-blades sere!
 "Well, maybe more love with the less gift goes,"
 I growl, as, half moody, I toast my toes.

UNDER THE WILLOWS

FRANK-HEARTED hostess of the field and
 wood,
 Gypsy, whose roof is every spreading tree, June is the pearl of our New England
 year.
 Still a surprisal, though expected long, Her coming startles. Long she lies in wait,
 Makes many a feint, peeps forth, draws coyly back, Then, from some southern ambush in the sky,
 With one great gush of blossom storms the
 world.
 A week ago the sparrow was divine;
 The bluebird, shifting his light load of
 song
 From post to post along the cheerless fence,
 Was as a rhymer ere the poet come;
 But now, oh rapture! sunshine winged and voiced,

Pipe blown through by the warm wild breath of the West Shepherding his soft droves of fleecy cloud, Gladness of woods, skies, waters, all in
 one,
 The bobolink has come, and, like the soul Of the sweet season vocal in a bird, Gurgles in ecstasy we know not what Save June! Dear June! Now God be praised for June.

May is a pious fraud of the almanac,
 A ghastly parody of real Spring Shaped out of snow and breathed with eastern wind;
 Or if, o'er-confident, she trust the date,
 And, with her handful of anemones, Herself as shivery, steal into the sun,
 The season need but turn his hour-glass
 round,
 And Winter suddenly, like crazy Lear, Reels back, and brings the dead May in his arms,
 Her budding breasts and wan dislusted front
 With frosty streaks and drifts of his white beard
 All overblown. Then, warmly walled with books,
 While my wood-fire supplies the sun's defect,
 Whispering old forest-sagas in its dreams,
 I take my May down from the happy shelf Where perch the world's rare song-birds in a row,
 Waiting my choice to open with full breast,
 And beg an alms of springtime, ne'er denied Indoors by vernal Chaucer, whose fresh woods Throb thick with merle and mavis all the year.

July breathes hot,allows the crispy fields, Curls up the wan leaves of the lilac-hedge,
 And every eve cheats us with show of clouds That braid the horizon's western rim, or hang Motionless, with heaped canvas drooping idly,
 Like a dim fleet by starving men besieged,
 Conjectured half, and half desiered afar, Helpless of wind, and seeming to slip back Adown the smooth curve of the oily sea.

But June is full of invitations sweet, Forth from the chimney's yawn and thrice-read tomes
 To leisurely delights and sauntering
 thoughts
 That brook no ceiling narrower than the blue.
 The cherry, drest for bridal, at my pane Brushes, then listens, Will he come? The bee,
 All dusty as a miller, takes his toll Of powdery gold, and grumbles. What a
 day
 To sun me and do nothing! Nay, I think Merely to bask and ripen is sometimes The student's wiser business; the brain That forages all climes to line its cells, Ranging both worlds on lightest wings of wish,
 Will not distil the juices it has sucked
 To the sweet substance of pellucid thought, Except for him who hath the secret learned To mix his blood with sunshine, and to take
 The winds into his pulses. Hush! 't is
 he!
 My oriole, my glance of summer fire,
 Is come at last, and, ever on the watch, Twitches the packthread I had lightly
 wound
 About the bough to help his housekeeping,— Twitches and scouts by turns, blessing his luck,
 Yet fearing me who laid it in his way,
 Nor, more than wiser we in our affairs, Divines the providence that hides and helps.
Heave, ho! Heave, ho! he whistles as the twine Slackens its hold; once more, now! and a flash
 Lightens across the sunlight to the elm Where his mate dangles at her cup of felt.
 Nor all his booty is the thread; he trails My loosened thought with it along the
 air,
 And I must follow, would I ever find The inward rhyme to all this wealth of
 life.
 I care not how men trace their ancestry, To ape or Adam: let them please their whim;
 But I in June am midway to believe

A tree among my far progenitors, Such sympathy is mine with all the race Such mutual recognition vaguely sweet There is between us. Surely there are times
 When they consent to own me of their
 kin,
 And condescend to me, and call me cousin, Murmuring faint lullabies of eldest time, Forgotten, and yet dumbly felt with thrills Moving the lips, though fruitless of all
 words.
 And I have many a lifelong leafy friend,
 Never estranged nor careful of my soul,
 That knows I hate the axe, and welcomes
 me
 Within his tent as if I were a bird,
 Or other free companion of the earth,
 Yet undegenerate to the shifts of men.
 Among them one, an ancient willow, spreads
 Eight balanced limbs, springing at once all round
 His deep-ridged trunk with upward slant diverse,
 In outline like enormous beaker, fit For hand of Jotun, where mid snow and mist
 He holds unwieldy revel. This tree, spared, I know not by what grace,— for in the blood
 Of our New World subduers lingers yet Hereditary feud with trees, they being (They and the red-man most) our fathers'
 foes,—
 Is one of six, a willow Pleiades, The seventh fallen, that lean along the brink
 Where the steep upland dips into the marsh, Their roots, like molten metal cooled in flowing,
 Stiffened in coils and runnels down the bank.
 The friend of all the winds, wide-armed he towers
 And glints his steely aglets in the sun,
 Or whitens fitfully with sudden bloom Of leaves breeze-lifted, much as when a shoal
 Of devious minnows wheel from where a pike Lurks balanced 'neath the lily-pads, and whirl
 A rood of silver bellies to the day.
 Alas! no acorn from the British oak 'Neath which slim fairies tripping wrought those rings

Of greenest emerald, wherewith fireside life Did with the invisible spirit of Nature wed,

Was ever planted here! No darnel fancy Might choke one useful blade in Puritan fields;

With horn and hoof the good old Devil
came,

The witch's broomstick was not contraband,

But all that superstition had of fair,
Or piety of native sweet, was doomed.
And if there be who nurse unholy faiths, Fearing their god as if he were a wolf That snuffed round every home and was not seen,

There should be some to watch and keep alive

All beautiful beliefs. And such was that, —
By solitary shepherd first surmised Under Thessalian oaks, loved by some maid Of royal stirp, that silent came and vanished,

As near her nest the hermit thrush, nor dared

Confess a mortal name, — that faith which gave

A Hamadryad to each tree; and I Will hold it true that in this willow dwells
The open-handed spirit, frank and blithe, Of ancient Hospitality, long since,
With ceremonious thrift, bowed out of doors.

In June 't is good to lie beneath a tree While the blithe season comforts every
sense,

Steeps all the brain in rest, and heals the
heart,

Brimming it o'er with sweetness unawares, Fragrant and silent as that rosy snow Wherewith the pitying apple-tree fills up And tenderly lines some last-year robin's nest.

There muse I of old times, old hopes, old friends, —

Old friends! The writing of those words has borne

My fancy backward to the gracious past,
The generous past, when all was possible,
For all was then untried; the years between Have taught some sweet, some bitter lessons, none

Wiser than this, — to spend in all things else,

But of old friends to be most miserly.

Each year to ancient friendships adds a ring,

As to an oak, and precious more and more,
Without deservingness or help of ours, They grow, and, silent, wider spread, each
year,

Their unbought ring of shelter or of shade.
Sacred to me the lichens on the bark, Which Nature's milliners would scrape
away;

Most dear and sacred every withered limb!
'T is good to set them early, for our faith Pines as we age, and, after wrinkles come, Few plant, but water dead ones with vain tears.

This willow is as old to me as life;
And under it full often have I stretched,
Feeling the warm earth like a thing alive,
And gathering virtue in at every pore Till it possessed me wholly, and thought ceased,

Or was transfused in something to which
thought

Is coarse and dull of sense. Myself was lost,

Gone from me like an ache, and what remained

Become a part of the universal joy.

My soul went forth, and, mingling with the tree,

Danced in the leaves; or, floating in the cloud,

Saw its white double in the stream below;
Or else, sublimed to purer ecstasy, Dilated in the broad blue over all.

I was the wind that dappled the lush
grass,

The tide that crept with coolness to its roots,

The thin-winged swallow skating on the
air;

The life that gladdened everything was
mine

Was I then truly all that I beheld?

Or is this stream of being but a glass
Where the mind sees its visionary self,
As, when the kingfisher flits o'er his bay, Across the river's hollow heaven below
His picture flits, — another, yet the same?
But suddenly the sound of human voice Or footfall, like the drop a chemist pours,

Doth in opacous cloud precipitate
The consciousness that seemed but now dissolved

Into an essence rarer than its own,
And I am narrowed to myself once more.

For here not long is solitude secure, Nor Fantasy left vacant to her spell.
Here, sometimes, in this paradise of shade, Rippled with western winds, the dusty Tramp,

Seeing the treeless causey burn beyond, Halts to unroll his bundle of strange food And munch an unearned meal. I cannot help

Liking this creature, lavish Summer's bedesman,

Who from the almshouse steals when nights grow warm,

Himself his large estate and only charge,
To be the guest of haystack or of hedge, Nobly superior to the household gear
That forfeits us our privilege of nature.

I bait him with my match-box and my pouch,

Nor grudge the uncostly sympathy of smoke,

His equal now, divinely unemployed.
Some smack of Robin Hood is in the man, Some secret league with wild wood-wandering
things;

He is our ragged Duke, our barefoot Earl,
By right of birth exonerate from toil,
Who levies rent from us his tenants all,
And serves the state by merely being.
Here

The Scissors-grinder, pausing, doffs his hat, And lets the kind breeze, with its delicate fan,

Winnow the heat from out his dank gray
hair,—

A grimy Ulysses, a much-wandered man, Whose feet are known to all the populous ways,

And many men and manners he hath seen,
Not without fruit of solitary thought.

He, as the habit is of lonely men,— Unused to try the temper of their mind In fence with others,— positive and shy, Yet knows to put an edge upon his speech, Pithily Saxon in unwilling talk.

Him I entrap with my long-suffering knife,

And, while its poor blade hums away in sparks,

Sharpen my wit upon his gritty mind,
In motion set obsequious to his wheel,
And in its quality not much unlike.

Nor wants my tree more punctual visitors.
The children, they who are the only rich, Creating for the moment, and possessing Whate'er they choose to feign,— for still with them

Kind Fancy plays the fairy godmother, Strewing their lives with cheap material For winged horses and Aladdin's lamps, Pure elfin-gold, by manhood's touch profane

To dead leaves disenchanting,— long ago Between the branches of the tree fixed seats,

Making an o'turned box their table. Oft The shrilling girls sit here between school
hours,

And play at What's my thought like? while the boys,

With whom the age chivalric ever bides, Pricked on by knightly spur of female eyes, Climb high to swing and shout on perilous boughs,

Or, from the willow's armory equipped With musket dumb, green banner, edge-less sword,

Make good the rampart of their tree-redoubt

'Gainst eager British storming from below,
And keep alive the tale of Bunker's Hill.

Here, too, the men that mend our village
ways,

Vexing Macadam's ghost with pounded
slate,

Their nooning take ; much noisy talk they spend

On horses and their ills; and, as John Bull Tells of Lord This or That, who was his friend,

So these make boast of intimacies long With famous teams, and add large estimates,

By competition swelled from mouth to
mouth,

Of how much they could draw, till one, ill pleased

To have his legend overbid, retorts :

"You take and stretch truck-horses in a string

From here to Long Wharf end, one thing
I know,

Not heavy neither, they could never draw, — Ensign's long bow !” Then laughter loud and long.

So they in their leaf-shadowed microcosm Image the larger world; for wheresoe'er Ten men are gathered, the observant eye Will find mankind in little, as the stars Glide up and set, and all the heavens resolve

In the small welkin of a drop of dew.

I love to enter pleasure by a postern, Not the broad popular gate that gulps the mob;

To find my theatres in roadside nooks,
 Where men are actors, and suspect it not;
 Where Nature all unconscious works her
 will,

And every passion moves with easy gait, Unhampered by the buskin or the train.
 Hating the crowd, where we gregarious
 men

Lead lonely lives, I love society, Nor seldom find the best with simple souls Unswerved by culture from their native
 bent,

The ground we meet on being primal man
 And nearer the deep bases of our lives.

But oh, half heavenly, earthly half, my
 soul, Canst thou from those late ecstasies descend,

Thy lips still wet with the miraculous wine
 That transubstantiates all thy baser stuff
 To such divinity that soul and sense, Once more commingled in their source, are lost, —

Canst thou descend to quench a vulgar thirst

With the mere dregs and rinsings of the world ?

Well, if my nature find her pleasure so, I am content, nor need to blush; I take My little gift of being clean from God,
 Not haggling for a better, holding it Good as was ever any in the world,
 My days as good and full of miracle.
 I pluck my nutriment from any bush, Finding out poison as the first men did By tasting and then suffering, if I must.
 Sometimes my bush burns, and sometimes
 it is

A leafless wilding shivering by the wall;
 But I have known when winter barberries

Pricked the effeminate palate with surprise

Of savor whose mere harshness seemed divine.

Oh, benediction of the higher mood And human-kindness of the lower ! for both

I will be grateful while I live, nor question The wisdom that hath made us what we are,

With such large range as from the ale-house bench

Can reach the stars and be with both at home.

They tell us we have fallen on prosy days, Condemned to glean the leavings of earth's feast

Where gods and heroes took delight of
 old;

But though our lives, moving in one dull
 round

Of repetition infinite, become Stale as a newspaper once read, and though History herself, seen in her workshop, seem

To have lost the art that dyed those glorious panes,

Rich with memorial shapes of saint and sage,

That pave with splendor the Past's dusky aisles, —

Panels that enchant the light of common day
 With colors costly as the blood of kings, Till with ideal hues it edge our thought, — Yet while the world is left, while nature lasts,

And man the best of nature, there shall be Somewhere contentment for these human hearts,

Some freshness, some unused material For wonder and for song. I lose myself In other ways where solemn guide-posts
 say,

This way to Knowledge, This way to Repose,
 But here, here only, I am ne'er betrayed,
 For every by-path leads me to my love.

God's passionless reformers, influences,
 That purify and heal and are not seen, Shall man say whence your virtue is, or how

Ye make medicinal the wayside weed ?
 I know that sunshine, through whatever rift

How shaped it matters not, upon my walls Paints discs as perfect-rounded as its source,

And, like its antitype, the ray divine, However finding entrance, perfect still,
Repeats the image unimpaired of God.

We, who by shipwreck only find the shores Of divine wisdom, can but kneel at first;
Can but exult to feel beneath our feet,
That long stretched vainly down the yielding deeps,

The shock and sustenance of solid earth;
Inland afar we see what temples gleam Through immemorial stems of sacred groves,

And we conjecture shining shapes there-
in ;

Yet for a space we love to wander here Among the shells and seaweed of the beach.

So mused I once within my willow-tent One brave June morning, when the bluff northwest,

Thrusting aside a dank and snuffing day
That made us bitter at our neighbors' sins, Brimmed the great cup of heaven with sparkling cheer

And roared a lusty stave ; the sliding Charles,

Blue toward the west, and bluer and more
blue,

Living and lustrous as a woman's eyes Look once and look no more, with southward curve

Ran crinkling sunniness, like Helen's hair Glimpsed in Elysium, insubstantial gold;
From blossom-clouded orchards, far away
The bobolink tinkled; the deep meadows flowed

With multitudinous pulse of light and shade

Against the bases of the southern hills, While here and there a drowsy island rick Slept and its shadow slept; the wooden bridge

Thundered, and then was silent; on the roofs

The sun-warped shingles rippled with the heat;

Summer on field and hill, in heart and
brain,

All life washed clean in this high tide of June.

DARA

WHEN Persia's sceptre trembled in a hand Wilted with harem-heats, and all the land Was hovered over by those vulture ills That snuff decaying empire from afar, Then, with a nature balanced as a star, Dara arose, a shepherd of the hills.

He who had governed fleecy subjects well Made his own village by the selfsame spell

Secure and quiet as a guarded fold;
Then, gathering strength by slow and wise degrees

Under his sway, to neighbor villages Order returned, and faith and justice old.

Now when it fortune'd that a king more wise Endued the realm with brain and hands and eyes,

He sought on every side men brave and just ;

And having heard our mountain shepherd's
praise,

How he refilled the mould of elder days,
To Dara gave a satrapy in trust.

So Dara shepherded a province wide, Nor in his viceroy's sceptre took more pride

Than in his crook before ; but envy finds More food in cities than on mountains
bare ;

And the frank sun of natures clear and rare

Breeds poisonous fogs in low and marish minds.

Soon it was hissed into the royal ear,
That, though wise Dara's province, year by year,

Like a great sponge, sucked wealth and plenty up,

Yet, when he squeezed it at the king's behest,

Some yellow drops, more rich than all the rest,

Went to the filling of his private cup.

For proof, they said, that, wheresoe'er he went,

A chest, beneath whose weight the camel
bent,

Went with him ; and no mortal eye had Seen

What was therein, save only Dara's own ; But, when 't was opened, all his tent was known

To glow and lighten with heaped jewels' sheen.

The King set forth for Dara's province
 straight ;

There, as was fit, outside the city's gate,
 The viceroy met him with a stately train,
 And there, with archers circled, close at
 hand,

A camel with the chest was seen to stand :
 The King's brow reddened, for the guilt was plain.

"Open me here," he cried, "this treasure-chest!"

'T was done ; and only a worn shepherd's vest

Was found therein. Some blushed and hung the head ;

Not Dara ; open as the sky's blue roof He stood, and "O my lord, behold the proof

That I was faithful to my trust," he said.

"To govern men, lo all the spell I had !
 My soul in these rude vestments ever clad Still to the unstained past kept true and leal, Still on these plains could breathe her mountain air,

And fortune's heaviest gifts serenely bear, Which bend men from their truth and make them reel.

"For ruling wisely I should have small skill,

Were I not lord of simple Dara still ;
 That sceptre kept, I could not lose my
 way."

Strange dew in royal eyes grew round and
 bright,

And strained the throbbing lids ; before
 't was night

Two added provinces blest Dara's sway.

THE FIRST SNOW-FALL

One of the "earlier verses" sent to the Anti-Slavery Standard. In a letter to Mr. Gay, dated Elmwood, December 22, 1849, Lowell wrote: "Print that as if you loved it. Let not a comma be blundered. Especially I fear they will put 'gleaning' for 'gloaming' in the first line unless you look to it. May you never have the key which shall unlock the whole meaning of the poem to you!"

The snow had begun in the gloaming,
 And busily all the night
 Had been heaping field and highway With a silence deep and white.

Every pine and fir and hemlock Wore ermine too dear for an earl,
 And the poorest twig on the elm-tree
 Was ridged inch deep with pearl.

From sheds new-roofed with Carrara Came Chanticleer's muffled crow,
 The stiff rails softened to swan's-down,
 And still fluttered down the snow.

I stood and watched by the window
 The noiseless work of the sky,
 And the sudden flurries of snow-birds, Like brown leaves whirling by.

I thought of a mound in sweet Auburn Where a little headstone stood ;
 How the flakes were folding it gently,
 As did robins the babes in the wood.

Up spoke our own little Mabel, Saying, "Father, who makes it snow ?"
 And I told of the good All-father Who cares for us here below.

Again I looked at the snow-fall,
 And thought of the leaden sky
 That arched o'er our first great sorrow,
 When that mound was heaped so high.

I remembered the gradual patience That fell from that cloud like snow, Flake by flake, healing and hiding
 The scar that renewed our woe.

And again to the child I whispered,
 "The snow that husheth all,
 Darling, the merciful Father Alone can make it fall!"

Then, with eyes that saw not, I kissed her ;
 And she, kissing back, could not know That my kiss was given to her sister, Folded close under deepening snow.

THE SINGING LEAVES

A BALLAD

I

"WHAT fairings will ye that I bring?"
Said the King to his daughters three;
"For I to Vanity Fair am boun, Now say what shall they be?"

Then up and spake the eldest daughter,
That lady tall and grand:
"Oh, bring me pearls and diamonds great,
And gold rings for my hand."

Thereafter spake the second daughter,
That was both white and red:
"For me bring silks that will stand alone,
And a gold comb for my head."

Then came the turn of the least daughter,
That was whiter than thistle-down,
And among the gold of her blithesome hair Dim shone the golden crown.

"There came a bird this morning,
And sang 'neath my bower eaves, Till I dreamed, as his music made me,
'Ask thou for the Singing Leaves.'"

Then the brow of the King swelled crimson With a flush of angry scorn:
"Well have ye spoken, my two eldest,
And chosen as ye were born;

"But she, like a thing of peasant race, That is happy binding the sheaves;"
Then he saw her dead mother in her face,
And said, "Thou shalt have thy leaves."

II

He mounted and rode three days and nights Till he came to Vanity Fair, And 't was easy to buy the gems and the silk,
But no Singing Leaves were there.

Then deep in the greenwood rode he,
And asked of every tree,
"Oh, if you have ever a Singing Leaf, I pray you give it me!"

But the trees all kept their counsel,
And never a word said they,

Only there sighed from the pine-tops
A music of seas far away.

Only the pattering aspen Made a sound of growing rain,
That fell ever faster and faster, Then faltered to silence again.

"Oh, where shall I find a little foot-page
That would win both hose and shoon,
And will bring to me the Singing Leaves
If they grow under the moon?"

Then lightly turned him Walter the page,
By the stirrup as he ran:
"Now pledge you me the truesome word Of a king and gentleman,

"That you will give me the first, first thing You meet at your castle-gate,
And the Princess shall get the Singing
Leaves,
Or mine be a traitor's fate."

The King's head dropt upon his breast A moment, as it might be;
'T will be my dog, he thought, and said,
"My faith I plight to thee."

Then Walter took from next his heart
A packet small and thin,
"Now give you this to the Princess Anne,
The Singing Leaves are therein."

As the King rode in at his castle-gate, A maiden to meet him ran,
And "Welcome, father!" she laughed and cried
Together, the Princess Anne.

"Lo, here the Singing Leaves," quoth he,
"And woe, but they cost me dear!"
She took the packet, and the smile Deepened down beneath the tear.

It deepened down till it reached her heart,
And then gushed up again,
And lighted her tears as the sudden sun Transfigures the summer rain.

And the first Leaf, when it was opened, Sang: "I am Walter the page,
And the songs I sing 'neath thy window Are my only heritage."

And the second Leaf sang: "But in the land

That is neither on earth nor sea, My lute and I are lords of more Than thrice this kingdom's fee."

And the third Leaf sang, "Be mine! Be mine!"

And ever it sang, "Be mine!"
Then sweeter it sang and ever sweeter,
And said, "I am thine, thine, thine!"

At the first Leaf she grew pale enough,
At the second she turned aside,
At the third, 't was as if a lily flushed With a rose's red heart's tide.

"Good counsel gave the bird," said she,
"I have my hope thrice o'er,
For they sing to my very heart," she said,
"And it sings to them evermore."

She brought to him her beauty and truth,
But and broad earldoms three,
And he made her queen of the broader lands
He held of his lute in fee.

SEAWEED

Nor always unimpeded can I pray,
Nor, pitying saint, thine intercession claim;
Too closely clings the burden of the day,
And all the mint and anise that I pay But swells my debt and deepens my self-blame.

Shall I less patience have than Thou, who know

That Thou revisit'st all who wait for thee, Nor only fill'st the unsounded deeps below,

But dost refresh with punctual overflow
The rifts where unregarded mosses be?

The drooping seaweed hears, in night abyssed,

Far and more far the wave's receding shocks,

Nor doubts, for all the darkness and the
mist,

That the pale shepherdess will keep her tryst,

And shoreward lead again her foam-fleeced flocks.

For the same wave that rims the Carib
shore

With momentary brede of pearl and gold, Goes hurrying thence to gladden with its roar

Lorn weeds bound fast on rocks of Labraddor,

By love divine on one sweet errand rolled.

And, though Thy healing waters far withdraw,

I, too, can wait and feed on hope of Thee
And of the dear recurrence of Thy law, Sure that the parting grace my morning saw

Abides its time to come in search of me.

THE FINDING OF THE LYRE

THERE lay upon the ocean's shore
What once a tortoise served to cover;
A year and more, with rush and roar,
The surf had rolled it over,
Had played with it, and flung it by,
As wind and weather might decide it, Then tossed it high where sand-drifts dry Cheap burial might provide it.

It rested there to bleach or tan,
The rains had soaked, the suns had burned
it;

With many a ban the fisherman
Had stumbled o'er and spurned it;
And there the fisher-girl would stay, Conjecturing with her brother
How in their play the poor estray Might serve some use or other.

So there it lay, through wet and dry
As empty as the last new sonnet, Till by and by came Mercury,
And, having mused upon it,
"Why, here," cried he, "the thing of
things

In shape, material, and dimension!
Give it but strings, and, lo, it sings,
A wonderful invention!"

So said, so done; the chords he strained,
And, as his fingers o'er them hovered,
The shell disdained a soul had gained,
The lyre had been discovered.
O empty world that round us lies,
Dead shell, of soul and thought forsaken,

Brought we but eyes like Mercury's, In thee wuat songs should waken !

NEW-YEAR'S EVE, 1850

THIS is the midnight of the century, — hark !
Through aisle and arch of Godminster have gone Twelve throbs that tolled the zenith of the dark,
And mornward now the starry hands move
on;
"Mornward !" the angelic watchers say,
"Passed is the sorest trial;
No plot of man can stay
The hand upon the dial; Night is the dark stem of the lily Day."

If we, who watched in valleys here below, Toward streaks, misdeemed of morn, our faces turned
When volcan glares set all the east aglow, We are not poorer that we wept and yearned;
Though earth swing wide from God's intent,
And though no man nor nation Will move with full consent
In heavenly gravitation, Yet by one Sun is every orbit bent.

FOR AN AUTOGRAPH

THOUGH old the thought and oft exprest,
'T is his at last who says it best, — I'll try my fortune with the rest.

Life is a leaf of paper white Whereon each one of us may write His word or word, and then comes night.

"Lo, time and space enough," we cry,
"To write an epic !" so we try Our nibs upon the edge, and die.

Muse not which way the pen to hold,
Luck hates the slow and loves the bold,
Soon come the darkness and the cold.

Greatly begin ! though thou have time
But for a line, be that sublime, —
Not failure, but low aim, is crime.

Ah, with what lofty hope we came !
But we forget it, dream of fame,
And scrawl, as I do here, a name.

AL FRESCO

THE dandelions and buttercups Gild all the lawn; the drowsy bee Stumbles among the clover-tops,
And summer sweetens all but me:
Away, unfruitful lore of books,
For whose vain idiom we reject
The soul's more native dialect, Aliens among the birds and brooks, Dull to interpret or conceive What gospels lost the woods retrieve !
Away, ye critics, city-bred,
Who springes set of thus and so,
And in the first man's footsteps tread,
Like those who toil through drifted snow !
Away, my poets, whose sweet spell Can make a garden of a cell !
I need ye not, for I to-day Will make one long sweet verse of play.

Snap, chord of manhood's tenser strain !
To-day I will be a boy again;
The mind's pursuing element,
Like a bow slackened and unbent,
In some dark corner shall be leant.
The robin sings, as of old, from the limb !
The cat-bird croons in the lilac-bush !
Through the dim arbor, himself more dim, Silently hops the hermit-thrush,
The withered leaves keep dumb for him;
The irreverent buccaneering bee Hath stormed and rifled the nunnery
Of the lily, and scattered the sacred floor With haste - dropt gold from shrine to
door;

There, as of yore,
The rich, milk-tingeing buttercup
Its tiny polished urn holds up, Filled with ripe summer to the edge,
The sun in his own wine to pledge;
And our tall elm, this hundredth year Doge of our leafy Venice here, Who, with an annual ring, doth wed
The blue Adriatic overhead, Shadows with his palatial mass
The deep canals of flowing grass.

O unestrangèd birds and bees !
O face of Nature always true !

O never-unsympathizing trees !
 O never-rejecting roof of blue,
 Whose rash disherison never falls On us unthinking prodigals, Yet who convictest all our ill,
 So grand and unappeasable !
 Methinks my heart from each of these Plucks part of childhood back again, Long there imprisoned, as the breeze Doth every hidden odor seize Of wood and water, hill and plain ;
 Once more am I admitted peer
 In the upper house of Nature here,
 And feel through all my pulses run
 The royal blood of wind and sun.

Upon these elm-arched solitudes
 No hum of neighbor toil intrudes ;
 The only hammer that I hear Is wielded by the woodpecker, The single noisy calling his
 In all our leaf-hid Sybaris ;
 The good old time, close-hidden here,
 Persists, a loyal cavalier,
 While Roundheads prim, with point of fox, Probe wainscot-chink and empty box ;
 Here no hoarse-voiced iconoclast
 Insults thy statues, royal Past ; Myself too prone the axe to wield,
 I touch the silver side of the shield
 With lance reversed, and challenge peace,
 A willing convert of the trees.

How chanced it that so long I tost
 A cable's length from this rich coast,
 With foolish anchors hugging close The beckoning weeds and lazy ooze, Nor had the wit to wreck before
 On this enchanted island's shore, Whither the current of the sea,
 With wiser drift, persuaded me ?

Oh, might we but of such rare days Build up the spirit's dwelling-place !
 A temple of so Parian stone Would brook a marble god alone,
 The statue of a perfect life,
 Far-shrined from earth's bestaining strife.
 Alas ! though such felicity In our vext world here may not be,
 Yet, as sometimes the peasant's hut Shows stones which old religion cut With text inspired, or mystic sign Of the Eternal and Divine, Torn from the consecration deep

Of some fallen nunnery's mossy sleep,
 So, from the ruins of this day Crumbling in golden dust away,
 The soul one gracious block may draw, Carved with some fragment of the law,
 Which, set in life's prosaic wall,
 Old benedictions may recall,
 And lure some nunlike thoughts to take Their dwelling here for memory's sake.

MASACCIO

IN THE BRANCACCI CHAPEL

HE came to Florence long ago,
 And painted here these walls, that shone For Raphael and for Angelo,
 With secrets deeper than his own,
 Then shrank into the dark again,
 And died, we know not how or when.

The shadows deepened, and I turned Half sadly from the fresco grand ;
 " And is this," mused I, " all ye earned, High-vaulted brain and cunning hand,
 That ye to greater men could teach The skill yourselves could never reach ? "

" And who were they," I mused, " that wrought

Through pathless wilds, with labor long,
 The highways of our daily thought ?
 Who reared those towers of earliest song That lift us from the crowd to peace Remote in sunny silences ? "

Out clanged the Ave Mary bells,
 And to my heart this message came :
 Each clamorous throat among them tells What strong-souled martyrs died in flame
 To make it possible that thou Shouldst here with brother sinners bow.

Thoughts that great hearts once broke for,
 we

Breathe cheaply in the common air ;
 The dust we trample heedlessly Throbbled once in saints and heroes rare, Who perished, opening for their race
 New pathways to the commonplace.

Henceforth, when rings the health to those Who live in story and in song,
 O nameless dead, that now repose

Safe in Oblivion's chambers strong,
One cup of recognition true Shall silently be drained to you !

WITHOUT AND WITHIN

"Madrid, January 15, 1879. I wrote some verses thirty odd years ago called Without and Within, and they originally ended with the author's looking up at the stars through six feet of earth and feeling dreadfully bored, while a passer-by deciphers the headstone and envies the supposed sleeper beneath. I was persuaded to leave out this ending as too grim — but I often think of it. They have a fine name for this kind of feeling nowadays, and would fain make out pessimism to be a monstrous birth of our century. I suspect it has always been common enough, especially with naughty children who get tired of their playthings as soon as I do — the absurdity being that then we are not content with smashing the toy which turns out to be finite — but everything else into the bargain." J. R. L. to Miss Grace Norton. Letters II. 236.

My coachman, in the moonlight there,
Looks through the side-light of the door;
I hear him with his brethren swear,
As I could do, — but only more.

Flattening his nose against the pane,
He envies me my brilliant lot,
Breathes on his aching fists in vain,
And dooms me to a place more hot.

He sees me in to supper go,
A silken wonder by my side,
Bare arms, bare shoulders, and a row Of flounces, for the door too wide.

He thinks how happy is my arm
'Neath its white-gloved and jewelled load;
And wishes me some dreadful harm,
Hearing the merry corks explode.

Meanwhile I inly curse the bore
Of hunting still the same old coon,
And envy him, outside the door,
In golden quiet of the moon.

The winter wind is not so cold
As the bright smile he sees me win, Nor the host's oldest wine so old As our poor gabble sour and thin.

I envy him the ungyved prance
With which his freezing feet he warms,
And drag my lady's-chains and dance
The galley-slave of dreary forms.

Oh, could he have my share of din,
And I his quiet ! — past a doubt
'T would still be one man bored within,
And just another bored without.

Nay, when, once paid my mortal fee,
Some idler on my headstone grim Traces the moss-blurred name, will he Think me the happier, or I him ?

GODMINSTER CHIMES

WRITTEN IN AID OF A CHIME OF BELLS FOR CHRIST CHURCH, CAMBRIDGE

GODMINSTER ? Is it Fancy's play ?
I know not, but the word Sings in my heart, nor can I say Whether 't was dreamed or heard;
Yet fragrant in my mind it clings As blossoms after rain,
And builds of half-remembered things
This vision in my brain.

Through aisles of long-drawn centuries
My spirit walks in thought,
And to that symbol lifts its eyes Which God's own pity wrought;
From Calvary shines the altar's gleam,
The Church's East is there,
The Ages one great minster seem,
That throbs with praise and prayer.

And all the way from Calvary down
The carven pavement shows Their graves who won the martyr's crown And safe in God repose;
The saints of many a warring creed Who now in heaven have learned That all paths to the Father lead Where Self the feet have spurned.

And, as the mystic aisles I pace,
By aureoled workmen built,
Lives ending at the Cross I trace Alike through grace and guilt;
One Mary bathes the blessed feet
With ointment from her eyes,

With spikenard one, and both are sweet,
For both are sacrifice.

Moravian hymn and Roman chant
In one devotion blend,
To speak the soul's eternal want
Of Him, the inmost friend;
One prayer soars cleansed with martyr
fire,
One choked with sinner's tears,
In heaven both meet in one desire,
And God one music hears.

Whilst thus I dream, the bells clash out Upon the Sabbath air,
Each seems a hostile faith to shout,
A selfish form of prayer;
My dream is shattered, yet who knows But in that heaven so near These discords find harmonious close In God's atoning ear?

O chime of sweet Saint Charity, Peal soon that Easter morn When Christ for all shall risen be,
And in all hearts new-born!
That Pentecost when utterance clear To all men shall be given,
When all shall say My Brother here,
And hear My Son in heaven!

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS

Who hath not been a poet? Who hath not,
With life's new quiver full of winged
years,
Shot at a venture, and then, following on,
Stood doubtful at the Parting of the Ways?

There once I stood in dream, and as I paused,
Looking this way and that, came forth
to me

The figure of a woman veiled, that said,
"My name is Duty, turn and follow me;" Something there was that chilled me in her voice;

I felt Youth's hand grow slack and cold in
mine,

As if to be withdrawn, and I exclaimed:
"Oh, leave the hot wild heart within my breast!

Duty comes soon enough, too soon comes
Death;

This slippery globe of life whirls of itself, Hasting our youth away into the dark;
These senses, quivering with electric heats, Too soon will show, like nests on wintry
boughs

Obtrusive emptiness, too palpable wreck, Which whistling north-winds line with downy snow
Sometimes, or fringe with foliated rime,
in vain,
Thither the singing birds no more return."

Then glowed to me a maiden from the left,
With bosom half disclosed, and naked arms

More white and undulant than necks of swans;

And all before her steps an influence ran Warm as the whispering South that opens buds

And swells the laggard sails of Northern
May.

"I am called Pleasure, come with me!"
she said,

Then laughed, and shook out sunshine from her hair,

Nor only that, but, so it seemed, shook out All memory too, and all the moonlit past, Old loves, old aspirations, and old dreams,
More beautiful for being old and gone.

So we two went together; downward sloped

The path through yellow meads, or so I dreamed,

Yellow with sunshine and young green, but I

Saw naught nor heard, shut up in one close joy;

I only felt the hand within my own, Transmuting all my blood to golden fire, Dissolving all my brain in throbbing mist.

Suddenly shrank the hand; suddenly burst
A cry that split the torpor of my brain,
And as the first sharp thrust of lightning loosens

From the heaped cloud its rain, loosened my sense:

"Save me!" it thrilled; "oh, hide me!
there is Death!

Death the divider, the unmerciful, That digs his pitfalls under Love and
Youth,

And covers Beauty up in the cold ground;
Horrible Death! bringer of endless dark; Let him not see me! hide me in thy breast!"

Thereat I strove to clasp her, but my arms Met only what slipped crumbling down,
and fell,

A handful of gray ashes, at my feet.

I would have fled, I would have followed
back

That pleasant path we came, but all was changed;

Rocky the way, abrupt, and hard to find;
Yet I toiled on, and, toiling on, I thought,
"That way lies Youth, and Wisdom, and all Good;

For only by unlearning Wisdom comes And climbing backward to diviner Youth; What the world teaches profits to the
world,

What the soul teaches profits to the soul,
Which then first stands erect with God-ward face,

When she lets fall her pack of withered
facts,

The gleanings of the outward eye and
ear,

And looks and listens with her finer sense; Nor Truth nor Knowledge cometh from without."

After long, weary days I stood again
And waited at the Parting of the Ways;
Again the figure of a woman veiled Stood forth and beckoned, and I followed
now:

Down to no bower of roses led the path, But through the streets of towns where chattering Cold

Hewed wood for fires whose glow was owned and fenced,

Where Nakedness wove garments of warm wool

Not for itself;—or through the fields it led

Where Hunger reaped the unattainable
grain,

Where idleness enforced saw idle lands, Leagues of unpeopled soil, the common
earth,

Wailed round with paper against God and
Man.

"I cannot look," I groaned, "at only
these;

The heart grows hardened with perpetual
wont,

And palters with a feigned necessity, Bargaining with itself to be content;
Let me behold thy face."

The Form replied:

"Men follow Duty, never overtake; Duty nor lifts her veil nor looks behind."
But, as she spake, a loosened lock of hair Slipped from beneath her hood, and I, who looked

To see it gray and thin, saw amplest gold;
Not that dull metal dug from sordid earth,
But such as the retiring sunset flood Leaves heaped on bays and capes of island cloud.

"O Guide divine," I prayed, "although not yet

I may repair the virtue which I feel Gone out at touch of untuned things and foul

With draughts of Beauty, yet declare how soon!"

"Faithless and faint of heart," the voice returned,

"Thou seest no beauty save thou make it first;

Man, Woman, Nature each is but a glass
Where the soul sees the image of herself, Visible echoes, offsprings of herself.

But, since thou need'st assurance of how soon,

Wait till that angel comes who opens all,
The reconciler, he who lifts the veil,
The reuniter, the rest-bringer, Death."

I waited, and methought he came; but how,

Or in what shape, I doubted, for no sign, By touch or mark, he gave me as he passed:

Only I knew a lily that I held Snapt short below the head and shrivelled
up;

Then turned my Guide and looked at me unveiled,

And I beheld no face of matron stern,
But that enchantment I had followed erst,
Only more fair, more clear to eye and brain, Heightened and chastened by a household charm;

She smiled, and "Which is fairer," said her eyes,

"The hag's unreal Florimel or mine?"

ALADDIN

WHEN I was a beggarly boy,
 And lived in a cellar damp,
 I had not a friend nor a toy,
 But I had Aladdin's lamp;
 When I could not sleep for the cold,
 I had fire enough in my brain,
 And builded, with roofs of gold,
 My beautiful castles in Spain!

Since then I have toiled day and night,
 I have money and power good store,
 But I'd give all my lamps of silver bright For the one that is mine no more;
 Take, Fortune, whatever you choose,
 You gave, and may snatch again;
 I have nothing 't would pain me to lose,
 For I own no more castles in Spain!

AN INVITATION

TO [JOHN] F[RANCIS] H[EATH]

NINE years have slipt like hour-glass sand From life's still-emptying globe away, Since last, dear friend, I clasped your
 hand,
 And stood upon the impoverished land,
 Watching the steamer down the bay.

I held the token which you gave,
 While slowly the smoke-pennon curled O'er the vague rim 'tween sky and wave,
 And shut the distance like a grave,
 Leaving me in the colder world;

The old, worn world of hurry and heat,
 The young, fresh world of thought and
 scope;

While you, where beckoning billows fleet Climb far sky-beaches still and sweet, Sank wavering down the ocean-slope.

You sought the new world in the old,
 I found the old world in the new,
 All that our human hearts can hold,
 The inward world of deathless mould,
 The same that Father Adam knew.

He needs no ship to cross the tide,
 Who, in the lives about him, sees Fair window-prospects opening wide

O'er history's fields on every side, To Ind and Egypt, Rome and Greece.

Whatever moulds of various brain E'er shaped the world to weal or woe, Whatever empires' wax and wane,
 To him that bath not eyes in vain,
 Our village-microcosm can show.

Come back our ancient walks to tread,
 Dear haunts of lost or scattered friends,
 Old Harvard's scholar-factories red,
 Where song and smoke and laughter sped
 The nights to proctor-haunted ends.

Constant are all our former loves, Unchanged the icehouse-girdled pond,
 Its hemlock glooms, its shadowy coves,
 Where floats the coot and never moves,
 Its slopes of long-tamed green beyond.

Our old familiars are not laid, Though snapt our wands and sunk our books;

They beckon, not to be gainsaid, Where, round broad meads that mowers wade,

The Charles his steel-blue sickle crooks.

Where, as the cloudburges eastward blow,
 From glow to gloom the hillsides shift
 Their plumps of orchard-trees arow, Their lakes of rye that wave and flow,
 Their snowy whiteweed's summer drift.

There have we watched the West unfurl
 A cloud Byzantium newly born,
 With flickering spires and domes of pearl,
 And vapory surfs that crowd and curl Into the sunset's Golden Horn.

There, as the flaming occident Burned slowly down to ashes gray, Night pitched o'erhead her silent tent,
 And glimmering gold from Hesper sprent Upon the darkened river lay,

Where a twin sky but just before Deepened, and double swallows skimmed,
 And from a visionary shore Hung visioned trees, that more and more Grew dusk as those above were dimmed.

Then eastward saw we slowly grow Clear-edged the lines of roof and spire.

While great elm-masses blacken slow,
And linden-ricks their round heads show Against a flush of widening fire.

Doubtful at first and far away,
The moon-flood creeps more wide and wide;

Up a ridged beach of cloudy gray, Curved round the east as round a bay,
It slips and spreads its gradual tide.

Then suddenly, in lurid mood,
The disk looms large o'er town and field
As upon Adam, red like blood,
'Tween him and Eden's happy wood, Glared the commissioned angel's shield.

Or let us seek the seaside, there To wander idly as we list, Whether, on rocky headlands bare,
Sharp cedar-horns, like breakers, tear
The trailing fringes of gray mist,

Or whether, under skies full flown,
The brightening surfs, with foamy din, Their breeze-caught forelocks backward
blown,

Against the beach's yellow zone Curl slow, and plunge forever in.

And, as we watch those canvas towers That lean along the horizon's rim,
'Sail on,' I'll say; "may sunniest hours Convoy you from this land of ours, Since from my side you bear not him!"

For years thrice three, wise Horace said,
A poem rare let silence bind;
And love may ripen in the shade,
Like ours, for nine long seasons laid In deepest arches of the mind.

Come back! Not ours the Old World's
good,

The Old World's ill, thank God, not ours;
But here, far better understood,
The days enforce our native mood,
And challenge all our manlier powers.

Kindlier to me the place of birth
That first my tottering footsteps trod;
There may be fairer spots of earth,
But all their glories are not worth
The virtue in the native sod.

Thence climbs an influence more benign Through pulse and nerve, through heart and brain;

Sacred to me those fibres fine That first clasped earth. Oh, ne'er be mine

The alien sun and alien rain!

These nourish not like homelier glows Or waterings of familiar skies,
And nature fairer blooms bestows
On the heaped hush of wintry snows,
In pastures dear to childhood's eyes,

Than where Italian earth receives
The partial sunshine's ampler boons, Where vines carve friezes 'neath the eaves,
And, in dark firmaments of leaves,
The orange lifts its golden moons.

THE NOMADES

WHAT Nature makes in any mood
To me is warranted for good, Though long before I learned to see She did not set us moral theses,
And scorned to have her sweet caprices Strait-waistcoated in you or me.

I, who take root and firmly cling,
Thought fixedness the only thing;
Why Nature made the butterflies, (Those dreams of wings that float and hover

At noon the slumberous poppies over,)
Was something hidden from mine eyes,

Till once, upon a rock's brown bosom, Bright as a thorny cactus-blossom,
I saw a butterfly at rest;
Then first of both I felt the beauty;
The airy whim, the grim-set duty,
Each from the other took its best.

Clearer it grew than winter sky
That Nature still had reasons why;
And, shifting sudden as a breeze,
My fancy found no satisfaction,
No antithetic sweet attraction,
So great as in the Nomades.

Seythians, with Nature not at strife, Light Arabs of our complex life,
They build no houses, plant no mills

To utilize Time's sliding river, Content that it flow waste forever,
If they, like it, may have their wills.

An hour they pitch their shifting tents
In thoughts, in feelings, and events ;
Beneath the palm-trees, on the grass, They sing, they dance, make love, and chatter,
Vex the grim temples with their clatter,
And make Truth's fount their looking-
glass.

A picnic life ; from love to love,
From faith to faith they lightly move,
And yet, hard-eyed philosopher,
The flightiest maid that ever hovered
To me your thought-webs fine discovered, No lens to see them through like her.

So witchingly her finger-tips
To Wisdom, as away she trips,
She kisses, waves such sweet farewells To Duty, as she laughs "To-morrow !"
That both from that mad contrast borrow A perfectness found nowhere else.

The beach-bird on its pearly verge Follows and flies the whispering surge, While, in his tent, the rock-stayed shell Awaits the flood's star-timed vibrations,
And both, the flutter and the patience,
The sauntering poet loves them well.

Fulfil so much of God's decree
As works its problem out in thee, Nor dream that in thy breast alone
The conscience of the changeful seasons,
The Will that in the planets reasons
With space-wide logic, has its throne.

Thy virtue makes not vice of mine, Unlike, but none the less divine ;
Thy toil adorns, not chides, my play ;
Nature of sameness is so chary,
With such wild whim the freakish fairy Picks presents for the christening-day.

SELF-STUDY

A PRESENCE both by night and day,
That made my life seem just begun, Yet scarce a presence, rather say
The warning aureole of one.

And yet I felt it everywhere ;
Walked I the woodland's aisles along
It seemed to brush me with its hair ; Bathed I, I heard a mermaid's song.

How sweet it was ! A buttercup Could hold for me a day's delight, A bird could lift my fancy up To ether free from cloud or blight.

Who was the nymph ? Nay, I will see, Methought, and I will know her near ;
If such, divined, her charm can be,
Seen and possessed, how triply dear !

So every magic art I tried,
And spells as numberless as sand, Until, one evening, by my side
I saw her glowing fulness stand.

I turned to clasp her, but "Farewell," Parting she sighed, "we meet no more ;
Not by my hand the curtain fell
That leaves you conscious, wise, and poor.

"Since you have found me out, I go ; Another lover I must find,
Content his happiness to know, Nor strive its secret to unwind."

PICTURES FROM APPLEDORE

In 1854 Lowell contributed to The Crayon, then just started by W. J. Stillman, a poem, My Appledore Gallery, which reappears in part in the following poem under a slightly changed title. In sending the first portion to Mr. Stillman, he wrote : "You may add a note, if you like, saying that Appledore is one of the Isles of Shoals, off Portsmouth, N. H., discovered by the great Captain Smith, and once named after him. A cairn on the apex of Appledore is said to be of his building."

I

A HEAP of bare and splintery crags Tumbled about by lightning and frost, With rifts and chasms and storm-bleached jags,
That wait and growl for a ship to be lost ;
No island, but rather the skeleton Of a wrecked and vengeance-smitten one,
Where, æons ago, with half-shut eye,
The sluggish saurian crawled to die, Gasping under titanic ferns ;

Ribs of rock that seaward jut, Granite shoulders and boulders and snags, Round which, though the winds in heaven be shut,
 The nightmared ocean murmurs and yearns, Welters, and swashes, and tosses, and turns,
 And the dreary black seaweed lolls and wags;
 Only rock from shore to shore,
 Only a moan through the bleak clefts
 blown,
 With sobs in the rifts where the coarse kelp shifts,
 Falling and lifting, tossing and drifting,
 And under all a deep, dull roar, Dying and swelling, forevermore, — Rock and moan and roar alone, And the dread of some nameless thing unknown,
 These make Appledore.

These make Appledore by night:
 Then there are monsters left and right;
 Every rock is a different monster;
 All you have read of, fancied, dreamed,
 When you waked at night because you screamed,
 There they lie for half a mile,
 Jumbled together in a pile, And (though you know they never once stir)
 If you look long, they seem to be moving Just as plainly as plain can be, Crushing and crowding, wading and shov-
 ing
 Out into the awful sea,
 Where you can hear them snort and spout With pauses between, as if they were listening,
 Then tumult anon when the surf breaks glistening
 In the blackness where they wallow about.

II

All this you would scarcely comprehend, Should you see the isle on a sunny day;
 Then it is simple enough in its way, —
 Two rocky bulges, one at each end, With a smaller bulge and a hollow between;
 Patches of whortleberry and bay;
 Accidents of open green,
 Sprinkled with loose slabs square and gray, Like graveyards for ages deserted; a few Unsocial thistles; an elder or two,
 Foamed over with blossoms white as spray;

And on the whole island never a tree
 Save a score of sumachs, high as your knee, That crouch in hollows where they may,
 (The cellars where once stood a village, men say.)

Huddling for warmth, and never grew Tall enough for a peep at the sea;
 A general dazzle of open blue;
 A breeze always blowing and playing rat-tat

With the bow of the ribbon round your hat;
 A score of sheep that do nothing but stare Up or down at you everywhere;
 Three or four cattle that chew the cud Lying about in a listless despair;
 A medrick that makes you look overhead With short, sharp scream, as he sights his prey,

And, dropping straight and swift as lead, Splits the water with sudden thud; —
 This is Appledore by day.

A common island, you will say;
 But stay a moment: only climb
 Up to the highest rock of the isle, Stand there alone for a little while,
 And with gentle approaches it grows sublime,

Dilating slowly as you win
 A sense from the silence to take it in.
 So wide the loneliness, so lucid the air,
 The granite beneath you so savagely bare,
 You well might think you were looking down

From some sky-silenced mountain's crown, Whose waist-belt of pines is wont to tear Locks of wool from the topmost cloud.

Only be sure you go alone,
 For Grandeur is inaccessibly proud,
 And never yet has backward thrown Her veil to feed the stare of a crowd;
 To more than one was never shown That awful front, nor is it fit That she, Cothurnus-shod, stand bowed Until the self-approving pit
 Enjoy the gust of its own wit
 In babbling plaudits cheaply loud;
 She hides her mountains and her sea
 From the harriers of scenery, Who hunt down sunsets, and huddle and
 bay,

Mouthing and mumbling the dying day.

Trust me, 't is something to be cast Face to face with one's Self at last,

To be taken out of the fuss and strife,
The endless clatter of plate and knife,
The bore of books and the bores of the street,

From the singular mess we agree to call
Life,

Where that is best which the most fools vote is,

And planted firm on one's own two feet
So nigh to the great warm heart of God, You almost seem to feel it beat Down from the sunshine and up from the sod;

To be compelled, as it were, to notice
All the beautiful changes and chances Through which the landscape flits and glances,

And to see how the face of common day
Is written all over with tender histories,
When you study it that intenser way
In which a lover looks at his mistress.

Till now you dreamed not what could be
done

With a bit of rock and a ray of sun ;
But look, how fade the lights and shades Of keen bare edge and crevice deep !
How doubtfully it fades and fades,
And glows again, yon craggy steep, O'er which, through color's dreamiest grades,

The musing sunbeams pause and creep !
Now pink it blooms, now glimmers gray,
Now shadows to a filmy blue,
Tries one, tries all, and will not stay,
But flits from opal hue to hue,
And runs through every tenderest range Of change that seems not to be change,
So rare the sweep, so nice the art,
That lays no stress on any part,
But shifts and lingers and persuades;
So soft that sun-brush in the west,
That asks no costlier pigments' aids,
But mingling knobs, flaws, angles, dints, Indifferent of worst or best,
Enchants the cliffs with wraiths and hints
And gracious preludings of tints, Where all seems fixed, yet all evades,
And indefinitely pervades Perpetual movement with perpetual rest !

Away northeast is Boone Island light;
You might mistake it for a ship,
Only it stands too plumb upright,

And like the others does not slip Behind the sea's unsteady brink;
Though, if a cloud-shade chance to dip
Upon it a moment, 't will suddenly sink, Levelled and lost in the darkened main,
Till the sun builds it suddenly up again,
As if with a rub of Aladdin's lamp.
On the mainland you see a misty camp
Of mountains pitched tumultuously:
That one looming so long and large Is Saddleback, and that point you see Over yon low and rounded marge,
Like the boss of a sleeping giant's targe Laid over his breast, is Ossipee;
That shadow there may be Kearsarge; That must be Great Haystack; I love
these names,

Wherewith the lonely farmer tames Nature to mute companionship
With his own mind's domestic mood,
And strives the surly world to clip
In the arms of familiar habitude.
'T is well he could not contrive to make A Saxon of Agamenticus:
He glowers there to the north of us, Wrapt in his blanket of blue haze, Unconvertibly savage, and scorns to take The white man's baptism or his ways.
Him first on shore the coaster divines Through the early gray, and sees him shake

The morning mist from his scalp-lock of pines;

Him first the skipper makes out in the west,

Ere the earliest sunstreak shoots tremulous,

Plashing with orange the palpitant lines
Of mutable billow, crest after crest,
And murmurs Agamenticus !
As if it were the name of a saint.
But is that a mountain playing cloud,
Or a cloud playing mountain, just there, so faint ?

Look along over the low right shoulder
Of Agamenticus into that crowd Of brassy thunderheads behind it; Now you have caught it, but, ere you are older

By half an hour, you will lose it and find it A score of times; while you look 't is gone,
And, just as you 've given it up, anon
It is there again, till your weary eyes Fancy they see it waver and rise,
With its brother clouds; it is Agiochook,

There if you seek not, and gone if you
look,
Ninety miles off as the eagle flies.

But mountains make not all the shore
The mainland shows to Appledore; Eight miles the heaving water spreads To a long, low coast with beaches and heads

That run through unimagined mazes,
As the lights and shades and magical hazes Put them away or bring them near, Shimmering, sketched out for thirty miles Between two capes that waver like threads,
And sink in the ocean, and reappear, Crumbled and melted to little isles, With filmy trees, that seem the mere Half-fancies of drowsy atmosphere;
And see the beach there, where it is Flat as a threshing-floor, beaten and packed With the flashing flails of weariless seas, How it lifts and looms to a precipice, O'er whose square front, a dream, no
more,

The steepened sand-stripes seem to pour,
A murmurless vision of cataract;
You almost fancy you hear a roar, Fitful and faint from the distance wander-
ing;
But 't is only the blind old ocean maunder-
ing,
Raking the shingle to and fro, Aimlessly clutching and letting go
The kelp-haired sedges of Appledore, Slipping down with a sleepy forgetting,
And anon his ponderous shoulder setting,
With a deep, hoarse pant against Apple-dore.

IV

Eastward as far as the eye can see,
Still eastward, eastward, endlessly,
The sparkle and tremor of purple sea
That rises before you, a flickering hill,
On and on to the shut of the sky,
And beyond, you fancy it sloping until The same multitudinous throb and thrill That vibrate under your dizzy eye In ripples of orange and pink are sent Where the popped sails doze on the yard,
And the clumsy junk and proa lie Sunk deep with precious woods and nard, Mid the palmy isles of the Orient.
Those leaning towers of clouded white
On the farthest brink of doubtful ocean,

That shorten and shorten out of sight,
Yet seem on the selfsame spot to stay, Receding with a motionless motion, Fading to dubious films of gray, Lost, dimly found, then vanished wholly,
Will rise again, the great world under,
First films, then towers, then high-heaped clouds,

Whose nearing outlines sharpen slowly
Into tall ships with cobweb shrouds, That fill long Mongol eyes with wonder, Crushing the violet wave to spray Past some low headland of Cathay; — What was that sigh which seemed so near, Chilling your fancy to the core?
'T is only the sad old sea you hear,
That seems to seek forevermore Something it cannot find, and so, Sighing, seeks on, and tells its woe
To the pitiless breakers of Appledore.

How looks Appledore in a storm?
I have seen it when its crags seemed frantic,

Butting against the mad Atlantic,
When surge on surge would heap enorme, Cliffs of emerald topped with snow,
That lifted and lifted, and then let go A great white avalanche of thunder, A grinding, blinding, deafening ire Monadnock might have trembled under;
And the island, whose rock-roots pierce below

To where they are warmed with the central fire,
You could feel its granite fibres racked,
As it seemed to plunge with a shudder and thrill

Right at the breast of the swooping hill,
And to rise again snorting a cataract
Of rage-froth from every cranny and ledge, While the sea drew its breath in hoarse and deep,
And the next vast breaker curled its edge, Gathering itself for a mightier leap.

North, east, and south there are reefs and breakers

You would never dream of in smooth
weather,
That toss and gore the sea for acres, Bellowing and gnashing and snarling together;

Look northward, where Duck Island lies,

And ever its crown you will see arise,
 Against a background of slaty skies,
 A row of pillars still and white, That glimmer, and then are gone from
 sight,
 As if the moon should suddenly kiss, While you crossed the gusty desert by
 night,
 The long colonnades of Persepolis;
 Look southward for White Island light, The lantern stands ninety feet o'er the
 tide;
 There is first a half-mile of tumult and
 fight,
 Of dash and roar and tumble and fright,
 And surging bewilderment wild and wide,
 Where the breakers struggle left and right,
 Then a mile or more of rushing sea,
 And then the lighthouse slim and lone;
 And whenever the weight of ocean is thrown
 Full and fair on White Island head, A great mist-jotun you will see Lifting himself up silently High and huge o'er the lighthouse top,
 With hands of wavering spray outspread, Groping after the little tower, That seems to shrink and shorten and cower,
 Till the monster's arms of a sudden drop,
 And silently and fruitlessly
 He sinks back into the sea.

You, meanwhile, where drenched you stand, Awaken once more to the rush and roar,
 And on the rock-point tighten your hand,
 As you turn and see a valley deep,
 That was not there a moment before,
 Suck rattling down between you and a heap
 Of toppling billow, whose instant fall Must sink the whole island once for all,
 Or watch the silenter, stealthier seas Feeling their way to you more and more; If they once should clutch you high as the knees,
 They would whirl you down like a sprig of kelp,
 Beyond all reach of hope or help; —
 And such in a storm is Appledore.

'T is the sight of a lifetime to behold
 The great shorn sun as you see it now, Across eight miles of undulant gold That widens landward, weltered and rolled.

With freaks of shadow and crimson stains
 To see the solid mountain brow
 As it notches the disk, and gains and gains, Until there comes, you scarce know when,
 A tremble of fire o'er the parted lips Of cloud and mountain, which vanishes
 then
 From the body of day the sun-soul slips And the face of earth darkens; but now the strips
 Of western vapor, straight and thin,
 From which the horizon's swerings win
 A grace of contrast, take fire and burn Like splinters of touchwood, whose edges a mould
 Of ashes o'erfeathers; northward turn
 For an instant, and let your eye grow cold On Agamenticus, and when once more You look, 't is as if the land-breeze, growing,
 From the smouldering brands the film were blowing,
 And brightening them down to the very core;
 Yet they momentarily cool and dampen and deaden,
 The crimson turns golden, the gold turns leaden,
 Hardening into one black bar
 O'er which, from the hollow heaven afar, Shoots a splinter of light like diamond, Half seen, half fancied; by and by Beyond whatever is most beyond
 In the uttermost waste of desert sky, Grows a star;
 And over it, visible spirit of dew, —
 Ah, stir not, speak not, hold your breath, Or surely the miracle vanisheth, — The new moon, tranced in unspeakable
 blue !
 No frail illusion; this were true,
 Rather, to call it the canoe Hollowed out of a single pearl,
 That floats us from the Present's whirl Back to those beings which were ours, When wishes were winged things like powers !
 Call it not light, that mystery tender,
 Which broods upon the brooding ocean That flush of ecstasies surrender To indefinable emotion,
 That glory, mellowed than a mist
 Of pearl dissolved with amethyst, Which rims Square Rock, like what they paint

Of mitigated heavenly splendor Round the stern forehead of a Saint !

No more a vision, reddened, largened,
The moon dips toward her mountain nest,
And, fringing it with palest argent, Slow sheathes herself behind the margent
Of that long cloud-bar in the West, Whose nether edge, erelong, you see The silvery chrim in turn anoint,
And then the tiniest rosy point Touched doubtfully and timidly Into the dark blue's chilly strip,
As some mute, wondering thing below,
Awakened by the thrilling glow, Might, looking up, see Dian dip
One lucent foot's delaying tip
In Latmian fountains long ago.

Knew you what silence was before ?
Here is no startle of dreaming bird
That sings in his sleep, or strives to sing;
Here is no sough of branches stirred,
Nor noise of any living thing,
Such as one hears by night on shore;
Only, now and then, a sigh,
With fickle intervals between,
Sometimes far, and sometimes nigh,
Such as Andromeda might have heard,
And fancied the huge sea-beast unseen Turning in sleep; it is the sea
That welters and wavers uneasily Round the lonely reefs of Appledore.

THE WIND-HARP

"Your inspiration is still to you a living mistress — make her immortal in her promptings and her consolations by imaging her truly in art. Mine looks at me with eyes of paler flame and beckons across a gulf. You came into my loneliness like an incarnate aspiration. And it is dreary enough sometimes, for a mountain-peak on whose snow your foot makes the first mortal print is not so lonely as a room full of happy faces from which one is missing forever. This was originally the fifth stanza of The Windharp.

O tress ! that so oft in my heart hast lain, Rocked to rest within rest by its thankful beating, Say, which is harder — to bear the pain Of laughter and light, or to wait in vain
'Neath the unleaved tree the impossible meeting ?
If Death's lips be icy, Life gives, iwis, Some kisses more clay-cold and darkening than his !

Forgive me, but you spoke of it first." J. R. L. to W. J. Stillman, December 7, 1854.

I TREASURE in secret some long, fine
hair
Of tenderest brown, but so inwardly golden
I half used to fancy the sunshine there,
So shy, so shifting, so waywardly rare, Was only caught for the moment and holden
While I could say Dearest ! and kiss it, and then
In pity let go to the summer again.

I twisted this magic in gossamer strings Over a wind-harp's Delphian hollow;
Then called to the idle breeze that swings All day in the pine-tops, and clings, and sings
'Mid the musical leaves, and said, "Oh, follow
The will of those tears that deepen my
words,
And fly to my window to waken these chords."

So they trembled to life, and, doubtfully Feeling their way to my sense, sang,
"Say whether
They sit all day by the greenwood tree,
The lover and loved, as it wont to be,
When we —" But grief conquered, and all together
They swelled such weird murmur as haunts a shore
Of some planet dispeopled, — "Never-
more !"

Then from deep in the past, as seemed to
me,
The strings gathered sorrow and sang forsaken,
"One lover still waits 'neath the greenwood tree,
But 't is dark," and they shuddered,
"where lieth she Dark and cold ! Forever must one be taken ?"
But I groaned, "O harp of all ruth bereft,
This Scripture is sadder, — 'the other left' !"

There murmured, as if one strove to speak,
And tears came instead; then the sad tones wandered
And altered among the uncertain chords

In a troubled doubt between sorrow and words;

At last with themselves they questioned and pondered,

"Hereafter? — who knoweth?" and so they sighed

Down the long steps that lead to silence and died.

AUF WIEDERSEHEN

SUMMER

THE little gate was reached at last, Half hid in lilacs down the lane;
She pushed it wide, and, as she past,
A wistful look she backward cast,
And said, — "Auf wiedersehen!"

With hand on latch, a vision white Lingered reluctant, and again Half doubting if she did aright, Soft as the dews that fell that night,
She said, — "Auf wiedersehen!"

The lamp's clear gleam flits up the stair;
I linger in delicious pain;
Ah, in that chamber, whose rich air
To breathe in thought I scarcely dare, Thinks she, — "Auf wiedersehen?" . . .

'T is thirteen years; once more I press
The turf that silences the lane;
I hear the rustle of her dress,
I smell the lilacs, and — ah, yes,
I hear "Auf wiedersehen!"

Sweet piece of bashful maiden art!
The English words had seemed too fain,
But these — they drew us heart to heart,
Yet held us tenderly apart;
She said, "Auf wiedersehen!"

PALINODE

AUTUMN

STILL thirteen years: 't is autumn now
On field and hill, in heart and brain;
The naked trees at evening sough;
The leaf to the forsaken bough Sighs not, — "Auf wiedersehen!"

Two watched yon oriole's pendent dome,
That now is void, and dank with rain,
And one, — oh, hope more frail than foam!
The bird to his deserted home Sings not, — "Auf wiedersehen!"

The loath gate swings with rusty creak;
Once, parting there, we played at pain;
There came a parting, when the weak And fading lips essayed to speak Vainly, — "Auf wiedersehen!"

Somewhere is comfort, somewhere faith, Though thou in outer dark remain;
One sweet sad voice ennobles death,
And still, for eighteen centuries saith Softly, — "Auf wiedersehen!"

If earth another grave must bear, Yet heaven hath won a sweeter strain,
And something whispers my despair,
That, from an orient chamber there, Floats down, "Auf wiedersehen!"

AFTER THE BURIAL

Lowell's second child, Rose, died after a week's illness in the spring of 1850. Her father wrote shortly after her death to Mr. Gay: "She was very beautiful — fair, with large dark-gray eyes and fine features. Her smile was especially charming, and she was full of smiles till her sickness began. Dear little child, she had never spoken, only smiled. To show you that I am not unable to go along with you in the feeling expressed in your letter, I will copy a few verses out of my common-place book." The verses were the first form of the following poem, and will be found in the notes at the end of this volume. The poem, with its personal feeling over a universal human experience, found its way into many hearts. It "has roused," Lowell wrote in 1875, "strange echoes in men who assured me they were generally insensible to poetry. After all, the only stuff a solitary man has to spin is himself."

YES, faith is a goodly anchor;
When skies are sweet as a psalm,
At the bows it lolls so stalwart,
In its bluff, broad-shouldered calm.

And when over breakers to leeward
The tattered surges are hurled,
It may keep our head to the tempest,
With its grip on the base of the world.

But, after the shipwreck, tell me What help in its iron thews, Still true to the broken hawser,
 Deep down among sea-weed and ooze ?

In the breaking gulfs of sorrow,
 When the helpless feet stretch out And find in the depths of darkness
 No footing so solid as doubt,

Then better one spar of Memory,
 One broken plank of the Past,
 That our human heart may cling to,
 Though hopeless of shore at last !

To the spirit its splendid conjectures,
 To the flesh its sweet despair,
 Its tears o'er the thin-worn locket
 With its anguish of deathless hair !

Immortal ? I feel it and know it, Who doubts it of such as she ?
 But that is the pang's very secret, — Immortal away from me.

There 's a narrow ridge in the graveyard Would scarce stay a child in his race, But to me and my thought it is wider Than the star-sown vague of Space.

Your logic, my friend, is perfect,
 Your moral most dreadfully true;
 But, since the earth clashed on her coffin,
 I keep hearing that, and not you.

Console if you will, I can bear it;
 'T is a well-meant alms of breath;
 But not all the preaching since Adam Has made Death other than Death.

It is pagan; but wait till you feel it, —
 That jar of our earth, that dull shock
 When the ploughshare of deeper passion Tears down to our primitive rock.

Communion in spirit ! Forgive me,
 But I, who am earthly and weak, Would give all my incomes from dreamland
 For a touch of her hand on my cheek.

That little shoe in the corner,
 So worn and wrinkled and brown,
 With its emptiness confutes you,
 And argues your wisdom down.

THE DEAD HOUSE

"I have a notion that the inmates of a house should never be changed. When the first occupants go out it should be burned, and a stone set up with 'Sacred to the Memory of a Home' on it. Suppose the body were eternal, and that when one spirit went out another took the lease. How frightful the strange expression of the eyes would be ! I fancy sometimes that the look in the eyes of a familiar house changes when aliens have come into it. For certainly a dwelling adapts itself to its occupants. The front door of a hospitable man opens easily and looks broad, and you can read Welcome ! on every step that leads to it.

"I stopped there and tried to put that into verse. I have only half succeeded, and I shall not give it to you. I shall copy it and thrust it into Jane's letter." J. R. L. to C. E. Norton, August 31, 1858.

A similar fancy appears in an earlier letter to Mrs. Francis G. Shaw, to whom Lowell wrote January 11, 1853: "I spent Sunday with Edmund Quincy at Dedham, and, as I came back over the rail yesterday, I was roused from a reverie by seeing 'West Roxbury Station' written up over the door of a kind of Italian villa at which we stopped. I almost twisted my head off looking for the house on the hill. There it stood in mourning still, just as Frank painted it. The color suited my mood exactly. The eyes of the house were shut, the welcoming look it had was gone; it was dead. I am a Platonist about houses. They get to my eye a shape from the souls that inhabit them. My friends' dwellings seem as peculiar to them as their bodies, looks, and motions. People have no right to sell their dead houses; they should burn them as they used to burn corpses. . . . I have buried that house now and flung my pious handful of earth over it and set up a headstone — and I shall never look up to the hill-top again, let me pass it never so often."

HERE once my step was quickened, Here beckoned the opening door,
 And welcome thrilled from the threshold
 To the foot it had known before.

A glow came forth to meet me
 From the flame that laughed in the grate,
 And shadows adance on the ceiling, Danced blither with mine for a mate.

"I claim you, old friend," yawned the armchair,
 "This corner, you know, is your seat;"

"Rest your slippers on me," beamed the fender,

"I brighten at touch of your feet."

"We know the practised finger,"

Said the books, "that seems like brain;"

And the shy page rustled the secret

It had kept till I came again.

Sang the pillow, "My down once quivered

On nightingales' throats that flew

Through moonlit gardens of Hafiz

To gather quaint dreams for you."

Ah me, where the Past sowed heart's-ease,

The Present plucks rue for us men!

I come back : that scar unhealing

Was not in the churchyard then.

But, I think, the house is unaltered,

I will go and beg to look

At the rooms that were once familiar

To my life as its bed to a brook.

Unaltered ! Alas for the sameness

That makes the change but more !

'T is a dead man I see in the mirrors,

'T is his tread that chills the floor !

To learn such a simple lesson,

Need I go to Paris and Rome,

That the many make the household,

But only one the home ?

'T was just a womanly presence,

An influence unexpressed,

But a rose she had worn, on my grave-sod

Were more than long life with the rest !

'T was a smile, 't was a garment's rustle,

'T was nothing that I can phrase,

But the whole dumb dwelling grew conscious,

And put on her looks and ways.

Were it mine I would close the shutters,

Like lids when the life is fled,

And the funeral fire should wind it,

This corpse of a home that is dead.

For it died that autumn morning

When she, its soul, was borne

To lie all dark on the hillside

That looks over woodland and corn.

A MOOD

I go to the ridge in the forest

I haunted in days gone by,

But thou, O Memory, pourest

No magical drop in mine eye,

Nor the gleam of the secret restorest

That hath faded from earth and sky.

A Presence autumnal and sober

Invests every rock and tree,

And the aureole of October

Lights the maples, but darkens me.

Pine in the distance,

Patient through sun or rain,

Meeting with graceful persistence,

With yielding but rooted resistance,

The northwind's wrench and strain,

No memory of past existence

Brings thee pain;

Right for the zenith heading,

Friendly with heat or cold,

Thine arms to the influence spreading

Of the heavens, just from of old,

Thou only aspirest the more,

Unregretful the old leaves shedding

That fringed thee with music before,

And deeper thy roots embedding

In the grace and the beauty of yore;

Thou sigh'st not, "Alas, I am older,

The green of last summer is sear !"

But loftier, hopefuller, bolder,

Winnest broader horizons each year.

To me 't is not cheer thou art singing:

There's a sound of the sea,

O mournful tree,

In thy boughs forever clinging,

And the far-off roar

Of waves on the shore

A shattered vessel flinging.

As thou musest still of the ocean

On which thou must float at last,

And seem'st to foreknow

The shipwreck's woe

And the sailor wrenched from the broken mast,

Do I, in this vague emotion,

This sadness that will not pass,

Though the air throb with wings,

And the field laughs and sings,

Do I forebode, alas !

The ship-building longer and wearier,

The voyage's struggle and strife,
And then the darker and drearier Wreck of a broken life ?

THE VOYAGE TO VINLAND

In the letter to Mr. Norton, quoted at the beginning of this section, reference is made to The Voyage to Vinland, which Lowell had some thought of making the title-poem of the volume. In the same letter he says further regarding it: "Part of [this poem], you remember, was written eighteen years ago. I meant to have made it much longer, but maybe it is better as it is. I elapt a beginning upon it, patched it in the middle, and then got to what has always been my favorite part of the plan. This was to be a prophecy by Gudrida, a woman who went with them, of the future America. I have written in an unrhymed alliterated measure, in very short verse and stanzas of five lines each. It does not aim at following the law of the Icelandic alliterated stave, but hints at it and also at the asonante, without being properly either. But it runs well and is melodious, and we think it pretty good here, as does also Howells. Well, after that, of course, I was all for alliteration." The poem had apparently first borne the title of Leif's Voyage, as he writes of that poem to Mr. Briggs in 1850.

BIÖRN'S BECKONERS

Now Biörn, the son of Heriulf, had ill days Because the heart within him seethed with blood
That would not be allayed with any toil, Whether of war or hunting or the oar,
But was anhungered for some joy untried:
For the brain grew not weary with the limbs,
But, while they slept, still hammered like a Troll,
Building all night a bridge of solid dream Between him and some purpose of his soul, Or will to find a purpose. With the dawn The sleep-laid timbers, crumbled to soft
mist, Denied all foothold. But the dream remained,
And every night with yellow-bearded kings His sleep was haunted, — mighty men of
old,
Once young as he, now ancient like the gods,

And safe as stars in all men's memories.
Strange sagas read he in their sea-blue eyes Cold as the sea, grandly compassionless; Like life, they made him eager and then mocked.

Nay, broad awake, they would not let him
be;

They shaped themselves gigantic in the
mist,

They rose far-beckoning in the lamps of heaven,

They whispered invitation in the winds, And breath came from them, mightier than
the wind,

To strain the lagging sails of his resolve, Till that grew passion which before was wish,

And youth seemed all too costly to be staked

On the soiled cards wherewith men played their game,

Letting Time pocket up the larger life, Lost with base gain of raiment, food, and roof.

"What helpeth lightness of the feet?"
they said,

"Oblivion runs with swifter foot than
they;

Or strength of sinew? New men come as
strong,

And those sleep nameless; or renown in
war?

Swords grave no name on the long-memoried rock

But moss shall hide it; they alone who wring

Some secret purpose from the unwilling gods

Survive in song for yet a little while To vex, like us, the dreams of later men, Ourselves a dream, and dreamlike all we did."

THORWALD'S LAY

So Biörn went comfortless but for his
thought,

And by his thought the more discomforted, Till Eric Thurlson kept his Yule-tide feast:
And thither came he, called among the rest, Silent, lone-minded, a church-door to mirth:
But, ere deep draughts forbade such serious song

As the grave Skald might chant nor after blush.

Then Eric looked at Thorwald where he sat Mute as a cloud amid the stormy hall,
 And said: "O Skald, sing now an olden
 song,
 Such as our fathers heard who led great lives;
 And, as the bravest on a shield is borne Along the waving host that shouts him king, So rode their thrones upon the thronging
 seas!"

Then the old man arose; white-haired he stood,
 White-bearded, and with eyes that looked afar
 From their still region of perpetual snow, Beyond the little smokes and stirs of men:
 His head was bowed with gathered flakes
 of years,
 As winter bends the sea-foreboding pine, But something triumphed in his brow and
 eye,
 Which whoso saw it could not see and crouch:

Loud rang the emptied beakers as he mused, Brooding his eyried thoughts; then, as an eagle
 Circles smooth-winged above the windvexed woods,
 So wheeled his soul into the air of song High o'er the stormy hall; and thus he sang:

"The fletcher for his arrow-shaft picks out Wood closest-grained, long-seasoned, straight as light;
 And from a quiver full of such as these The wary Bowman, matched against his peers, Long doubting, singles yet once more the
 best.
 Who is it needs such flawless shafts as Fate?

What archer of his arrows is so choice,
 Or hits the white so surely? They are men,
 The chosen of her quiver; nor for her Will every reed suffice, or cross-grained stick

At random from life's vulgar fagot plucked: Such answer household ends; but she will have Souls straight and clear, of toughest fibre, sound
 Down to the heart of heart; from these she strips
 All needless stuff, all sapwood; seasons
 them;

From circumstance untoward feathers plucks Crumpled and cheap; and barbs with iron
 will:
 The hour that passes is her quiver-boy:
 When she draws bow, 't is not across the wind,
 Nor 'gainst the sun her haste-snatched arrow sings,
 For sun and wind have plighted faith to
 her:
 Ere men have heard the sinew twang, behold
 In the butt's heart her trembling messenger!

"The song is old and simple that I sing;
 But old and simple are despised as cheap, Though hardest to achieve of human things:
 Good were the days of yore, when men were tried
 By ring of shields, as now by ring of words; But while the gods are left, and hearts of
 men,
 And wide-doored ocean, still the days are
 good.
 Still o'er the earth hastes Opportunity,
 Seeking the hardy soul that seeks for her.
 Be not abroad, nor deaf with household cares
 That chatter loudest as they mean the
 least;
 Swift-willed is thrice-willed; late means nevermore;
 Impatient is her foot, nor turns again."
 He ceased; upon his bosom sank his beard Sadly, as one who oft had seen her pass Nor stayed her: and forthwith the frothy
 tide
 Of interrupted wassail roared along.
 But Biörn, the son of Heriulf, sat apart Musing, and, with his eyes upon the fire, Saw shapes of arrows, lost as soon as seen.
 "A ship," he muttered, "is a winged bridge That leadeth every way to man's desire,
 And ocean the wide gate to manful luck."
 And then with that resolve his heart was bent,
 Which, like a humming shaft, through many a stripe
 Of day and night, across the unpathwayed
 seas
 Shot the brave prow that cut on Vinland sands
 The first rune in the Saga of the West.

GUDRIDA'S PROPHECY

Four weeks they sailed, a speck in sky-shut seas,

Life, where was never life that knew itself,
But tumbled lubber-like in blowing whales;
Thought, where the like had never been before

Since Thought primeval brooded the abyss; Alone as men were never in the world.

They saw the icy foundlings of the sea,
White cliffs of silence, beautiful by day,
Or looming, sudden-perilous, at night In monstrous hush; or sometimes in the dark
The waves broke ominous with paly gleams Crushed by the prow in sparkles of cold fire.

Then came green stripes of sea that promised land

But brought it not, and on the thirtieth day Low in the west were wooded shores like cloud.

They shouted as men shout with sudden hope;

But Biörn was silent, such strange loss there is Between the dream's fulfilment and the dream,

Such sad abatement in the goal attained.

Then Gudrida, that was a prophetess, Rapt with strange influence from Atlantis, sang:

Her words: the vision was the dreaming shore's.

Looms there the New Land: Locked in the shadow Long the gods shut it, Niggards of newness
They, the o'er-old.

Little it looks there,
Slim as a cloud-streak;
It shall fold peoples
Even as a shepherd
Foldeth his flock.

Silent it sleeps now;
Great ships shall seek it,
Swarming as salmon;
Noise of its numbers
Two seas shall hear.

Men from the Northland,
Men from the Southland, Haste empty-handed;
No more than manhood
Bring they, and hands.

Dark hair and fair hair,
Red blood and blue blood,
There shall be mingled;
Force of the ferment Makes the New Man.

Pick of all kindreds, Kings' blood shall theirs be,
Shoots of the eldest Stock upon Midgard, Sons of the poor.

Them waits the New Land;
They shall subdue it,
Leaving their sons' sons
Space for the body,
Space for the soul.

Leaving their sons' sons
All things save song-craft, Plant long in growing,
Thrusting its tap-root Deep in the Gone.

Here men shall grow up Strong from self-helping;
Eyes for the present
Bring they as eagles', Blind to the Past.

They shall make over Creed, law, and custom;
Driving-men, doughty Builders of empire,
Builders of men.

Here is no singer;
What should they sing of?
They, the unresting?
Labor is ugly,
Loathsome is change.

These the old gods hate,
Dwellers in dream-land,
Drinking delusion
Out of the empty Skull of the Past.

These hate the old gods,
Warring against them;
Fatal to Odin,
Here the wolf Fenrir Lieth in wait.

Here the gods' Twilight Gathers, earth-gulping; Blackness of battle,
Fierce till the Old World
Flare up in fire.

Doubt not, my Northmen;
Fate loves the fearless;
Fools, when their roof-tree Falls, think it doomsday;
Firm stands the sky.

Over the ruin
See I the promise;
Crisp waves the cornfield, Peace-walled, the homestead Waits open-doored.

There lies the New Land;
Yours to behold it,
Not to possess it;
Slowly Fate's perfect
Fulness shall come.

Then from your strong loins Seed shall be scattered, Men to the marrow,
Wilderness tamers,
Walkers of waves.

Jealous, the old gods
Shut it in shadow,
Wisely they ward it,
Egg of the serpent,
Bane to them all.

Stronger and sweeter
New gods shall seek it, Fill it with man-folk Wise for the future,
Wise from the past.

Here all is all men's,
Save only Wisdom;
King he that wins her;
Him hail they helmsman,
Highest of heart.

Might makes no master Here any longer;
Sword is not swayer;
Here e'en the gods are Selfish no more.

Walking the New Earth, Lo, a divine One Greeted all men godlike, Calls them his kindred,
He, the Divine.

Is it Thor's hammer Rays in his right hand?
Weaponless walks he;
It is the White Christ, Stronger than Thor.

Here shall a realm rise Mighty in manhood;
Justice and Mercy
Here set a stronghold Safe without spear.

Weak was the Old World, Wearily war-fenced;
Out of its ashes,
Strong as the morning, Springeth the New.

Beauty of promise,
Promise of beauty,
Safe in the silence
Sleep thou, till cometh Light to thy lids!

Thee shall awaken Flame from the furnace, Bath of all brave ones,
Cleanser of conscience,
Welder of will.

Lowly shall love thee,
Thee, open-handed!
Stalwart shall shield thee,
Thee, worth their best blood, Waif of the West!

Then shall come singers,
Singing no swan-song, Birth-carols, rather,
Meet for the man child Mighty of bone.

MAHMOOD THE IMAGE- BREAKER

OLD events have modern meanings; only that survives
Of past history which finds kindred in all hearts and lives.

Mahmood once, the idol-breaker, spreader of the Faith,
Was at Sumnat tempted sorely, as the legend saith.

In the great pagoda's centre, monstrous and abhorred, Granite on a throne of granite, sat the temple's lord.

Mahmood paused a moment, silenced by the silent face
That, with eyes of stone unwavering, awed the ancient place.

Then the Brahmins knelt before him, by his doubt made bold, Pledging for their idol's ransom countless gems and gold.

Gold was yellow dirt to Mahmood, but of precious use, Since from it the roots of power suck a potent juice.

"Were yon stone alone in question, this would please me well," Mahmood said; "but, with the block there,
I my truth must sell.

"Wealth and rule slip down with Fortune, as her wheel turns round;
He who keeps his faith, he only cannot be discrowned.

"Little were a change of station, loss of life or crown,
But the wreck were past retrieving if the Man fell down."

So his iron mace he lifted, smote with might and main,
And the idol, on the pavement tumbling, burst in twain.

Luck obeys the downright striker; from the hollow core,
Fifty times the Brahmins' offer deluged all the floor.

INVITA MINERVA

THE Bardling came where by a river grew The pennoned reeds, that, as the westwind blew, Gleamed and sighed plaintively, as if they knew
What music slept enchanted in each stem, Till Pan should choose some happy one of them,
And with wise lips enliven it through and through.

The Bardling thought, "A pipe is all I
need;
Once I have sought me out a clear, smooth reed,
And shaped it to my fancy, I proceed To breathe such strains as, yonder mid the rocks,
The strange youth blows, that tends Admetus' flocks,
And all the maidens shall to me pay heed."

The summer day he spent in questful
round,
And many a reed he marred, but never found A conjuring-spell to free the imprisoned
sound;
At last his vainly wearied limbs he laid Beneath a sacred laurel's flickering shade, And sleep about his brain her cobweb
wound.

Then strode the mighty Mother through his dreams, Saying: "The reeds along a thousand streams
Are mine, and who is he that plots and schemes
To snare the melodies wherewith my breath Sounds through the double pipes of Life and Death, Atoning what to men mad discord seems?"

"He seeks not me, but I seek oft in vain For him who shall my voiceful reeds constrain,

And make them utter their melodious pain;
He flies the immortal gift, for well he knows

His life of life must with its overflows Flood the unthankful pipe, nor come again.

"Thou fool, who dost my harmless subjects
wrong,

'T is not the singer's wish that makes the
song:

The rhythmic beauty wanders dumb, how
long,

Nor stoops to any daintiest instrument, Till, found its mated lips, their sweet consent

Makes mortal breath than Time and Fate more strong."

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH

This poem, written apparently in the winter of 1849-50, was to have been included in the projected work, The Nooning.

I

'T is a woodland enchanted !
By no sadder spirit Than blackbirds and thrushes, That whistle to cheer it All day in the bushes,
This woodland is haunted:
And in a small clearing,
Beyond sight or hearing
Of human annoyance,
The little fount gushes,
First smoothly, then dashes
And gurgles and flashes,
To the maples and ashes Confiding its joyance; Unconscious confiding,
Then, silent and glossy, Slips winding and hiding
Through alder-stems mossy, Through gossamer roots Fine as nerves,
That tremble, as shoots
Through their magnetized curves
The allurements delicious Of the water's capricious Thrills, gushes, and swerves.

'T is a woodland enchanted !
I am writing no fiction;

And this fount, its sole daughter,
To the woodland was granted To pour holy water
And win benediction;
In summer-noon flushes,
When all the wood hushes, Blue dragon-flies knitting
To and fro in the sun,
With sidelong jerk flitting Sink down on the rushes,
And, motionless sitting,
Hear it bubble and run,
Hear its low inward singing,
With level wings swinging On green tasselled rushes,
To dream in the sun.

'T is a woodland enchanted !
The great August noonlight !
Through myriad rifts slanted, Leaf and bole thickly sprinkles
With flickering gold;
There, in warm August gloaming,
With quick, silent brightenings,
From meadow-lands roaming,
The firefly twinkles
His fitful heat-lightnings;
There the magical moonlight With meek, saintly glory
Steeps summit and wold;
There whippoorwills plain in the solitudes hoary
With lone cries that wander
Now hither, now yonder,
Like souls doomed of old
To a mild purgatory;
But through noonlight and moonlight
The little fount tinkles Its silver saints'-bells,
That no sprite ill-boding May make his abode in Those innocent dells.

'T is a woodland enchanted !
When the phebe scarce whistles Once an hour to his fellow,
And, where red lilies flaunted, Balloons from the thistles Tell summer's disasters,
The butterflies yellow,
As caught in an eddy
Of air's silent ocean,

Sink, waver, and steady O'er goats'-beard and asters, Like souls of dead flowers,
 With aimless emotion
 Still lingering unready
 To leave their old bowers;
 And the fount is no dumber,
 But still gleams and flashes,
 And gurgles and plashes,
 To the measure of summer;
 The butterflies hear it,
 And spell-bound are holden,
 Still balancing near it O'er the goats'-beard so golden.

'T is a woodland enchanted!
 A vast silver willow,
 I know not how planted, (This wood is enchanted, And full of surprises,) Stands stemming a billow,
 A motionless billow
 Of ankle-deep mosses;
 Two great roots it crosses
 To make a round basin,
 And there the Fount rises;
 Ah, too pure a mirror
 For one sick of error
 To see his sad face in!
 No dew-drop is stiller
 In its lupin-leaf setting Than this water moss-bounded;
 But a tiny sand-pillar
 From the bottom keeps jetting,
 And mermaid ne'er sounded Through the wreaths of a shell, Down amid crimson dulces
 In some cavern of ocean,
 A melody sweeter
 Than the delicate pulses,
 The soft, noiseless metre,
 The pause and the swell
 Of that musical motion:
 I recall it, not see it;
 Could vision be clearer?
 Half I'm fain to draw nearer Half tempted to flee it;
 The sleeping Past wake not,
 Beware!
 One forward step take not,
 Ah! break not
 That quietude rare!
 By my step unaffrighted
 A thrush hops before it,

And o'er it
 A birch hangs delighted, Dipping, dipping, dipping its tremulous
 hair;
 Pure as the fountain, once I came to the place, (How dare I draw nearer?)
 I bent o'er its mirror,
 And saw a child's face
 Mid locks of bright gold in it;
 Yes, pure as this fountain once, — Since, how much error!
 Too holy a mirror
 For the man to behold in it His harsh, bearded countenance!

'T is a woodland enchanted!
 Ah, fly unreturning!
 Yet stay; —
 'T is a woodland enchanted,
 Where wonderful chances
 Have sway;
 Luck flees from the cold one,
 But leaps to the bold one Half-way;
 Why should I be daunted?
 Still the smooth mirror glances,
 Still the amber sand dances,
 One look, — then away!
 O magical glass!
 Canst keep in thy bosom Shades of leaf and of blossom
 When summer days pass,
 So that when thy wave hardens
 It shapes as it pleases, Unharm'd by the breezes,
 Its fine hanging gardens?
 Hast those in thy keeping,
 And canst not uncover, Enchantedly sleeping,
 The old shade of thy lover?
 It is there! I have found it!
 He wakes, the long sleeper!
 The pool is grown deeper,
 The sand dance is ending,
 The white floor sinks, blending With skies that below me Are deepening and bending,
 And a child's face alone
 That seems not to know me,
 With hair that fades golden
 In the heaven-glow round it, Looks up at my own;
 Ah, glimpse through the portal

That leads to the throne,
 That opes the child's olden Regions Elysian!
 Ah, too holy vision
 For thy skirts to be holden
 By soiled hand of mortal!
 It wavers, it scatters,
 'T is gone past recalling!
 A tear's sudden falling
 The magic cup shatters, Breaks the spell of the waters,
 And the sand cone once more,
 With a ceaseless renewing,
 Its dance is pursuing On the silvery floor,
 O'er and o'er,
 With a noiseless and ceaseless renewing.

'T is a woodland enchanted!
 If you ask me, Where is it?
 I can but make answer,
 "'T is past my disclosing;"
 Not to choice is it granted By sure paths to visit The still pool enclosing Its blithe little dancer;
 But in some day, the rarest
 Of many Septembers,
 When the pulses of air rest,
 And all things lie dreaming
 In drowsy haze steaming
 From the wood's glowing embers, Then, sometimes, unheeding,
 And asking not whither,
 By a sweet inward leading My feet are drawn thither, And, looking with awe in the magical mirror,
 I see through my tears,
 Half doubtful of seeing,
 The face unperturbed,
 The warm golden being
 Of a child of five years;
 And spite of the mists and the error,
 And the days overcast,
 Can feel that I walk undeserted,
 But forever attended By the glad heavens that bended O'er the innocent past;
 Toward fancy or truth
 Doth the sweet vision win me?
 Dare I think that I cast

In the fountain of youth
 The fleeting reflection
 Of some bygone perfection
 That still lingers in me?

YUSSOUF

A STRANGER came one night to Yussouf's
 tent,
 Saying, "Behold, one outcast and in dread, Against whose life the bow of power is bent,
 Who flies, and hath not where to lay his
 head;
 I come to thee for shelter and for food,
 To Yussouf, called through all our tribes
 'The Good.'"

"This tent is mine," said Yussouf, "but no
 more
 Than it is God's; come in and be at peace;
 Freely shalt thou partake of all my store As I of His who buildeth over these Our tents his glorious roof of night and
 day,
 And at whose door none ever yet heard Nay."

So Yussouf entertained his guest that night, And, waking him ere day, said: "Here is
 gold;
 My swiftest horse is saddled for thy flight;
 Depart before the prying day grow bold."
 As one lamp lights another, nor grows
 less,
 So nobleness enkindleth nobleness.

That inward light the stranger's face made grand,
 Which shines from all self-conquest; kneeling low,
 He bowed his forehead upon Yussouf's
 hand, Sobbing: "O Sheik, I cannot leave thee
 so;
 I will repay thee; all this thou hast done Unto that Ibrahim who slew thy son!"

"Take thrice the gold," said Yussouf, "for
 with thee
 Into the desert, never to return, My one black thought shall ride away from
 me;

First-born, for whom by day and night I yearn,
 Balanced and just are all of God's decrees;
 Thou art avenged, my first-born, sleep in peace!"

THE DARKENED MIND

THE fire is burning clear and blithely, Pleasantly whistles the winter wind;
 We are about thee, thy friends and kindred,
 On us all flickers the firelight kind;
 There thou sittest in thy wonted corner Lone and awful in thy darkened mind.

There thou sittest; now and then thou moonest;
 Thou dost talk with what we cannot see,
 Lookest at us with an eye so doubtful,
 It doth put us very far from thee;
 There thou sittest; we would fain be nigh
 thee,
 But we know that it can never be.

We can touch thee, still we are no nearer;
 Gather round thee, still thou art alone;
 The wide chasm of reason is between us;
 Thou confutest kindness with a moan; We can speak to thee, and thou canst answer,
 Like two prisoners through a wall of stone.

Hardest heart would call it very awful When thou look'st at us and seest — oh,
 what?

If we move away, thou sittest gazing With those vague eyes at the selfsame
 spot,
 And thou mutterest, thy hands thou wring-
 est,
 Seeing something, — us thou seest not.

Strange it is that, in this open bright-
 ness,
 Thou shouldst sit in such a narrow cell;
 Strange it is that thou shouldst be so lonesome Where those are who love thee all so
 well;
 Not so much of thee is left among us
 As the hum outliving the hushed bell.

WHAT RABBI JEHOSSA SAID

Originally written for a Fair in St. Louis.

RABBI JEHOSSA used to say That God made angels every day, Perfect as Michael and the rest
 First brooded in creation's nest, Whose only office was to cry Hosanna! once, and then to die;
 Or rather, with Life's essence blent,
 To be led home from banishment.

Rabbi Jehosha had the skill To know that Heaven is in God's will;
 And doing that, though for a space
 One heart-beat long, may win a grace
 As full of grandeur and of glow
 As Princes of the Chariot know.

'T were glorious, no doubt, to be One of the strong-winged Hierarchy, To burn with Seraphs, or to shine With Cherubs, deathlessly divine;
 Yet I, perhaps, poor earthly clod, Could I forget myself in God, Could I but find my nature's clue Simply as birds and blossoms do,
 And but for one rapt moment know
 'T is Heaven must come, not we must go,
 Should win my place as near the throne
 As the pearl-angel of its zone,
 And God would listen mid the throng
 For my one breath of perfect song,
 That, in its simple human way,
 Said all the Host of Heaven could say.

ALL-SAINTS

ONE feast, of holy days the crest, I, though no Churchman, love to keep,
 All-Saints, — the unknown good that rest In God's still memory folded deep;
 The bravely dumb that did their deed,
 And scorned to blot it with a name,
 Men of the plain heroic breed, That loved Heaven's silence more than fame.

Such lived not in the past alone,
 But thread to-day the unheeding street,

And stairs to Sin and Famine known Sing with the welcome of their feet;
The den they enter grows a shrine,
The grimy sash an oriel burns,
Their cup of water warms like wine,
Their speech is filled from heavenly urns.

About their brows to me appears An aureole traced in tenderest light,
The rainbow-gleam of smiles through tears
In dying eyes, by them made bright,
Of souls that shivered on the edge Of that chill ford repassed no more,
And in their mercy felt the pledge And sweetness of the farther shore.

A WINTER-EVENING HYMN TO MY FIRE

BEAUTY on my hearth-stone blazing !
To-night the triple Zoroaster Shall my prophet be and master:
To-night will I pure Magian be,
Hymns to thy sole honor raising,
While thou leapest fast and faster, Wild with self-delighted glee,
Or sink'st low and glowest faintly
As an aureole still and saintly, Keeping cadence to my praising Thee ! still thee ! and only thee !

Elfish daughter of Apollo !
Thee, from thy father stolen and bound To serve in Vulcan's clangorous smithy, Prometheus (primal Yankee) found,
And, when he had tampered with thee, (Too confiding little maid !)
In a reed's precarious hollow
To our frozen earth conveyed:
For he swore I know not what;
Endless ease should be thy lot,
Pleasure that should never falter, Lifelong play, and not a duty Save to hover o'er the altar, Vision of celestial beauty,
Fed with precious woods and spices ;
Then, perfidious ! having got Thee in the net of his devices, Sold thee into endless slavery,
Made thee a drudge to boil the pot, Thee, Helios' daughter, who dost bear His likeness in thy golden hair ;

Thee, by nature wild and wavery, Palpitating, evanescent
As the shade of Dian's crescent, Life, motion, gladness, everywhere !

Fathom deep men bury thee
In the furnace dark and still,
There, with dreariest mockery, Making thee eat, against thy will,
Blackest Pennsylvanian stone ;
But thou dost avenge thy doom,
For, from out thy catacomb,
Day and night thy wrath is blown In a withering simoom,
And, adown that cavern drear,
Thy black pitfall in the floor,
Staggers the lusty antique cheer, Despairing, and is seen no more !

Elfish I may rightly name thee ;
We enslave, but cannot tame thee ;
With fierce snatches, now and then,
Thou pluckest at thy right again,
And thy down-trod instincts savage To stealthy insurrection creep While thy wittol masters sleep,
And burst in undiscerning ravage:
Then how thou shak'st thy bacchant locks !
While brazen pulses, far and near,
Throb thick and thicker, wild with fear And dread conjecture, till the drear Disordered clangor every steeple rocks !

But when we make a friend of thee,
And admit thee to the hall
On our nights of festival, Then, Cinderella, who could see In thee the kitchen's stunted thrall ?
Once more a Princess lithe and tall, Thou dancest with a whispering tread,
While the bright marvel of thy head In crinkling gold floats all abroad,
And gloriously dost vindicate
The legend of thy lineage great,
Earth-exiled daughter of the Pythian god !
Now in the ample chimney-place,
To honor thy acknowledged race,
We crown thee high with laurel good,
Thy shining father's sacred wood,
Which, guessing thy ancestral right, Sparkles and snaps its dumb delight,
And, at thy touch, poor outcast one,

Feels through its gladdened fibres go The tingle and thrill and vassal glow
Of instincts loyal to the sun.

VI

O thou of home the guardian Lar,
And, when our earth hath wandered far Into the cold, and deep snow covers The walks of our New England lovers, Their sweet secluded evening-star !
'T was with thy rays the English Muse Ripened her mild domestic hues;
'T was by thy flicker that she couched
The fireside wisdom that enrings
With light from heaven familiar things;
By thee she found the homely faith In whose mild eyes thy comfort stay'th, When Death, extinguishing his torch, Gropes for the latch-string in the porch ;
The love that wanders not beyond His earliest nest, but sits and sings While children smooth his patient wings;
Therefore with thee I love to read Our brave old poets: at thy touch how stirs
Life in the withered words ! how swift recede Time's shadows ! and how glows again Through its dead mass the incandescent verse,
As when upon the anvils of the brain
It glittering lay, cyclopically wrought By the fast-throbbing hammers of the poet's thought !
Thou murmurest, too, divinely stirred,
The aspirations unattained,
The rhythms so rathe and delicate,
They bent and strained
And broke, beneath the sombre weight
Of any airiest mortal word.

What warm protection dost thou bend
Round curtained talk of friend with friend, While the gray snow-storm, held aloof,
To softest outline rounds the roof,
Or the rude North with baffled strain Shoulders the frost-starred window-pane !
Now the kind nymph to Bacchus born By Morpheus' daughter, she that seems Gifted upon her natal morn
By him with fire, by her with dreams, Nicotia, dearer to the Muse Than all the grape's bewildering juice,
We worship, unforbid of thee;

And, as her incense floats and curls
In airy spires and wayward whirls, Or poises on its tremulous stalk
A flower of frailest revery,
So winds and loiters, idly free,
The current of unguided talk,
Now laughter-rippled, and now caught In smooth, dark pools of deeper thought.
Meanwhile thou mellowest every word,
A sweetly unobtrusive third;
For thou hast magic beyond wine,
To unlock natures each to each;
The unspoken thought thou canst divine;
Thou fill'st the pauses of the speech With whispers that to dream-land reach And frozen fancy-springs unchain
In Arctic outskirts of the brain :
Sun of all inmost confidences,
To thy rays doth the heart uncloze Its formal calyx of pretences,
That close against rude day's offences,
And open its shy midnight rose !

Thou holdest not the master key With which thy Sire sets free the mystic gates Of Past and Future: not for common fates Do they wide open fling,
And, with a far-heard ring, Swing back their willing valves melodi-ously;
Only to ceremonial days,
And great processions of imperial song That set the world at gaze, Doth such high privilege belong:
But thou a postern-door canst ope To humbler chambers of the selfsame palace
Where Memory lodges, and her sister
 Hope,
Whose being is but as a crystal chalice Which, with her various mood, the elder fills
Of joy or sorrow,
So coloring as she wills With hues of yesterday the unconscious morrow.

IX

Thou sinkest, and my fancy sinks with
 thee:
For thee I took the idle shell,
And struck the unused chords again,
But they are gone who listened well;

Some are in heaven, and all are far from
me:

Even as I sing, it turns to pain,
And with vain tears my eyelids throb and
swell:

Enough; I come not of the race That hawk their sorrows in the marketplace.

Earth stops the ears I best had loved to please;

Then break, ye untuned chords, or rust in peace!

As if a white-haired actor should come back

Some midnight to the theatre void and black,

And there rehearse his youth's great part Mid thin applauses of the ghosts, So seems it now: ye crowd upon my
heart,

And I bow down in silence, shadowy hosts!

FANCY'S CASUISTRY

How struggles with the tempest's swells
That warning of tumultuous bells!

The fire is loose! and frantic knells Throb fast and faster,

As tower to tower confusedly tells News of disaster.

But on my far-off solitude

No harsh alarms can intrude;

The terror comes to me subdued

And charmed by distance,

To deepen the habitual mood

Of my existence.

Are those, I muse, the Easter chimes?

And listen, weaving careless rhymes

While the loud city's griefs and crimes

Pay gentle allegiance

To the fine quiet that sublimes

These dreamy regions.

And when the storm o'erwhelms the shore,

I watch entranced as, o'er and o'er,

The light revolves amid the roar

So still and saintly,

Now large and near, now more and more

Withdrawing faintly.

This, too, despairing sailors see

Flash out the breakers 'neath their lee

In sudden snow, then lingeringly

Wane tow'rd eclipse,

While through the dark the shuddering
sea

Gropes for the ships.

And is it right, this mood of mind

That thus, in revery enshrined,

Can in the world mere topics find

For musing stricture,

Seeing the life of humankind

Only as picture?

The events in line of battle go;

In vain for me their trumpets blow

As unto him that lieth low

In death's dark arches,

And through the sod hears throbbing slow

The muffled marches.

O Duty, am I dead to thee

In this my cloistered ecstasy,

In this lone shallop on the sea

That drifts tow'rd Silence?

And are those visioned shores I see

But sirens' islands?

My Dante frowns with lip-locked mien,

As who would say, " 'Tis those, I ween,

Whom lifelong armor-chafe makes lean

That win the laurel; "

But where is Truth? What does it mean,

The world-old quarrel?

Such questionings are idle air:

Leave what to do and what to spare

To the inspiring moment's care,

Nor ask for payment

Of fame or gold, but just to wear

Unspotted raiment.

TO MR. JOHN BARTLETT

WHO HAD SENT ME A SEVEN-POUND TROUT

Mr. Bartlett, the editor of Familiar Quotations, was a near neighbor of Lowell, and with him was long a member of a whist-party.

FIT for an Abbot of Theleme,

For the whole Cardinals' College, or

The Pope himself to see in dream

Before his lenten vision gleam,

He lies there, the sogdologer!

His precious planks with stars besprent, Worthy to swim in Castaly !
 The friend by whom such gifts are sent,
 For him shall bumpers full be spent,
 His health ! be Luck his fast ally !

I see him trace the wayward brook Amid the forest mysteries, Where at their shades shy aspens look,
 Or where, with many a gurgling crook,
 It croons its woodland histories.

I see leaf-shade and sun-fleck lend Their tremulous, sweet vicissitude To smooth, dark pool, to crinkling bend, — (Oh, stew him, Ann, as 't were your friend, With amorous solicitude !)

I see him step with caution due,
 Soft as if shod with moccasins,
 Grave as in church, for who plies you, Sweet craft, is safe as in a pew
 From all our common stock o' sins.

The unerring fly I see him cast,
 That as a rose-leaf falls as soft,
 A flash ! a whirl ! he has him fast !
 We tyros, how that struggle last Confuses and appals us oft.

Unfluttered he : calm as the sky Looks on our tragi-comedies,
 This way and that he lets him fly,
 A sunbeam-shuttle, then to die Lands him, with cool aplomb, at ease.

The friend who gave our board such gust, Life's care may he o'erstep it half,
 And, when Death hooks him, as he must,
 He 'll do it handsomely, I trust,
 And John H—— write his epitaph !

Oh, born beneath the Fishes' sign,
 Of constellations happiest,
 May he somewhere with Walton dine,
 May Horace send him Massic wine, And Burns Scotch drink, the nappi-
 est !

And when they come his deeds to weigh,
 And how he used the talents his,
 One trout-scale in the scales he 'll lay (If trout had scales), and 't will out-sway
 The wrong side of the balances.

ODE TO HAPPINESS

SPIRIT, that rarely comest now
 And only to contrast my gloom,
 Like rainbow-feathered birds that bloom
 A moment on some autumn bough
 That, with the spurn of their farewell, Sheds its last leaves, — thou once didst
 dwell

With me year-long, and make intense To boyhood's wisely vacant days Their fleet but all-sufficing grace Of trustful inexperience, While soul could still transfigure sense,
 And thrill, as with love's first caress,
 At life's mere unexpectedness.

Days when my blood would leap and run
 As full of sunshine as a breeze,
 Or spray tossed up by Summer seas
 That doubts if it be sea or sun !
 Days that flew swiftly like the band
 That played in Grecian games at strife,
 And passed from eager hand to hand
 The onward-dancing torch of life !

Wing-footed ! thou abid'st with him Who asks it not ; but he who hath Watched o'er the waves thy waning path, Shall nevermore behold returning Thy high-heaped canvas shoreward yearn-
 ing !

Thou first reveal'st to us thy face Turned o'er the shoulder's parting grace, A moment glimpsed, then seen no
 more, —

Thou whose swift footsteps we can trace Away from every mortal door.

Nymph of the unreturning feet,
 How may I win thee back ? But no, I do thee wrong to call thee so ;
 'T is I am changed, not thou art fleet :
 The man thy presence feels again,
 Not in the blood, but in the brain, Spirit, that lov'st the upper air Serene and passionless and rare, Such as on mountain heights we find And wide-viewed uplands of the mind ;
 Or such as scorns to coil and sing Round any but the eagle's wing Of souls that with long upward beat Have won an undisturbed retreat Where, poised like winged victories, They mirror in relentless eyes

The life broad-basking 'neath their feet, —
Man ever with his Now at strife, Pained with first gasps of earthly air,
Then praying Death the last to spare, Still fearful of the ampler life.

Not unto them dost thou consent
Who, passionless, can lead at ease
A life of unalloyed content
A life like that of land-locked seas, Who feel no elemental gush
Of tidal forces, no fierce rush Of storm deep-grasping scarcely spent 'Twixt continent and continent.
Such quiet souls have never known Thy truer inspiration, thou Who lov'st to feel upon thy brow Spray from the plunging vessel thrown Grazing the tusked lee shore, the cliff That o'er the abrupt gorge holds its breath, Where the frail hair-breadth of an if
Is all that sunders life and death:
These, too, are cared for, and round these Bends her mild crook thy sister Peace;
These in unvexed dependence lie,
Each 'neath his strip of household sky;
O'er these clouds wander, and the blue Hangs motionless the whole day through; Stars rise for them, and moons grow large
And lessen in such tranquil wise
As joys and sorrows do that rise Within their nature's sheltered marge;
Their hours into each other flit
Like the leaf-shadows of the vine
And fig-tree under which they sit,
And their still lives to heaven incline
With an unconscious habitude, Unhistoried as smokes that rise From happy hearths and sight elude In kindred blue of morning skies.

Wayward! when once we feel thy lack,
'T is worse than vain to woo thee back!
Yet there is one who seems to be Thine elder sister, in whose eyes
A faint far northern light will rise Sometimes, and bring a dream of thee;
She is not that for which youth hoped,
But she hath blessings all her own, Thoughts pure as lilies newly oped,
And faith to sorrow given alone:
Almost I deem that it is thou Come back with graver matron brow,

With deepened eyes and bated breath,
Like one that somewhere hath met Death:
But "No," she answers, "I am she Whom the gods love, Tranquillity;
That other whom you seek forlorn Half earthly was; but I am born Of the immortals, and our race Wears still some sadness on its face:
He wins me late, but keeps me long,
Who, dowered with every gift of passion,
In that fierce flame can forge and fashion
Of sin and self the anchor strong;
Can thence compel the driving force Of daily life's mechanic course, Nor less the nobler energies
Of needful toil and culture wise;
Whose soul is worth the tempter's lure Who can renounce, and yet endure,
To him I come, not lightly wooed, But won by silent fortitude."

VILLA FRANCA

1859

Wait a little: do we not wait?
Louis Napoleon is not Fate,
Francis Joseph is not Time;
There's One hath swifter feet than Crime:
Cannon-parliaments settle naught;
Venice is Austria's, — whose is Thought?
Minie is good, but, spite of change, Gutenberg's gun has the longest range.
Spin, spin, Clotho, spin!
Lachesis, twist! and, Atropos, sever!
In the shadow, year out, year in,
The silent headman waits forever.

Wait, we say: our years are long;
Men are weak, but Man is strong;
Since the stars first curved their rings,
We have looked on many things;
Great wars come and great wars go, Wolf-tracks light on polar snow;
We shall see him come and gone,
This second-hand Napoleon.
Spin, spin, Clotho, spin!
Lachesis, twist! and, Atropos, sever!
In the shadow, year out, year in,
The silent headman waits forever.

We saw the elder Corsican,
And Clotho muttered as she span, While crowned lackeys bore the train,

Of the pinchbeck Charlemagne :
 "Sister, stint not length of thread!
 Sister, stay the scissors dread!
 On Saint Helen's granite bleak, Hark, the vulture whets his beak!"
 Spin, spin, Clotho, spin!
 Lachesis, twist! and, Atropos, sever!
 In the shadow, year out, year in,
 The silent headsman waits forever.

The Bonapartes, we know their bees That wade in honey red to the knees;
 Their patent reaper, its sheaves sleep sound In dreamless garner's underground:
 We know false glory's spendthrift race Pawning nations for feathers and lace;
 It may be short, it may be long,
 "Tis reckoning-day!" sneers unpaid
 Wrong.

Spin, spin, Clotho, spin!
 Lachesis, twist! and, Atropos, sever!
 In the shadow, year out, year in,
 The silent headsman waits forever.

The Cock that wears the Eagle's skin Can promise what he ne'er could win;
 Slavery reaped for fine words sown, System for all, and rights for none, Despots atop, a wild clan below,
 Such is the Gaul from long ago;
 Wash the black from the Ethiop's face, Wash the past out of man or race!

Spin, spin, Clotho, spin!
 Lachesis, twist! and, Atropos, sever!
 In the shadow, year out, year in,
 The silent headsman waits forever.

'Neath Gregory's throne a spider swings, And snares the people for the kings;
 "Luther is dead; old quarrels pass;
 The stake's black scars are healed with grass;"

So dreamers prate; did man e'er live Saw priest or woman yet forgive?
 But Luther's broom is left, and eyes Peep o'er their creeds to where it lies.

Spin, spin, Clotho, spin!
 Lachesis, twist! and, Atropos, sever!
 In the shadow, year out, year in,
 The silent headsman waits forever.

Smooth sails the ship of either realm, Kaiser and Jesuit at the helm;
 We look down the depths, and mark Silent workers in the dark

Building slow the sharp-tusked reefs, Old instincts hardening to new beliefs;
 Patience a little; learn to wait;
 Hours are long on the clock of Fate.
 Spin, spin, Clotho, spin!
 Lachesis, twist! and, Atropos, sever!
 Darkness is strong, and so is Sin, But surely God endures forever!

THE MINER

Down 'mid the tangled roots of things That coil about the central fire,
 I seek for that which giveth wings
 To stoop, not soar, to my desire.

Sometimes I hear, as 't were a sigh,
 The sea's deep yearning far above,
 "Thou hast the secret not," I cry,
 "In deeper deeps is hid my Love."

They think I burrow from the sun,
 In darkness, all alone, and weak;
 Such loss were gain if He were won,
 For 't is the sun's own Sun I seek.

"The earth," they murmur, "is the tomb That vainly sought his life to prison;
 Why grovel longer in the gloom?
 He is not here; he hath arisen."

More life for me where he hath lain Hidden while ye believed him dead, Than in cathedrals cold and vain,
 Built on loose sands of It is said.

My search is for the living gold;
 Him I desire who dwells recluse,
 And not his image worn and old,
 Day-servant of our sordid use.

If him I find not, yet I find The ancient joy of cell and church,
 The glimpse, the surety undefined,
 The unquenched ardor of the search.

Happier to chase a flying goal
 Than to sit counting laurelled gains,
 To guess the Soul within the soul
 Than to be lord of what remains.

Hide still, best Good, in subtle wise, Beyond my nature's utmost scope;
 Be ever absent from mine eyes
 To be twice present in my hope!

GOLD EGG: A DREAM-FANTASY

HOW A STUDENT IN SEARCH OF THE BEAUTIFUL FELL ASLEEP IN DRESDEN OVER HERR PROFESSOR DOCTOR VI-SCHER'S WISSENSCHAFT DES SCHÖNEN, AND WHAT CAME THEREOF

I SWAM with undulation soft, Adrift on Vischer's ocean,
And, from my cockpit up aloft, Sent down my mental plummet oft In hope to reach a notion.

But from the metaphysic sea
No bottom was forthcoming,
And all the while (how drearily!)
In one eternal note of B
My German stove kept humming.

"What's Beauty?" mused I; "is it told By synthesis? by analysis?
Have you not made us lead of gold?
To feed your crucible, not sold Our temple's sacred chalices?"

Then o'er my senses came a change;
My book seemed all traditions,
Old legends of profoundest range, Diabery, and stories strange Of goblins, elves, magicians.

Old gods in modern saints I found,
Old creeds in strange disguises;
I thought them safely underground,
And here they were, all safe and sound,
Without a sign of phthisis.

Truth was, my outward eyes were closed,
Although I did not know it;
Deep into dream-land I had dozed,
And thus was happily transposed
From prosy into poet.

So what I read took flesh and blood,
And turned to living creatures:
The words were but the dingy bud
That bloomed, like Adam, from the mud,
To human forms and features.

I saw how Zeus was lodged once more By Baucis and Philemon;
The text said, "Not alone of yore,
But every day, at every door Knocks still the masking Demon."

DAIMON 't was printed in the book And, as I read it slowly, The letters stirred and changed, and took Jove's stature, the Olympian look Of painless melancholy.

He paused upon the threshold worn:
"With coin I cannot pay you;
Yet would I fain make some return;
The gift for cheapness do not spurn, Accept this hen, I pray you.

"Plain feathers wears my Hemera, And has from ages olden;
She makes her nest in common hay,
And yet, of all the birds that lay,
Her eggs alone are golden."

He turned, and could no more be seen;
Old Baucis stared a moment,
Then tossed poor Partlet on the green,
And with a tone, half jest, half spleen, Thus made her housewife's comment:

"The stranger had a queerish face,
His smile was hardly pleasant,
And, though he meant it for a grace, Yet this old hen of barnyard race Was but a stingy present.

"She's quite too old for laying eggs, Nay, even to make a soup of;
One only needs to see her legs, —
You might as well boil down the pegs
I made the brood-hen's coop of!

"Some eighteen score of such do I Raise every year, her sisters;
Go, in the woods your fortunes try,
All day for one poor earthworm pry,
And scratch your toes to blisters!"

Philemon found the rede was good,
And, turning on the poor hen, He clapt his hands, and stamped, and shooed,
Hunting the exile tow'rd the wood,
To house with snipe and moor-hen.

A poet saw and cried: "Hold! hold!
What are you doing, madman?
Spurn you more wealth than can be told,
The fowl that lays the eggs of gold, Because she's plainly clad, man?"

To him Philemon: "I'll not balk Thy will with any shackle;
Wilt add a burden to thy walk?
There! take her without further talk:
You're both but fit to cackle!"

But scarce the poet touched the bird,
It swelled to stature regal;
And when her cloud-wide wings she stirred,
A whisper as of doom was heard,
'T was Jove's bolt-bearing eagle.

As when from far-off cloud-bergs springs
A crag, and, hurtling under,
From cliff to cliff the rumor flings,
So she from flight-foreboding wings Shook out a murmurous thunder.

She gripped the poet to her breast,
And ever, upward soaring,
Earth seemed a new moon in the west,
And then one light among the rest
Where squadrons lie at mooring.

How tell to what heaven hallowed seat
The eagle bent his courses?
The waves that on its bases beat,
The gales that round it weave and fleet,
Are life's creative forces.

Here was the bird's primeval nest, High on a promontory Star-pharos'd, where she takes her rest
To brood new æons 'neath her breast,
The future's unfledged glory.

I know not how, but I was there
All feeling, hearing, seeing;
It was not wind that stirred my hair
But living breath, the essence rare Of unembodied being.

And in the nest an egg of gold Lay soft in self-made lustre, Gazing whereon, what depths untold Within, what marvels manifold, Seemed silently to muster!

Daily such splendors to confront
Is still to me and you sent?
It glowed as when Saint Peter's front, Illumed, forgets its stony wont,
And seems to throb translucent.

One saw therein the life of man, (Or so the poet found it),
The yolk and white, conceive who can,
Were the glad earth, that, floating, span
In the glad heaven around it.

I knew this as one knows in dream,
Where no effects to causes Are chained as in our work-day scheme,
And then was wakened by a scream
That seemed to come from Baucis.

"Bless Zeus!" she cried, "I'm safe below!"
First pale, then red as coral;
And I, still drowsy, pondered slow,
And seemed to find, but hardly know, Something like this for moral.

Each day the world is born anew
For him who takes it rightly;
Not fresher that which Adam knew,
Not sweeter that whose moonlit dew Entranced Arcadia nightly.

Rightly? That's simply: 't is to see Some substance casts these shadows Which we call Life and History, That aimless seem to chase and flee Like wind-gleams over meadows.

Simply? That's nobly: 't is to know That God may still be met with,
Nor groweth old, nor doth bestow
These senses fine, this brain aglow, To grovel and forget with.

Beauty, Herr Doctor, trust in me,
No chemistry will win you;
Charis still rises from the sea:
If you can't find her, might it be Because you seek within you?

A FAMILIAR EPISTLE TO A FRIEND

The friend was Miss Jane Norton, sister of Mr. C. E. Norton.

ALIKE I hate to be your debtor,
Or write a mere perfunctory letter;
For letters, so it seems to me,
Our careless quintessence should be,
Our real nature's truant play

When Consciousness looks t' other way;
 Not drop by drop, with watchful skill, Gathered in Art's deliberate still,
 But life's insensible completeness Got as the ripe grape gets its sweetness,
 As if it had a way to fuse
 The golden sunlight into juice.
 Hopeless my mental pump I try,
 The boxes hiss, the tube is dry;
 As those petroleum wells that spout Awhile like M. C.'s, then give out, My spring, once full as Arethusa,
 Is a mere bore as dry's Creusa;
 And yet you ask me why I'm glum,
 And why my graver Muse is dumb.
 Ah me! I've reasons manifold Condensed in one, — I'm getting old!

When life, once past its fortieth year,
 Wheels up its evening hemisphere,
 The mind's own shadow, which the boy Saw onward point to hope and joy, Shifts round, irrevocably set Tow'rd morning's loss and vain regret And, argue with it as we will,
 The clock is unconverted still.

"But count the gains," I hear you say,
 "Which far the seeming loss outweigh; Friendships built firm 'gainst flood and wind

On rock-foundations of the mind;
 Knowledge instead of scheming hope;
 For wild adventure, settled scope;
 Talents, from surface-ore profuse, Tempered and edged to tools for use;
 Judgment, for passion's headlong whirls;
 Old sorrows crystallized into pearls;
 Losses by patience turned to gains, Possessions now, that once were pains; Joy's blossom gone, as go it must,
 To ripen seeds of faith and trust;
 Why heed a snow-flake on the roof
 If fire within keep Age aloof, Though blundering north-winds push and strain

With palms benumbed against the pane?"

My dear old Friend, you're very wise;
 We always are with others' eyes,
 And see so clear! (our neighbor's deck on) What reef the idiot's sure to wreck on;
 Folks when they learn how life has quizzed
 'em

Are fain to make a shift with Wisdom,

And, finding she nor breaks nor bends,
 Give her a letter to their friends.
 Draw passion's torrent whoso will Through sluices smooth to turn a mill,
 And, taking solid toll of grist,
 Forget the rainbow in the mist,
 The exulting leap, the aimless haste Scattered in iridescent waste; Prefer who likes the sure esteem
 To cheated youth's midsummer dream,
 When every friend was more than Damon, Each quicksand safe to build a fame on;
 Believe that prudence snug excels Youth's gross of verdant spectacles, Through which earth's withered stubble
 seen

Looks autumn-proof as painted green, —
 I side with Moses 'gainst the masses, Take you the drudge, give me the glasses!
 And, for your talents shaped with practice, Convince me first that such the fact is;
 Let whoso likes be beat, poor fool,
 On life's hard stithy to a tool,
 Be whoso will a ploughshare made,
 Let me remain a jolly blade!

What's Knowledge, with her stocks and lands,

To gay Conjecture's yellow strands?
 What's watching her slow flock's increase To ventures for the golden fleece?
 What her deep ships, safe under lee,
 To youth's light craft, that drinks the sea,
 For Flying Islands making sail,
 And failing where 't is gain to fail?
 Ah me! Experience (so we're told),
 Time's crucible, turns lead to gold;
 Yet what's experience won but dross, Cloud-gold transmuted to our loss?
 What but base coin the best event
 To the untried experiment?

'T was an old couple, says the poet,
 That lodged the gods and did not know it; Youth sees and knows them as they were Before Olympus' top was bare;
 From Swampscot's flats his eye divine Sees Venus rocking on the brine, With lucent limbs, that somehow scatter a Charm that turns Doll to Cleopatra; Bacchus (that now is scarce induced To give Eld's lagging blood a boost), With cymbals' clang and pards to draw
 him,
 Divine as Ariadne saw him,

Storms through Youth's pulse with all his train

And wins new Indies in his brain; Apollo (with the old a trope, A sort of finer Mister Pope), Apollo — but the Muse forbids:
At his approach cast down thy lids,
And think it joy enough to hear Far off his arrows singing clear;
He knows enough who silent knows
The quiver chiming as he goes;
He tells too much who e'er betrays
The shining Archer's secret ways.

Dear Friend, you 're right and I am
wrong;

My quibbles are not worth a song,
And I sophistically tease My fancy sad to tricks like these.
I could not cheat you if I would;
You know me and my jesting mood,
Mere surface-foam, for pride concealing
The purpose of my deeper feeling.
I have not spilt one drop of joy Poured in the senses of the boy, Nor Nature fails my walks to bless With all her golden inwardness;
And as blind nestlings, unafraid, Stretch up wide-mouthed to every shade
By which their downy dream is stirred, Taking it for the mother-bird,
So, when God's shadow, which is light, Unheralded, by day or night,
My wakening instincts falls across,
Silent as sunbeams over moss,
In my heart's nest half-conscious things Stir with a helpless sense of wings, Lift themselves up, and tremble long With premonitions sweet of song.

Be patient, and perhaps (who knows?)
These may be winged one day like those;
If thrushes, close-embowered to sing, Pierced through with June's delicious sting;
If swallows, their half-hour to run Star-breasted in the setting sun.
At first they 're but the unfledged proem,
Or songless schedule of a poem;
When from the shell they 're hardly dry
If some folks thrust them forth, must I?

But let me end with a comparison Never yet hit upon by e'er a son Of our American Apollo,

(And there 's where I shall beat them hollow,

If he indeed 's no courtly St. John,
But, as West said, a Mohawk Injun.)
A poem 's like a cruise for whales:
Through untried seas the hunter sails,
His prow dividing waters known To the blue iceberg's hulk alone;
At last, on farthest edge of day,
He marks the smoky puff of spray;
Then with bent oars the shallop flies
To where the basking quarry lies;
Then the excitement of the strife,
The crimsoned waves, — ah, this is life!

But, the dead plunder once secured And safe beside the vessel moored,
All that had stirred the blood before Is so much blubber, nothing more, (I mean no pun, nor image so Mere sentimental verse, you know,)
And all is tedium, smoke, and soil,
In trying out the noisome oil.

Yes, this is life! And so the bard Through briny deserts, never scarred Since Noah's keel, a subject seeks,
And lies upon the watch for weeks;
That once harpooned and helpless lying,
What follows is but weary trying.

Now I 've a notion, if a poet Beat up for themes, his verse will show it;
I wait for subjects that hunt me,
By day or night won't let me be,
And hang about me like a curse,
Till they have made me into verse,
From line to line my fingers tease Beyond my knowledge, as the bees Build no new cell till those before With limpid summer-sweet run o'er;
Then, if I neither sing nor shine,
Is it the subject's fault, or mine?

AN EMBER PICTURE

How strange are the freaks of memory!
The lessons of life we forget,
While a trifle, a trick of color,
In the wonderful web is set, —

Set by some mordant of fancy,
And, spite of the wear and tear

Of time or distance or trouble, Insists on its right to be there.

A chance had brought us together;
Our talk was of matters-of-course;
We were nothing, one to the other,
But a short half-hour's resource.

We spoke of French acting and actors,
And their easy, natural way:
Of the weather, for it was raining
As we drove home from the play.

We debated the social nothings
We bore ourselves so to discuss;
The thunderous rumors of battle
Were silent the while for us.

Arrived at her door, we left her With a drizzling hurried adieu,
And our wheels went crunching the gravel
Of the oak-darkened avenue.

As we drove away through the shadow,
The candle she held in the door From rain-varnished tree-trunk to tree-trunk

Flashed fainter, and flashed no more;—

Flashed fainter, then wholly faded Before we had passed the wood;
But the light of the face behind it Went with me and stayed for good.

The vision of scarce a moment,
And hardly marked at the time,
It comes unbidden to haunt me,
Like a scrap of ballad-rhyme.

Had she beauty? Well, not what they call
so;

You may find a thousand as fair;
And yet there 's her face in my memory
With no special claim to be there.

As I sit sometimes in the twilight,
And call back to life in the coals Old faces and hopes and fancies Long buried, (good rest to their souls!)

Her face shines out in the embers;
I see her holding the light,
And hear the crunch of the gravel
And the sweep of the rain that night.

'T is a face that can never grow older,
That never can part with its gleam,
'T is a gracious possession forever,
For is it not all a dream?

TO H. W. L.

ON HIS BIRTHDAY, 27TH FEBRUARY, 1867

"ELMWOOD, February 27, 1867.

"MY DEAR LONGFELLOW,— On looking back, I find that our personal intercourse is now of nearly thirty years' date. It began on your part in a note acknowledging my Class Poem much more kindly than it deserved. Since then it has ripened into friendship, and there has never been a jar between us. If there had been, it would certainly have been my fault and not yours. Friendship is called the wine of life, and there certainly is a stimulus in it that warms and inspires as we grow older. Ours should have some body to have kept so long.

"I planned you a little surprise in the Advertiser for your birthday breakfast. I hope my nosegay did not spoil the flavor of your coffee. It is a hard thing to make one that will wholly please, for some flowers will not bear to be handled without wilting, and the kind I have tried to make a pretty bunch of is of that variety. But let me hope the best from your kindness, if not from their color or perfume.

"In case they should please you (and because there was one misprint in the Advertiser, and two phrases which I have now made more to my mind), I have copied them that you might have them in my own handwriting. In print, you see, I have omitted the tell-tale ciphers—not that there was anything to regret in them, for we have a proverbial phrase 'like sixty' which implies not only unabated but extraordinary vigor.

"Wishing you as many happy returns as a wise man should desire, I remain always affectionately yours, J. R. L." Letters I. 378, 379.

I NEED not praise the sweetness of his song, Where limpid verse to limpid verse succeeds

Smooth as our Charles, when, fearing lest he wrong

The new moon's mirrored skiff, he slides
along,

Full without noise, and whispers in his reeds.

With loving breath of all the winds his name
Is blown about the world, but to his friends

A sweeter secret hides behind his fame,
And Love steals shyly through the loud acclaim

To murmur a God bless you! and there
ends.

As I muse backward up the checkered
years

Wherein so much was given, so much was lost,

Blessings in both kinds, such as cheapen
tears, —

But hush! this is not for profaner ears; Let them drink molten pearls nor dream the cost.

Some suck up poison from a sorrow's core,
As naught but nightshade grew upon earth's ground;

Love turned all his to heart's-ease, and the
more

Fate tried his bastions, she but forced a door

Leading to sweeter manhood and more sound.

Even as a wind-waved fountain's swaying shade

Seems of mixed race, a gray wraith shot with sun,

So through his trial faith translucent rayed Till darkness, half disnatured so, betrayed A heart of sunshine that would fain o'errun.

Surely if skill in song the shears may stay And of its purpose cheat the charmed abyss,

If our poor life be lengthened by a lay,
He shall not go, although his presence
may,

And the next age in praise shall double
this.

Long days be his, and each as lusty-sweet As gracious natures find his song to be;
May Age steal on with softly-cadenced feet Falling in music, as for him were meet

Whose choicest verse is harsher-toned than he!

THE NIGHTINGALE IN THE STUDY

"While I was most unwell," Lowell wrote to a friend, September 21, 1875, "I could not find any reading that would seclude me from myself till one day I bethought me of Calderon. I took down a volume of his plays, and in half an hour was completely absorbed. He is surely one of the most marvellous of poets. I have recorded my debt to him in a poem, The Nightingale in the Study."

"Come forth!" my catbird calls to me,
"And hear me sing a cavatina
That, in this old familiar tree, Shall hang a garden of Alcina.

"These buttercups shall brim with wine Beyond all Lesbian juice or Massie;
May not New England be divine?
My ode to ripening summer classic?

"Or, if to me you will not hark,
By Beaver Brook a thrush is ringing Till all the alder-coverts dark Seem sunshine-dappled with his singing.

"Come out beneath the unmastered sky,
With its emancipating spaces,
And learn to sing as well as I,
Without premeditated graces.

"What boot your many-volumed gains, Those withered leaves forever turning,
To win, at best, for all your pains,
A nature mummy-wrapt in learning?

"The leaves wherein true wisdom lies On living trees the sun are drinking; Those white clouds, drowsing through the skies,
Grew not so beautiful by thinking.

"Come out! with me the oriole cries, Escape the demon that pursues you!
And, hark, the cuckoo weatherwise, Still hiding farther onward, woos you."

"Alas, dear friend, that, all my days, Hast poured from that syringa thicket
The quaintly discontinuous lays To which I hold a season-ticket,

"A season-ticket cheaply bought With a dessert of pilfered berries,
And who so oft my soul hast caught With morn and evening voluntaries,

"Deem me not faithless, if all day Among my dusty books I linger,
No pipe, like thee, for June to play With fancy-led, half-conscious finger.

"A bird is singing in my brain And bubbling o'er with mingled fancies,
Gay, tragic, rapt, right heart of Spain Fed with the sap of old romances.

"I ask no ampler skies than those His magic music rears above me,
No falser friends, no truer foes,—
And does not Doña Clara love me ?

"Cloaked shapes, a twanging of guitars, A rush of feet, and rapiers clashing,
Then silence deep with breathless stars,
And overhead a white hand flashing.

"O music of all moods and climes, Vengeful, forgiving, sensuous, saintly,
Where still, between the Christian chimes,
The Moorish cymbal tinkles faintly !

"O life borne lightly in the hand, For friend or foe, with grace Castil-ian !

O valley safe in Fancy's land, Not tramped to mud yet by the million !

"Bird of to-day, thy songs are stale
To his, my singer of all weathers, My Calderon, my nightingale,
My Arab soul in Spanish feathers.

"Ah, friend, these singers dead so long,
And still, God knows, in purgatory, Give its best sweetness to all song,
To Nature's self her better glory."

IN THE TWILIGHT

MEN say the sullen instrument, That, from the Master's bow,
With pangs of joy or woe,

Feels music's soul through every fibre sent,
Whispers the ravished strings
More than he knew or meant ;
Old summers in its memory glow ;
The secrets of the wind it sings ;
It hears the April-loosened springs ;
And mixes with its mood
All it dreamed when it stood In the murmurous pine-wood Long ago !

The magical moonlight then Steeped every bough and cone ;
The roar of the brook in the glen Came dim from the distance blown ;
The wind through its glooms sang low,
And it swayed to and fro
With delight as it stood,
In the wonderful wood,
Long ago !

O my life, have we not had seasons
That only said, Live and rejoice ?
That asked not for causes and reasons,
But made us all feeling and voice ?
When we went with the winds in their blowing,
When Nature and we were peers,
And we seemed to share in the flowing Of the inexhaustible years ?
Have we not from the earth drawn juices Too fine for earth's sordid uses ?
Have I heard, have I seen
All I feel, all I know ?
Doth my heart overween ?
Or could it have been Long ago ?

Sometimes a breath floats by me,
An odor from Dreamland sent,
That makes the ghost seem nigh me
Of a splendor that came and went,
Of a life lived somewhere, I know not In what diviner sphere,
Of memories that stay not and go not,
Like music heard once by an ear
That cannot forget or reclaim it, A something so shy, it would shame it
To make it a show,
A something too vague, could I name it,
For others to know,
As if I had lived it or dreamed it,
As if I had acted or schemed it.
Long ago !

And yet, could I live it over,
 This life that stirs in my brain,
 Could I be both maiden and lover, Moon and tide, bee and clover,
 As I seem to have been, once again,
 Could I but speak it and show it,
 This pleasure more sharp than pain,
 That baffles and lures me so,
 The world should once more have a poet, Such as it had
 In the ages glad,
 Long ago!

THE FOOT-PATH

It mounts athwart the windy hill
 Through fallow slopes of upland bare,
 And Fancy climbs with foot-fall still Its narrowing curves that end in air.

By day, a warmer-hearted blue Stoops softly to that topmost swell;
 Its thread-like windings seem a clue
 To gracious climes where all is well.

By night, far yonder, I surmise
 An ampler world than clips my ken,
 Where the great stars of happier skies Commingle nobler fates of men.

I look and long, then haste me home,
 Still master of my secret rare;
 Once tried, the path would end in Rome,
 But now it leads me everywhere.

Forever to the new it guides,
 From former good, old overmuch;
 What Nature for her poets hides,
 'Tis wiser to divine than clutch.

The bird I list hath never come Within the scope of mortal ear;
 My prying step would make him dumb,
 And the fair tree, his shelter, sear.

Behind the hill, behind the sky,
 Behind my inmost thought, he sings;

No feet avail; to hear it nigh,
 The song itself must lend the wings.

Sing on, sweet bird close hid, and raise Those angel stairways in my brain,
 That climb from these low-vaulted days
 To spacious sunshines far from pain.

Sing when thou wilt, enchantment fleet,
 I leave thy covert haunt untrod,
 And envy Science not her feat
 To make a twice-told tale of God.

They said the fairies tript no more,
 And long ago that Pan was dead;
 'T was but that fools preferred to bore Earth's rind inch-deep for truth instead.

Pan leaps and pipes all summer long,
 The fairies dance each full-mooned night,
 Would we but doff our lenses strong,
 And trust our wiser eyes' delight.

City of Elf-land, just without Our seeing, marvel ever new,
 Glimpsed in fair weather, a sweet doubt Sketched-in, mirage-like, on the blue,

I build thee in yon sunset cloud,
 Whose edge allures to climb the height;
 I hear thy drowned bells, inly-loud, From still pools dusk with dreams of
 night.

Thy gates are shut to hardest will,
 Thy countersign of long-lost speech, — Those fountained courts, those chambers
 still,
 Fronting Time's far East, who shall reach?

I know not, and will never pry,
 But trust our human heart for all;
 Wonders that from the seeker fly Into an open sense may fall.

Hide in thine own soul, and surprise
 The password of the unwary elves;
 Seek it, thou canst not bribe their spies;
 Unsought, they whisper it themselves.

POEMS OF THE WAR

THE WASHERS OF THE SHROUD

OCTOBER, 1861

Lowell wrote at some length to C. E. Norton concerning the production of this poem.

ELMWOOD, Oct. 12, 1861.

. . . You urged me to read poetry — to feed myself on bee bread — so that I might get into the mood of writing some. Well, I have n't been reading any, but I have written something — whether poetry or no I cannot tell yet. But I want you to like it if you can. Leigh Hunt speaks somewhere of our writing things for particular people, and wondering as we write if such or such a one will like it. Just so I thought of you, after I had written — for while I was writing I was wholly absorbed. I had just two days allowed me by Fields for the November Atlantic, and I got it done. It had been in my head some time, and when you see it you will remember my having spoken to you about it. Indeed, I owe it to you, for the hint came from one of those books of Souvestre's you lent me — the Breton legends. The writing took hold of me enough to leave me tired out and to satisfy me entirely as to what was the original of my head and back pains. But whether it is good or not, I am not yet far enough off to say. But do like it, if you can. Fields says it is "splendid," with tears in his eyes — but then I read it to him, which is half the battle. I began it as a lyric, but it would be too aphoristic for that, and finally flatly refused to sing at any price. So I submitted, took to pentameters, and only hope the thoughts are good enough to be preserved in the ice of the colder and almost glacier-slow measure. I think I have done well — in some stanzas at least — and not wasted words. It is about present matters — but abstract enough to be above the newspapers. . . .

ALONG a river-side, I know not where,
I walked one night in mystery of dream;
A chill creeps curdling yet beneath my
hair,
To think what chanced me by the pallid gleam
Of a moon-wraith that waned through haunted air.

Pale fireflies pulsed within the meadow-
mist
Their halos, wavering thistle downs of
light;
The loon, that seemed to mock some goblin
tryst,
Laughed; and the echoes, huddling in af-fright,
Like Odin's hounds, fled baying down the
night.

Then all was silent, till there smote my ear
A movement in the stream that checked my breath:
Was it the slow plash of a wading deer?
But something said, "This water is of Death!
The Sisters wash a shroud, — ill thing to hear!"

I, looking then, beheld the ancient Three Known to the Greek's and to the North-man's creed,
That sit in shadow of the mystic Tree, Still crooning, as they weave their endless brede, One song: "Time was, Time is, and Time shall be."

No wrinkled crones were they, as I had deemed,
But fair as yesterday, to-day, to-morrow,
To mourner, lover, poet, ever seemed;
Something too high for joy, too deep for sorrow, Thrilled in their tones, and from their faces gleamed.

"Still men and nations reap as they have strawn," So sang they, working at their task th-while;
"The fatal raiment must be cleansed er-
dawn:
For Austria? Italy? the Sea-Queen's isle?
O'er what quenched grandeur must our shroud be drawn?"

"Or is it for a younger, fairer corse, That gathered States like children round his knees,
That tamed the wave to be his posting-
horse,
Feller of forests, linker of the seas, Bridge-builder, hammerer, youngest son of Thor's ?

"What make we, murmur'st thou ? and what are we ?
When empires must be wound, we bring the shroud,
The time-old web of the implacable Three:
Is it too coarse for him, the young and proud ?
Earth's mightiest deigned to wear it, — why not he ? "

"Is there no hope ? " I moaned, "so strong,
so fair!
Our Fowler whose proud bird would brook erewhile
No rival's swoop in all our western air!
Gather the ravens, then, in funeral file For him, life's morn yet golden in his hair?

"Leave me not hopeless, ye un pitying dames!
I see, half seeing. Tell me, ye who scanned
The stars, Earth's elders, still must noblest aims
Be traced upon oblivious ocean-sands?
Must Hesper join the wailing ghosts of names ? "

"When grass-blades stiffen with red battle-
dew,
Ye deem we choose the victor and the slain:
Say, choose we them that shall be leal and
true
To the heart's longing, the high faith of
brain?
Yet there the victory lies, if ye but knew.

"Three roots bear up Dominion: Knowledge, Will, — These twain are strong, but stronger yet the third, — Obedience, — 't is the great tap-root that still,
Knit round the rock of Duty, is not stirred, Though Heaven - loosed tempests spend their utmost skill.

"Is the doom sealed for Hesper? 'T is not
we Denounce it, but the Law before all time:
The brave makes danger opportunity;
The waverer, paltering with the chance sublime,
Dwarfs it to peril: which shall Hesper be?

"Hath he let vultures climb his eagle's seat
To make Jove's bolts purveyors of their maw ?
Hath he the Many's plaudits found more
sweet Than Wisdom ? held Opinion's wind for Law ?
Then let him hearken for the doomster's
feet!

"Rough are the steps, slow-hewn in flintiest rock,
States climb to power by; slippery those with gold
Down which they stumble to eternal mock:
No chafferer's hand shall long the sceptre
hold,
Who, given a Fate to shape, would sell the block.

"We sing old Sagas, songs of weal and woe, Mystic because too cheaply understood; Dark sayings are not ours; men hear and
know,
See Evil weak, see strength alone in Good, Yet hope to stem God's fire with walls of tow.

"Time Was unlocks the riddle of Time Is,
That offers choice of glory or of gloom;
The solver makes Time Shall Be surely his.
But hasten, Sisters! for even now the tomb Grates its slow hinge and calls from the abyss."

"But not for him," I cried, "not yet for
him,
Whose large horizon, westering, star by star Wins from the void to where on Ocean's rim
The sunset shuts the world with golden bar, Not yet his thews shall fail, his eye grow dim!

"His shall be larger manhood, saved for those That walk unblenching through the trial-fires;
Not suffering, but faint heart, is worst of woes,
And he no base-born son of craven sires, Whose eye need blench confronted with his foes.

"Tears may be ours, but proud, for those who win Death's royal purple in the foeman's lines;
Peace, too, brings tears; and mid the battle-din,
The wiser ear some text of God divines,
For the sheathed blade may rust with darker sin.

"God, give us peace! not such as lulls to sleep, But sword on thigh, and brow with purpose knit!
And let our Ship of State to harbor sweep,
Her ports all up, her battle-lanterns lit,
And her leashed thunders gathering for their leap!"

So cried I with clenched hands and passionate pain, Thinking of dear ones by Potomac's side; Again the loon laughed mocking, and again
The echoes bayed far down the night and died, While waking I recalled my wandering brain.

TWO SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF BLONDEL

AUTUMN, 1863

SCENE I. — Near a castle in Germany.

"T WERE no hard task, perchance, to win
The popular laurel for my song;
"T were only to comply with sin,
And own the crown, though snatched by wrong;
Rather Truth's chaplet let me wear, Though sharp as death its thorns may sting;
Loyal to Loyalty, I bear
No badge but of my rightful king.

Patient by town and tower I wait,
Or o'er the blustering moorland go;
I buy no praise at cheaper rate,
Or what faint hearts may fancy so;
For me, no joy in lady's bower,
Or hall, or tourney, will I sing, Till the slow stars wheel round the hour
That crowns my hero and my king.

While all the land runs red with strife,
And wealth is won by pedler-crimes, Let who will find content in life And tinkle in unmanly rhymes;
I wait and seek; through dark and light, Safe in my heart my hope I bring,
Till I once more my faith may plight
To him my whole soul owns her king.

When power is filched by drone and dolt,
And, with caught breath and flashing eye,
Her knuckles whitening round the bolt, Vengeance leans eager from the sky,
While this and that the people guess,
And to the skirts of praters cling,
Who court the crowd they should compress,
I turn in scorn to seek my king.

Shut in what tower of darkling chance Or dungeon of a narrow doom, Dream'st thou of battle-axe and lance That for the Cross make crashing room?
Come! with hushed breath the battle waits
In the wild van thy mace's swing;
While doubters parley with their fates,
Make thou thine own and ours, my king!

O strong to keep upright the old,
And wise to buttress with the new,
Prudent, as only are the bold,
Clear-eyed, as only are the true,
To foes benign, to friendship stern, Intent to imp Law's broken wing,
Who would not die, if death might earn
The right to kiss thy hand, my king?

SCENE II. — An Inn near the Château of Chalus.

Well, the whole thing is over, and here I sit With one arm in a sling and a milk-score of gashes,
And this flagon of Cyprus must e'en warm my wit, Since what's left of youth's flame is a head flecked with ashes.

remember I sat in this very same inn, — I was young then, and one young man thought I was handsome, — had found out what prison King Richard was in,
 And was spurring for England to push on the ransom.

How I scorned the dull souls that sat guz-zling around
 And knew not my secret nor recked my derision!

Let the world sink or swim, John or Richard be crowned,

All one, so the beer-tax got lenient revision.

How little I dreamed, as I tramped up and
 down,

That granting our wish one of Fate's saddest jokes is!

had mine with a vengeance, — my king got his crown,

And made his whole business to break other folks's.

might as well join in the safe old tum, tum :

A hero's an excellent loadstar, — but,
 bless ye,

What infinite odds 'twixt a hero to come
 And your only too palpable hero in esse!

Precisely the odds (such examples are rife)
 'Twixt the poem conceived and the rhyme

we make show of,

'Twixt the boy's morning dream and the wake-up of life,

'Twixt the Blondel God meant and a Blondel I know of!

But the world's better off, I'm convinced of it now,

Than if heroes, like buns, could be bought for a penny

To regard all mankind as their haltered milch-cow,

And just care for themselves. Well, God cares for the many;

or somehow the poor old Earth blunders
 along,

Each son of hers adding his mite of unfitness,

and, choosing the sure way of coming out
 wrong,

Gets to port as the next generation will witness.

You think her old ribs have come all crashing through,

If a whisk of Fate's broom snap your cobweb asunder;

But her rivets were clinched by a wiser than you,

And our sins cannot push the Lord's right hand from under.

Better one honest man who can wait for God's mind

In our poor shifting scene here though heroes were plenty!

Better one bite, at forty, of Truth's bitter
 rind,

Than the hot wine that gushed from the vintage of twenty!

I see it all now: when I wanted a king,
 'T was the kingship that failed in myself

I was seeking, —
 'T is so much less easy to do than to sing,

So much simpler to reign by a proxy than be king!

Yes, I think I do see: after all's said and sung,

Take this one rule of life and you never will rue it, —

'T is but do your own duty and hold your own tongue

And Blondel were royal himself, if he knew it!

MEMORIÆ POSITUM

R. G. SHAW

In a letter to Colonel Shaw's mother, written August 28, 1863, Lowell says: "I have been writing something about Robert; and if, after keeping a little while, it should turn out to be a poem I shall print it, but not unless I think it some way worthy of what I feel, however, for the best verse falls short of noble living and dying such as his. I would rather have my name known and blest, as his will be, through all the hovels of an outcast race, than blaring from all the trumpets of repute." He kept the poem three months and then wrote to Mr. Fields, — "You know I owe you a poem — two in my reckoning, and here is one of them. If this is not to your mind, I can hammer you out another. I have a feeling that some of it is good — but is it too long? I want to fling my leaf on dear Shaw's grave. Perhaps I was wrong in stiffening the feet of my verses a little, in order to give them a kind of slow funeral tread. But I conceived it so, and so it would be. I wanted the poem a little monumental, perhaps I have made it obituary. But tell me just how it strikes you, and don't be afraid of my nerves. They can stand much in the way of friendly frankness, and besides, I find I am acquiring a vice of modesty as I grow older."

In another letter, when speaking of the distinction between odes for the closet and odes for recitation, he says: "I chose my measures with my ears open. So I did in writing the poem on Rob Shaw. That is regular because meant only to be read, and because also I thought it should have in the form of its stanza something of the formality of an epitaph."

When, in the last stanza, Lowell wrote

"I write of one,
While with dim eyes I think of three,"

the reader recalls that moving passage in No. X. of the second series of Biglow Papers, where Mr. Hosea Biglow in his homely speech bursts forth:—

"Why, hain't I held 'em on my knee?
Did n't I love to see 'em growin',
Three likely lads ez wal could be,"—

and one knows of whom Lowell was thinking.

BENEATH the trees,
My lifelong friends in this dear spot, Sad now for eyes that see them not,
I hear the autumnal breeze
Wake the dry leaves to sigh for gladness gone, Whispering vague omens of oblivion, Hear, restless as the seas, Time's grim feet rustling through the withered grace Of many a spreading realm and strong-stemmed race, Even as my own through these.

Why make we moan
For loss that doth enrich us yet
With upward yearnings of regret?
Bleaker than unmossed stone
Our lives were but for this immortal gain Of unstilled longing and inspiring pain!
As thrills of long-hushed tone
Live in the viol, so our souls grow fine With keen vibrations from the touch divine Of noble natures gone.

'T were indiscreet
To vex the shy and sacred grief
With harsh obtrusions of relief;

Yet, Verse, with noiseless feet, Go whisper: "This death hath far choicer ends Than slowly to impearl in hearts of friends These obsequies 't is meet
Not to seclude in closets of the heart, But, church-like, with wide doorways, impart
Even to the heedless street."

II

Brave, good, and true,
I see him stand before me now,
And read again on that young brow, Where every hope was new,
How sweet were life! Yet, by the mount firm-set,
And look made up for Duty's utmost debt
I could divine he knew That death within the sulphurous hostilities,
In the mere wreck of nobly-pitched designs Plucks heart's-ease, and not rue.

Happy their end
Who vanish down life's evening stream Placid as swans that drift in dream Round the next river-bend!
Happy long life, with honor at the close, Friends' painless tears, the softened thought of foes!
And yet, like him, to spend
All at a gush, keeping our first faith sure From mid-life's doubt and eld's contentment poor, What more could Fortune send?

Right in the van,
On the red rampart's slippery swell,
With heart that beat a charge, he fell Foeward, as fits a man;
But the high soul burns on to light men
feet
Where death for noble ends makes dying
sweet;
His life her crescent's span Orbs full with share in their undarkening days
Who ever climbed the battailous steep
praise
Since valor's praise began.

His life's expense
Hath won him coeternal youth

With the immaculate prime of Truth ;
 While we, who make pretence
 At living on, and wake and eat and sleep, And life's stale trick by repetition keep,
 Our fickle permanence
 (A poor leaf-shadow on a brook, whose play Of busy idlesse ceases with our day)
 Is the mere cheat of sense.

We bide our chance,
 Unhappy, and make terms with Fate
 A little more to let us wait ;
 He leads for aye the advance, Hope's forlorn-hopes that plant the desperate good For nobler Earths and days of manlier mood ;
 Our wall of circumstance Cleared at a bound, he flashes o'er the
 fight,
 A saintly shape of fame, to cheer the
 right
 And steel each wavering glance.

I write of one,
 While with dim eyes I think of three ;
 Who weeps not others fair and brave as
 he ?
 Ah, when the fight is won,
 Dear Land, whom triflers now make bold to scorn,
 (Thee ! from whose forehead Earth awaits her morn,)
 How nobler shall the sun Flame in thy sky, how braver breathe thy
 air,
 That thou bred'st children who for thee could dare
 And die as thine have done !

ON BOARD THE '76

WRITTEN FOR MR. BRYANT'S SEVEN TIETH BIRTHDAY

NOVEMBER 3, 1864

In a letter written to R. W. Gilder, February 9, 1887, Lowell characterizes this poem as 'a kind of palinode to what I said of him in the Fable for Critics, which has something of youth's infallibility in it, or at any rate of youth's irresponsibility.'

OUR ship lay tumbling in an angry sea, Her rudder gone, her mainmast o'er the
 side ;
 Her scuppers, from the waves' clutch staggering free, Trailed threads of priceless crimson through the tide ;
 Sails, shrouds, and spars with pirate cannon torn,
 We lay, awaiting morn.

Awaiting morn, such morn as mocks despair ;
 And she that bare the promise of the world
 Within her sides, now hopeless, helmless,
 bare,
 At random o'er the wildering waters hurled ;
 The reek of battle drifting slow alee Not sullener than we.

Morn came at last to peer into our woe, When lo, a sail ! Now surely help was
 nigh ;
 The red cross flames aloft, Christ's pledge ;
 but no,
 Her black guns grinning hate, she rushes
 by
 And hails us : — "Gains the leak ! Ay, so we thought !
 Sink, then, with curses fraught !"

I leaned against my gun still angry-hot,
 And my lids tingled with the tears held
 back :
 This scorn methought was crueller than shot:
 The manly death-grip in the battle-wrack,
 Yard-arm to yard-arm, were more friendly far
 Than such fear-smothered war.

There our foe wallowed, like a wounded brute
 The fiercer for his hurt. What now were best ?
 Once more tug bravely at the peril's root, Though death came with it ? Or evade the test
 If right or wrong in this God's world of ours
 Be leagued with mightier powers ?

Some, faintly loyal, felt their pulses lag With the slow beat that doubts and then despairs;
 Some, caitiff, would have struck the starry flag
 That knits us with our past, and makes us heirs
 Of deeds high-hearted as were ever done
 'Neath the all-seeing sun.

But there was one, the Singer of our crew, Upon whose head Age waved his peaceful sign,
 But whose red heart's-blood no surrender
 knew;
 And couchant under brows of massive line,
 The eyes, like guns beneath a parapet, Watched, charged with lightnings yet.

The voices of the hills did his obey;
 The torrents flashed and tumbled in his
 song;
 He brought our native fields from far
 away,
 Or set us 'mid the innumerable throng Of dateless woods, or where we heard the calm Old homestead's evening psalm.

But now he sang of faith to things unseen, Of freedom's birthright given to us in trust;
 And words of doughty cheer he spoke between,
 That made all earthly fortune seem as
 dust, Matched with that duty, old as Time and new,
 Of being brave and true.

We, listening, learned what makes the might of words, — Manhood to back them, constant as a star;
 His voice rammed home our cannon, edged our swords,
 And sent our boarders shouting; shroud and spar Heard him and stiffened; the sails heard, and wooed
 The winds with loftier mood.

In our dark hours he manned our guns
 again;

Remanned ourselves from his own man-hood's stores;
 Pride, honor, country, throbbed through all his strain;
 And shall we praise? God's praise was his before;
 And on our futile laurels he looks down, Himself our bravest crown.

ODE RECITED AT THE HAR- VARD COMMEMORATION

JULY 21, 1865

Of none of his poems did Lowell himself write more critically, and into none, perhaps did he pour so much fervor in the composition.
 In a playful letter to Miss Norton, written in somewhat of a reaction four days after the delivery of the poem, he wrote: "Was I not so rapt with the fervor of conception as I have not been these ten years, losing my sleep, my appetite and my flesh, those attributes to which I before alluded as nobly uniting us in a common nature with our kind? Did I not for two days exasperate everybody that came near me by reciting passages in order to try them on?
 Did I not even fall backward and downward to the old folly of hopeful youth, and think I had written something really good at last? Am I am I not now enduring those retributive dumps which ever follow such sinful exultations, the Erynnyes of Vanity? . . . Like a boy, I mistook my excitement for inspiration, and here I am in the mud. You see I am a little disappointed and a little few (un petit peu) vexed.
 I did not make the hit I expected, and am ashamed at having been again tempted into thinking I could write poetry, a delusion from which I have been tolerably free these dozen years." The next day in a postscript he added
 "I have not got cool yet (I mean as to nerves and lie awake at night thinking how much better my verses might have been, only I can make 'em so." Twenty years later in recalling the circumstances of composition he wrote to Mr. Gilder: "The passage about Lincoln was not in the ode as originally recited, but added immediately after. . . . The ode itself was an improvisation. Two days before the Commemoration I had told my friend [F. J.
 Child] that it was impossible — that I was down as a door-mat. But the next day something gave me a jog and the whole thing came out of me with a rush. I sat up all night writing it out clear, and took it on the morning of the day to Child. 'I have something, but don't yet know what it is, or whether it will do

Look at it and tell me.' He went a little way apart with it under an elm-tree in the College Yard. He read a passage here and there, brought it back to me and said: 'Do? I should think so! Don't you be scared.' And I was n't, but virtue enough had gone out of me to make me weak for a fortnight after. I was amazed at the praises I got. Trevelyan told me afterwards that he never could have carried through the abolition of purchase in the British Army but for the re-enforcement he got from that poem."

A few months after the delivery of the Ode the proposal to reprint it in Harvard Memorial Biographies led to a correspondence with the editor, Col. T. W. Higginson, in which some emendations and additions were proposed. "Your criticism," Lowell writes, "is perfectly just, and I am much obliged to you for it—though I might defend myself, I believe, by some constructions even looser in some of the Greek choruses. But, on the whole, where I have my choice I prefer to make sense. The fact is that the Ode was written at a heat—such a one, indeed, as leaves one colder than common afterwards—and I have hardly looked at it since. There is a horrible truth in the litera scripta manet, and the confounded things make mouths at us when we try to alter, but I think this may do:—

'Ere yet the sharp, decisive word Redden the cannon's lips, and while the sword,' (Stanza v.)

On looking farther, I find to my intense disgust a verse without a mate in the last stanza but one, and I must put in a patch. If I had only kept my manuscript! We must read

'And bid her navies, that so lately hurled Their crashing battle, hold their thunders in,' or else the poor 'world' just below will have no law of gravitation to hold itself up by. I know I had something better originally, but I can't get it back. Item, in the eighth please make this change:—

'Virtue treads paths that end not in the grave, But through those constellations go That shed celestial influence on the brave.
If life were but to draw this dusty breath That doth our wits enslave,
And with the crowd to hurry to and fro, Seeking we know not what, and finding death, These did unwisely; but if living be,
As some are born to know,
The power to ennoble, and inspire In other souls our brave desire For fruit, not leaves, of Time's immortal tree, These truly live, our thought's essential fire,
And to the saner,' etc.

There! I won't open the book again, or I shall write you another ode instead of mending this. But in this latter passage the metre wanted limbering a little—it was built too much with blank-verse bricks—and I think I have bettered it, at least to the ear." The second only of these emendations was incorporated in the ode at some later date.

In writing some time afterward to J. B. Thayer, who had been raising some questions regarding the structure of the Ode, Lowell again recurred to the manner in which he had been possessed by the poem. "I am not sure," he writes, "if I understand what you say about the tenth strophe. You will observe that it leads naturally to the eleventh, and that I there justify a certain narrowness in it as an expression of the popular feeling as well as my own. I confess I have never got over the feeling of wrath with which (just after the death of my nephew Willie) I read in an English paper that nothing was to be hoped of an army officered by tailors' apprentices and butcher-boys. The poem was written with a vehement speed, which I thought I had lost in the skirts of my professor's gown. Till within two days of the celebration I was hopelessly dumb, and then it all came with a rush, literally making me lean (mi fece magro) and so nervous that I was weeks in getting over it. I was longer in getting the new (eleventh) strophe to my mind than in writing the rest of the poem. In that I hardly changed a word, and it was so undeliberate that I did not find out till after it was printed that some of the verses lacked corresponding rhymes. . . . I doubt you are right in wishing it more historical. But then I could not have written it. I had put the ethical and political view so often in prose that I was weary of it. The motives of the war? I had impatiently argued them again and again—but for an ode they must be in the blood and not the memory. One of my great defects (I have always been conscious of it) is an impatience of mind which makes me contemptuously indifferent about arguing matters that have once become convictions."

Once more, in 1877, in writing to the same correspondent, he quotes a passage from a paper in the Cornhill: "Mr. Lowell's Commemoration Ode is a specimen of the formless poem of unequal lines and broken stanzas supposed to be in the manner of Pindar, but truly the descendant of our royalist poet's [Cowley] 'majestick numbers.'" In animadversion on this Lowell goes on: "Whatever my other shortcomings (and they are plenty, as none knows better than I), want of reflection is not one of them. The poems [this and Lowell's other odes] were all intended for public recitation. That was the first thing to be considered. I suppose my ear (from long and painful practice on Φ B K poems) has more technical experience in this than almost any. The least tedious measure is the rhymed heroic but this, too, palls unless relieved by passages of wit or even mere fun. A long series of uniform stanzas (I am always speaking of public recitation) with regularly recurring rhymes produces somnolence among the men and a desperate resort to their fans on the part of the women. No method has yet been invented by which the train of thought or feeling can be shunted off from the epical to the lyrical track. My ears have been jolted often enough over the sleepers on such occasions to know that. I know something (of course an American can't know much) about Pindar. But his odes had the advantage of being chanted. Now, my problem was to contrive a measure which should not be tedious by uniformity, which should vary with varying moods, in which the transitions (including those of the voice) should be managed without jar. I at first thought of mixed rhymed and blank verses of unequal measures, like those in the choruses of Samson Agonistes, which are in the main masterly. Of course Milton deliberately departed from that stricter form of the Greek Chorus to which it was bound quite as much (I suspect) by the law of its musical accompaniment as by any sense of symmetry. I wrote some stanzas of the Commemoration Ode on this theory at first, leaving some verses without a rhyme to match. But my ear was better pleased when the rhyme, coming at a longer interval, as a far-off echo rather than instant reverberation, produced the same effect almost, and yet was grateful by unexpectedly recalling an association and faint reminiscence of consonance."

I

WEAK-WINGED is song, Nor aims at that clear-ethered height Whither the brave deed climbs for light:
We seem to do them wrong, Bringing our robin's-leaf to deck their hearse
Who in warm life-blood wrote their nobler verse,
Our trivial song to honor those who come With ears attuned to strenuous trump and drum,
And shaped in squadron-strophes their desire,
Live battle-odes whose lines were steel and
fire:
Yet sometimes feathered words are
strong,
A gracious memory to buoy up and save From Lethe's dreamless ooze, the common grave
Of the unventurous throng.

II

To-day our Reverend Mother welcomes
back
Her wisest Scholars, those who understood
The deeper teaching of her mystic tome,
And offered their fresh lives to make it
good:
No lore of Greece or Rome, No science peddling with the names of
things,
Or reading stars to find inglorious fates,
Can lift our life with wings Far from Death's idle gulf that for the many waits,
And lengthen out our dates
With that clear fame whose memory sings In manly hearts to come, and nerves them and dilates:
Nor such thy teaching, Mother of us all!
Not such the trumpet-call Of thy diviner mood,
That could thy sons entice From happy homes and toils, the fruitful nest
Of those half-virtues which the world calls
best,
Into War's tumult rude;
But rather far that stern device
The sponsors chose that round thy cradle
stood
In the dim, unventured wood,
The VERITAS that lurks beneath The letter's unprolific sheath, Life of whate'er makes life worth living Seed-grain of high emprise, immortal food One heavenly thing whereof earth hath the giving.

Many loved Truth, and lavished life's bes-oil
Amid the dust of books to find her,
Content at last, for guerdon of their toil, With the east mantle she hath left behind her.
Many in sad faith sought for her, Many with crossed hands sighed for
her;
But these, our brothers, fought for
her,
At life's dear peril wrought for her,
So loved her that they died for her,
Tasting the raptured fleetness

Of her divine completeness:
 Their higher instinct knew Those love her best who to themselves are
 true,
 And what they dare to dream of, dare to
 do;
 They followed her and found her Where all may hope to find,
 Not in the ashes of the burnt-out mind, But beautiful, with danger's sweetness round her.
 Where faith made whole with deed Breathes its awakening breath
 Into the lifeless creed,
 They saw her plumed and mailed,
 With sweet, stern face unveiled,
 And all-repaying eyes, look proud on them in death.

Our slender life runs rippling by, and glides
 Into the silent hollow of the past;
 What is there that abides
 To make the next age better for the last?
 Is earth too poor to give us Something to live for here that shall outlive us?
 Some more substantial boon Than such as flows and ebbs with Fortune's fickle moon?
 The little that we see
 From doubt is never free;
 The little that we do Is but half-nobly true;
 With our laborious hiving What men call treasure, and the gods call dross,
 Life seems a jest of Fate's contriving, Only secure in every one's conniving,
 A long account of nothings paid with loss, Where we poor puppets, jerked by unseen
 wires,
 After our little hour of strut and rave,
 With all our pasteboard passions and desires,
 Loves, hates, ambitions, and immortal fires, Are tossed pell-mell together in the grave.
 But stay! no age was e'er degenerate,
 Unless men held it at too cheap a rate, For in our likeness still we shape our
 fate.
 Ah, there is something here Unfathomed by the cynic's sneer,

Something that gives our feeble light
 A high immunity from Night, Something that leaps life's narrow bars To claim its birthright with the hosts of heaven;
 A seed of sunshine that can leaven Our earthly dullness with the beams of stars,
 And glorify our clay With light from fountains elder than the
 Day;
 A conscience more divine than we,
 A gladness fed with secret tears,
 A vexing, forward-reaching sense Of some more noble permanence;
 A light across the sea,
 Which haunts the soul and will not let it be, Still beaconing from the heights of undegenerate years.

Whither leads the path
 To ampler fates that leads?
 Not down through flowery meads,
 To reap an aftermath
 Of youth's vainglorious weeds,
 But up the steep, amid the wrath
 And shock of deadly-hostile creeds, Where the world's best hope and stay
 By battle's flashes gropes a desperate way, And every turf the fierce foot clings to bleeds.
 Peace hath her not ignoble wreath,
 Ere yet the sharp, decisive word Light the black lips of cannon, and the sword
 Dreams in its easeful sheath;
 But some day the live coal behind the
 thought,
 Whether from Baäl's stone obscene,
 Or from the shrine serene Of God's pure altar brought, Bursts up in flame; the war of tongue and pen Learns with what deadly purpose it was fraught,
 And, helpless in the fiery passion caught, Shakes all the pillared state with shock of
 men:
 Some day the soft Ideal that we wooed Confronts us fiercely, foe-beset, pursued, And cries reproachful: "Was it, then, my
 praise,
 And not myself was loved? Prove now thy truth;

I claim of thee the promise of thy youth;
Give me thy life, or cower in empty phrase,
The victim of thy genius, not its mate!"

Life may be given in many ways,
And loyalty to Truth be sealed
As bravely in the closet as the field,
So bountiful is Fate;
But then to stand beside her,
When craven churls deride her,
To front a lie in arms and not to yield,
This shows, methinks, God's plan
And measure of a stalwart man, Limbed like the old heroic breeds, Who stands self-poised on manhood's solid earth,
Not forced to frame excuses for his birth,
Fed from within with all the strength he needs.

Such was he, our Martyr-Chief, Whom late the Nation he had led,
With ashes on her head,
Wept with the passion of an angry grief:
Forgive me, if from present things I turn To speak what in my heart will beat and burn,
And hang my wreath on his world-honored urn.
Nature, they say, doth dote,
And cannot make a man
Save on some worn-out plan,
Repeating us by rote:
For him her Old-World moulds aside she threw,
And, choosing sweet clay from the breast
Of the unexhausted West,
With stuff untainted shaped a hero new, Wise, steadfast in the strength of God, and
true.
How beautiful to see
Once more a shepherd of mankind indeed, Who loved his charge, but never loved to lead;
One whose meek flock the people joyed to
be,
Not lured by any cheat of birth,
But by his clear-grained human worth,
And brave old wisdom of sincerity!
They knew that outward grace is dust;
They could not choose but trust
In that sure-footed mind's unfaltering skill, And supple-tempered will

That bent like perfect steel to spring again and thrust.

His was no lonely mountain-peak of
mind,
Thrusting to thin air o'er our cloudy
bars,
A sea-mark now, now lost in vapors
blind;
Broad prairie rather, genial, level-lined, Fruitful and friendly for all human
kind,
Yet also nigh to heaven and loved of loftiest stars.

Nothing of Europe here, Or, then, of Europe fronting mornward
still,
Ere any names of Serf and Peer Could Nature's equal scheme deface And thwart her genial will;
Here was a type of the true elder race,
And one of Plutarch's men talked with us face to face.

I praise him not; it were too late;
And some innate weakness there must be In him who condescends to victory Such as the Present gives, and cannot wait, Safe in himself as in a fate.

So always firmly he:
He knew to bide his time,
And can his fame abide,
Still patient in his simple faith sublime, Till the wise years decide.

Great captains, with their guns and drums,
Disturb our judgment for the hour,
But at last silence comes;
These all are gone, and, standing like a tower,
Our children shall behold his fame.
The kindly-earnest, brave, foreseeing
man, Sagacious, patient, dreading praise, not blame,
New birth of our new soil, the first American.

Long as man's hope insatiate can discern Or only guess some more inspiring
goal
Outside of Self, enduring as the pole, Along whose course the flying axles burn Of spirits bravely-pitched, earth's manlier brood;

Long as below we cannot find
 The meed that stills the inexorable mind;
 So long this faith to some ideal Good,
 Under whatever mortal names it masks, Freedom, Law, Country, this ethereal mood
 That thanks the Fates for their severer tasks,
 Feeling its challenged pulses leap,
 While others skulk in subterfuges cheap,
 And, set in Danger's van, has all the boon it asks,
 Shall win man's praise and woman's love,
 Shall be a wisdom that we set above
 All other skills and gifts to culture dear, A virtue round whose forehead we in-wreath
 Laurels that with a living passion breathe When other crowns grow, while we twine them, sear.
 What brings us thronging these high rites to pay,
 And seal these hours the noblest of our year, Save that our brothers found this better way?

VIII

We sit here in the Promised Land That flows with Freedom's honey and milk;
 But 't was they won it, sword in hand,
 Making the nettle danger soft for us as silk.
 We welcome back our bravest and our best;— Ah me! not all! some come not with the
 rest,
 Who went forth brave and bright as any
 here!
 I strive to mix some gladness with my strain,
 But the sad strings complain,
 And will not please the ear:
 I sweep them for a pæan, but they wane Again and yet again
 Into a dirge, and die away, in pain.
 In these brave ranks I only see the gaps, Thinking of dear ones whom the dumb turf wraps, Dark to the triumph which they died to
 gain: Fittier may others greet the living,
 For me the past is unforgiving;
 I with uncovered head Salute the sacred dead, Who went, and who return not.— Say not
 so!

'T is not the grapes of Canaan that repay, But the high faith that failed not by the
 way;
 Virtue treads paths that end not in the grave;
 No ban of endless night exiles the brave;
 And to the saner mind
 We rather seem the dead that stayed behind.
 Blow, trumpets, all your exultations blow!
 For never shall their aureoled presence lack:
 I see them muster in a gleaming row,
 With ever-youthful brows that nobler show;
 We find in our dull road their shining track;

In every nobler mood
 We feel the orient of their spirit glow, Part of our life's unalterable good,
 Of all our saintlier aspiration;
 They come transfigured back, Secure from change in their high-hearted
 ways,
 Beautiful evermore, and with the rays Of morn on their white Shields of Expectation!

IX

But is there hope to save Even this ethereal essence from the grave?
 What ever 'scaped Oblivion's subtle
 wrong
 Save a few clarion names, or golden threads of song?
 Before my musing eye
 The mighty ones of old sweep by,
 Disvoicèd now and insubstantial things,
 As noisy once as we; poor ghosts of kings, Shadows of empire wholly gone to dust,
 And many races, nameless long ago,
 To darkness driven by that imperious gust
 Of ever-rushing Time that here doth
 blow:
 O visionary world, condition strange,
 Where naught abiding is but only Change, Where the deep-bolted stars themselves still shift and range!
 Shall we to more continuance make pretence?
 Renown builds tombs; a life-estate is Wit;
 And, bit by bit,
 The cunning years steal all from us but woe; Leaves are we, whose decays no harvest sow.

But, when we vanish hence,
 Shall they lie forceless in the dark below, Save to make green their little length of sods,
 Or deepen pansies for a year or two,
 Who now to us are shining-sweet as gods?
 Was dying all they had the skill to do?
 That were not fruitless: but the Soul resents
 Such short-lived service, as if blind events Ruled without her, or earth could so endure;
 She claims a more divine investiture
 Of longer tenure than Fame's airy rents; Whate'er she touches doth her nature share;
 Her inspiration haunts the ennobled air,
 Gives eyes to mountains blind, Ears to the deaf earth, voices to the wind,
 And her clear trump sings succor everywhere
 By lonely bivouacs to the wakeful mind;
 For soul inherits all that soul could dare:
 Yea, Manhood hath a wider span
 And larger privilege of life than man.
 The single deed, the private sacrifice, So radiant now through proudly-hidden
 tears,
 Is covered up ere long from mortal eyes With thoughtless drift of the deciduous
 years;
 But that high privilege that makes all men peers,
 That leap of heart whereby a people rise Up to a noble anger's height, And, flamed on by the Fates, not shrink, but grow more bright,
 That swift validity in noble veins,
 Of choosing danger and disdaining
 shame,
 Or being set on flame
 By the pure fire that flies all contact base But wraps its chosen with angelic might,
 These are imperishable gains,
 Sure as the sun, medicinal as light, These hold great futures in their lusty reins
 And certify to earth a new imperial race.

Who now shall sneer?
 Who dare again to say we trace
 Our lines to a plebeian race?
 Roundhead and Cavalier!

Dumb are those names erewhile in battle loud;
 Dream-footed as the shadow of a cloud,
 They flit across the ear:
 That is best blood that hath most iron in 't.
 To edge resolve with, pouring without stint
 For what makes manhood dear.
 Tell us not of Plantagenets, Hapsburgs, and Guelfs, whose thin bloods crawl
 Down from some victor in a border-brawl!
 How poor their outworn coronets, Matched with one leaf of that plain civic wreath
 Our brave for honor's blazon shall bequeath, Through whose desert a rescued Nation sets
 Her heel on treason, and the trumpet hears Shout victory, tingling Europe's sullen ears With vain resentments and more vain regrets!

XI

Not in anger, not in pride, Pure from passion's mixture rude Ever to base earth allied,
 But with far-heard gratitude,
 Still with heart and voice renewed,
 To heroes living and dear martyrs dead,
 The strain should close that consecrates our brave.
 Lift the heart and lift the head!
 Lofty be its mood and grave,
 Not without a martial ring,
 Not without a prouder tread
 And a peal of exultation:
 Little right has he to sing Through whose heart in such an hour Beats no march of conscious power, Sweeps no tumult of elation!
 'T is no Man we celebrate,
 By his country's victories great,
 A hero half, and half the whim of Fate,
 But the pith and marrow of a Nation
 Drawing force from all her men, Highest, humblest, weakest, all,
 For her time of need, and then Pulsing it again through them, Till the basest can no longer cower, Feeling his soul spring up divinely tall, Touched but in passing by her mantle-hem.
 Come back, then, noble pride, for 't is her dower!

How could poet ever tower,
 If his passions, hopes, and fears,
 If his triumphs and his tears,
 Kept not measure with his people ?
 Boom, cannon, boom to all the winds and waves !
 Clash out, glad bells, from every rocking
 steeple !
 Banners, adance with triumph, bend your staves !
 And from every mountain-peak Let beacon-fire to answering beacon
 speak, Katahdin tell Monadnock, Whiteface
 he,
 And so leap on in light from sea to sea, Till the glad news be sent Across a kindling continent, Making earth feel more firm and air breathe braver :
 "Be proud ! for she is saved, and all have helped to save her !
 She that lifts up the manhood of the poor,
 She of the open soul and open door,
 With room about her hearth for all mankind !
 The fire is dreadful in her eyes no
 more ;
 From her bold front the helm she doth unbind, Sends all her handmaid armies back to spin,
 And bids her navies, that so lately hurled
 Their crashing battle, hold their thunders in,
 Swimming like birds of calm along the unharmed shore.

No challenge sends she to the elder
 world,
 That looked askance and hated ; a light scorn
 Plays o'er her mouth, as round her mighty knees
 She calls her children back, and waits the morn
 Of nobler day, enthroned between her subject seas."

XII

Bow down, dear Land, for thou hast found release !
 Thy God, in these distempered days, Hath taught thee the sure wisdom of His ways,
 And through thine enemies hath wrought thy peace !
 Bow down in prayer and praise !
 No poorest in thy borders but may now Lift to the juster skies a man's enfranchised brow.
 O Beautiful ! my Country ! ours once
 more !
 Smoothing thy gold of war-dishevelled hair O'er such sweet brows as never other wore,
 And letting thy set lips,
 Freed from wrath's pale eclipse,
 The rosy edges of their smile lay bare,
 What words divine of lover or of poet Could tell our love and make thee know it, Among the Nations bright beyond compare ?
 What were our lives without thee ?
 What all our lives to save thee ?
 We reck not what we gave thee ;
 We will not dare to doubt thee,
 But ask whatever else, and we will dare !

TO THE MUSE

WHITHER ? Albeit I follow fast,
 In all life's circuit I but find,
 Not where thou art, but where thou wast, Sweet beckoner, more fleet than wind !
 I haunt the pine-dark solitudes,
 With soft brown silence carpeted,
 And plot to snare thee in the woods :
 Peace I o'ertake, but thou art fled !

I find the rock where thou didst rest,
 The moss thy skimming foot hath prest ;
 All Nature with thy parting thrills, Like branches after birds new-flown ; Thy passage hill and hollow fills With hints of virtue not their own ;
 In dimples still the water slips
 Where thou hast dipt thy finger-tips ;
 Just, just beyond, forever burn Gleams of a grace without return ;

Upon thy shade I plant my foot,
And through my frame strange raptures shoot;
All of thee but thyself I grasp;
I seem to fold thy luring shape,
And vague air to my bosom clasp, Thou lithe, perpetual Escape !

One mask and then another drops,
And thou art secret as before:
Sometimes with flooded ear I list,
And hear thee, wondrous organist,
From mighty continental stops
A thunder of new music pour;
Through pipes of earth and air and stone Thy inspiration deep is blown;
Through mountains, forests, open downs, Lakes, railroads, prairies, states, and towns, Thy gathering fugue goes rolling on From Maine to utmost Oregon;
The factory-wheels in cadence hum,
From brawling parties concords come;
All this I hear, or seem to hear,
But when, enchanted, I draw near To mate with words the various theme, Life seems a whiff of kitchen steam, History an organ-grinder's thrum,
For thou hast slept from it and me
And all thine organ-pipes left dumb, Most mutable Perversity !

Not weary yet, I still must seek,
And hope for luck next day, next week;
I go to see the great man ride, Shiplike, the swelling human tide
That floods to bear him into port, Trophied from Senate-hall and Court;
Thy magnetism, I feel it there,
Thy rhythmic presence fleet and rare,
Making the Mob a moment fine
With glimpses of their own Divine,
As in their demigod they see Their cramped ideal soaring free;
'T was thou didst bear the fire about,
That, like the springing of a mine,
Sent up to heaven the street-long shout;
Full well I know that thou wast here,
It was thy breath that brushed my ear;
But vainly in the stress and whirl
I dive for thee, the moment's pearl.

Through every shape thou well canst run,
Proteus, 'twixt rise and set of sun,
Well pleased with logger-camps in Maine

As where Milan's pale Duomo lies
A stranded glacier on the plain,
Its peaks and pinnacles of ice Melted in many a quaint device,
And sees, above the city's din, Afar its silent Alpine kin:
I track thee over carpets deep To wealth's and beauty's inmost keep;
Across the sand of bar-room floors
Mid the stale reek of boosing boors; Where drowse the hay-field's fragrant heats,
Or the flail-heart of Autumn beats;
I dog thee through the market's throngs To where the sea with myriad tongues Laps the green edges of the pier,
And the tall ships that eastward steer, Curtsy their farewells to the town,
O'er the curved distance lessening down;
I follow allwhere for thy sake,
Touch thy robe's hem, but ne'er o'ertake, Find where, scarce yet unmoving, lies,
Warm from thy limbs, thy last disguise;
But thou another shape hast donned,
And lurest still just, just beyond !

But here a voice, I know not whence,
Thrills clearly through my inward sense, Saying : " See where she sits at home While thou in search of her dost roam !
All summer long her ancient wheel

Whirls humming by the open door,
Or, when the hickory's social zeal Sets the wide chimney in a roar, Close-nestled by the tinkling hearth,
It modulates the household mirth
With that sweet serious undertone Of duty, music all her own;
Still as of old she sits and spins
Our hopes, our sorrows, and our sins;
With equal care she twines the fates Of cottages and mighty states;
She spins the earth, the air, the sea,
The maiden's unschooled fancy free,
The boy's first love, the man's first grief,
The budding and the fall o' the leaf;
The piping west-wind's snowy care
For her their cloudy fleeces spare, Or from the thorns of evil times
She can glean wool to twist her rhymes;
Morning and noon and eve supply
To her their fairest tints for dye, But ever through her twirling thread
There spires one line of warmest red, Tinged from the homestead's genial heart,

The stamp and warrant of her art;
 With this Time's sickle she outwears,
 And blunts the Sisters' baffled shears.

"Harass her not: thy heat and stir But greater coyness breed in her;
 Yet thou mayst find, ere Age's frost, Thy long apprenticeship not lost, Learning at last that Stygian Fate Unbends to him that knows to wait.
 The Muse is womanish, nor deigns
 Her love to him that pules and plains;
 With proud, averted face she stands
 To him that woos with empty hands.
 Make thyself free of Manhood's guild; Pull down thy barns and greater build;

The wood, the mountain, and the plain Wave breast-deep with the poet's grain;
 Pluck thou the sunset's fruit of gold, Glean from the heavens and ocean old;
 From fireside lone and trampling street
 Let thy life garner daily wheat;
 The epic of a man rehearse,
 Be something better than thy verse;
 Make thyself rich, and then the Muse Shall court thy precious interviews, Shall take thy head upon her knee,
 And such enchantment lilt to thee,
 That thou shalt hear the life-blood flow From farthest stars to grass-blades low,
 And find the Listener's science still Transcends the Singer's deepest skill!"

THE CATHEDRAL

To

MR. JAMES T. FIELDS

MY DEAR FIELDS:

Dr. Johnson's sturdy self-respect led him to invent the Bookseller as a substitute for the Patron. My relations with you have enabled me to discover how pleasantly the Friend may replace the Bookseller. Let me record my sense of many thoughtful services by associating your name with a poem which owes its appearance in this form to your partiality.

Cordially yours,

J. R. LOWELL.

CAMBRIDGE, November 29, 1869.

The Cathedral was printed first in The Atlantic Monthly for January, 1870, but was shortly after published in a volume by itself with changes and additions. The poem was wrought at apparently with something of the loving enthusiasm which we are wont to ascribe to the builders of actual cathedrals. It was written in the summer of 1869 and returned to frequently before publication. When in the midst of the work he wrote to Mr. Howells, then editor of the Atlantic, "Up to time indeed! The fear is not about time, but space. You won't have room in your menagerie for such a displeaseworthy saurus. The verses if stretched end to end in a continuous line would go clear round the cathedral they celebrate, and nobody (I fear) the wiser. I can't tell yet what they are. There seems a bit of clean carving here and there, a solid buttress or two, and perhaps a gleam through painted glass—but I have not copied it out yet, nor indeed read it over consecutively." A little later he wrote to Miss Norton: "I hope it is good, for it fairly trussed me at last and bore me up as high as my poor lungs will bear into the heaven of invention. I was happy writing it, and so steeped in it that if I had written to you it would have been in blank verse. It is a kind of religious poem, and is called A Day at Chartres. . . . I can't tell yet how it will stand. Already I am beginning to—to—you know what I mean—to taste my champagne next morning."

The poem received some comment from two distinguished critics, Mr. Leslie Stephen and Mr. Ruskin. To the former Lowell wrote: "I am glad you liked The Cathedral and sorry for anything in it you did n't like. The name was none of my choosing. I called it A Day at Chartres, and Fields rechristened it. You see with my name the episode of the Britons comes in naturally enough (it is historical, by the way). The truth is, I had no notion of being satirical, but wrote what I did just as I might have said it to you in badinage. But of course the tone is lost in print. Anyhow, there is one Englishman I am fond enough of to balance any spite I might have against others, as you know. But I have n't a particle. If I had met two of my own countrymen at Chartres I should have been quite as free with them." In reply to some advice and strictures of Mr. Ruskin, he wrote to Mr. Norton: "I am glad to find that the poem sticks. Those who liked it at first like it still, some of them better than ever, some extravagantly. At any rate it wrote itself; all of a sudden it was there, and that is something in its favor. Now Ruskin wants me to go over it with a file. That is just what I did. I wrote in pencil, then copied it out in ink, and worked over it as I never worked over anything before. I may fairly say there is not a word in it over which I have not thought, not an objection which I did not foresee and maturely consider. Well, in my second copy I made many changes, as I thought for the better, and then put it away in my desk to cool for three weeks or so. When I came to print it, I put back, I believe, every one of the original readings which I had changed. Those which had come to me were far better than those I had come at. Only one change I made (for the worse), in order to escape a rhyme that had crept in without my catching it." Ruskin made some verbal criticism, which Lowell proceeded to examine, and the reader will find the discussion in the notes at the end of this volume.

FAR through the memory shines a happy day, Cloudless of care, down-shod to every sense,
And simply perfect from its own resource,
As to a bee the new campanula's Illuminate seclusion swung in air.
Such days are not the prey of setting suns, Nor ever blurred with mist of after-thought;
Like words made magical by poets dead, Wherein the music of all meaning is The sense hath garnered or the soul divined, They mingle with our life's ethereal part,
Sweetening and gathering sweetness evermore,
By beauty's franchise disenthralled of time.

I can recall, nay, they are present still,
Parts of myself, the perfume of my mind, Days that seem farther off than Homer's
now
Ere yet the child had loudened to the boy,
And I, recluse from playmates, found perforce Companionship in things that not denied Nor granted wholly; as is Nature's wont, Who, safe in uncontaminate reserve,
Lets us mistake our longing for her love,
And mocks with various echo of ourselves.
These first sweet frauds upon our consciousness,
That blend the sensual with its imaged world,
These virginal cognitions, gifts of morn,

Ere life grow noisy, and slower-footed thought Can overtake the rapture of the sense, To thrust between ourselves and what we feel,
Have something in them secretly divine.
Vainly the eye, once schooled to serve the brain,
With pains deliberate studies to renew The ideal vision: second-thoughts are prose;
For beauty's acme hath a term as brief
As the wave's poise before it break in pearl.
Our own breath dims the mirror of the sense, Looking too long and closely: at a flash
We snatch the essential grace of meaning out,
And that first passion beggars all behind, Heirs of a tamer transport prepossessed.
Who, seeing once, has truly seen again
The gray vague of unsympathizing sea
That dragged his Fancy from her moorings back To shores inhospitable of eldest time, Till blank foreboding of earth-generated powers, Pitiless seignuries in the elements, Omnipotences blind that darkling smite, Misgave him, and repaganized the world?
Yet, by some subtler touch of sympathy,
These primal apprehensions, dimly stirred, Perplex the eye with pictures from within.
This hath made poets dream of lives foregone In worlds fantastical, more fair than ours;

So Memory cheats us, glimpsing half-revealed.

Even as I write she tries her wonted spell
In that continuous redbreast boding rain:
The bird I hear sings not from yonder elm;
But the flown ecstasy my childhood heard Is vocal in my mind, renewed by him, Haply made sweeter by the accumulate thrill

That threads my undivided life and steals A pathos from the years and graves between.

I know not how it is with other men, Whom I but guess, deciphering myself;
For me, once felt is so felt nevermore.
The fleeting relish at sensation's brim Had in it the best ferment of the wine.
One spring I knew as never any since:
All night the surges of the warm southwest Boomed intermittent through the wallowing elms,

And brought a morning from the Gulf adrift,

Omnipotent with sunshine, whose quick charm

Startled with crocuses the sullen turf
And wiled the bluebird to his whiff of song:
One summer hour abides, what time I perched,

Dappled with noonday, under simmering leaves,

And pulled the pulpy oxhearts, while aloof
An oriole clattered and the robins shrilled, Denouncing me an alien and a thief:

One morn of autumn lords it o'er the rest,
When in the lane I watched the ash-leaves fall,

Balancing softly earthward without wind,
Or twirling with directer impulse down

On those fallen yesterday, now barbed with frost,

While I grew pensive with the pensive year:
And once I learned how marvellous winter was,

When past the fence-rails, downy-gray with rime,

I creaked adventurous o'er the spangled crust

That made familiar fields seem far and strange

As those stark wastes that whiten endlessly In ghastly solitude about the pole,
And gleam relentless to the unsetting sun:
Instant the candid chambers of my brain

Were painted with these sovran images;
And later visions seem but copies pale From those unfading frescos of the past,
Which I, young savage, in my age of flint, Gazed at, and dimly felt a power in me Parted from Nature by the joy in her That doubtfully revealed me to myself.
Thenceforward I must stand outside the gate;

And paradise was paradise the more,
Known once and barred against satiety.

What we call Nature, all outside ourselves,
Is but our own conceit of what we see,
Our own reaction upon what we feel;
The world's a woman to our shifting mood, Feeling with us, or making due pretence;
And therefore we the more persuade ourselves

To make all things our thought's confederates,

Conniving with us in whate'er we dream.

So when our Fancy seeks analogies, Though she have hidden what she after finds,

She loves to cheat herself with feigned surprise.

I find my own complexion everywhere:
No rose, I doubt, was ever, like the first,
A marvel to the bush it dawned upon,
The rapture of its life made visible,
The mystery of its yearning realized,
As the first babe to the first woman born;
No falcon ever felt delight of wings
As when, an eyas, from the stolid cliff Loosing himself, he followed his high heart To swim on sunshine, masterless as wind;
And I believe the brown earth takes delight In the new snowdrop looking back at her,
To think that by some vernal alchemy
It could transmute her darkness into pearl;
What is the buxom peony after that,
With its coarse constancy of hoyden blush?
What the full summer to that wonder new?

But, if in nothing else, in us there is A sense fastidious hardly reconciled
To the poor makeshifts of life's scenery, Where the same slide must double all its parts, Shoved in for Tarsus and hitched back for Tyre.

I blame not in the soul this daintiness, Rasher of surfeit than a humming-bird,
In things indifferent by sense purveyed:

It argues her an immortality
And dateless incomes of experience, This unthrif housekeeping that will not brook

A dish warmed-over at the feast of life, And finds Twice stale, served with whatever sauce.

Nor matters much how it may go with me Who dwell in Grub Street and am proud to drudge

Where men, my betters, wet their crust with tears:

Use can make sweet the peach's shady side,
That only by reflection tastes of sun.

But she, my Princess, who will sometimes deign

My garret to illumine till the walls, Narrow and dingy, scrawled with hackneyed thought

(Poor Richard slowly elbowing Plato out), Dilate and drape themselves with tapestries Nausikaa might have stooped o'er, while, between,

Mirrors, effaced in their own clearness, send Her only image on through deepening deeps

With endless repercussion of delight, — Bringer of life, witching each sense to soul, That sometimes almost gives me to believe I might have been a poet, gives at least A brain desaxonomized, an ear that makes Music where none is, and a keener pang Of exquisite surmise outleaping thought, — Her will I pamper in her luxury:
No crumpled rose-leaf of too careless choice Shall bring a northern nightmare to her
dreams,

Vexing with sense of exile; hers shall be The invitate firstlings of experience, Vibrations felt but once and felt life long:
Oh, more than half-way turn that Grecian front

Upon me, while with self-rebuke I spell,
On the plain fillet that confines thy hair In conscious bounds of seeming unconstraint,

The Naught in overplus, thy race's badge!

One feast for her I secretly designed In that Old World so strangely beautiful To us the disinherited of eld, —

A day at Chartres, with no soul beside To roil with pedant prate my joy serene
And make the minster shy of confidence.

I went, and, with the Saxon's pious care,
First ordered dinner at the pea-green inn,
The flies and I its only customers.

Eluding these, I loitered through the town,
With hope to take my minster unawares
In its grave solitude of memory.

A pretty burgh, and such as Fancy loves For bygone grandeurs; faintly rumorous
now

Upon the mind's horizon, as of storm Brooding its dreamy thunders far aloof, That mingle with our mood, but not disturb.

Its once grim bulwarks, tamed to lovers' walks,

Look down unwatchful on the sliding Eure, Whose listless leisure suits the quiet place, Lisping among his shallows homelike sounds At Concord and by Bankside heard before.
Chance led me to a public pleasure-ground,
Where I grew kindly with the merry groups,
And blessed the Frenchman for his simple art

Of being domestic in the light of day.
His language has no word, we growl, for Home;

But he can find a fireside in the sun, Play with his child, make love, and shriek his mind,

By throngs of strangers undisprivacied.
He makes his life a public gallery, Nor feels himself till what he feels comes back

In manifold reflection from without;
While we, each pore alert with conscious-
ness,

Hide our best selves as we had stolen them,
And each bystander a detective were,
Keen-eyed for every chink of undisguise.

So, musing o'er the problem which was best, —

A life wide-windowed, shining all abroad, Or curtains drawn to shield from sight
profane

The rites we pay to the mysterious I, — With outward senses furloughed and head bowed

I followed some fine instinct in my feet, Till, to unbend me from the loom of
thought,

Looking up suddenly, I found mine eyes Confronted with the minster's vast repose.
Silent and gray as forest-leaguered cliff Left inland by the ocean's slow retreat,

That hears afar the breeze-borne rote and longs, Remembering shocks of surf that clomb
and fell,

Spume-sliding down the baffled decuman,
It rose before me, patiently remote From the great tides of life it breasted once, Hearing the noise of men as in a dream.
I stood before the triple northern port,
Where dedicated shapes of saints and kings, Stern faces bleared with immemorial watch, Looked down benignly grave and seemed to say,

*Ye come and go incessant; we remain Safe in the hallowed quiets of the past;
Be reverent, ye who flit and are forgot,
Of faith so nobly realized as this.*
I seem to have heard it said by learnèd folk

Who drench you with æsthetics till you feel As if all beauty were a ghastly bore,
The faucet to let loose a wash of words,
That Gothic is not Grecian, therefore worse;
But, being convinced by much experiment
How little inventiveness there is in man, Grave copier of copies, I give thanks For a new relish, careless to inquire My pleasure's pedigree, if so it please, Nobly, I mean, nor renegade to art.
The Grecian gluts me with its perfect-
ness,

Unanswerable as Euclid, self-contained,
The one thing finished in this hasty world, Forever finished, though the barbarous pit, Fanatical on hearsay, stamp and shout
As if a miracle could be encored.

But ah! this other, this that never ends, Still climbing, luring fancy still to climb,
As full of morals half-divined as life, Graceful, grotesque, with ever new surprise
Of hazardous caprices sure to please, Heavy as nightmare, airy-light as fern, Imagination's very self in stone!
With one long sigh of infinite release From pedantries past, present, or to come,
I looked, and owned myself a happy Goth.
Your blood is mine, ye architects of dream, Builders of aspiration incomplete,
So more consummate, souls self-confident,
Who felt your own thought worthy of record

In monumental pomp! No Grecian drop Rebukes these veins that leap with kindred thrill,

After long exile, to the mother-tongue.

Ovid in Pontus, pining for his Rome
Of men invirile and disnatured dames That poison sucked from the Attic bloom decayed,

Shrank with a shudder from the blue-eyed
race

Whose force rough-handed should renew the world,

And from the dregs of Romulus express Such wine as Dante poured, or he who blew Roland's vain blast, or sang the Campeador In verse that clanks like armor in the charge,

Homeric juice, though brimmed in Odin's horn.

And they could build, if not the columned
fane

That from the height gleamed seaward many-hued,

Something more friendly with their ruder
skies:

The gray spire, molten now in driving mist,
Now lulled with the incommunicable blue;
The carvings touched to meaning new with snow,

Or commented with fleeting grace of shade;
The statues, motley as man's memory, Partial as that, so mixed of true and false, History and legend meeting with a kiss Across this bound-mark where their realms confine;

The painted windows, freaking gloom with
glow,

Dusking the sunshine which they seem to cheer,

Meet symbol of the senses and the soul,
And the whole pile, grim with the North-man's thought

Of life and death, and doom, life's equal fee, —

These were before me: and I gazed abashed,

Child of an age that lectures, not creates, Plastering our swallow-nests on the awful Past,

And twittering round the work of larger
men,

As we had builded what we but deface.

Far up the great bells wallowed in delight, Tossing their clangors o'er the heedless town,

To call the worshippers who never came,
Or women mostly, in loath twos and threes.
I entered, reverent of whatever shrine Guards piety and solace for my kind

Or gives the soul a moment's truce of God,
 And shared decorous in the ancient rite
 My sterner fathers held idolatrous.
 The service over, I was tranced in thought : Solemn the deepening vaults, and most to

me, Fresh from the fragile realm of deal and
 paint,

Or brick mock-pious with a marble front ;
 Solemn the lift of high-embowered roof,
 The clustered stems that spread in boughs disleaved,

Through which the organ blew a dream of storm,

Though not more potent to sublime with awe

And shut the heart up in tranquillity, Than aisles to me familiar that o'erarch
 The conscious silences of brooding woods, Centurial shadows, cloisters of the elk :
 Yet here was sense of undefined regret, Irreparable loss, uncertain what :
 Was all this grandeur but anachronism,
 A shell divorced of its informing life, Where the priest housed him like a hermitcrab,

An alien to that faith of elder days That gathered round it this fair shape of stone ?

Is old Religion but a spectre now, Haunting the solitude of darkened minds, Mocked out of memory by the sceptic day ?
 Is there no corner safe from peeping
 Doubt,

Since Gutenberg made thought cosmopolite And stretched electric threads from mind to mind ?

Nay, did Faith build this wonder ? or did
 Fear,

That makes a fetish and misnames it God (Blockish or metaphysic, matters not), Contrive this coop to shut its tyrant in, Appeased with playthings, that he might not harm ?

I turned and saw a beldame on her knees ;
 With eyes astray, she told mechanic beads Before some shrine of saintly womanhood, Bribed intercessor with the far-off Judge : Such my first thought, by kindlier soon rebuked,

Pleading for whatsoever touches life With upward impulse : be He nowhere
 else,

God is in all that liberates and lifts,

In all that humbles, sweetens, and con-soles :

Blessed the natures shored on every side With landmarks of hereditary thought !
 Thrice happy they that wander not life
 long

Beyond near succor of the household faith,
 The guarded fold that shelters, not confines !

Their steps find patience in familiar paths, Printed with hope by loved feet gone before

Of parent, child, or lover, glorified
 By simple magic of dividing Time.

My lids were moistened as the woman knelt,

And — was it will, or some vibration faint Of sacred Nature, deeper than the will ? — My heart occultly felt itself in hers, Through mutual intercession gently leagued.

Or was it not mere sympathy of brain ?

A sweetness intellectually conceived
 In simpler creeds to me impossible ?

A juggle of that pity for ourselves In others, which puts on such pretty masks And snares self-love with bait of charity ?
 Something of all it might be, or of none :
 Yet for a moment I was snatched away
 And had the evidence of things not seen ;
 For one rapt moment ; then it all came
 back,

This age that blots out life with question-marks,

This nineteenth century with its knife and glass

That make thought physical, and thrust far off

The Heaven, so neighborly with man of
 old,

To voids sparse-sown with alienated stars.

'Tis irrecoverable, that ancient faith, Homely and wholesome, suited to the
 time,

With rod or candy for child-minded men :
 No theologic tube, with lens on lens Of syllogism transparent, brings it near, —
 At best resolving some new nebula, Or blurring some fixed-star of hope to mist.

Science was Faith once ; Faith were Science
 now,

Would she but lay her bow and arrows by

And arm her with the weapons of the time.

Nothing that keeps thought out is safe from thought.

For there's no virgin-fort but self-respect,
And Truth defensive hath lost hold on God.

Shall we treat Him as if He were a child That knew not His own purpose? nor dare trust

The Rock of Ages to their chemic tests, Lest some day the all-sustaining base divine Should fail from under us, dissolved in gas?

The arm'd eye that with a glance discerns
In a dry blood-speck between ox and man Stares helpless at this miracle called life,
This shaping potency behind the egg,
This circulation swift of deity,
Where suns and systems inconspicuous float

As the poor blood-disks in our mortal veins.

Each age must worship its own thought of God,

More or less earthy, clarifying still With subsidence continuous of the dregs;
Nor saint nor sage could fix immutably
The fluent image of the unstable Best,
Still changing in their very hands that wrought:

To-day's eternal truth To-morrow proved Frail as frost-landscapes on a window-pane.
Meanwhile Thou smiledst, inaccessible,
At Thought's own substance made a cage for Thought,

And Truth locked fast with her own master-key;

Nor didst Thou reckon what image man might make

Of his own shadow on the flowing world;
The climbing instinct was enough for Thee.
Or wast Thou, then, an ebbing tide that left

Strewn with dead miracle those eldest shores,

For men to dry, and dryly lecture on,
Thyself thenceforth incapable of flood?
Idle who hopes with prophets to be snatched

By virtue in their mantles left below;
Shall the soul live on other men's report, Herself a pleasing fable of herself?

Man cannot be God's outlaw if he would,
Nor so abscond him in the caves of sense

But Nature still shall search some crevice out

With messages of splendor from that Source

Which, dive he, soar he, baffles still and lures.

This life were brutish did we not sometimes

Have intimation clear of wider scope, Hints of occasion infinite, to keep The soul alert with noble discontent
And onward yearnings of unstilled desire; Fruitless, except we now and then divined A mystery of Purpose, gleaming through The secular confusions of the world, Whose will we darkly accomplish, doing ours.

No man can think nor in himself perceive, Sometimes at waking, in the street sometimes,

Or on the hillside, always unforewarned,
A grace of being, finer than himself,
That beckons and is gone, — a larger life Upon his own impinging, with swift glimpse

Of spacious circles luminous with mind,
To which the ethereal substance of his own

Seems but gross cloud to make that visible, Touched to a sudden glory round the edge.
Who that hath known these visitations fleet Would strive to make them trite and ritual?

I, that still pray at morning and at eve, Loving those roots that feed us from the past,

And prizing more than Plato things I learned

At that best academe, a mother's knee, Thrice in my life perhaps have truly prayed,

Thrice, stirred below my conscious self, have felt

That perfect disenfranchisement which is God; Nor know I which to hold worst enemy,
Him who on speculation's windy waste Would turn me loose, stript of the raiment warm

By Faith contrived against our nakedness, Or him who, cruel-kind, would fain obscure,
With painted saints and paraphrase of God,
The soul's east-window of divine surprise.
Where others worship I but look and long;
For, though not recreant to my fathers' faith,

Its forms to me are weariness, and most That drony vacuum of compulsory prayer, Still pumping phrases for the Ineffable, Though all the valves of memory gasp and wheeze.

Words that have drawn transcendent meanings up

From the best passion of all bygone time, Steeped through with tears of triumph and remorse,

Sweet with all sainthood, cleansed in martyr-fires,

Can they, so consecrate and so inspired,
By repetition wane to vexing wind?
Alas! we cannot draw habitual breath
In the thin air of life's suprema heights,
We cannot make each meal a sacrament, Nor with our tailors be disbodied souls,— We men, too conscious of earth's comedy,
Who see two sides, with our posed selves debate,

And only for great stakes can be sublime!
Let us be thankful when, as I do here,
We can read Bethel on a pile of stones,
And, seeing where God has been, trust in Him.

Brave Peter Fischer there in Nuremberg, Moulding Saint Sebald's miracles in bronze, Put saint and stander-by in that quaint garb

Familiar to him in his daily walk,
Not doubting God could grant a miracle Then and in Nuremberg, if so He would;
But never artist for three hundred years Hath dared the contradiction ludicrous Of supernatural in modern clothes.
Perhaps the deeper faith that is to come Will see God rather in the strenuous doubt, Than in the creed held as an infant's hand Holds purposeless whatso is placed therein.

Say it is drift, not progress, none the less,
With the old sextant of the fathers' creed,
We shape our courses by new-risen stars,
And, still lip-loyal to what once was truth, Smuggle new meanings under ancient names,

Unconscious perverts of the Jesuit, Time.
Change is the mask that all Continuance wears

To keep us youngsters harmlessly amused;
Meanwhile some ailing or more watchful child,

Sitting apart, sees the old eyes gleam out,

Stern, and yet soft with humorous pity too.
Whilere, men burnt men for a doubtful point,

As if the mind were quenchable with fire,
And Faith danced round them with her war-paint on,

Devoutly savage as an Iroquois;
Now Calvin and Servetus at one board Snuff in grave sympathy a milder roast,
And o'er their claret settle Comte unread.
Fagot and stake were desperately sincere:
Our cooler martyrdoms are done in types;
And flames that shine in controversial eyes Burn out no brains but his who kindles them.

This is no age to get cathedrals built:
Did God, then, wait for one in Bethlehem?
Worst is not yet: lo, where his coming looms,

Of earth's anarchic children latest born, Democracy, a Titan who hath learned To laugh at Jove's old-fashioned thunderbolts,—

Could he not also forge them, if he would?
He, better skilled, with solvents merciless, Loosened in air and borne on every wind, Saps unperceived: the calm Olympian height

Of ancient order feels its bases yield,
And pale gods glance for help to gods as pale.

What will be left of good or worshipful,
Of spiritual secrets, mysteries,
Of fair religion's guarded heritage, Heirlooms of soul, passed downward unprofaned

From eldest Ind? This Western giant coarse,

Scorning refinements which he lacks himself,

Loves not nor heeds the ancestral hierarchies,

Each rank dependent on the next above
In orderly gradation fixed as fate.

King by mere manhood, nor allowing aught

Of holier unction than the sweat of toil;
In his own strength sufficient; called to solve,

On the rough edges of society,
Problems long sacred to the choicer few,
And improvise what elsewhere men receive

As gifts of deity; tough foundling reared Where every man's his own Melchisedek,

How make him reverent of a King of kings ?

Or Judge self-made, executor of laws
By him not first discussed and voted on ?
For him no tree of knowledge is forbid,
Or sweeter if forbid. How save the ark,
Or holy of holies, unprofaned a day
From his unscrupulous curiosity
That handles everything as if to buy, Tossing aside what fabrics delicate Suit not the rough - and - tumble of his ways ?

What hope for those fine-nerved humanities

That made earth gracious once with gentler arts,

Now the rude hands have caught the trick of thought

And claim an equal suffrage with the brain ?

The born disciple of an elder time, (To me sufficient, friendlier than the new,) Who in my blood feel motions of the Past,

I thank benignant nature most for this, —
A force of sympathy, or call it lack Of character firm-planted, loosing me From the pent chamber of habitual self To dwell enlarged in alien modes of
thought,

Haply distasteful, wholesomer for that,
And through imagination to possess, As they were mine, the lives of other
men.

This growth original of virgin soil,
By fascination felt in opposites, Pleases and shocks, entices and perturbs.
In this brown-fisted rough, this shirt-sleeved Cid,

This backwoods Charlemagne of empires
new,

Whose blundering heel instinctively finds
out

The goutier foot of speechless dignities, Who, meeting Cæsar's self, would slap his back,

Call him "Old Horse," and challenge to a drink,

My lungs draw braver air, my breast dilates

With ampler manhood, and I front both worlds,

Of sense and spirit, as my natural fiefs,
To shape and then reshape them as I will.

It was the first man's charter; why not mine ?

How forfeit ? when deposed in other hands ?

Thou shudder'st, Ovid ? Dost in him forebode

A new avatar of the large-limbed Goth, To break, or seem to break, tradition's clue,

And chase to dreamland back thy gods dethroned ?

I think man's soul dwells nearer to the east,

Nearer to morning's fountains than the sun;

Herself the source whence all tradition
sprang,

Herself at once both labyrinth and clue.

The miracle fades out of history,
But faith and wonder and the primal earth
Are born into the world with every child.

Shall this self-maker with the prying eyes,
This creature disenchanted of respect
By the New World's new fiend, Publicity, Whose testing thumb leaves everywhere its smutch,

Not one day feel within himself the need Of loyalty to better than himself, That shall ennoble him with the upward
look ?

Shall he not catch the Voice that wanders
earth,

With spiritual summons, dreamed or heard, As sometimes, just ere sleep seals up the
sense,

We hear our mother call from deeps of
Time,

And, waking, find it vision, — none the less
The benediction bides, old skies return,
And that unreal thing, preëminent,

Makes air and dream of all we see and feel ?

Shall he divine no strength unmade of votes,

Inward, impregnable, found soon as sought, Not cognizable of sense, o'er sense supreme ?

Else were he desolate as none before.

His holy places may not be of stone, Nor made with hands, yet fairer far than aught

By artist feigned or pious ardor reared, Fit altars for who guards inviolate God's chosen seat, the sacred form of man.
Doubtless his church will be no hospital

For superannuate forms and mumping shams,

No parlor where men issue policies
Of life-assurance on the Eternal Mind, Nor his religion but an ambulance To fetch life's wounded and malingeringers in, Scorned by the strong; yet he, unconscious heir

To the influence sweet of Athens and of Rome,

And old Judæa's gift of secret fire, Spite of himself shall surely learn to know And worship some ideal of himself,
Some divine thing, large-hearted, brotherly,

Not nice in trifles, a soft creditor, Pleased with his world, and hating only cant.

And, if his Church be doubtful, it is sure That, in a world, made for whatever else,
Not made for mere enjoyment, in a world Of toil but half-requited, or, at best,
Paid in some futile currency of breath,
A world of incompleteness, sorrow swift And consolation laggard, whatsoe'er
The form of building or the creed professed,

The Cross, bold type of shame to homage turned,

Of an unfinished life that sways the world,
Shall tower as sovereign emblem over all.

The kobold Thought moves with us when we shift

Our dwelling to escape him; perched aloft On the first load of household-stuff he went;

For, where the mind goes, goes old furniture.

I, who to Chartres came to feed my eye
And give to Fancy one clear holiday, Scarce saw the miuster for the thoughts it stirred

Buzzing o'er past and future with vain quest.

Here once there stood a homely wooden church,

Which slow devotion nobly changed for this

That echoes vaguely to my modern steps.
By suffrage universal it was built,
As practised then, for all the country came From far as Rouen, to give votes for God, Each vote a block of stone securely laid Obedient to the master's deep-mused plan.

Will what our ballots rear, responsible To no grave forethought, stand so long as this?

Delight like this the eye of after days Brightening with pride that here, at least, were men

Who meant and did the noblest thing they knew?

Can our religion cope with deeds like this?
We, too, build Gothic contract-shams, because

Our deacons have discovered that it pays,
And pews sell better under vaulted roofs
Of plaster painted like an Indian squaw.
Shall not that Western Goth, of whom we spoke,

So fiercely practical, so keen of eye, Find out, some day, that nothing pays but
God,

Served whether on the smoke-shut battlefield,

In work obscure done honestly, or vote
For truth unpopular, or faith maintained To ruinous convictions, or good deeds Wrought for good's sake, mindless of heaven or hell?

Shall he not learn that all prosperity, Whose bases stretch not deeper than the
sense,

Is but a trick of this world's atmosphere,
A desert-born mirage of spire and dome, Or find too late, the Past's long lesson
missed,

That dust the prophets shake from off their feet

Grows heavy to drag down both tower and wall?

I know not; but, sustained by sure belief That man still rises level with the height Of noblest opportunities, or makes Such, if the time supply not, I can wait.
I gaze round on the windows, pride of France,

Each the bright gift of some mechanic guild

Who loved their city and thought gold well spent

To make her beautiful with piety; I pause, transfigured by some stripe of
bloom,

And my mind throngs with shining augur-
ies,

Circle on circle, bright as seraphim, With golden trumpets, silent, that await The signal to blow news of good to men

Then the revulsion came that always comes After these dizzy elations of the mind:
 And with a passionate pang of doubt I
 cried,

"O mountain - born, sweet with snow-filtered air

From uncontaminate wells of ether drawn
 And never-broken secrecies of sky, Freedom, with anguish won, misprized till
 lost,

They keep thee not who from thy sacred
 eyes

Catch the consuming lust of sensual good And the brute's license of unfettered will.
 Far from the popular shout and venal
 breath

Of Cleon blowing the mob's baser mind
 To bubbles of wind-piloted conceit, Thou shrinkest, gathering up thy skirts, to hide

In fortresses of solitary thought
 And private virtue strong in self-restraint.
 Must we too forfeit thee misunderstood, Content with names, nor inly wise to know That best things perish of their own excess,

And quality o'er-driven becomes defect?
 Nay, is it thou indeed that we have glimpsed,

Or rather such illusion as of old Through Athens glided menadlike and Rome,

A shape of vapor, mother of vain dreams
 And mutinous traditions, specious plea Of the glaived tyrant and long-memoried priest?"

I walked forth saddened; for all thought is sad,

And leaves a bitterish savor in the brain,
 Tonic, it may be, not delectable,
 And turned, reluctant, for a parting look At those old weather-pitted images Of bygone struggle, now so sternly calm.
 About their shoulders sparrows had built nests,

And fluttered, chirping, from gray perch to perch,

Now on a mitre poising, now a crown, Irreverently happy. While I thought How confident they were, what careless hearts

Flew on those lightsome wings and shared
 the sun,

A larger shadow crossed; and looking up,

I saw where, nesting in the hoary towers,
 The sparrow-hawk slid forth on noiseless
 air,

With sidelong head that watched the joy
 below,

Grim Norman baron o'er this clan of Kelts.
 Enduring Nature, force conservative, Indifferent to our noisy whims! Men
 prate

Of all heads to an equal grade cashiered On level with the dullest, and expect (Sick of no worse distemper than themselves)

A wondrous cure-all in equality;
 They reason that To-morrow must be wise Because To-day was not, nor Yesterday,
 As if good days were shapen of themselves,
 Not of the very lifeblood of men's souls;
 Meanwhile, long-suffering, imperturbable, Thou quietly complet'st thy syllogism,
 And from the premise sparrow here below Draw'st sure conclusion of the hawk above, Pleased with the soft-billed songster, pleased no less

With the fierce beak of natures aquiline.

Thou beautiful Old Time, now hid away In the Past's valley of Avilion, Haply, like Arthur, till thy wound be healed,

Then to reclaim the sword and crown
 again!

Thrice beautiful to us; perchance less fair To who possessed thee, as a mountain seems

To dwellers round its bases but a heap
 Of barren obstacle that lairs the storm
 And the avalanche's silent bolt holds back Leashed with a hair,—meanwhile some far-off clown,

Hereditary delver of the plain,
 Sees it an unmoved vision of repose, Nest of the morning, and conjectures there The dance of streams to idle shepherds' pipes,

And fairer habitations softly hung
 On breezy slopes, or hid in valleys cool, For happier men. No mortal ever dreams That the scant isthmus he encamps upon Between two oceans, one, the Stormy,
 passed,

And one, the Peaceful, yet to venture on,
 Has been that future whereto prophets yearned

For the fulfilment of Earth's cheated hope,

Shall be that past which nerveless poets
moan
As the lost opportunity of song.

O Power, more near my life than life itself (Or what seems life to us in sense im-mured),
Even as the roots, shut in the darksome
earth,
Share in the tree-top's joyance, and conceive
Of sunshine and wide air and winged things

By sympathy of nature, so do I Have evidence of Thee so far above, Yet in and of me! Rather Thou the root Invisibly sustaining, hid in light,
Not darkness, or in darkness made by us.
If sometimes I must hear good men debate
Of other witness of Thyself than Thou,

As if there needed any help of ours To nurse Thy flickering life, that else must cease,
Blown out, as 't were a candle, by men's
breath,
My soul shall not be taken in their snare, To change her inward surety for their doubt Muffled from sight in formal robes of proof:
While she can only feel herself through
Thee,
I fear not Thy withdrawal; more I fear, Seeing, to know Thee not, hoodwinked with dreams
Of signs and wonders, while, unnoticed, Thou, Walking Thy garden still, commun'st with
men,
Missed in the commonplace of miracle.

THREE MEMORIAL POEMS

"Coscienza fusca
O della propria o dell' altrui vergogna Pur sentirà la tua parola brusca."

If I let fall a word of bitter mirth
When public shames more shameful pardon won,
Some have misjudged me, and my service done,
If small, yet faithful, deemed of little worth:
Through veins that drew their life from Western earth
Two hundred years and more my blood hath run In no polluted course from sire to son;
And thus was I predestined ere my birth To love the soil wherewith my fibres own Instinctive sympathies; yet love it so As honor would, nor lightly to dethrone Judgment, the stamp of manhood, nor forego
The son's right to a mother dearer grown With growing knowledge and more chaste than snow.

E. L. GODKIN,

IN CORDIAL ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF HIS EMINENT SERVICE IN HEIGHTENING AND PURIFYING THE TONE OF OUR POLITICAL THOUGHT, These Three Poems
ARE DEDICATED.

. Readers, it is hoped, will remember that, by his Ode at the Harvard Commemoration, the author had precluded himself from many of the natural outlets of thought and feeling common to such occasions as are celebrated in these poems.

ODE

READ AT THE ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FIGHT AT CONCORD BRIDGE

19TH APRIL, 1875

In the letter to Mr. Thayer quoted in the note introducing the Commemoration Ode, Lowell wrote at some length regarding the structure of his odes in general. He added: "The sentiment of the Concord Ode demanded a larger proportion of lyrical movements, of course, than the others. Harmony, without sacrifice of melody, was what I had mainly in view." He wrote to another friend that the ode was "an improvisation written in the two days before the celebration."

I

WHO cometh over the hills,
Her garments with morning sweet,
The dance of a thousand rills Making music before her feet?
Her presence freshens the air;
Sunshine steals light from her face;
The leaden footstep of Care Leaps to the tune of her pace, Fairness of all that is fair,
Grace at the heart of all grace, Sweetener of hut and of hall, Bringer of life out of naught, Freedom, oh, fairest of all The daughters of Time and Thought!

II

She cometh, cometh to-day:
Hark! hear ye not her tread,
Sending a thrill through your clay,
Under the sod there, ye dead,
Her nurslings and champions?
Do ye not hear, as she comes,
The bay of the deep-mouthed guns,
The gathering rattle of the drums?
The bells that called ye to prayer,
How wildly they clamor on her, Crying, "She cometh! prepare
Her to praise and her to honor,
That a hundred years ago
Scattered here in blood and tears Potent seeds wherefrom should grow Gladness for a hundred years!"

Tell me, young men, have ye seen Creature of diviner mien For true hearts to long and cry for, Manly hearts to live and die for?
What hath she that others want?
Brows that all endearments haunt,
Eyes that make it sweet to dare, Smiles that cheer untimely death,
Looks that fortify despair,
Tones more brave than trumpet's breath;
Tell me, maidens, have ye known Household charm more sweetly rare, Grace of woman ampler blown,
Modesty more debonaire,
Younger heart with wit full grown?
Oh for an hour of my prime,
The pulse of my hotter years,
That I might praise her in rhyme
Would tingle your eyelids to tears,
Our sweetness, our strength, and our star,
Our hope, our joy, and our trust,
Who lifted us out of the dust,
And made us whatever we are!

Whiter than moonshine upon snow
Her raiment is, but round the hem Crimson stained; and, as to and fro
Her sandals flash, we see on them,
And on her instep veined with blue, Flecks of crimson, on those fair feet, High-arched, Diana-like, and fleet, Fit for no grosser stain than dew:
Oh, call them rather christs than stains, Sacred and from heroic veins!
For, in the glory-guarded pass,
Her haughty and far-shining head
She bowed to shrive Leonidas
With his imperishable dead;
Her, too, Morgarten saw,
Where the Swiss lion fleshed his icy paw;
She followed Cromwell's quenchless star Where the grim Puritan tread Shook Marston, Naseby, and Dunbar:
Yea, on her feet are dearer dyes Yet fresh, nor looked on with untearful eyes.

Our fathers found her in the woods Where Nature meditates and broods,
The seeds of unexampled things

Which Time to consummation brings Through life and death and man's unstable
moods;

They met her here, not recognized,
A sylvan huntress clothed in furs,
To whose chaste wants her bow sufficed, Nor dreamed what destinies were hers:
She taught them bee-like to create Their simpler forms of Church and State;
She taught them to endure
The past with other functions than it knew,
And turn in channels strange the uncertain stream of Fate;

Better than all, she fenced them in their need

With iron-handed Duty's sternest creed, 'Gainst Self's lean wolf that ravens word and deed.

VI

Why cometh she hither to-day
To this low village of the plain Far from the Present's loud highway, From Trade's cool heart and seething brain?

Why cometh she? She was not far away.
Since the soul touched it, not in vain,
With pathos of immortal gain,
'Tis here her fondest memories stay.
She loves yon pine-bemurmured ridge Where now our broad-browed poet sleeps, Dear to both Englands; near him he Who wore the ring of Canace;
But most her heart to rapture leaps Where stood that era-parting bridge, O'er which, with footfall still as dew,
The Old Time passed into the New;
Where, as your stealthy river creeps,
He whispers to his listening weeds Tales of sublimest homespun deeds.
Here English law and English thought
'Gainst the self-will of England fought; And here were men (coequal with their fate),

Who did great things, unconscious they were great.

They dreamed not what a die was cast
With that first answering shot; what then?
There was their duty; they were men Schooled the soul's inward gospel to obey, Though leading to the lion's den.
They felt the habit-hallowed world give way Beneath their lives, and on went they,
Unhappy who was last.

When Buttrick gave the word,
That awful idol of the unchallenged Past,

Strong in their love, and in their lineage
strong,

Fell crashing: if they heard it not,
Yet the earth heard,
Nor ever hath forgot,
As on from startled throne to throne,
Where Superstition sate or conscious

Wrong,
A shudder ran of some dread birth unknown.

Thrice venerable spot!
River more fateful than the Rubicon!
O'er those red planks, to snatch her diadem, Man's Hope, star-girdled, sprang with them,
And over ways untrod the feet of Doom strode on.

Think you these felt no charms
In their gray homesteads and embowered farms?

In household faces waiting at the door Their evening step should lighten up no
more?

In fields their boyish feet had known?
In trees their fathers' hands had set,
And which with them had grown,
Widening each year their leafy coronet?
Felt they no pang of passionate regret For those unsold goods that seem so much our own?

These things are dear to every man that lives,

And life prized more for what it lends than gives.

Yea, many a tie, through iteration sweet, Strove to detain their fatal feet;
And yet the enduring half they chose, Whose choice decides a man life's slave or king.

The invisible things of God before the seen and known:

Therefore their memory inspiration blows With echoes gathering on from zone to zone;

For manhood is the one immortal thing Beneath Time's changeable sky, And, where it lightened once, from age to age,

Men come to learn, in grateful pilgrimage
That length of days is knowing when to die

VIII

What marvellous change of things and men
She, a world-wandering orphan then,

So mighty now ! Those are her streams That whirl the myriad, myriad wheels
Of all that does, and all that dreams, Of all that thinks, and all that feels,
Through spaces stretched from sea to sea;
By idle tongues and busy brains,
By who doth right, and who refrains, Hers are our losses and our gains;
Our maker and our victim she.

IX

Maiden half mortal, half divine,
We triumphed in thy coming; to the brinks
Our hearts were filled with pride's tumultuous wine; Better to-day who rather feels than thinks.
Yet will some graver thoughts intrude,
And cares of sterner mood;
They won thee: who shall keep thee ? From the deeps

Where disrowned empires o'er their ruins
brood,
And many a thwarted hope wrings its weak hands and weeps,
I hear the voice as of a mighty wind From all heaven's caverns rushing unconfined,

"I, Freedom, dwell with Knowledge: I abide

With men whom dust of faction cannot blind
To the slow tracings of the Eternal Mind;
With men by culture trained and fortified,
Who bitter duty to sweet lusts prefer,
Fearless to counsel and obey.
Conscience my sceptre is, and law my
sword,

Not to be drawn in passion or in play,
But terrible to punish and deter;
Implacable as God's word, Like it, a shepherd's crook to them that blindly err.

Your firm-pulsed sires, my martyrs and my saints,

Offshoots of that one stock whose patient
sense

Hath known to mingle flux with permanence,

Rated my chaste denials and restraints Above the moment's dear-paid paradise: Beware lest, shifting with Time's gradual creep,

The light that guided shine into your eyes.
The envious Powers of ill nor wink nor sleep:

Be therefore timely wise,

Nor laugh when this one steals, and that one lies,
As if your luck could cheat those sleepless spies, Till the deaf Fury comes your house to sweep !"

I hear the voice, and unafrighted bow;
Ye shall not be prophetic now, Heralds of ill, that darkening fly Between my vision and the rainbowed sky, Or on the left your hoarse forebodings croak

From many a blasted bough
On Yggdrasil's storm-sinewed oak, That once was green, Hope of the West, as
thou:

Yet pardon if I tremble while I boast;
For I have loved as those who pardon most.

Away, ungrateful doubt, away !
At least she is our own to-day.
Break into rapture, my song, Verses, leap forth in the sun,
Bearing the joyance along Like a train of fire as ye run !
Pause not for choosing of words,
Let them but blossom and sing Blithe as the orchards and birds
With the new coming of spring !
Dance in your jollity, bells;
Shout, cannon; cease not, ye drums;
Answer, ye hillside and dells; Bow, all ye people ! She comes,
Radiant, calm-fronted, as when She hallowed that April day.
Stay with us ! Yes, thou shalt stay, Softener and strengthener of men, Freedom, not won by the vain,
Not to be courted in play,
Not to be kept without pain.
Stay with us ! Yes, thou wilt stay, Handmaid and mistress of all,
Kindler of deed and of thought,
Thou that to hut and to hall Equal deliverance brought !
Souls of her martyrs, draw near,
Touch our dull lips with your fire,
That we may praise without fear
Her our delight, our desire,
Our faith's inextinguishable star,
Our hope, our remembrance, our trust,
Our present, our past, our to be,
Who will mingle her life with our dust
And makes us deserve to be free !

UNDER THE OLD ELM

POEM READ AT CAMBRIDGE ON THE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF WASH-INGTON'S TAKING COMMAND OF THE AMERICAN ARMY, 3D JULY, 1775

Lowell was disposed to think this ode the best of these three memorial odes, "mainly because," he says, "it was composed after my college duties were over, though even in that I was distracted by the intervention of the Commencement dinner." Two days after delivering it, he wrote to a friend in another State: "We, too, here in my birthplace, having found out that something happened here a hundred years ago, must have our centennial; and, since my friend and townsman Dr. Holmes could n't be had, I felt bound to do the poetry for the day. We have still standing the elm under which Washington took command of the American (till then provincial) army, and under which also Whitefield had preached some thirty years before. I took advantage of the occasion to hold out a hand of kindly reconciliation to Virginia. I could do it with the profounder feeling, that no family lost more than mine by the civil war. Three nephews (the hope of our race) were killed in one or other of the Virginia battles, and three cousins on other of those bloody fields." Lowell afterward, when he was in Baltimore giving lectures at Johns Hopkins University, read a part of this poem in public. "I actually drew tears," he wrote, "from the eyes of bitter secessionists — comparable with those iron ones that rattled down Pluto's cheek. I did n't quite like to read the invocation to Virginia here — I was willing enough three or four hundred miles north — but I think it did good."

I

I.

WORDS pass as wind, but where great deeds were done
A power abides transfused from sire to son:
The boy feels deeper meanings thrill his ear,
That tingling through his pulse life-long shall run,
With sure impulsion to keep honor clear,
When, pointing down, his father whispers,
"Here,
Here, where we stand, stood he, the purely great,

Whose soul no siren passion could unsphere, Then nameless, now a power and mixed with fate."

Historic town, thou holdest sacred dust, Once known to men as pious, learned, just,
And one memorial pile that dares to last;
But Memory greets with reverential kiss
No spot in all thy circuit sweet as this, Touched by that modest glory as it past, O'er which yon elm hath piously displayed These hundred years its monumental shade.

2.

Of our swift passage through this scenery Of life and death, more durable than we,
What landmark so congenial as a tree Repeating its green legend every spring,
And, with a yearly ring,
Recording the fair seasons as they flee, Type of our brief but still-renewed mortality?

We fall as leaves: the immortal trunk remains,
Built with costly juice of hearts and brains

Gone to the mould now, whither all that
be

Vanish returnless, yet are procreant still In human lives to come of good or ill,
And feed unseen the roots of Destiny.

II

I.

Men's monuments, grown old, forget their names

They should eternize, but the place Where shining souls have passed imbibes a grace

Beyond mere earth; some sweetness of their fames

Leaves in the soil its unextinguished trace, Pungent, pathetic, sad with nobler aims, That penetrates our lives and heightens them or shames.

This insubstantial world and fleet Seems solid for a moment when we stand On dust ennobled by heroic feet
Once mighty to sustain a tottering land,
And mighty still such burthen to upbear, Nor doomed to tread the path of things that merely were:

Our sense, refined with virtue of the spot, Across the mists of Lethe's sleepy stream Recalls him, the sole chief without a blot,

No more a pallid image and a dream,
But as he dwelt with men decorously sup-preme.

2.

Our grosser minds need this terrestrial hint
To raise long-buried days from tombs of print:

Here stood he," softly we repeat,
And lo, the statue shined and still In that gray minster-front we call the Past, Feels in its frozen veins our pulses thrill, Breathes living air and mocks at Death's deceit.

It warms, it stirs, comes down to us at last,
Its features human with familiar light,
A man, beyond the historian's art to kill,
Or sculptor's to efface with patient chiselblight.

3.

Pure the dumb earth hath memory, nor for naught

Was Fancy given, on whose enchanted loom Present and Past commingle, fruit and bloom

Of one fair bough, inseparably wrought
Into the seamless tapestry of thought.

No charmed, with undeluded eye we see In history's fragmentary tale Bright clues of continuity,

Learn that high natures over Time prevail,
And feel ourselves a link in that entail That binds all ages past with all that are to be.

III

I.

Beneath our consecrated elm
A century ago he stood, Named vaguely for that old fight in the wood

Whose red surge sought, but could not overwhelm

The life foredoomed to wield our rough-hewn helm:—

From colleges, where now the gown
No arms had yielded, from the town, Our rude self-summoned levies flocked to
see

The new-come chiefs and wonder which was he.

No need to question long; close-lipped
and tall,
Long trained in murder-brooding forests lone

To bridle others' clamors and his own, Firmly erect, he towered above them all,
The incarnate discipline that was to free With iron curb that armed democracy.

2.

A motley rout was that which came to stare,

In raiment tanned by years of sun and storm,

Of every shape that was not uniform,
Dotted with regimentals here and there;
An army all of captains, used to pray
And stiff in fight, but serious drill's despair, Skilled to debate their orders, not obey; Deacons were there, selectmen, men of note

In half-tamed hamlets ambushed round with woods,

Ready to settle Freewill by a vote,
But largely liberal to its private moods;
Prompt to assert by manners, voice, or pen,
Or ruder arms, their rights as Englishmen, Nor much fastidious as to how and when:
Yet seasoned stuff and fittest to create A thought-staid army or a lasting state:
Haughty they said he was, at first; severe;
But owned, as all men own, the steady
hand

Upon the bridle, patient to command, Prized, as all prize, the justice pure from
fear,

And learned to honor first, then love him, then revere.

Such power there is in clear-eyed self-restraint

And purpose clean as light from every selfish taint.

3.

Musing beneath the legendary tree,
The years between furl off: I seem to see The sun-flecks, shaken the stirred foliage
through,

Dapple with gold his sober buff and blue And weave prophetic aureoles round the head

That shines our beacon now nor darkens with the dead.

O man of silent mood,
A stranger among strangers then,

How art thou since renowned the Great,
the Good,
Familiar as the day in all the homes of
men !
The winged years, that winnow praise and
blame,
Blow many names out : they but fan to flame
The self-renewing splendors of thy fame.

IV

I.

How many subtlest influences unite,
With spiritual touch of joy or pain, Invisible as air and soft as light,
To body forth that image of the brain
We call our Country, visionary shape, Loved more than woman, fuller of fire than wine,
Whose charin can none define,
Nor any, though he flee it, can escape !
All party-colored threads the weaver Time Sets in his web, now trivial, now sublime, All memories, all forebodings, hopes and
fears,
Mountain and river, forest, prairie, sea,
A hill, a rock, a homestead, field, or tree,
The casual gleanings of unreckoned years, Take goddess-shape at last and there is
She,
Old at our birth, new as the springing
hours,
Shrine of our weakness, fortress of our powers,
Consoler, kindler, peerless 'mid her peers, A force that 'neath our conscious being stirs,
A life to give ours permanence, when we Are borne to mingle our poor earth with hers,
And all this glowing world goes with us on our biers.

2.

Nations are long results, by ruder ways Gathering the might that warrants length of days;
They may be pieced of half-reluctant shares Welded by hammer-strokes of broadbrained kings,
Or from a doughty people grow, the heirs Of wise traditions widening cautious things;
At best they are computable things,

A strength behind us making us feel bold
In right, or, as may chance, in wrong; Whose force by figures may be summed and told,
So many soldiers, ships, and dollars strong,
And we but drops that bear compulsory part
In the dumb throb of a mechanic heart; But Country is a shape of each man's
mind
Sacred from definition, unconfined By the cramped walls where daily drudger-ies grind;
An inward vision, yet an outward birth Of sweet familiar heaven and earth;
A brooding Presence that stirs motions
blind
Of wings within our embryo being's shell That wait but her completer spell
To make us eagle-natured, fit to dare Life's nobler spaces and untarnished air.

3.

You, who hold dear this self-conceived ideal,
Whose faith and works alone can make it real,
Bring all your fairest gifts to deck her shrine
Who lifts our lives away from Thine and
Mine
And feeds the lamp of manhood more divine
With fragrant oils of quenchless constancy When all have done their utmost, surely he Hath given the best who gives a character Erect and constant, which nor any shock Of loosened elements, nor the forceful sea Of flowing or of ebbing fates, can stir From its deep bases in the living rock Of ancient manhood's sweet security :
And this he gave, serenely far from pride As baseness, boon with prosperous start allied,
Part of what nobler seed shall in our loins abide.

4.

No bond of men as common pride is strong,
In names time-filtered for the lips of song Still operant, with the primal Forces bound Whose currents, on their spiritual round, Transfuse our mortal will nor are gain-
said :

These are their arsenals, these the exhaust-less mines
That give a constant heart in great designs ;
These are the stuff whereof such dreams are made
As make heroic men : thus surely he Still holds in place the massy blocks he laid
'Neath our new frame, enforcing soberly The self-control that makes and keeps a people free.

1.

Oh, for a drop of that Cornelian ink Which gave Agricola dateless length of days,
To celebrate him fitly, neither swerve To phrase unkempt, nor pass discretion's brink,
With him so statue-like in sad reserve,
So diffident to claim, so forward to deserve !
Nor need I shun due influence of his fame Who, mortal among mortals, seemed as
now
The equestrian shape with unimpassioned
brow,
That paces silent on through vistas of acclaim.

2.

What figure more immovably august Than that grave strength so patient and so pure,
Calm in good fortune, when it wavered,
sure,
That mind serene, impenetrably just, Modelled on classic lines so simple they endure ?
That soul so softly radiant and so white The track it left seems less of fire than
light,
Cold but to such as love distemperature ?
And if pure light, as some deem, be the force That drives rejoicing planets on their course,
Why for his power benign seek an impurer
source ?
His was the true enthusiasm that burns
long Domestically bright,

Fed from itself and shy of human sight,
The hidden force that makes a lifetime
strong,
And not the short-lived fuel of a song.
Passionless, say you ? What is passion for
But to sublime our natures and control
To front heroic toils with late return,
Or none, or such as shames the conqueror ?
That fire was fed with substance of the soul
And not with holiday stubble, that could burn,
Unpraised of men who after bonfires run, Through seven slow years of unadvancing
war,
Equal when fields were lost or fields were won,
With breath of popular applause or blame, Nor fanned nor damped, unquenchably the
same,
Too inward to be reached by flaws of idle fame.

3.

Soldier and statesman, rarest unison ;
High-poised example of great duties done Simply as breathing, a world's honors worn As life's indifferent gifts to all men born ; Dumb for himself, unless it were to God,
But for his barefoot soldiers eloquent, Tramping the snow to coral where they trod,
Held by his awe in hollow-eyed content ; Modest, yet firm as Nature's self ; un-blamed Save by the men his nobler temper shamed ;
Never seduced through show of present
good
By other than unsetting lights to steer New-trimmed in Heaven, nor than his steadfast mood
More steadfast, far from rashness as from
fear ;
Rigid, but with himself first, grasping still In swerveless poise the wave-beat helm of
will ;
Not honored then or now because he wooed
The popular voice, but that he still with-
stood ;
Broad-minded, higher-souled, there is but
one
Who was all this and ours, and all men's,
— WASHINGTON.

4.

Minds strong by fits, irregularly great,
That flash and darken like revolving lights, Catch more the vulgar eye unschooled to wait

On the long curve of patient days and nights

Rounding a whole life to the circle fair
Of orb'd fulfilment; and this balanced soul,

So simple in its grandeur, coldly bare Of draperies theatric, standing there In perfect symmetry of self-control, Seems not so great at first, but greater grows

Still as we look, and by experience learn How grand this quiet is, how nobly stern
The discipline that wrought through life-long throes

That energetic passion of repose.

5.

A nature too decorous and severe,
Too self-respectful in its griefs and joys,
For ardent girls and boys Who find no genius in a mind so clear That its grave depths seem obvious and near,

Nor a soul great that made so little noise.
They feel no force in that calm-cadenced phrase,

The habitual full-dress of his well-bred mind,

That seems to pace the minuet's courtly maze

And tell of ampler leisures, roomier length of days.

His firm-based brain, to self so little kind That no tumultuary blood could blind, Formed to control men, not amaze, Looms not like those that borrow height of haze:

It was a world of statelier movement then Than this we fret in, he a denizen
Of that ideal Rome that made a man for men.

VI

I.

The longer on this earth we live
And weigh the various qualities of men, Seeing how most are fugitive,
Or fitful gifts, at best, of now and then,

Wind-wavered corpse-lights, daughters of the fen,

The more we feel the high stern-featured beauty

Of plain devotedness to duty,
Steadfast and still, nor paid with mortal praise,

But finding amplest recompense

For life's ungarlanded expense

In work done squarely and unwasted days.

For this we honor him, that he could know

How sweet the service and how free

Of her, God's eldest daughter here below,

And choose in meanest raiment which was she.

2.

Placid completeness, life without a fall
From faith or highest aims, truth's breachless wall,

Surely if any fame can bear the touch,
His will say "Here!" at the last trumpet's call,

The unexpressive man whose life expressed so much.

VII

I.

Never to see a nation born

Hath been given to mortal man,

Unless to those who, on that summer morn,

Gazed silent when the great Virginian

Unsheathed the sword whose fatal flash

Shot union through the incoherent clash

Of our loose atoms, crystallizing them

Around a single will's unpliant stem,

And making purpose of emotion rash.

Out of that scabbard sprang, as from its womb,

Nebulous at first but hardening to a star,

Through mutual share of sunburst and of gloom,

The common faith that made us what we are.

2.

That lifted blade transformed our jangling clans,

Till then provincial, to Americans,

And made a unity of wildering plans;

Here was the doom fixed: here is marked the date

When this New World awoke to man's estate.

trunt its last ship and ceased to look behind;
 or thoughtless was the choice; no love or hate ould from its poise move that deliberate
 mind,

 e sacred past thrown by, an empty rind;

Virginia gave us this imperial man Cast in the massive mould
 Of those high-statured ages old Which into grander forms our mortal metal ran;
 She gave us this unblemished gentleman:
 What shall we give her back but love and
 praise
 As in the dear old unestrangèd days Before the inevitable wrong began?
 Mother of States and undiminished men, Thou gavest us a country, giving him,
 And we owe alway what we owed thee then:
 The boon thou wouldst have snatched from us agen
 Shines as before with no abatement dim.
 A great man's memory is the only thing With influence to outlast the present whim And bind us as when here he knit our golden ring.
 All of him that was subject to the hours Lies in thy soil and makes it part of ours:
 Across more recent graves,
 Where unresentful Nature waves
 Her pennons o'er the shot-ploughed sod, Proclaiming the sweet Truce of God,
 We from this consecrated plain stretch out Our hands as free from afterthought or doubt
 As here the united North Poured her embrownèd manhood forth In welcome of our savior and thy son.
 Through battle we have better learned thy
 worth,
 The long-breathed valor and undaunted
 will,
 Which, like his own, the day's disaster
 done,
 Could, safe in manhood, suffer and be still.
 Both thine and ours the victory hardly
 won;
 If ever with distempered voice or pen
 We have misdeemed thee, here we take it
 back,
 And for the dead of both don common
 black.
 Be to us evermore as thou wast then,

As we forget thou hast not always been,
Mother of States and unpolluted men, Virginia, fitly named from England's manly queen!

AN ODE

FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY, 1876

I

I.

ENTRANCED I saw a vision in the cloud
That loitered dreaming in yon sunset sky, Full of fair shapes, half creatures of the eye,

Half chance-evoked by the wind's fantasy
In golden mist, an ever-shifting crowd: There, 'mid unreal forms that came and went

In air-spun robes, of evanescent dye,
A woman's semblance shone preëminent;
Not armed like Pallas, not like Hera proud,
But, as on household diligence intent, Beside her visionary wheel she bent Like Aretë or Bertha, nor than they Less queenly in her port: about her knee Glad children clustered confident in play:
Placid her pose, the calm of energy;
And over her broad brow in many a round (That loosened would have gilt her garment's hem),

Succinct, as toil prescribes, the hair was wound

In lustrous coils, a natural diadem.
The cloud changed shape, obsequious to the whim

Of some transmuting influence felt in me,
And, looking now, a wolf I seemed to see Limned in that vapor, gaunt and hunger-bold,

Threatening her charge: resolve in every limb,

Erect she flamed in mail of sun-wove gold, Penthesilea's self for battle dight;
One arm uplifted braced a flickering spear,
And one her adamantine shield made light; Her face, helm-shadowed, grew a thing to
fear,

And her fierce eyes, by danger challenged,
took

Her trident-sceptred mother's dauntless
look.

"I know thee now, O goddess-born!" I
cried,

And turned with loftier brow and firmer stride;

For in that spectral cloud-work I had seen Her image, bodied forth by love and pride
The fearless, the benign, the mother-eyed
The fairer world's toil-consecrated queen.

2.

What shape by exile dreamed elates the
mind

Like hers whose hand, a fortress of the poor,

No blood in vengeance spilt, though lawless stains?

Who never turned a suppliant from her
door?

Whose conquests are the gains of all mankind?

To-day her thanks shall fly on every wind Untinted, unrebuked, from shore to shore:
One love, one hope, and not a doubt behind Cannon to cannon shall repeat her praise, Banner to banner flap it forth in flame;
Her children shall rise up to bless her
name,

And wish her harmless length of days,
The mighty mother of a mighty brood, Blessed in all tongues and dear to every
blood,

The beautiful, the strong, and, best of all,
the good.

3.

Seven years long was the bow
Of battle bent, and the heightening Storm-heaps convulsed with the throe
Of their uncontainable lightning;
Seven years long heard the sea
Crash of navies and wave-borne thunders Then drifted the cloud-rack a-lee,
And new stars were seen, a world's wonder;

Each by her sisters made bright,
All binding all to their stations, Cluster of manifold light Startling the old constellations:
Men looked up and grew pale:
Was it a comet or star,
Omen of blessing or bale, Hung o'er the ocean afar?

4.

Stormy the day of her birth:
Was she not born of the strong,
She, the last ripeness of earth,

Beautiful, prophesied long?
 Stormy the days of her prime:
 Hers are the pulses that beat Higher for perils sublime, Making them fawn at her feet.
 Was she not born of the strong?
 Was she not born of the wise?
 Daring and counsel belong
 Of right to her confident eyes:
 Human and motherly they,
 Careless of station or race:
 Hearken! her children to-day Shout for the joy of her face.

II

I.

No praises of the past are hers,
 No fane by hallowing time caressed,
 No broken arch that ministers
 To Time's sad instinct in the breast:
 She has not gathered from the years Grandeur of tragedies and tears, Nor from long leisure the unrest
 That finds repose in forms of classic grace:
 These may delight the coming race Who haply shall not count it to our crime That we who fain would sing are here before our time.
 She also hath her monuments;
 Not such as stand decrepitably resigned To ruin-mark the path of dead events That left no seed of better days behind, The tourist's pensioners that show their scars
 And maunder of forgotten wars; She builds not on the ground, but in the
 mind,
 Her open-hearted palaces For larger-thoughted men with heaven and earth at ease:
 Her march the plump mow marks, the sleepless wheel,
 The golden sheaf, the self-swayed commonweal;
 The happy homesteads hid in orchard trees
 Whose sacrificial smokes through peaceful
 air
 Rise lost in heaven, the household's silent prayer;
 What architect hath bettered these?
 With softened eye the westward traveller sees
 A thousand miles of neighbors side by side,

Holding by toil-won titles fresh from God
 The lands no serf or seigneur ever trod,
 With manhood latent in the very sod, Where the long billow of the wheatfield's
 tide
 Flows to the sky across the prairie wide,
 A sweeter vision than the castled Rhine, Kindly with thoughts of Ruth and Bible-days benign.

2.

O ancient commonwealths, that we revere Haply because we could not know you
 near,
 Your deeds like statues down the aisles of
 Time
 Shine peerless in memorial calm sublime,
 And Athens is a trumpet still, and Rome;
 Yet which of your achievements is not foam Weighed with this one of hers (below you far
 In fame, and born beneath a milder star), That to Earth's orphans, far as curves the dome
 Of death-deaf sky, the bounteous West means home,
 With dear precedency of natural ties That stretch from roof to roof and make men gently wise?
 And if the nobler passions wane, Distorted to base use, if the near goal
 Of insubstantial gain Tempt from the proper race-course of the soul
 That crowns their patient breath Whose feet, song-sandalled, are too fleet for Death,
 Yet may she claim one privilege urbane
 And haply first upon the civic roll, That none can breathe her air nor grow humane.

3.

Oh, better far the briefest hour Of Athens self-consumed, whose plastic
 power Hid Beauty safe from Death in words or
 stone;
 Of Rome, fair quarry where those eagles crowd
 Whose fulgurous vans about the world had blown Triumphant storm and seeds of polity;
 Of Venice, fading o'er her shipless sea,
 Last iridescence of a sunset cloud;

Than this inert prosperity,
 This bovine comfort in the sense alone !
 Yet art came slowly even to such as those, Whom no past genius cheated of their own
 With prudence of o'ermastering precedent; Petal by petal spreads the perfect rose,
 Secure of the divine event;
 And only children rend the bud half-blown To forestall Nature in her calm intent:
 Time hath a quiver full of purposes Which miss not of their aim, to us unknown,

 And brings about the impossible with ease:
 Haply for us the ideal dawn shall break From where in legend-tinted line
 The peaks of Hellas drink the morning's wine,

To tremble on our lids with mystic sign Till the drowsed ichor in our veins awake And set our pulse in tune with moods
 divine:

Long the day lingered in its sea-fringed
 nest,

Then touched the Tuscan hills with golden lance

And paused; then on to Spain and France
 The splendor flew, and Albion's misty crest:

Shall Ocean bar him from his destined West ?

Or are we, then, arrived too late,
 Doomed with the rest to grope disconsolate, Foreclosed of Beauty by our modern date ?

III

I.

Poets, as their heads grow gray,
 Look from too far behind the eyes,
 Too long-experienced to be wise
 In guileless youth's diviner way;
 Life sings not now, but prophecies;
 Time's shadows they no more behold,
 But, under them, the riddle old
 That mocks, bewilders, and defies:
 In childhood's face the seed of shame,
 In the green tree an ambushed flame,
 In Phosphor a vaunt-guard of Night,
 They, though against their will, divine,
 And dread the care-dispelling wine Stored from the Muse's vintage bright, By age imbued with second-sight.
 From Faith's own eyelids there peeps out, Even as they look, the leer of doubt;
 The festal wreath their fancy loads

With care that whispers and forebodes: Nor this our triumph-day can blunt Megæra's goads.

2.

Murmur of many voices in the air
 Denounces us degenerate, Unfaithful guardians of a noble fate,
 And prompts indifference or despair:
 Is this the country that we dreamed in
 youth,

Where wisdom and not numbers should have weight,

Seed-field of simpler manners, braver truth,

Where shams should cease to dominate

In household, church, and state ?

Is this Atlantis ? This the unpoisoned soil,

Sea-whelmed for ages and recovered late,

Where parasitic greed no more should coil

Round Freedom's stem to bend awry and

blight

What grew so fair, sole plant of love and
 light ?

Who sit where once in crowned seclusion sate

The long-proved athletes of debate

Trained from their youth, as none thinks needful now ?

Is this debating club where boys dispute,

And wrangle o'er their stolen fruit,

The Senate, erewhile cloister of the few,

Where Clay once flashed and Webster's cloudy brow

Brooded those bolts of thought that all the horizon knew ?

3.

Oh, as this pensive moonlight blurs my pines,

Here while I sit and meditate these lines,

To gray-green dreams of what they are by
 day,

So would some light, not reason's sharp-edged ray,

Trace me in moonshine as before the flight

Of years had won me this unwelcome right

To see things as they are, or shall be soon,

In the frank prose of undissembling noon !

4.

Back to my breast, ungrateful sigh !

Whoever fails, whoever errs,

The penalty be ours, not hers !

The present still seems vulgar, seen to nigh;

The golden age is still the age that's past:
 I ask no drowsy opiate
 To dull my vision of that only state Founded on faith in man, and therefore Sure to last.

For, O my country, touched by thee,
 The gray hairs gather back their gold;
 Thy thought sets all my pulses free;
 The heart refuses to be old;
 The love is all that I can see.
 Not to thy natal-day belong Time's prudent doubt or age's wrong,
 But gifts of gratitude and song:
 Unsummoned crowd the thankful words,
 As sap in spring-time floods the tree, Foreboding the return of birds,
 For all that thou hast been to me!

IV

I.

Lawless his heart and tempered to the core Who, beckoned by the forward-leaning
 wave,
 First left behind him the firm-footed shore,
 And, urged by every nerve of sail and oar, Steered for the Unknown which gods to mortals gave,
 Of thought and action the mysterious door, Fugbear of fools, a summons to the brave:
 Strength found he in the unsympathizing
 sun,
 And strange stars from beneath the horizon
 won,
 And the dumb ocean pitilessly grave:
 High-hearted surely he;
 But bolder they who first off-cast Their moorings from the habitable Past And ventured chartless on the sea Of storm-engendering Liberty:
 For all earth's width of waters is a span,
 And their convulsed existence mere repose, Watched with the unstable heart of man, Shoreless in wants, mist-girt in all it
 knows,
 Open to every wind of sect or clan,
 And sudden-passionate in ebbs and flows.

2.

They steered by stars the elder shipmen
 knew,
 And laid their courses where the currents draw

Of ancient wisdom channelled deep in law,
 The undaunted few Who changed the Old World for the New,
 And more devoutly prized Than all perfection theorized The more imperfect that had roots and grew.

They founded deep and well,
 Those danger-chosen chiefs of men Who still believed in Heaven and Hell, Nor hoped to find a spell,
 In some fine flourish of a pen,
 To make a better man Than long-considering Nature will or can, Secure against his own mistakes, Content with what life gives or takes,
 And acting still on some fore-ordered plan,
 A cog of iron in an iron wheel,
 Too nicely poised to think or feel,
 Dumb motor in a clock-like commonweal.
 They wasted not their brain in schemes Of what man might be in some bubble-
 sphere,

As if he must be other than he seems Because he was not what he should be
 here,
 Postponing Time's slow proof to petulant
 dreams:

Yet herein they were great Beyond the incredulous lawgivers of yore,
 And wiser than the wisdom of the shelf,
 That they conceived a deeper-rooted state,
 Of harder growth, alive from rind to core,
 By making man sole sponsor of himself.

3.

God of our fathers, Thou who wast, Art, and shalt be when those eye-wise who flout

Thy secret presence shall be lost In the great light that dazzles them to
 doubt,

We, sprung from loins of stalwart men Whose strength was in their trust That Thou wouldst make thy dwelling in their dust

And walk with those a fellow-citizen Who build a city of the just,
 We, who believe Life's bases rest Beyond the probe of chemic test, Still, like our fathers, feel Thee near,
 Sure that, while lasts the immutable decree,

The land to Human Nature dear Shall not be unbeloved of Thee.

HEARTSEASE AND RUE

THIS title was given to the volume of poems collected and published in 1888 after Lowell's return to private life. He took occasion to glean after his earlier harvest and preserve in it several poems written before the publication of Under the Willows.

I. FRIENDSHIP

AGASSIZ

Come
Dicesti egli ebbe ? non viv' egli ancora ?
Non fiere gli occhi suoi lo dolce lome ?

Lowell was in Florence when Agassiz died, and sent this poem home to Mr. Norton for publication. "His death," he says, "came home to me in a singular way, growing into my consciousness from day to day as if it were a graft new-set, that by degrees became part of my own wood and drew a greater share of my sap than belonged to it, as grafts sometimes will. I suppose that, unconsciously to myself, a great part of the ferment it produced in me was owing to the deaths of my sister Anna [Mrs. Charles R. Lowell], of Mrs. —, whom I knew as a child in my early manhood, and of my cousin Amory, who was inextricably bound up with the primal associations of my life, associations which always have a singular sweetness for me. A very deep chord had been touched also at Florence by the sight of our old lodgings in the Casa Guidi, of the balcony Mabel used to run on, and the windows we used to look out at so long ago. I got sometimes into the mood I used to be in when I was always repeating to myself,

'King Pandion he is dead ;
All thy friends are lapt in lead,'— verses which seem to me desolately pathetic. At last I began to hum over bits of my poem in my head till it took complete possession of me and worked me up to a delicious state of excitement, all the more delicious as my brain (or at any rate the musical part of it) had been lying dormant so long. My old trick of seeing things with my eyes shut after I had gone to bed (I mean whimsical things utterly alien to the train of my thoughts—for example, a hospital ward with a long row of white, untenanted beds, and on the farthest a pile of those little wooden dolls with red-painted slippers) revived in full force. Nervous, horribly nervous, but happy for the first time (I mean consciously happy) since I came over here. And so by degrees my poem worked itself out. The parts came to me as I came awake, and I wrote them down in the morning. I had all my bricks—but the mortar would n't set, as the masons say. However I got it into order at last. You will see there is a logical sequence if you look sharp. I was curious to me after it was done to see how fleshly it was. This impression of Agassiz had wormed itself into my consciousness, and without my knowing it had colored my whole poem. I could not help feeling how, if I had been writing of Emerson, for example, I should have been quite otherwise ideal. But there it is, and you can judge for yourself. I think there is some go in it somehow, but it is too near me yet to be judged fairly by me. It is old-fashioned, you see, but none the worse for that." The poem was dated February, 1874.

I

I.

THE electric nerve, whose instantaneous
thrill

Makes next-door gossips of the antipodes, Confutes poor Hope's last fallacy of ease,—
The distance that divided her from ill:
Earth sentient seems again as when of old

The horny foot of Pan Stamped, and the conscious horror ran Beneath men's feet through all her fibres
cold:

Space's blue walls are mined; we feel the throe From underground of our night-mantle
foe:

The flame-winged feet
Of Trade's new Mercury, that dry-shod run Through briny abysses dreamless of the
sun,

Are mercilessly fleet,
And at a bound annihilate Ocean's prerogative of short reprieve;
Surely ill news might wait,
And man be patient of delay to grieve:
Letters have sympathies
And tell-tale faces that reveal,

To senses finer than the eyes, Their errand's purport ere we break the seal;

They wind a sorrow round with circumstance

To stay its feet, nor all unwarned displace
The veil that darkened from our sidelong glance

The inexorable face:

But now Fate stuns as with a mace;
The savage of the skies, that men have caught

And some scant use of language taught,

Tells only what he must, —
The steel-cold fact in one laconic thrust.

2.

So thought I, as, with vague, mechanic
eyes,

I scanned the festering news we half despise

Yet scramble for no less,
And read of public scandal, private fraud, Crime flaunting scot-free while the mob applaud,

Office made vile to bribe unworthiness,
And all the unwholesome mess
The Land of Honest Abraham serves of late

To teach the Old World how to wait,

When suddenly,
As happens if the brain, from overweight

Of blood, infect the eye,
Three tiny words grew lurid as I read,
And reeled commingling: Agassiz is dead.
As when, beneath the street's familiar jar,
An earthquake's alien omen rumbles far,
Men listen and forebode, I hung my head,
And strove the present to recall,

As if the blow that stunned were yet to fall.

3.

Uprooted is our mountain oak,
That promised long security of shade And brooding-place for many a winged
thought;

Not by Time's softly-cadenced stroke With pauses of relenting pity stayed,
But ere a root seemed sapt, a bough de-cayed,

From sudden ambush by the whirlwind caught

And in his broad maturity betrayed !

4.

Well might I, as of old, appeal to you,
O mountains woods and streams,
To help us mourn him, for ye loved him
too;

But simpler moods befit our modern themes,

And no less perfect birth of nature can, Though they yearn tow'rd him, sympathize with man,

Save as dumb fellow-prisoners through a wall;

Answer ye rather to my call,
Strong poets of a more unconscious day, When Nature spake nor sought nice reasons why,

Too much for softer arts forgotten since That teach our forthright tongue to lisp and mince,

And drown in music the heart's bitter cry !
Lead me some steps in your directer way, Teach me those words that strike a solid root

Within the ears of men;
Ye chiefly, virile both to think and feel,
Deep-chested Chapman and firm-footed Ben,

For he was masculine from head to heel.
Nay, let himself stand undiminished by With those clear parts of him that will not die.

Himself from out the recent dark I claim To hear, and, if I flatter him, to blame;
To show himself, as still I seem to see,
A mortal, built upon the antique plan, Brimful of lusty blood as ever ran,
And taking life as simply as a tree !
To claim my foiled good-by let him appear,

Large-limbed and human as I saw him
near,

Loosed from the stiffening uniform of
fame:

And let me treat him largely: I should
fear,

(If with too prying lens I chanced to err, Mistaking catalogue for character.)
His wise forefinger raised in smiling blame.
Nor would I scant him with judicial
breath

And turn mere critic in an epitaph;
I choose the wheat, incurious of the chaff That swells fame living, chokes it after
death,

And would but memorize the shining half
Of his large nature that was turned to me:
Fain had I joined with those that honored
him

With eyes that darkened because his were dim,

And now been silent: but it might not be.

II

I.

In some the genius is a thing apart,

A pillared hermit of the brain,

Hoarding with incommunicable art

Its intellectual gain;

Man's web of circumstance and fate

They from their perch of self observe,

Indifferent as the figures on a slate

Are to the planet's sun-swung curve

Whose bright returns they calculate;

Their nice adjustment, part to part,

Were shaken from its serviceable mood

By unpremeditated stirs of heart

Or jar of human neighborhood:

Some find their natural selves, and only
then,

In furloughs of divine escape from men,

And when, by that brief ecstasy left bare,

Driven by some instinct of desire,

They wander worldward, 't is to blink and
stare,

Like wild things of the wood about a fire,

Dazed by the social glow they cannot
share;

His nature brooked no lonely lair,

But basked and bourgeoned in copartnery,

Companionship, and open-windowed glee:

He knew, for he had tried,

Those speculative heights that lure

The unpractised foot, impatient of a guide,

Tow'rd ether too attenuately pure

For sweet unconscious breath, though dear to pride,

But better loved the foothold sure

Of paths that wind by old abodes of men

Who hope at last the churchyard's peace secure,

And follow time-worn rules, that them suffice,

Learned from their sires, traditionally wise,

Careful of honest custom's how and when;

His mind, too brave to look on Truth askance,

No more those habitudes of faith could share,

But, tinged with sweetness of the old Swiss manse,

Lingered around them still and fain would spare.

Patient to spy a sullen egg for weeks,

The enigma of creation to surprise,

His truer instinct sought the life that speaks

Without a mystery from kindly eyes;

In no self-spun cocoon of prudence wound,

He by the touch of men was best inspired,

And caught his native greatness at rebound

From generousities itself had fired;

Then how the heat through every fibre ran,

Felt in the gathering presence of the man,

While the apt word and gesture came unbid!

Virtues and faults to one metal wrought,

Fined all his blood to thought,

And ran the molten man in all he said or did.

All Tully's rules and all Quintilian's too

He by the light of listening faces knew,

And his rapt audience all unconscious lent

Their own roused force to make him eloquent;

Persuasion fondled in his look and tone;

Our speech (with strangers prudish) he could bring

To find new charm in accents not her own;

Her coy constraints and icy hindrances

Melted upon his lips to natural ease,

As a brook's fetters swell the dance of spring.

Nor yet all sweetness: not in vain he wore,

Nor in the sheath of ceremony, controlled

By velvet courtesy or caution cold,

That sword of honest anger prized of old,

But, with two-handed wrath,

If baseness or pretension crossed his path,

Struck once nor needed to strike more.

2.

His magic was not far to seek, —

He was so human! Whether strong or weak,

Far from his kind he neither sank nor soared,

But sate an equal guest at every board:

No beggar ever felt him condescend,

No prince presume; for still himself he bare

At manhood's simple level, and where'er

He met a stranger, there he left a friend.

How large an aspect ! nobly unsevere, With freshness round him of Olympian
 cheer,
 Like visits of those earthly gods he came;
 His look, wherever its good-fortune fell, Doubled the feast without a miracle,
 And on the hearthstone danced a happier
 flame;
 Philemon's crabbed vintage grew benign;
 Amphitryon's gold-juice humanized to wine.

III

I.

The garrulous memories Gather again from all their far-flown nooks,
 Singly at first, and then by twos and threes, Then in a throng innumerable, as the rooks Thicken their twilight files Tow'rd Tintern's gray repose of roofless
 aisles:
 Once more I see him at the table's head When Saturday her monthly banquet
 spread
 To scholars, poets, wits, All choice, some famous, loving things, not
 names,
 And so without a twinge at others' fames;
 Such company as wisest moods befits, Yet with no pedant blindness to the worth Of undeliberate mirth, Natures benignly mixed of air and earth,
 Now with the stars and now with equal zest Tracing the eccentric orbit of a jest.

2.

I see in vision the warm-lighted hall,
 The living and the dead I see again,
 And but my chair is empty; 'mid them
 all
 'T is I that seem the dead: they all remain Immortal, changeless creatures of the brain: Wellnigh I doubt which world is real most,
 Of sense or spirit, to the truly sane;
 In this abstraction it were light to deem Myself the figment of some stronger
 dream;
 They are the real things, and I the ghost That glide unhindered through the solid
 door, Vainly for recognition seek from chair to chair,
 And strive to speak and am but futile air,
 As truly most of us are little more.

3.

Him most I see whom we most dearly miss,
 The latest parted thence,
 His features poised in genial armistice And armed neutrality of self-defence Beneath the forehead's walled preëminence, While Tyro, plucking facts with careless reach,
 Settles off-hand our human how and whence;
 The long-trained veteran scarcely wincing hears
 The infallible strategy of volunteers Making through Nature's walls its easy breach,
 And seems to learn where he alone could teach.
 Ample and ruddy, the board's end he fills
 As he our fireside were, our light and heat, Centre where minds diverse and various skills Find their warm nook and stretch unham-pered feet;
 I see the firm benignity of face, Wide-smiling champaign, without tameness
 sweet,
 The mass Teutonic toned to Gallic grace, The eyes whose sunshine runs before the lips
 While Holmes's rockets curve their long ellipse,
 And burst in seeds of fire that burst
 again
 To drop in scintillating rain.

4.

There too the face half-rustic, half-divine, Self-poised, sagacious, freaked with humor fine,
 Of him who taught us not to mow and mope
 About our fancied selves, but seek our scope
 In Nature's world and Man's, nor fade to hollow trope, Content with our New World and timely
 bold
 To challenge the o'ermastery of the Old;
 Listening with eyes averse I see him sit Pricked with the cider of the Judge's wit (Ripe-hearted homebrew, fresh and fresh again),
 While the wise nose's firm-built aquiline Curves sharper to restrain The merriment whose most unruly moods

Pass not the dumb laugh learned in listening woods

Of silence-shedding pine:

Hard by is he whose art's consoling spell Hath given both worlds a whiff of asphodel,

His look still vernal 'mid the wintry ring
Of petals that remember, not foretell, The paler primrose of a second spring.

5.

And more there are: but other forms arise

And seen as clear, albeit with dimmer
eyes:

First he from sympathy still held apart
By shrinking over-eagerness of heart, Cloud charged with searching fire, whose shadow's sweep

Heightened mean things with sense of brooding ill,

And steeped in doom familiar field and hill, —

New England's poet, soul reserved and
deep,

November nature with a name of May, Whom high o'er Concord plains we laid to sleep,

While the orchards mocked us in their white array

And building robins wondered at our tears,

Snatched in his prime, the shape august That should have stood unbent 'neath fourscore years,

The noble head, the eyes of furtive trust,
All gone to speechless dust.

And he our passing guest,

Shy nature, too, and stung with life's unrest,

Whom we too briefly had but could not hold,

Who brought ripe Oxford's culture to our board,

The Past's incalculable hoard, Mellowed by scuteheoned panes in cloisters old,

Seclusions ivy-hushed, and pavements
sweet

With immemorial lisp of musing feet; Young head time-tensured smother than a friar's,

Boy face, but grave with answerless
desires,

Poet in all that poets have of best,

But foiled with riddles dark and cloudy
aims,

Who now hath found sure rest,
Not by still Isis or historic Thames, Nor by the Charles he tried to love with
me,

But, not misplaced, by Arno's hallowed
brim,

Nor scorned by Santa Croce's neighboring fames,

Haply not mindless, wheresoe'er he be,
Of violets that to-day I scattered over him.

He, too, is there,
After the good centurion fitly named, Whom learning dulled not, nor convention tamed,

Shaking with burly mirth his hyacinthine
hair,

Our hearty Grecian of Homeric ways, Still found the surer friend where least he hoped the praise.

6.

Yea truly, as the sallowing years Fall from us faster, like frost-loosened
leaves

Pushed by the misty touch of shortening
days,

And that unwakened winter nears,
'T is the void chair our surest guest receives,

'T is lips long cold that give the warmest
kiss,

'T is the lost voice comes oftenest to our
ears;

We count our rosary by the beads we miss:
To me, at least, it seemeth so,

An exile in the land once found divine,

While my starved fire burns low,
And homeless winds at the loose casement whine

Shrill ditties of the snow-roofed Apennine.

IV

I.

Now forth into the darkness all are gone,
But memory, still unsated, follows on, Retracing step by step our homeward
walk,

With many a laugh among our serious talk,

Across the bridge where, on the dimpling
tide,

The long red streamers from the windows
glide,

Or the dim western moon

Rocks her skiff's image on the broad lagoon,
And Boston shows a soft Venetian side
In that Arcadian light when roof and tree, Hard prose by daylight, dream in Italy;
Or haply in the sky's cold chambers wide Shivered the winter stars, while all below,
As if an end were come of human ill,
The world was wrapt in innocence of snow And the cast-iron bay was blind and still;
These were our poetry; in him perhaps Science had barred the gate that lets in
dream,

And he would rather count the perch and bream

Than with the current's idle fancy lapse;
And yet he had the poet's open eye That takes a frank delight in all it sees,
Nor was earth voiceless, nor the mystic sky,
To him the life-long friend of fields and trees:

Then came the prose of the suburban street,
Its silence deepened by our echoing feet,
And converse such as rambling hazard finds; Then he who many cities knew and many minds,

And men once world-noised, now mere Ossian forms

Of misty memory, bade them live anew As when they shared earth's manifold de-
light,

In shape, in gait, in voice, in gesture true,
And, with an accent heightening as he warms,

Would stop forgetful of the shortening
night,

Drop my confining arm, and pour profuse Much worldly wisdom kept for others' use,
Not for his own, for he was rash and free, His purse or knowledge all men's, like the sea.

Still can I hear his voice's shrilling might (With pauses broken, while the fitful spark He blew more hotly rounded on the dark To hint his features with a Rembrandt
light)

Call Oken back, or Humboldt, or Lamarck, Or Cuvier's taller shade, and many more Whom he had seen, or knew from others'
sight,

And make them men to me as ne'er before:
Not seldom, as the undeadened fibre stirred Of noble friendships knit beyond the sea,

German or French thrust by the lagging
word,

For a good leash of mother-tongues had he At last, arrived at where our paths divide,
"Good night!" and, ere the distance grew too wide,

"Good night!" again; and now with cheated ear

I half hear his who mine shall never hear.

2.

Sometimes it seemed as if New England
air

For his large lungs too parsimonious
were,

As if those empty rooms of dogma drear
Where the ghost shivers of a faith austere Counting the horns o'er of the Beast, Still scaring those whose faith in it is least,

As if those snaps o' th' moral atmosphere
That sharpen all the needles of the East,
Had been to him like death, Accustomed to draw Europe's freer
breath

In a more stable element;

Nay, even our landscape, half the year morose,

Our practical horizon grimly pent,
Our air, sincere of ceremonious haze, Forcing hard outlines mercilessly close,
Our social monotone of level days,

Might make our best seem banishment;

But it was nothing so;

Haply his instinct might divine,
Beneath our drift of puritanic snow,

The marvel sensitive and fine

Of sanguinaria over-rash to blow
And trust its shyness to an air malign; Well might he prize truth's warranty and pledge

In the grim outcrop of our granite edge, Or Hebrew fervor flashing forth at need In the gaunt sons of Calvin's iron breed, As prompt to give as skilled to win and keep;

But, though such intuitions might not
cheer,

Yet life was good to him, and, there or
here,

With that sufficing joy, the day was never cheap;

Thereto his mind was its own ample
sphere,

And, like those buildings great that through the year
 Carry one temperature, his nature large Made its own climate, nor could any marge Traced by convention stay him from his bent:
 He had a habitude of mountain air;
 He brought wide outlook where he went,
 And could on sunny uplands dwell Of prospect sweeter than the pastures fair High-hung of viny Neufchâtel; Nor, surely, did he miss Some pale, imaginary bliss Of earlier sights whose inner landscape still was Swiss.

v

I.

I cannot think he wished so soon to die
 With all his senses full of eager heat, And rosy years that stood expectant by To buckle the winged sandals on their feet,
 He that was friends with Earth, and all her sweet Took with both hands unsparingly:
 Truly this life is precious to the root,
 And good the feel of grass beneath the foot;
 To lie in buttercups and clover-bloom, Tenants in common with the bees,
 And watch the white clouds drift through gulfs of trees,
 Is better than long waiting in the tomb;
 Only once more to feel the coming spring As the birds feel it, when it bids them
 sing,
 Only once more to see the moon Through leaf-fringed abbey-arches of the elms Curve her mild sickle in the West Sweet with the breath of hay-cocks, were a boon
 Worth any promise of soothsayer realms Or casual hope of being elsewhere blest;
 To take December by the beard And crush the creaking snow with springy
 foot, While overhead the North's dumb
 streamers shoot, Till Winter fawn upon the cheek endeared,
 Then the long evening-ends

Lingered by cosy chimney-nooks,
 With high companionship of books Or slippered talk of friends And sweet habitual looks,
 Is better than to stop the ears with dust: Too soon the spectre comes to say, "Thou must!"

2.

When toil-crooked hands are crost upon the breast,
 They comfort us with sense of rest;
 They must be glad to lie forever still;
 Their work is ended with their day; Another fills their room; 't is the World's ancient way,
 Whether for good or ill;
 But the deft spinners of the brain,
 Who love each added day and find it gain,
 Them overtakes the doom To snap the half-grown flower upon the loom (Trophy that was to be of life-long pain), The thread no other skill can ever knit
 again.
 'T was so with him, for he was glad
 to live,
 'T was doubly so, for he left work begun;
 Could not this eagerness of Fate forgive Till all the allotted flax were spun?
 It matters not; for, go at night or noon,
 A friend, whene'er he dies, has died too
 soon,
 And, once we hear the hopeless He is
dead,
 So far as flesh hath knowledge, all is said.

VI

I.

I seem to see the black procession go:
 That crawling prose of death too well I
 know,
 The vulgar paraphrase of glorious woe;
 I see it wind through that unsightly grove,
 Once beautiful, but long defaced With granite permanence of cockney taste
 And all those grim disfigurements we
 love:
 There, then, we leave him: Him? such costly waste
 Nature rebels at: and it is not true

Of those most precious parts of him we knew:

Could we be conscious but as dreamers be,
'T were sweet to leave this shifting life of tents

Sunk in the changeless calm of Deity;
Nay, to be mingled with the elements,
The fellow-servant of creative powers, Partaker in the solemn year's events,
To share the work of busy-fingered
hours,

To be night's silent almoner of dew,
To rise again in plants and breathe and
grow,

To stream as tides the ocean caverns
through,

Or with the rapture of great winds to blow

About earth's shaken coignes, were not a fate

To leave us all-disconsolate;

Even endless slumber in the sweetening sod

Of charitable earth

That takes out all our mortal stains,

And makes us cleanlier neighbors of the clod,

Mathinks were better worth

Than the poor fruit of most men's wakeful pains,

The heart's insatiable ache:

But such was not his faith,

Nor mine: it may be he had trod

Outside the plain old path of God thus spake,

But God to him was very God,

And not a visionary wraith

Skulking in murky corners of the mind,

And he was sure to be

Somehow, somewhere, imperishable as He,

Not with His essence mystically combined, As some high spirits long, but whole and
free,

A perfected and conscious Agassiz.

And such I figure him: the wise of old

Welcome and own him of their peaceful
fold,

Not truly with the guild enrolled

Of him who seeking inward guessed

Diviner riddles than the rest,

And groping in the darks of thought

Touched the Great Hand and knew it
not;

Rather he shares the daily light,

From reason's charier fountains won,

Of his great chief, the slow-paced Stagyrite,
And Cuvier clasps once more his long-lost son.

2.

The shape erect is prone: forever stilled
The winning tongue; the forehead's high-piled heap,

A cairn which every science helped to build,

Unvalued will its golden secrets keep:
He knows at last if Life or Death be best:

Wherever he be flown, whatever vest

The being hath put on which lately here

So many-friended was, so full of cheer

To make men feel the Seeker's noble zest,

We have not lost him all; he is not gone

To the dumb herd of them that wholly
die;

The beauty of his better self lives on

In minds he touched with fire, in many an eye

He trained to Truth's exact severity;

He was a Teacher: why be grieved for
him

Whose living word still stimulates the air?

In endless file shall loving scholars come

The glow of his transmitted touch to share,

And trace his features with an eye less dim

Than ours whose sense familiar wont makes numb.

TO HOLMES

ON HIS SEVENTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY

DEAR Wendell, why need count the years

Since first your genius made me thrill,

If what moved then to smiles or tears,

Or both contending, move me still?

What has the Calendar to do

With poets? What Time's fruitless tooth

With gay immortals such as you

Whose years but emphasize your youth?

One air gave both their lease of breath;

The same paths lured our boyish feet;

One earth will hold us safe in death

With dust of saints and scholars sweet.

Our legends from one source were drawn,
I scarce distinguish yours from mine,
And don't we make the Gentiles yawn With "You remembers?" o'er our wine!

If I, with too senescent air, Invade your elder memory's pale,
You snub me with a pitying "Where Were you in the September Gale?"

Both stared entranced at Lafayette, Saw Jackson dubbed with LL. D.
What Cambridge saw not strikes us yet
As scarcely worth one's while to see.

Ten years my senior, when my name In Harvard's entrance-book was writ, Her halls still echoed with the fame
Of you, her poet and her wit.

'T is fifty years from then to now:
But your Last Leaf renews its green, Though, for the laurels on your brow (So thick they crowd), 't is hardly seen.

The oriole's fledglings fifty times Have flown from our familiar elms;
As many poets with their rhymes Oblivion's darkling dust o'erwhelms.

The birds are hushed, the poets gone
Where no harsh critic's lash can reach,
And still your winged brood sing on To all who love our English speech.

Nay, let the foolish records be That make believe you 're seventy-five:
You 're the old Wendell still to me, —
And that 's the youngest man alive.

The gray-blue eyes, I see them still,
The gallant front with brown o'erhung,
The shape alert, the wit at will,
The phrase that stuck, but never stung.

You keep your youth as yon Scotch firs, Whose gaunt line my horizon hems, Though twilight all the lowland blurs, Hold sunset in their ruddy stems.

You with the elders? Yes, 't is true,
But in no sadly literal sense,
With elders and coevals too,
Whose verb admits no preterite tense.

Master alike in speech and song
Of fame's great antiseptic — Style, You with the classic few belong
Who tempered wisdom with a smile.

Outlive us all! Who else like you Could sift the seedcorn from our chaff,
And make us with the pen we knew Deathless at least in epitaph?

IN A COPY OF OMAR KHAYYÁM

THESE pearls of thought in Persian gulfs were bred,
Each softly lucent as a rounded moon;
The diver Omar plucked them from their
bed, Fitzgerald strung them on an English thread.

Fit rosary for a queen, in shape and hue,
When Contemplation tells her pensive beads Of mortal thoughts, forever old and new.
Fit for a queen? Why, surely then for you!

The moral? Where Doubt's eddies toss and twirl Faith's slender shallop till her footing reel, Plunge: if you find not peace beneath the whirl,
Groping, you may like Omar grasp a pearl.

ON RECEIVING A COPY OF MR. AUSTIN DOBSON'S "OLD WORLD IDYLLS"

I

At length arrived, your book I take
To read in for the author's sake;
Too gray for new sensations grown,
Can charm to Art or Nature known
This torpor from my senses shake?

Hush! my parched ears what runnels slake?
Is a thrush gurgling from the brake?
Has Spring, on all the breezes blown,
At length arrived?

Long may you live such songs to make,
And I to listen while you wake,

With skill of late disused, each tone
Of the Lesbourn barbiton,
At mastery, through long finger-ache,
At length arrived.

II

As I read on, what changes steal O'er me and through, from head to heel?
A rapier thrusts coat-skirt aside,
My rough Tweeds bloom to silken pride,— Who was it laughed? Your hand, Dick Steele!

Down vistas long of clipt charmille
Watteau as Pierrot leads the reel; Tabor and pipe the dancers guide
As I read on.

While in and out the verses wheel
The wind-caught robes trim feet reveal, Lithe ankles that to music glide,
But chastely and by chance descried; Art? Nature? Which do I most feel
As I read on?

TO C. F. BRADFORD

ON THE GIFT OF A MEERSCHAUM PIPE

THE pipe came safe, and welcome too,
As anything must be from you;
A meerschaum pure, 't would float as light
As she the girls call Amphitrite.
Mixture divine of foam and clay,
From both it stole the best away:
Its foam is such as crowns the glow
Of beakers brimmed by Veuve Clicquot;
Its clay is but congested lymph Jove chose to make some choicer nymph;
And here combined,—why, this must be The birth of some enchanted sea, Shaped to immortal form, the type And very Venus of a pipe.

When high I heap it with the weed From Lethe wharf, whose potent seed Nicotia, big from Bacchus, bore
And east upon Virginia's shore, I'll think,—So fill the fairer bowl
And wise alembic of thy soul,
With herbs far-sought that shall distil,
Not fumes to slacken thought and will,
But bracing essences that nerve To wait, to dare, to strive, to serve.

When curls the smoke in eddies soft,
And hangs a shitting dream aloft, That gives and takes, though chance-designed,

The impress of the dreamer's mind,
I'll think,—So let the vapors bred By Passion, in the heart or head, Pass off and upward into space,
Waving farewells of tenderest grace, Remembered in some happier time,
To blend their beauty with my rhyme.

While slowly o'er its candid bowl
The color deepens (as the soul
That burns in mortals leaves its trace Of bale or beauty on the face), I'll think,—So let the essence rare
Of years consuming make me fair;
So, 'gainst the ills of life profuse, Steep me in some narcotic juice;
And if my soul must part with all That whiteness which we greenness call, Smooth back, O Fortune, half thy frown,
And make me beautifully brown!

Dream-forger, I refill thy cup With reverie's wasteful pittance up,
And while the fire burns slow away,
Hiding itself in ashes gray,
I'll think,—As inward Youth retreats, Compelled to spare his wasting heats, When Life's Ash-Wednesday comes about,
And my head's gray with fires burnt out, While stays one spark to light the eye,
With the last flash of memory,
'T will leap to welcome C. F. B., Who sent my favorite pipe to me.

BANKSIDE

(HOME OF EDMUND QUINCY)

DEDHAM, MAY 21, 1877

Edmund Quincy was eleven years the senior of Lowell, but their common labors in the early days of the anti-slavery movement, and their congeniality of temper and wit, made them very intimate friends.

I

I CHRISTENED you in happier days, before These gray forebodings on my brow were seen;

You are still lovely in your new-leaved
green;
The brimming river soothes his grassy
shore;
The bridge is there; the rock with lichens hoar;
And the same shadows on the water lean, Outlasting us. How many graves between That day and this! How many shadows
more Darken my heart, their substance from these eyes Hidden forever! So our world is made Of life and death commingled; and the sighs Outweigh the smiles, in equal balance laid: What compensation? None, save that the Allwise
So schools us to love things that cannot fade.

II

Thank God, he saw you last in pomp of
May,
Ere any leaf had felt the year's regret;
Your latest image in his memory set Was fair as when your landscape's peaceful sway Charmed dearer eyes with his to make delay
On Hope's long prospect, — as if They forget
The happy, They, the unspeakable Three, whose debt,
Like the hawk's shadow, blots our brightest
day:
Better it is that ye should look so fair, Slopes that he loved, and ever-murmuring
pines
That make a music out of silent air, And bloom-heaped orchard-trees in prosperous lines;
In you the heart some sweeter hints divines,
And wiser, than in winter's dull despair.

Old Friend, farewell! Your kindly door
again
I enter, but the master's hand in mine No more clasps welcome, and the temperate wine,
That cheered our long nights, other lips must stain:
All is unchanged, but I expect in vain
The face alert, the manners free and fine,

The seventy years borne lightly as the pine Wears its first down of snow in green disdain:

Much did he, and much well; yet most of all

I prized his skill in leisure and the ease
Of a life flowing full without a plan;
For most are idly busy; him I call Thrice fortunate who knew himself to please,
Learned in those arts that make a gentleman.

IV

Nor deem he lived unto himself alone;
His was the public spirit of his sire,
And in those eyes, soft with domestic fire,
A quenchless light of fiercer temper shone What time about the world our shame was blown
On every wind; his soul would not conspire
With selfish men to soothe the mob's desire,
Veiling with garlands Moloch's bloody
stone;
The high-bred instincts of a better day Ruled in his blood, when to be citizen Rang Roman yet, and a Free People's sway Was not the exchequer of impoverished
men, Nor statesmanship with loaded votes to
play,
Nor public office a tramps' boosing-ken.

JOSEPH WINLOCK

DIED JUNE 11, 1875

Mr. Winlock was at the head of the Harvard Astronomical Observatory at the time of his death.

SHY soul and stalwart, man of patient will Through years one hair's-breadth on our Dark to gain,
Who, from the stars he studied not in vain, Had learned their secret to be strong and
still,
Careless of fames that earth's tin trumpets fill;
Born under Leo, broad of build and brain, While others slept, he watched in that hushed fane
Of Science, only witness of his skill:

Sudden as falls a shooting-star he fell,
 But inextinguishable his luminous trace In mind and heart of all that knew him
 well.
 Happy man's doom! To him the Fates were known Of orbs dim hovering on the skirts of space, Unprescient, through God's mercy, of his own!

TO FANNY ALEXANDER

The daughter of an American portrait painter who spent his life in Italy, and herself known through her sympathetic and delicate portraiture of Italian peasant life, especially in her Roadside Songs of Tuscany. The poem is dated at Florence in 1873.

UNCONSCIOUS as the sunshine, simply sweet And generous as that, thou dost not close Thyself in art, as life were but a rose To rumple bee-like with luxurious feet;
 Thy higher mind therein finds sure retreat, But not from care of common hopes and woes;
 Thee the dark chamber, thee the unfriended,
 knows,
 Although no babbling crowds thy praise repeat:
 Consummate artist, who life's landscape
 bleak
 Hast brimmed with sun to many a clouded
 eye,
 Touched to a brighter hue the beggar's cheek,
 Hung over orphaned lives a gracious sky,
 And traced for eyes, that else would vainly seek,
 Fair pictures of an angel drawing nigh!

JEFFRIES WYMAN

DIED SEPTEMBER 4, 1874

An associate of Lowell in Cambridge, and eminent as a man of science in the field of comparative anatomy.

THE wisest man could ask no more of Fate
 Than to be simple, modest, manly, true,

Safe from the Many, honored by the Few;
 To count as naught in World, or Church, or State,
 But inwardly in secret to be great;
 To feel mysterious Nature ever new;
 To touch, if not to grasp, her endless clue,
 And learn by each discovery how to wait.
 He widened knowledge and escaped the
 praise;
 He wisely taught, because more wise to learn;
 He toiled for Science, not to draw men's gaze,
 But for her lore of self-denial stern.
 That such a man could spring from our decays
 Fans the soul's nobler faith until it burn.

TO A FRIEND

WHO GAVE ME A GROUP OF WEEDS AND GRASSES, AFTER A DRAWING OF DÜRER

TRUE as the sun's own work, but more refined,
 It tells of love behind the artist's eye,
 Of sweet companionships with earth and
 sky,
 And summers stored, the sunshine of the
 mind.
 What peace! Sure, ere you breathe, the fickle wind
 Will break its truce and bend that grass-plume high,
 Scarcely yet quiet from the gilded fly
 That flits a more luxurious perch to find.
 Thanks for a pleasure that can never pall,
 A serene moment, deftly caught and kept
 To make immortal summer on my wall.
 Had he who drew such gladness ever wept?
 Ask rather could he else have seen at all,
 Or grown in Nature's mysteries an adept?

WITH AN ARMCHAIR

I.

ABOUT the oak that framed this chair, of
 old
 The seasons danced their round; delighted
 wings Brought music to its boughs; shy woodland things

Shared its broad roof, 'neath whose green glooms grown bold,
Lovers, more shy than they, their secret
told;

The resurrection of a thousand springs Swelled in its veins, and dim imaginings Teased them, perchance, of life more manifold.

Such shall it know when its proud arms enclose

My Lady Goshawk, musing here at rest, Careless of him who into exile goes, Yet, while his gift by those fair limbs is prest,

Through some fine sympathy of nature
knows

That, seas between us, she is still his guest.

2.

Yet sometimes, let me dream, the conscious wood

A momentary vision may renew Of him who counts it treasure that he
knew,

Though but in passing, such a priceless
good,

And, like an elder brother, felt his mood Uplifted by the spell that kept her true, Amid her lightsome compeers, to the few That wear the crown of serious womanhood:

Were he so happy, think of him as one Who in the Louvre or Pitti feels his soul Rapt by some dead face which, till then unseen.

Moves like a memory, and, till life outrun, Is vexed with vague misgiving past control,

Of nameless loss and thwarted might-have-been.

E. G. DE R.

WHY should I seek her spell to decompose
Or to its source each rill of influence trace That feeds the brimming river of her grace?

The petals numbered but degrade to prose Summer's triumphant poem of the rose:
Enough for me to watch the wavering
chase,

Like wind o'er grass, of moods across her face,

Fairest in motion, fairer in repose.

Steeped in her sunshine, let me, while I
may,

Partake the bounty: ample 't is for me That her mirth cheats my temples of their
gray,

Her charm makes years long spent seem yet to be.

Wit, goodness, grace, swift flash from grave to gay,—

All these are good, but better far is she.

BON VOYAGE

SHIP, blest to bear such freight across the
blue,

May stormless stars control thy horoscope;
In keel and hull, in every spar and rope,
Be night and day to thy dear office true!

Ocean, men's path and their divider too,
No fairer shrine of memory and hope To the underworld adown thy westering slope

E'er vanished, or whom such regrets pursue:

Smooth all thy surges as when Jove to Crete

Swam with less costly burthen, and prepare

A pathway meet for her home-coming soon

With golden undulations such as greet
The printless summer-sandals of the moon And tempt the Nautilus his cruise to dare!

TO WHITTIER

ON HIS SEVENTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY

NEW ENGLAND's poet, rich in love as
years,

Her hills and valleys praise thee, her swift brooks

Dance in thy verse; to her grave sylvan nooks

Thy steps allure us, which the wood-thrush hears

As maids their lovers', and no treason
fears;

Through thee her Merrimacs and Agiochooks

And many a name uncouth win gracious looks,

Sweetly familiar to both Englands' ears:

Peaceful by birthright as a virgin lake,
 The lily's anchorage, which no eyes behold Save those of stars, yet for thy brother's sake
 That lay in bonds, thou blewst a blast as bold
 As that wherewith the heart of Roland brake,
 Far heard across the New World and the Old.

ON AN AUTUMN SKETCH OF H. G. WILD

THANKS to the artist, ever on my wall
 The sunset stays: that hill in glory rolled, Those trees and clouds in crimson and in
 gold,
 Burn on, nor cool when evening's shadows
 fall.
 Not round these splendors Midnight wraps her pall;
These leaves the flush of Autumn's vintage hold
 In Winter's spite, nor can the Northwind
 bold
 Deface my chapel's western window small:
 On one, ah me! October struck his frost, But not repaid him with those Tyrian hues;
 His naked boughs but tell him what is lost,
 And parting comforts of the sun refuse:
 His heaven is bare, — ah, were its hollow crost
 Even with a cloud whose light were yet to lose!

TO MISS D. T.

ON HER GIVING ME A DRAWING OF LITTLE STREET ARABS

Miss Dorothy Tennant afterward married Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer.

As, cleansed of Tiber's and Oblivion's slime,
 Glow Farnesina's vaults with shapes again That dreamed some exiled artist from his pain
 Back to his Athens and the Muse's clime, So these world-orphaned waifs of Want and Crime,

Purged by Art's absolution from the stain Of the polluting city-flood, regain Ideal grace secure from taint of time.
 An Attic frieze you give, a pictured song; For as with words the poet paints, for
 you
 The happy pencil at its labor sings, Stealing his privilege, nor does him wrong,
 Beneath the false discovering the true,
 And Beauty's best in unregarded things.

WITH A COPY OF AUCASSIN AND NICOLETE

LEAVES fit to have been poor Juliet's cradle-rhyme,
 With gladness of a heart long quenched in mould
 They vibrate still, a nest not yet grown cold
 From its fledged burthen. The numb hand of Time Vainly his glass turns; here is endless
 prime;
 Here lips their roses keep and locks their
 gold;
 Here Love in pristine innocence bold Speaks what our grosser conscience makes a crime.
 Because it tells the dream that all have known Once in their lives, and to life's end the few;
 Because its seeds o'er Memory's desert
 blown Spring up in heartsease such as Eden
 knew;
 Because it hath a beauty all its own, Dear Friend, I plucked this herb of grace for you.

ON PLANTING A TREE AT IN- VERARAY

Who does his duty is a question
 Too complex to be solved by me,
 But he, I venture the suggestion, Does part of his that plants a tree.

For after he is dead and buried,
 And epitaphed, and well forgot, Nay, even his shade by Charon ferried To — let us not inquire to what,

His deed, its author long outliving,
 By Nature's mother-care increased, Shall stand, his verdant almoner, giving A kindly dole to man and beast.

The wayfarer, at noon reposing,
 Shall bless its shadow on the grass,
 Or sheep beneath it huddle, dozing Until the thundergust o'erpass.

The owl, belated in his plundering, Shall here await the friendly night, Blinking whene'er he wakes, and wondering What fool it was invented light.

Hither the busy birds shall flutter,
 With the light timber for their nests,
 And, pausing from their labor, utter
 The morning sunshine in their breasts.

What though his memory shall have vanished,
 Since the good deed he did survives ?
 It is not wholly to be banished Thus to be part of many lives.

Grow, then, my foster-child, and strengthen,
 Bough over bough, a murmurous pile,
 And, as your stately stem shall lengthen,
 So may the statelier of Argyll !

AN EPISTLE TO GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS

" De prodome,
 Des qu'il s'atorne a grant bonte
 Ja n'iert tot dit ne tot conte, Que leingue ne puet pas retraire Tant d'enor com prodom set faire."

CRESTIEN DE TROIES,
Li Romans dou Chevalier au Lyon, 784-788.

1874

CURTIS, whose Wit, with Fancy arm in arm, Masks half its muscle in its skill to charm,
 And who so gently can the Wrong expose As sometimes to make converts, never foes, Or only such as good men must expect, Knaves sore with conscience of their own defect,
 I come with mild remonstrance. Ere I start,
 A kindlier errand interrupts my heart,
 And I must utter, though it vex your ears,

The love, the honor, felt so many years.
 Curtis, skilled equally with voice and pen To stir the hearts or mould the minds of
 men, —

That voice whose music, for I've heard you sing

Sweet as Casella, can with passion ring, That pen whose rapid ease ne'er trips with haste,

Nor scrapes nor sputters, pointed with good taste,

First Steele's, then Goldsmith's, next it came to you,

Whom Thackeray rated best of all our crew, —

Had letters kept you, every wreath were yours;

Had the World tempted, all its chariest doors

Had swung on flattered hinges to admit Such high-bred manners, such good-natured
 wit;

At courts, in senates, who so fit to serve ?
 And both invited, but you would not swerve,
 All meaner prizes waiving that you might In civic duty spend your heat and light, Unpaid, untrammelled, with a sweet disdain Refusing posts men grovel to attain.

Good Man all own you; what is left me,
 then,

To heighten praise with but Good Citizen ?

But why this praise to make you blush and
 stare,

And give a backache to your Easy-Chair?
 Old Crestien rightly says no language can Express the worth of a true Gentleman,
 And I agree; but other thoughts deride
 My first intent, and lure my pen aside.

Thinking of you, I see my firelight glow
 On other faces, loved from long ago,
 Dear to us both, and all these loves combine

With this I send and crowd in every line; Fortune with me was in such generous mood That all my friends were yours, and all were good;

Three generations come when one I call,
 And the fair grandame, youngest of them
 all,

In her own Florida who found and sips
 The fount that fled from Ponce's longing lips.

How bright they rise and wreathe my hearthstone round,

Divine my thoughts, reply without a sound,
And with them many a shape that memory
sees,

As dear as they, but crowned with aureoles
these !

What wonder if, with protest in my thought, Arrived, I find 't was only love I brought ?
I came with protest; Memory barred the road

Till I repaid you half the debt I owed.

No, 't was not to bring laurels that I came,
Nor would you wish it, daily seeing fame, (Or our cheap substitute, unknown of yore,) Dumped like a load of coal at every door, Mime and hetæra getting equal weight
With him whose toils heroic saved the State.
But praise can harm not who so calmly
met

Slander's worst word, nor treasured up the debt,

Knowing, what all experience serves to
show,

No mud can soil us but the mud we throw.
You have heard harsher voices and more
loud,

As all must, not sworn liegemen of the crowd,

And far aloof your silent mind could keep As when, in heavens with winter-midnight
deep,

The perfect moon hangs thoughtful, nor can know

What hounds her lucent calm drives mad
below.

But to my business, while you rub your
eyes

And wonder how you ever thought me wise.
Dear friend and old, they say you shake your head

And wish some bitter words of mine un-
said:

I wish they might be, — there we are agreed;

I hate to speak, still more what makes the
need;

But I must utter what the voice within Dictates, for acquiescence dumb were sin;
I blurt ungrateful truths, if so they be,
That none may need to say them after me.
'T were my felicity could I attain

The temperate zeal that balances your
brain;

But nature still o'erleaps reflection's plan,

And one must do his service as he can.

Think you it were not pleasanter to speak Smooth words that leave unflushed the brow and cheek ?

To sit, well-dined, with cynic smile, unseen
In private box, spectator of the scene

Where men the comedy of life rehearse, Idly to judge which better and which worse

Each hireling actor spoiled his worthless part ?

Were it not sweeter with a careless heart,
In happy commune with the untainted
brooks,

To dream all day, or, walled with silent
books,

To hear nor heed the World's unmeaning noise,

Safe in my fortress stored with lifelong joys ?

I love too well the pleasures of retreat Safe from the crowd and cloistered from
the street;

The fire that whispers its domestic joy, Flickering on walls that knew me still a boy,

And knew my saintly father; the full days,
Not careworn from the world's soul-squan-dering ways,

Calm days that loiter with snow-silent
tread,

Nor break my commune with the undying
dead;

Truants of Time, to-morrow like to-day,
That come unbid, and claimless glide away
By shelves that sun them in the indulgent
Past,

Where Spanish castles, even, were built to last,

Where saint and sage their silent vigil keep,
And wrong hath ceased or sung itself to sleep.

Dear were my walks, too, gathering fragrant store

Of Mother Nature's simple-minded lore:
I learned all weather-signs of day or night;
No bird but I could name him by his flight, No distant tree but by his shape was
known,

Or, near at hand, by leaf or bark alone.

This learning won by loving looks I bived
As sweeter lore than all from books derived.
I know the charm of hillside, field, and
wood,

Of lake and stream, and the sky's downy brood,
 Of roads sequestered rimmed with fallow sod,
 But friends with hardhack, aster, golden-rod,
 Or succory keeping summer long its trust
 Of heaven-blue fleckless from the eddying dust:
 These were my earliest friends, and latest too, Still unestranged, whatever fate may do.
 For years I had these treasures, knew their worth, Estate most real man can have on earth.
 I sank too deep in this soft-stuffed repose That hears but rumors of earth's wrongs and woes;
 Too well these Capuas could my muscles waste,
 Not void of toils, but toils of choice and taste;
 These still had kept me could I but have quelled
 The Puritan drop that in my veins rebelled.
 But there were times when silent were my books
 As jailers are, and gave me sullen looks,
 When verses palled, and even the woodland path,
 By innocent contrast, fed my heart with wrath,
 And I must twist my little gift of words Into a scourge of rough and knotted cords Unmusical, that whistle as they swing
 To leave on shameless backs their purple sting.

How slow Time comes ! Gone, who so swift as he ?

Add but a year, 't is half a century
 Since the slave's stifled moaning broke my sleep,

Heard 'gainst my will in that seclusion deep,

Haply heard louder for the silence there,
 And so my fancied safeguard made my snare.

After that moan had sharpened to a cry,
 And a cloud, hand-broad then, heaped all our sky

With its stored vengeance, and such thunders stirred

As heaven's and earth's remotest chambers heard.

I looked to see an ampler atmosphere
 By that electric passion-gust blown clear.
 I looked for this; consider what I see —
 But I forbear, 't would please nor you nor me

To check the items in the bitter list Of all I counted on and all I mist.
 Only three instances I choose from all,
 And each enough to stir a pigeon's gall:
 Office a fund for ballot-brokers made To pay the drudges of their gainful trade;
 Our cities taught what conquered cities feel

By ædiles chosen that they might safely steal;

And gold, however got, a title fair
 To such respect as only gold can bear.
 I seem to see this; how shall I gainsay
 What all our journals tell me every day ?
 Poured our young martyrs their high-hearted blood

That we might trample to congenial mud
 The soil with such a legacy sublimed ?
 Methinks an angry scorn is here well-timed:

Where find retreat ? How keep reproach at bay ?

Where'er I turn some scandal fouls the way.

Dear friend, if any man I wished to please,
 'T were surely you whose humor's honied ease

Flows flecked with gold of thought, whose generous mind

Sees Paradise regained by all mankind, Whose brave example still to vanward shines,

Checks the retreat, and spurs our lagging lines.

Was I too bitter ? Who his phrase can choose

That sees the life-blood of his dearest ooze ?

I loved my Country so as only they Who love a mother fit to die for may;

I loved her old renown, her stainless fame, —

What better proof than that I loathed her shame ?

That many blamed me could not irk me long,

But, if you doubted, must I not be wrong ?
 'T is not for me to answer: this I know,

That man or race so prosperously low

Sunk in success that wrath they cannot feel,
 Shall taste the spurn of parting Fortune's heel ;
 For never land long lease of empire won Whose sons sate silent when base deeds were done.

POSTSCRIPT, 1887

Curtis, so wrote I thirteen years ago, Tost it unfinished by, and left it so ;
 Found lately, I have pieced it out, or tried,
 Since time for callid juncture was denied.
 Some of the verses pleased me, it is true,
 And still were pertinent,— those honoring
 you.
 These now I offer : take them, if you
 will,
 Like the old hand-grasp, when at Shady Hill
 We met, or Staten Island, in the days When life was its own spur, nor needed
 praise.
 If once you thought me rash, no longer
 fear ;
 Past my next milestone waits my seven-tieth year.
 I mount no longer when the trumpets
 call ;
 My battle-harness idles on the wall,
 The spider's castle, camping-ground of
 dust,
 Not without dints, and all in front, I trust.
 Shivering sometimes it calls me as it hears Afar the charge's tramp and clash of spears ;
 But 't is such murmur only as might be The sea-shell's lost tradition of the sea, That makes me muse and wonder Where ?
 and When ?
 While from my cliff I watch the waves of
 men
 That climb to break midway their seeming gain,
 And think it triumph if they shake their chain.
 Little I ask of Fate ; will she refuse Some days of reconciliation with the Muse ?
 I take my reed again and blow it free Of dusty silence, murmuring, "Sing to
 me !"
 And, as its stops my curious touch retries,
 The stir of earlier instincts I surprise, —

Instincts, if less imperious, yet more
 strong,
 And happy in the toil that ends with song.
 Home am I come : not, as I hoped might
 be,
 To the old haunts, too full of ghosts for me,
 But to the olden dreams that time endears,
 And the loved books that younger grow with years ;
 To country rambles, timing with my tread Some happier verse that carols in my
 head,
 Yet all with sense of something vainly
 mist,
 Of something lost, but when I never wist.
 How empty seems to me the populous street,
 One figure gone I daily loved to meet, — The clear, sweet singer with the crown of snow
 Not whiter than the thoughts that housed below !
 And, ah, what absence feel I at my side, Like Dante when he missed his laurelled guide,
 What sense of diminution in the air Once so inspiring, Emerson not there !
 But life is sweet, though all that makes it
 sweet Lessen like sound of friends' departing
 feet,
 And Death is beautiful as feet of friend Coming with welcome at our journey's
 end ;
 For me Fate gave, whate'er she else denied,
 A nature sloping to the southern side ;
 I thank her for it, though when clouds arise
 Such natures double-darken gloomy skies.
 I muse upon the margin of the sea,
 Our common pathway to the new To Be, Watching the sails, that lessen more and
 more,
 Of good and beautiful embarked before ;
 With bits of wreck I patch the boat shall bear
 Me to that unexhausted Otherwhere, Whose friendly-peopled shore I sometimes
 see,
 By soft mirage uplifted, beckon me,
 Nor sadly hear, as lower sinks the sun,
 My moorings to the past snap one by one.

II. SENTIMENT

ENDYMION

A MYSTICAL COMMENT ON TITIAN'S
"SACRED AND PROFANE LOVE"

I

My day began not till the twilight fell,
And, lo, in ether from heaven's sweetest
well,

The New Moon swam divinely isolate In maiden silence, she that makes my fate Haply not knowing it, or only so
As I the secrets of my sheep may know; Nor ask I more, entirely blest if she,
In letting me adore, ennoble me To height of what the Gods meant making man,

As only she and her best beauty can.
Mine be the love that in itself can find Seed of white thoughts, the lilies of the
mind,

Seed of that glad surrender of the will That finds in service self's true purpose
still;

Love that in outward fairness sees the tent Pitched for an inmate far more excellent;
Love with a light irradiate to the core, Lit at her lamp, but fed from inborn
store;

Love thrice-requited with the single joy Of an immaculate vision naught could eloy,

Dearer because, so high beyond my scope, My life grew rich with her, unbribed by hope

Of other guerdon save to think she knew
One grateful votary paid her all her due;
Happy if she, high-radiant there, resigned
To his sure trust her image in his mind.
O fairer even than Peace is when she comes

Hushing War's tumult, and retreating drums

Fade to a murmur like the sough of bees Hidden among the noon-stilled linden-trees, Bringer of quiet, thou that canst allay
The dust and din and travail of the day, Strewer of Silence, Giver of the dew That doth our pastures and our souls renew,

Still dwell remote, still on thy shoreless sea

Float unattained in silent empery, Still light my thoughts, nor listen to a prayer
Would make thee less imperishably fair!

II

Can, then, my twofold nature find content
In vain conceits of airy blandishment?
Ask I no more? Since yesterday I task My storm-strewn thoughts to tell me what I ask:

Faint premonitions of mutation strange Steal o'er my perfect orb, and, with the change,

Myself am changed; the shadow of my
earth

Darkens the disk of that celestial worth Which only yesterday could still suffice Upwards to waft my thoughts in sacrifice; My heightened fancy with its touches warm

Moulds to a woman's that ideal form;
Nor yet a woman's wholly, but divine With awe her purer essence bred in mine.
Was it long brooding on their own surmise, Which, of the eyes engendered, fools the
eyes,

Or have I seen through that translucent air
A Presence shaped in its seclusions bare,
My Goddess looking on me from above
As look our russet maidens when they love, But high-uplifted o'er our human heat And passion-paths too rough for her pearl
feet?

Slowly the Shape took outline as I gazed At her full-orbed or crescent, till, bedazed With wonder-working light that subtly
wrought

My brain to its own substance, steeping
thought

In trances such as poppies give, I saw Things shut from vision by sight's sober
law,

Amorphous, changeful, but defined at last Into the peerless Shape mine eyes hold fast.

This, too, at first I worshipt: soon, like
wine,

Her eyes, in mine poured, frenzy-philtred
mine;

Passion put Worship's priestly raiment on
And to the woman knelt, the Goddess gone.
Was I, then, more than mortal made? or
she

Less than divine that she might mate with
me ?

If mortal merely, could my nature cope With such o'er mastery of maddening
hope ?

If Goddess, could she feel the blissful woe
That women in their self-surrender know ?

III

Long she abode aloof there in her heaven, Far as the grape-bunch of the Pleiad seven Beyond my madness' utmost leap; but
here

Mine eyes have feigned of late her rapture
near,

Moulded of mind-mist that broad day dispels,

Here in these shadowy woods and brook-lulled dells.

Have no heaven-habitants e'er felt a void
In hearts sublimed with ichor unalloyed ?
E'er longed to mingle with a mortal fate Intense with pathos of its briefer date ?
Could she partake, and live, our human stains ?

Even with the thought there tingles through my veins

Sense of unwarned renewal; I, the dead, Receive and house again the ardor fled,
As once Alcestis; to the ruddy brim Feel masculine virtue flooding every limb, And life, like Spring returning, brings the key

That sets my senses from their winter free, Dancing like naked fauns too glad for shame.

Her passion, purified to palest flame,
Can it thus kindle ? Is her purpose this ?
I will not argue, lest I lose a bliss That makes me dream Tithonus' fortune
mine,

(Or what of it was palpably divine Ere came the fruitlessly immortal gift;)
I cannot curb my hope's imperious drift
That wings with fire my dull mortality; Though fancy-forged, 't is all I feel or see.

My Goddess sinks; round Latmos' darkening brow

Trembles the parting of her presence now, Faint as the perfume left upon the grass By her limbs' pressure or her feet that pass

By me conjectured, but conjectured so As things I touch far fainter substance show.

Was it mine eyes' imposture I have seen Flit with the moonbeams on from shade to sheen

Through the wood-openings ? Nay, I see her now

Out of her heaven new-lighted, from her brow

The hair breeze-scattered, like loose mists that blow

Across her crescent, goldening as they go High-kirtled for the chase, and what was shown,

Of maiden rondure, like the rose half-
blown.

If dream, turn real ! If a vision, stay !
Take mortal shape, my philtre's spell obey !
If hags compel thee from thy secret sky
With gruesome incantations, why not I, Whose only magic is that I distil A potion, blent of passion, thought, and
will,

Deeper in reach, in force of fate more rich, Than e'er was juice wrung by Thessalian witch

From moon-enchanted herbs, — a potion brewed

Of my best life in each diviner mood ?
Myself the elixir am, myself the bowl Seething and mantling with my soul of soul.
Taste and be humanized: what though the cup,

With thy lips frenzied, shatter ? Drink it up !

If but these arms may clasp, o'erquited so, My world, thy heaven, all life means I shall know.

Sure she hath heard my prayer and granted
half,

As Gods do who at mortal madness laugh.
Yet if life's solid things illusion seem, Why may not substance wear the mask of
dream ?

In sleep she comes; she visits me in dreams,
And, as her image in a thousand streams,
So in my veins, that her obey, she sees,
Floating and flaming there, her images Bear to my little world's remotest zone Glad messages of her, and her alone.

With silence-sandalled Sleep she comes to
me,

(But softer-footed, sweeter-browed, than she,)

In motion gracious as a seagull's wing,
And all her bright limbs, moving, seem to sing.

Let me believe so, then, if so I may With the night's bounty feed my beggared day.

In dreams I see her lay the goddess down With bow and quiver, and her crescent-crown

Flicker and fade away to dull eclipse
As down to mine she deigns her longed-for lips;

And as her neck my happy arms enfold,
Flooded and lusted with her loosened gold,
She whispers words each sweeter than a kiss:

Then, wakened with the shock of sudden bliss,

My arms are empty, my awakener fled,
And, silent in the silent sky o'erhead,
But coldly as on ice-plated snow, she gleams,

Herself the mother and the child of dreams.

VI

Gone is the time when phantasms could appease

My quest phantasmal and bring cheated ease;

When, if she glorified my dreams, I felt Through all my limbs a change immortal melt

At touch of hers illuminate with soul.

Not long could I be stilled with Fancy's dole;

Too soon the mortal mixture in me caught Red fire from her celestial flame, and fought

For tyrannous control in all my veins:
My fool's prayer was accepted; what remains?

Or was it some eidolon merely, sent By her who rules the shades in banishment, To mock me with her semblance? Were it thus,

How 'scape I shame, whose will was traitorous?

What shall compensate an ideal dimmed?
How blanch again my statue virgin-limbed, Soiled with the incense-smoke her chosen priest

Poured more profusely as within decreased
The fire unearthly, fed with coals from far

Within the soul's shrine? Could my fallen star

Be set in heaven again by prayers and tears And quenchless sacrifice of all my years, How would the victim to the flamen leap,
And life for life's redemption paid hold cheap!

But what resource when she herself descends

From her blue throne, and o'er her vassal bends

That shape thrice-deified by love, those eyes

Wherein the Lethe of all others lies?
When my white queen of heaven's remoteness tires,

Herself against her other self conspires, Takes woman's nature, walks in mortal ways,

And finds in my remorse her beauty's praise?

Yet all would I renounce to dream again
The dream in dreams fulfilled that made my pain,

My noble pain that heightened all my years

With crowns to win and prowess-breeding tears;

Nay, would that dream renounce once more to see

Her from her sky there looking down at me!

Goddess, reclimb thy heaven, and be once more

An inaccessible splendor to adore,
A faith, a hope of such transcendent worth

As bred ennobling discontent with earth;
Give back the longing, back the elated mood

That, fed with thee, spurned every meaner good;

Give even the spur of impotent despair
That, without hope, still bade aspire and dare;

Give back the need to worship, that still pours

Down to the soul the virtue it adores!

Nay, brightest and most beautiful, deem naught

These frantic words, the reckless wind of thought:

Still stoop, still grant,—I live but in thy will;

Be what thou wilt, but be a woman still !
Vainly I cried, nor could myself believe That what I prayed for I would fain receive.

My moon is set; my vision set with her;
No more can worship vain my pulses stir.
Goddess Triform, I own thy triple spell,
My heaven's queen,—queen, too, of my earth and hell !

THE BLACK PREACHER

A BRETON LEGEND

At Carnac in Brittany, close on the bay, They show you a church, or rather the gray

Ribs of a dead one, left there to bleach
With the wreck lying near on the crest of the beach,

Roofless and splintered with thunder-stone,
'Mid lichen-blurred gravestones all alone;
'T is the kind of ruin strange sights to see

That may have their teaching for you and me.

Something like this, then, my guide had to tell,

Perched on a saint cracked across when he fell;

But since I might chance give his meaning a wrench,

He talking his patois and I English-French, I'll put what he told me, preserving the tone,

In a rhymed prose that makes it half his, half my own.

An abbey-church stood here, once on a time,

Built as a death-bed atonement for crime:
'T was for somebody's sins, I know not whose;

But sinners are plenty, and you can choose.
Though a cloister now of the dusk-winged bat,

'T was rich enough once, and the brothers grew fat,

Looser in girdle and purpler in jowl, Singing good rest to the founder's lost soul.

But one day came Northmen, and lithe tongues of fire

Lapped up the chapter-house, licked off the spire,

And left all a rubbish-heap, black and dreary,

Where only the wind sings miserere.

No priest has kneeled since at the altar's foot,

Whose crannies are searched by the night-shade's root,

Nor sound of service is ever heard,

Except from throat of the unclean bird,

Hooting to unassailed shapes as they pass

In midnights unholy his witches' mass,

Or shouting "Ho ! ho !" from the belfry high

As the Devil's sabbath-train whirls by.

But once a year, on the eve of All-Souls, Through these arches dishallowed the organ rolls,

Fingers long fleshless the bell-ropes work,
The chimes peal muffled with sea-mists mirk,

The skeleton windows are traced anew
On the baleful flicker of corpse-lights blue,
And the ghosts must come, so the legend saith,

To a preaching of Reverend Doctor Death.

Abbots, monks, barons, and ladies fair Hear the dull summons and gather there:

No rustle of silk now, no clink of mail,
Nor ever a one greets his church-mate pale;

No knight whispers love in the châtelaine's ear,

His next-door neighbor this five-hundred year;

No monk has a sleek benedicite

For the great lord shadowy now as he;

Nor needeth any to hold his breath,
Lest he lose the least word of Doctor Death.

He chooses his text in the Book Divine, Tenth verse of the Preacher in chapter nine:—

" 'Whatsoever thy hand shall find thee to do,

That do with thy whole might, or thou shalt rue;

For no man is wealthy, or wise, or brave,

In that quencher of might-be's and would-be's, the grave.'

Bid by the Bridegroom, 'To-morrow,' ye said,

And To-morrow was digging a trench for your bed;

Ye said, 'God can wait; let us finish our wine;'

Ye had wearied Him, fools, and that last knock was mine!"

But I can't pretend to give you the sermon,

Or say if the tongue were French, Latin, or German;

Whatever he preached in, I give you my word

The meaning was easy to all that heard; Famous preachers there have been and be,
But never was one so convincing as he;
So blunt was never a begging friar,
No Jesuit's tongue so barbed with fire, Cameronian never, nor Methodist,
Wrung gall out of Scripture with such a twist.

And would you know who his hearers must be?

I tell you just what my guide told me:
Excellent teaching men have, day and night,

From two earnest friars, a black and a white,

The Dominican Death and the Carmelite Life;

And between these two there is never strife,

For each has his separate office and station,
And each his own work in the congregation;

Whoso to the white brother deafens his ears,

And cannot be wrought on by blessings or tears,

Awake in his coffin must wait and wait,
In that blackness of darkness that means too late,

And come once a year, when the ghost-bell tolls,

As till Doomsday it shall on the eve of All-Souls,

To hear Doctor Death, whose words smart with the brine

Of the Preacher, the tenth verse of chapter nine.

ARCADIA REDIVIVA

I, WALKING the familiar street, While a crammed horse-car jingled through it,

Was lifted from my prosy feet
And in Arcadia ere I knew it.

Fresh sward for gravel soothed my tread,
And shepherd's pipes my ear delighted;
The riddle may be lightly read:
I met two lovers newly plighted.

They murmured by in happy care,
New plans for paradise devising,
Just as the moon, with pensive stare, O'er Mistress Craigie's pines was rising.

Astarte, known nigh threescore years,
Me to no speechless rapture urges;
Them in Elysium she enspheres,
Queen, from of old, of thaumatarges.

The railings put forth bud and bloom,
The house-fronts all with myrtles twine them,
And light-winged Loves in every room Make nests, and then with kisses line them.

O sweetness of untasted life!
O dream, its own supreme fulfilment!
O hours with all illusion rife,
As ere the heart divined what ill meant!

"Et ego," sighed I to myself,
And strove some vain regrets to bridle,
"Though now laid dusty on the shelf, Was hero once of such an idyl!"

"An idyl ever newly sweet, Although since Adam's day recited, Whose measures time them to Love's feet, Whose sense is every ill requited."

Maiden, if I may counsel, drain
Each drop of this enchanted season,
For even our honeymoons must wane, Convicted of green cheese by Reason.

And none will seem so safe from change,
Nor in such skies benignant hover,
As this, beneath whose witchery strange You tread on rose-leaves with your lover

The glass unfilled all tastes can fit, As round its brim Conjecture dances;
For not Mephisto's self hath wit
To draw such vintages as Fancy's.

When our pulse beats its minor key, When play-time halves and school-time doubles,
Age fills the cup with serious tea, Which once Dame Clicquot starred with bubbles.

Fie, Mr. Graybeard! Is this wise?
Is this the moral of a poet,
Who, when the plant of Eden dies,
Is privileged once more to sow it?

That herb of clay-disdaining root,
From stars secreting what it feeds on,
Is burnt-out passion's slag and soot Fit soil to strew its dainty seeds on?

Pray, why, if in Arcadia once, Need one so soon forget the way
there?

Or why, once there, be such a dunce
As not contentedly to stay there?"

Dear child, 't was but a sorry jest,
And from my heart I hate the cynic Who makes the Book of Life a nest For comments staler than rabbinic.

If Love his simple spell but keep,
Life with ideal eyes to flatter,
The Grail itself were crockery cheap
To Every-day's communion-platter.

One Darby is to me well known,
Who, as the hearth between them blazes, Sees the old moonlight shine on Joan,
And float her youthward in its hazes.

He rubs his spectacles, he stares, —
'T is the same face that witch'd him early!
He gropes for his remaining hairs, —
Is this a fleece that feels so curly?

Good heavens! but now 't was winter
gray,
And I of years had more than plenty;
The almanac 's a fool! 'T is May!
Hang family Bibles! I am twenty!

"Come, Joan, your arm; we'll walk the
room —

The lane, I mean — do you remember?
How confident the roses bloom,
As if it ne'er could be December!

"Nor more it shall, while in your eyes
My heart its summer heat recovers,
And you, howe'er your mirror lies, Find your old beauty in your lover's."

THE NEST

MAY

WHEN oaken woods with buds are pink,
And new-come birds each morning sing
When fickle May on Summer's brink Pauses, and knows not which to fling, Whether fresh bud and bloom again,
Or hoar-frost silvering hill and plain,

Then from the honeysuckle gray
The oriole with experienced quest Twitches the fibrous bark away,
The cordage of his hammock-nest,
Cheering his labor with a note Rich as the orange of his throat.

High o'er the loud and dusty road
The soft gray cup in safety swings, To brim ere August with its load Of downy breasts and throbbing wings O'er which the friendly elm-tree heaves
An emerald roof with sculptured eaves.

Below, the noisy World drags by In the old way, because it must,
The bride with heartbreak in her eye,
The mourner following hated dust:
Thy duty, wing'd flame of Spring,
Is but to love, and fly, and sing.

Oh, happy life, to soar and sway Above the life by mortals led,
Singing the merry months away,
Master, not slave of daily bread,
And, when the Autumn comes, to flee Wherever sunshine beckons thee!

PALINODE — DECEMBER

Like some lorn abbey now, the wood Stands roofless in the bitter air;

In ruins on its floor is strewed
 The carven foliage quaint and rare,
 And homeless winds complain along The columned choir once thrilled with song.

And thou, dear nest, whence joy and praise
 The thankful oriole used to pour, Swing'st empty while the north winds chase Their snowy swarms from Labrador:
 But, loyal to the happy past,
 I love thee still for what thou wast.

Ah, when the Summer graces flee From other nests more dear than thou,
 And, where June crowded once, I see Only bare trunk and disleaved bough; When springs of life that gleamed and gushed
 Run chilled, and slower, and are hushed;

When our own branches, naked long,
 The vacant nests of Spring betray, Nurseries of passion, love, and song
 That vanished as our year grew gray;
 When Life drones o'er a tale twice told O'er embers pleading with the cold, —

I'll trust, that, like the birds of Spring,
 Our good goes not without repair,
 But only flies to soar and sing Far off in some diviner air,
 Where we shall find it in the calms
 Of that fair garden 'neath the palms.

A YOUTHFUL EXPERIMENT IN ENGLISH HEXAMETERS

IMPRESSIONS OF HOMER

SOMETIMES come pauses of calm, when the rapt bard, holding his heart back, Over his deep mind muses, as when o'er awe-stricken ocean Poises a hept cloud luridly, ripening the gale and the thunder; Slow rolls onward the verse with a long swell heaving and swinging, Seeming to wait till, gradually wid'ning from far-off horizons, Piling the deeps up, heaping the glad-hearted surges before it, Gathers the thought as a strong wind darkening and cresting the tumult.
 Then every pause, every heave, each trough in the waves, has its meaning;

Full-sailed, forth like a tall ship steadies the theme, and around it, Leaping beside it in glad strength, running in wild glee beyond it, Harmonies billow exulting and floating the soul where it lists them, Swaying the listener's fantasy hither and thither like driftweed.

BIRTHDAY VERSES

WRITTEN IN A CHILD'S ALBUM

'T WAS sung of old in hut and hall
 How once a king in evil hour Hung musing o'er his castle wall,
 And, lost in idle dreams, let fall Into the sea his ring of power.

Then, let him sorrow as he might,
 And pledge his daughter and his throne
 To who restored the jewel bright,
 The broken spell would ne'er unite;
 The grim old ocean held its own.

Those awful powers on man that wait,
 On man, the beggar or the king,
 To hovel bare or hall of state
 A magic ring that masters fate
 With each succeeding birthday bring.

Therein are set four jewels rare:
 Pearl winter, summer's ruby blaze, Spring's emerald, and, than all more fair, Fall's pensive opal, doomed to bear
 A heart of fire bedreamed with haze.

To him the simple spell who knows The spirits of the ring to sway, Fresh power with every sunrise flows,
 And royal pursuivants are those That fly his mandates to obey.

But he that with a slackened will Dreams of things past or things to be,
 From him the charm is slipping still,
 And drops, ere he suspect the ill,
 Into the inexorable sea.

ESTRANGEMENT

THE path from me to you that led,
 Untrodden long, with grass is grown.
 Mute carpet that his lieges spread

Before the Prince Oblivion
When he goes visiting the dead.

And who are they but who forget ?

You, who my coming could surmise
Ere any hint of me as yet

Warned other ears and other eyes, See the path blurred without regret.

But when I trace its windings sweet

With saddened steps, at every spot
That feels the memory in my feet, Each grass-blade turns forget-me-not,
Where murmuring bees your name repeat.

PHŒBE

This poem was sent from London September 4, 1881, to Mr. Gilder for The Century. Its first form was in the main the same as this, but before the poem was published several changes and omissions were made. The interesting evolution of the final form may be seen in detail in the Notes and Illustrations.

ERE pales in Heaven the morning star,
A bird, the loneliest of its kind,
Hears Dawn's faint footfall from afar
While all its mates are dumb and blind.

It is a wee sad-colored thing,
As shy and secret as a maid,
That, ere in choir the robins sing,
Pipes its own name like one afraid.

It seems pain-prompted to repeat
The story of some ancient ill,
But Phæbe! Phæbe! sadly sweet
Is all it says, and then is still.

It calls and listens. Earth and sky,
Hushed by the pathos of its fate,
Listen : no whisper of reply
Comes from its doom-dissevered mate.

Phæbe! it calls and calls again,
And Ovid, could he but have heard,
Had hung a legendary pain
About the memory of the bird ;

A pain articulate so long,
In penance of some mouldered crime
Whose ghost still flies the Furies' throng
Down the waste solitudes of time.

Waif of the young World's wonder-hour,
When gods found mortal maidens fair,
And will malign was joined with power
Love's kindly laws to overbear,

Like Progne, did it feel the stress
And coil of the prevailing words
Close round its being, and compress
Man's ampler nature to a bird's ?

One only memory left of all
The motley crowd of vanished scenes,
Hers, and vain impulse to recall
By repetition what it means.

Phæbe! is all it has to say
In plaintive cadence o'er and o'er,
Like children that have lost their way,
And know their names, but nothing more.

Is it a type, since Nature's Lyre Vibrates to every note in man,
Of that insatiable desire,
Meant to be so since life began ?

I, in strange lands at gray of dawn,
Wakeful, have heard that fruitless plaint Through Memory's chambers deep withdrawn
Renew its iterations faint.

So nigh ! yet from remotest years
It summons back its magic, rife
With longings unappeased, and tears
Drawn from the very source of life.

DAS EWIG-WEIBLICHE

How was I worthy so divine a loss, Deepening my midnights, kindling all my morns ?
Why waste such precious wood to make my cross,
Such far-sought roses for my crown of thorns ?

And when she came, how earned I such a gift ?
Why spend on me, a poor earth-delving mole,
The fireside sweetnesss, the heavenward lift,
The hourly mercy, of a woman's soul ?

Ah, did we know to give her all her right, What wonders even in our poor clay
were done !

It is not Woman leaves us to our night, But our brute earth that grovels from her sun.

Our nobler cultured fields and gracious domes

We whirl too oft from her who still shines on

To light in vain our caves and clefts, the homes

Of night-bird instincts pained till she be gone.

Still must this body starve our souls with
shade ;

But when Death makes us what we were before,

Then shall her sunshine all our depths invade,

And not a shadow stain heaven's crystal floor.

THE RECALL

COME back before the birds are flown, Before the leaves desert the tree,
And, through the lonely alleys blown, Whisper their vain regrets to me
Who drive before a blast more rude,
The plaything of my gusty mood,
In vain pursuing and pursued !

Nay, come although the boughs be bare, Though snowflakes fledge the summer's
nest,

And in some far Ausonian air
The thrush, your minstrel, warm his breast.
Come, sunshine's treasurer, and bring To doubting flowers their faith in spring,
To birds and me the need to sing !

ABSENCE

SLEEP is Death's image, — poets tell us so ;
But Absence is the bitter self of Death,
And, you away, Life's lips their red forego, Parched in an air unfreshened by your breath.

Light of those eyes that made the light of
mine,

Where shine you ? On what happier fields and flowers ?

Heaven's lamps renew their lustre less
divine,

But only serve to count my darkened hours.

If with your presence went your image too, That brain-born ghost my path would never cross

Which meets me now where'er I once met
you,

Then vanishes, to multiply my loss.

MONNA LISA

SHE gave me all that woman can,
Nor her soul's mummery forego,
A confidence that man to man Without remorse can never show.

Rare art, that can the sense refine Till not a pulse rebellious stirs,
And, since she never can be mine,
Makes it seem sweeter to be hers !

THE OPTIMIST

TURBID from London's noise and smoke, Here I find air and quiet too:
Air filtered through the beech and oak,
Quiet by nothing harsher broke Than wood-dove's meditative coo.

The Truce of God is here; the breeze Sighs as men sigh relieved from care, Or tilts as lightly in the trees
As might a robin: all is ease,
With pledge of ampler ease to spare.

Time, leaning on his scythe, forgets
To turn the hour-glass in his hand,
And all life's petty cares and frots,
Its teasing hopes and weak regrets,
Are still as that oblivious sand.

Repose fills all the generous space
Of undulant plain; the rook and crow Hush; 't is as if a silent grace, By Nature murmured, calmed the face Of Heaven above and Earth below.

From past and future toils I rest, One Sabbath pacifies my year;

in the halcyon, this my nest; and all is safely for the best while the World's there and I am here.

I turn tory for the nonce, and think the radical a bore, who cannot see, thick-witted dunce, that what was good for people once must be as good forevermore.

and sink no deeper down the sky;
 and never change this summer mood;
 I freeze, loiter thus forever by, or the dead leaf or let it lie;
 since I am happy, all is good.

ON BURNING SOME OLD LETTERS

WITH what odorous woods and spices prepared for royal sacrifices, With what costly gums seld-seen,
 Hoarded to embalm a queen,
 With what frankincense and myrrh, Burn these precious parts of her,
 Full of life and light and sweetness
 As a summer day's completeness, Joy of sun and song of bird Running wild in every word, Full of all the superhuman
 Grace and winsomeness of woman?

O'er these leaves her wrist has slid, Thrilled with veins where fire is hid Neath the skin's pellucid veil, Like the opal's passion pale;
 'Tis her breath has sweetened; this till seems trembling with the kiss she half-ventured on my name, Brow and cheek and throat aflame;
 Over all caressing lies Unshined left there by her eyes;
 From them all an effluence rare
 With her nearness fills the air, Till the murmur I half-hear Of her light feet drawing near.

Dearest woods were coarse and rough,
 Sweetest spice not sweet enough,
 Too impure all earthly fire
 For this sacred funeral-pyre;
 These rich relics must suffice
 For their own dear sacrifice.

Seek we first an altar fit
 For such victims laid on it:
 It shall be this slab brought home In old happy days from Rome, — Lazuli, once blest to line Dian's inmost cell and shrine.
 Gently now I lay them there, Pure as Dian's forehead bare,
 Yet suffused with warmer hue, Such as only Latmos knew.

Fire I gather from the sun
 In a virgin lens: 'tis done!
 Mount the flames, red, yellow, blue,
 As her moods were shining through,
 Of the moment's impulse born, — Moods of sweetness, playful scorn, Half defiance, half surrender,
 More than cruel, more than tender, Flouts, caresses, sunshine, shade, Gracious doublings of a maid Infinite in guileless art, Playing hide-seek with her heart.

On the altar now, alas,
 There they lie a crinkling mass, Writhing still, as if with grief Went the life from every leaf;
 Then (heart-breaking palimpsest!)
 Vanishing ere wholly guessed, Suddenly some lines flash back, Traced in lightning on the black,
 And confess, till now denied,
 All the fire they strove to hide.
 What they told me, sacred trust,
 Stays to glorify my dust,
 There to burn through dust and damp
 Like a mage's deathless lamp, While an atom of this frame Lasts to feed the dainty flame.

All is ashes now, but they
 In my soul are laid away,
 And their radiance round me hovers Soft as moonlight over lovers, Shutting her and me alone In dream-Edens of our own;
 First of lovers to invent Love, and teach men what it meant.

THE PROTEST

I COULD not bear to see those eyes
 On all with wasteful largess shine

And that delight of welcome rise
Like sunshine strained through amber wine,
But that a glow from deeper skies,
From conscious fountains more divine,
Is (is it ?) mine.

Be beautiful to all mankind,
As Nature fashioned thee to be;
'T would anger me did all not find The sweet perfection that 's in thee:
Yet keep one charm of charms behind,— Nay, thou 'rt so rich, keep two or three For (is it ?) me !

THE PETITION

Oh, tell me less or tell me more,
Soft eyes with mystery at the core,
That always seem to meet my own Frankly as pansies fully grown,
Yet waver still 'tween no and yes !

So swift to cavil and deny,
Then parley with concessions shy,
Dear eyes, that make their youth be mine
And through my inmost shadows shine, Oh, tell me more or tell me less !

FACT OR FANCY?

IN town I hear, scarce wakened yet, My neighbor's clock behind the wall Record the day's increasing debt, And Cuckoo ! Cuckoo ! faintly call.

Our senses run in deepening grooves, Thrown out of which they lose their tact,
And consciousness with effort moves From habit past to present fact.

So, in the country waked to-day,
I hear, unwitting of the change,
A cuckoo's throb from far away
Begin to strike, nor think it strange.

The sound creates its wonted frame:
My bed at home, the songster hid Behind the wainscoting, — all came As long association bid.

Then, half aroused, ere yet Sleep's mist
From the mind's uplands furl away,
To the familiar sound I list, Disputed for by Night and Day.

I count to learn how late it is,
Until, arrived at thirty-four,
I question, "What strange world is this Whose lavish hours would make me
poor ?"

Cuckoo ! Cuckoo ! Still on it went,
With hints of mockery in its tone;
How could such hoards of time be spent By one poor mortal's wit alone ?

I have it ! Grant, ye kindly Powers,
I from this spot may never stir,
If only these uncounted hours May pass, and seem too short, with He-

But who She is, her form and face, These to the world of dream belong;
She moves through fancy's visioned space Unbodied, like the cuckoo's song.

AGRO-DOLCE

ONE kiss from all others prevents me,
And sets all my pulses astir,
And burns on my lips and torments me:
'T is the kiss that I fain would give her

One kiss for all others requites me, Although it is never to be,
And sweetens my dreams and invites me:
'T is the kiss that she dare not give me

Ah, could it be mine, it were sweeter Than honey bees garner in dream, Though its bliss on my lips were fleet
Than a swallow's dip to the stream.

And yet, thus denied, it can never In the prose of life vanish away;
O'er my lips it must hover forever,
The sunshine and shade of my day.

THE BROKEN TRYST

WALKING alone where we walked together
When June was breezy and blue,
I watch in the gray autumnal weather
The leaves fall inconstant as you.

If a dead leaf startle behind me,
I think 't is your garment's hem,
And, oh, where no memory could find me Might I whirl away with them !

CASA SIN ALMA

RECUERDO DE MADRID

SILENCIOSO por la puerta Voy de su casa desierta
Do siempre feliz entré, Y la encuentro en vano abierta Cual la boca de una muerta Después que el alma se fué.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL

OR THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL CHILDREN OF THE CHURCH OF THE DISCIPLES

The Church of the Disciples in Boston was under the ministration of the Reverend James Reeman Clarke.

WHAT means this glory round our feet," The Magi mused, "more bright than morn?"
And voices chanted clear and sweet,
"To-day the Prince of Peace is born!"

What means that star," the Shepherds
said,
"That brightens through the rocky glen?"
And angels, answering overhead, Sang, "Peace on earth, good-will to
men!"

'Tis eighteen hundred years and more Since those sweet oracles were dumb;
We wait for Him, like them of yore; Alas, He seems so slow to come!

But it was said, in words of gold
No time or sorrow e'er shall dim,
That little children might be bold
In perfect trust to come to Him.

Ill round about our feet shall shine
A light like that the wise men saw,
We our loving wills incline To that sweet Life which is the Law.

shall we learn to understand The simple faith of shepherds then,
And, clasping kindly hand in hand, Sing, "Peace on earth, good-will to
men!"

And they who do their souls no wrong,
But keep at eve the faith of morn, Shall daily hear the angel-song,
"To-day the Prince of Peace is born!"

MY PORTRAIT GALLERY

OFT round my hall of portraiture I gaze, By Memory reared, the artist wise and holy,
From stainless quarries of deep-buried days.
There, as I muse in soothing melancholy,
Your faces glow in more than mortal youth, Companions of my prime, now vanished wholly,
The loud, impetuous boy, the low-voiced maiden,
Now for the first time seen in flawless truth.
Ah, never master that drew mortal breath Can match thy portraits, just and generous
Death,
Whose brush with sweet regretful tints is laden!
Thou paintest that which struggled here
below
Half understood, or understood for woe,
And with a sweet forewarning Mak'st round the sacred front an aureole
glow
Woven of that light that rose on Easter morning.

PAOLO TO FRANCESCA

I WAS with thee in Heaven: I cannot tell If years or moments, so the sudden bliss,
When first we found, then lost, us in a kiss, Abolished Time, abolished Earth and Hell, Left only Heaven. Then from our blue there fell
The dagger's flash, and did not fall amiss, For nothing now can rob my life of this,— That once with thee in Heaven, all else is well.
Us, undivided when man's vengeance came, God's half-forgives that doth not here
divide;
And, were this bitter whirl-blast fanged with flame,
To me 't were summer, we being side by side:
This granted, I God's mercy will not blame,
For, given thy nearness, nothing is denied.

SCOTTISH BORDER

The following letter to Mr. Howells, then editor of The Atlantic Monthly, in which this sonnet was printed, is a little out of proportion as a head-note to a poem of fourteen lines, but it is too characteristic and too indicative of Lowell's extreme solicitude over his verse to be omitted. "There was one verse in the Border sonnet which, when I came to copy it, worried me with its lack of just what I wanted. Only one? you will say. Yes, all; but never mind — this one most. Instead of

'Where the shy ballad could its leaves unfold'

read 'dared its blooms.' I had liefer 'cup,' but cup is already metaphoric when applied to flowers, and Bottom the Weaver would be sure to ask in one of the many journals he edits — 'How unfold a cup? Does he mean one of those pocket drinking-cups — leathern inconveniences that always slick when you try to unfold 'em?' Damn Bottom! We ought not to think of him, but then the Public is made up of him, and I wish him to know that I was thinking of a flower. Besides, the sonnet is, more than any other kind of verse, a deliberate composition, and 'susceptible of a high polish,' as the dendrologists say of the woods of certain trees. Or shall we say 'grew in secret bold'? I write both on the opposite leaf, that you may choose one to paste over and not get the credit of tinkering my rhymes.

dared its blooms grew in secret bold.

Perhaps, after all, it is the buzzing of that b in blooms and bold, answering his brother b in ballads that b-witched me, and merely changing 'could' to 'dared' is all that is wanted. The sentiment of this sonnet pleases me."

As sinks the sun behind yon alien hills Whose heather-purpled slopes, in glory rolled,
Flush all my thought with momentary
 gold,
What pang of vague regret my fancy thrills?
Here 't is enchanted ground the peasant tills,
Where the shy ballad dared its blooms un-
 fold,
And memory's glamour makes new sights seem old,
As when our life some vanished dream fulfils.

Yet not to thee belong these painless tears;
Land loved ere seen: before my darkened
 eyes,
From far beyond the waters and the year;
Horizons mute that wait their poet rise;
The stream before me fades and disappears;
And in the Charles the western splendour dies.

SONNET

ON BEING ASKED FOR AN AUTOGRAPH IN VENICE

AMID these fragments of heroic days When thought met deed with mutual pas-sion's leap,
There sits a Fame whose silent trump makes cheap
What short-lived rumor of ourselves w raise.
They had far other estimate of praise Who stamped the signet of their souls a deep In art and action, and whose memorie
 keep Their height like stars above our mist
 ways:
In this grave presence to record my name Something within me hangs the head an shrinks.
Dull were the soul without some joy i
 fame;
Yet here to claim remembrance were, m thinks,
Like him who, in the desert's awful fram Notches his cockney initials on the Sphin

THE DANCING BEAR

FAR over Elf-land poets stretch their swa And win their dearest crowns beyond th
 goal
Of their own conscious purpose; they co
 trol
With gossamer threads wide-flown ou fancy's play,
And so our action. On my walk to-day, A wallowing bear begged clumsily his to When straight a vision rose of Atta Troll And scenes ideal witchbed mine eyes away
"Merci, Mossieu!" the astonished bea ward cried, Grateful for thrice his hope to me, the slave

Of partial memory, seeing at his side A bear immortal. The glad dole I gave Was none of mine; poor Heine o'er the wide
 Atlantic welter stretched it from his grave.

THE MAPLE

THE Maple puts her corals on in May, While loitering frosts about the lowlands cling,
 To be in tune with what the robins sing, Plastering new log-huts 'mid her branches
 gray;
 But when the Autumn southward turns
 away, Then in her veins burns most the blood of Spring,
 And every leaf, intensely blossoming, Makes the year's sunset pale the set of
 day.
 O Youth unprescient, were it only so With trees you plant, and in whose shade reclined, Thinking their drifting blooms Fate's coldest snow,
 You carve dear names upon the faithful
 rind,
 Nor in that vernal stem the cross fore-
 know
 That Age shall bear, silent, yet unre-signed!

NIGHTWATCHES

WHILE the slow clock, as they were miser's
 gold,
 Counts and recounts the mornward steps of
 Time,
 The darkness thrills with conscience of each crime
 By Death committed, daily grown more
 bold.
 Once more the list of all my wrongs is told,
 And ghostly hands stretch to me from my prime Helpless farewells, as from an alien clime;
 For each new loss redoubles all the old.
 This morn 't was May; the blossoms were astir
 With southern wind; but now the boughs are bent

With snow instead of birds, and all things freeze.
 How much of all my past is dumb with
 her,
 And of my future, too, for with her went Half of that world I ever cared to please!

DEATH OF QUEEN MERCEDES

In a letter to his daughter from Madrid, July 26, 1878, Lowell wrote of Queen Mercedes: "Anything more tragic than the circumstances of her death it would be hard to imagine. She was actually receiving extreme unction while the guns were firing in honor of her eighteenth birthday, and four days later we saw her dragged to her dreary tomb at the Escorial, followed by the coach and its eight white horses in which she had driven in triumph from the church to the palace on the day of her wedding. The poor brutes tossed their snowy plumes as haughtily now as then.
 Her death is really a great public loss. She was amiable, intelligent, and simple—not beautiful but good-looking—and was already becoming popular."

HERS all that Earth could promise or bestow,— Youth, Beauty, Love, a crown, the beckoning years,
 Lids never wet, unless with joyous tears,
 A life remote from every sordid woe,
 And by a nation's swelled to lordlier flow.
 What lurking-place, thought we, for doubts or fears,
 When, the day's swan, she swam along the cheers
 Of the Alcalá, five happy months ago?
 The guns were shouting Io Hymen then That, on her birthday, now denounce her
 doom;
 The same white steeds that tossed their scorn of men
 To-day as proudly drag her to the tomb.
 Grim jest of fate! Yet who dare call it
 blind,
 Knowing what life is, what our human-
 kind?

PRISON OF CERVANTES

SEAT of all woes? Though Nature's firm decree
 The narrowing soul with narrowing dungeon bind,

Yet was his free of motion as the wind,
And held both worlds, of spirit and sense, in fee.

In charmed communion with his dual mind He wandered Spain, himself both knight and hind,

Redressing wrongs he knew must ever be.
His humor wise could see life's long de-
ceit,

Man's baffled aims, nor therefore both despise;

His knightly nature could ill fortune greet Like an old friend. Whose ever such kind
eyes

That pierced so deep, such scope, save his whose feet

By Avon ceased 'neath the same April's
skies ?

TO A LADY PLAYING ON THE CITHERN

So dreamy-soft the notes, so far away
They seem to fall, the horns of Oberon Blow their faint Hunt's-up from the good-time gone;

Or, on a morning of long-withered May, Larks tinkle unseen o'er Claudian arches
gray,

That Romeward crawl from Dreamland;
and anon

My fancy flings her cloak of Darkness on,
To vanish from the dungeon of To-day.
In happier times and scenes I seem to
be,

And, as her fingers flutter o'er the strings,
The days return when I was young as she,
And my fledged thoughts began to feel their wings

With all Heaven's blue before them:
Memory

Or Music is it such enchantment sings ?

THE EYE'S TREASURY

GOLD of the reddening sunset, backward
thrown

In largess on my tall paternal trees, Thou with false hope or fear didst never tease

His heart that hoards thee; nor is childhood flown

From him whose life no fairer boon hath known

Than that what pleased him earliest still should please:

And who bath incomes safe from chance as these,

Gone in a moment, yet for life his own ?
All other gold is slave of earthward laws;

This to the deeps of ether takes its flight,
And on the topmost leaves makes glorious pause

Of parting pathos ere it yield to night:
So linger, as from me earth's light withdraws,

Dear touch of Nature, tremulously bright !

PESSIMOPTIMISM

YE little think what toil it was to build A world of men imperfect even as this, Where we conceive of Good by what we
miss,

Of Ill by that wherewith best days are filled;

A world whose every atom is self-willed,
Whose corner-stone is propt on artifice, Whose joy is shorter-lived than woman's kiss,

Whose wisdom hoarded is but to be spilled.

Yet this is better than a life of caves, Whose highest art was scratching on a bone,

Or chipping toilsome arrowheads of flint; Better, though doomed to hear while Cleon raves,

To see wit's want eterned in paint or
stone,

And wade the drain-drenched shoals of daily print.

THE BRAKES

WHAT countless years and wealth of brain were spent

To bring us hither from our caves and huts,

And trace through pathless wilds the deep-worn ruts

Of faith and habit, by whose deep indent

Prudence may guide if genius be not lent, Genius, not always happy when it shuts

Its ears against the plodder's ifs and
buts,

Hoping in one rash leap to snatch the event.
 The coursers of the sun, whose hoofs of flame Consume morn's misty threshold, are exact As bankers' clerks, and all this star-poised frame, One swerve allowed, were with convulsion rakt;
 This world were doomed, should Dulness fail, to tame Wit's feathered heels in the stern stocks of fact.

A FOREBODING

WHAT were the whole void world, if thou wert dead, Whose briefest absence can eclipse my day,
 And make the hours that danced with Time away Drag their funereal steps with muffled head?
 Through thee, meseems, the very rose is red,
 From thee the violet steals its breath in May,
 From thee draw life all things that grow not gray,
 And by thy force the happy stars are sped.
 Thou near, the hope of thee to overflow Fills all my earth and heaven, as when in Spring, Ere April come, the birds and blossoms know,
 And grasses brighten round her feet to cling;
 Nay, and this hope delights all nature so That the dumb turf I tread on seems to sing.

III. FANCY

UNDER THE OCTOBER MAPLES

WHAT mean these banners spread,
 These paths with royal red So gaily carpeted?
 Comes there a prince to-day?
 Such footing were too fine For feet less argentine Than Dian's own or thine, Queen whom my tides obey.

Surely for thee are meant These hues so orient
 That with a sultan's tent
 Each tree invites the sun;
 Our Earth such homage pays,
 So decks her dusty ways,
 And keeps such holidays,
 For one and only one.

My brain shapes form and face, Throbs with the rhythmic grace And cadence of her pace
 To all fine instincts true;
 Her footsteps, as they pass,
 Than moonbeams over grass Fall lighter, — but, alas,
 More insubstantial too!

LOVE'S CLOCK

A PASTORAL

DAPHNIS waiting

"O DRYAD feet,
 Be doubly fleet,
 Timed to my heart's expectant beat While I await her!
 'At four,' vowed she;
 'T is scarcely three,
 Yet by my time it seems to be A good hour later!"

CHLOE

"Bid me not stay!
 Hear reason, pray!
 'T is striking six! Sure never day Was short as this is!"

DAPHNIS

"Reason nor rhyme
 Is in the chime!
 It can't be five; I've scarce had time To beg two kisses!"

BOTH

"Early or late,
 When lovers wait,
 And Love's watch gains, if Time a gait
 So snail-like chooses,
 Why should his feet
 Become more fleet
 Than cowards' are, when lovers meet And Love's watch loses?"

ELEANOR MAKES MACAROONS

LIGHT of triumph in her eyes,
 Eleanor her apron ties;
 As she pushes back her sleeves,
 High resolve her bosom heaves.
 Hasten, cook ! impel the fire To the pace of her desire;
 As you hope to save your soul,
 Bring a virgin casserole, Brightest bring of silver spoons, —
 Eleanor makes macaroons !

Almond-blossoms, now adance
 In the smile of Southern France, Leave your sport with sun and breeze,
 Think of duty, not of ease;
 Fashion, 'neath their jerkins brown, Kernels white as thistle-down, Tiny cheeses made with cream
 From the Galaxy's mid-stream, Blanched in light of honeymoons, —
 Eleanor makes macaroons !

Now for sugar, — nay, our plan Tolerates no work of man.
 Hurry, then, ye golden bees;
 Fetch your clearest honey, please,
 Garnered on a Yorkshire moor,
 While the last larks sing and soar,
 From the heather-blossoms sweet Where sea-breeze and sunshine meet, And the Augusts mask as Junes, —
 Eleanor makes macaroons !

Next the pestle and mortar find,
 Pure rock-crystal, — these to grind Into paste more smooth than silk, Whiter than the milkweed's milk:
 Spread it on a rose-leaf, thus,
 Cate to please Theocritus;
 Then the fire with spices swell,
 While, for her completer spell, Mystic canticles she croons, —
 Eleanor makes macaroons !

Perfect ! and all this to waste
 On a graybeard's palsied taste !
 Poets so their verses write,
 Heap them full of life and light,
 And then fling them to the rude Mumbling of the multitude.

Not so dire her fate as theirs,
 Since her friend this gift declares Choicest of his birthday boons, — Eleanor's dear macaroons !

February 22, 1884.

TELEPATHY

"AND how could you dream of meeting ?"

Nay, how can you ask me, sweet ?
 All day my pulse had been beating
 The tune of your coming feet.

And as nearer and ever nearer
 I felt the throb of your tread,
 To be in the world grew dearer,
 And my blood ran rosier red.

Love called, and I could not linger,
 But sought the forbidden tryst,
 As music follows the finger
 Of the dreaming lutanist.

And though you had said it and said it,
 "We must not be happy to-day,"
 Was I not wiser to credit
 The fire in my feet than your Nay ?

SCHERZO

WHEN the down is on the chin
 And the gold-gleam in the hair,
 When the birds their sweethearts win
 And champagne is in the air, Love is here, and Love is there,
 Love is welcome everywhere.

Summer's cheek too soon turns thin, Days grow briefer, sunshine rare;
 Autumn from his cannekin Blows the froth to chase Despair:
 Love is met with frosty stare, Cannot house 'neath branches bare.

When new life is in the leaf
 And new red is in the rose, Though Love's Maytime be as brief
 As a dragon-fly's repose, Never moments come like those,
 Be they Heaven or Hell : who knows ?

All too soon comes Winter's grief, Spendthrift Love's false friends turn foes; Softly comes Old Age, the thief, Steals the rapture, leaves the throes:
Love his mantle round him throws, —
"Time to say Good-by; it snows."

"FRANCISCUS DE VERULAMIO SIC COGITAVIT"

THAT's a rather bold speech, my Lord Bacon,
For, indeed, is 't so easy to know Just how much we from others have taken,
And how much our own natural flow?

Since your mind bubbled up at its fountain,
How many streams made it elate,
While it calmed to the plain from the mountain,
As every mind must that grows great?

While you thought 't was You thinking as newly As Adam still wet with God's dew, You forgot in your self-pride that truly
The whole Past was thinking through you.

Greece, Rome, nay, your namesake, old Roger,
With Truth's nameless delvers who wrought In the dark mines of Truth, helped to prod your Fine brain with the goad of their thought.

As mummy was prized for a rich hue
The painter no elsewhere could find,
So 't was buried men's thinking with which you Gave the ripe mellow tone to your mind.

I heard the proud strawberry saying,
"Only look what a ruby I've made!"
It forgot how the bees in their maying Had brought it the stuff for its trade.

And yet there's the half of a truth in it,
And my Lord might his copyright sue;
For a thought's his who kindles new youth in it,
Or so puts it as makes it more true.

The birds but repeat without ending
The same old traditional notes,
Which some, by more happily blending,
Seem to make over new in their throats;

And we men through our old bit of song
run,
Until one just improves on the rest,
And we call a thing his, in the long run,
Who utters it clearest and best.

AUSPEX

My heart, I cannot still it, Nest that had song-birds in it;
And when the last shall go,
The dreary days, to fill it,
Instead of lark or linnet, Shall whirl dead leaves and snow.

Had they been swallows only,
Without the passion stronger That skyward longs and sings, — Woe's me, I shall be lonely
When I can feel no longer
The impatience of their wings!

A moment, sweet delusion,
Like birds the brown leaves hover;
But it will not be long Before their wild confusion Fall wavering down to cover
The poet and his song.

THE PREGNANT COMMENT

OPENING one day a book of mine,
I absent, Hester found a line Praised with a pencil-mark, and this She left transfigured with a kiss.

When next upon the page I chance, Like Poussin's nymphs my pulses dance,
And whirl my fancy where it sees Pan piping 'neath Arcadian trees, Whose leaves no winter-scenes rehearse, Still young and glad as Homer's verse.
"What mean," I ask, "these sudden joys?"
This feeling fresher than a boy's?
What makes this line, familiar long,
New as the first bird's April song?
I could, with sense illumined thus, Clear doubtful texts in Æschylus!"

Laughing, one day she gave the key,
 My riddle's open-sesame;
 Then added, with a smile demure, Whose downcast lids veiled triumph sure,
 "If what I left there give you pain, You — you — can take it off again;
 'T was for my poet, not for him,
 Your Doctor Donne there!"

Earth grew dim

And wavered in a golden mist,
 As rose, not paper, leaves I kissed.
 Donne, you forgive? I let you keep Her precious comment, poet deep.

THE LESSON

I SAT and watched the walls of night With cracks of sudden lightning glow,
 And listened while with clumsy night
 The thunder wallowed to and fro.

The rain fell softly now; the squall,
 That to a torrent drove the trees,
 Had whirled beyond us to let fall Its tumult on the whitening seas.

But still the lightning crinkled keen,
 Or fluttered fitful from behind The leaden drifts, then only seen,
 That rumbled eastward on the wind.

Still as gloom followed after glare, While bated breath the pine-trees drew,
 Tiny Salmoneus of the air,
 His mimic bolts the firefly threw.

He thought, no doubt, "Those flashes
 grand,
 That light for leagues the shuddering
 sky,
 Are made, a fool could understand,
 By some superior kind of fly.

"He 's of our race's elder branch,
 His family-arms the same as ours,
 Both born the twy-forked flame to launch,
 Of kindred, if unequal, powers."

And is man wiser? Man who takes His consciousness the law to be Of all beyond his ken, and makes God but a bigger kind of Me?

SCIENCE AND POETRY

HE who first stretched his nerves of sub-tile wire
 Over the land and through the sea-depths
 still,
 Thought only of the flame-winged messenger
 As a dull drudge that should encircle earth
 With sordid messages of Trade, and tame Blithe Ariel to a bagman. But the Muse Not long will be defrauded. From her foe Her misused wand she snatches; at a touch,
 The Age of Wonder is renewed again,
 And to our disenchanting day restores The Shoes of Swiftmess that give odds to
 Thought,
 The Cloak that makes invisible; and with these
 I glide, an airy fire, from shore to shore,
 Or from my Cambridge whisper to Cathay.

A NEW YEAR'S GREETING

THE century numbers fourscore years;
 You, fortified in your teens,
 To Time's alarms close your ears,
 And, while he devastates your peers,
 Conceive not what he means.

If e'er life's winter fleck with snow
 Your hair's deep shadowed bowers, That winsome head an art would know
 To make it charm, and wear it so As 't were a wreath of flowers.

If to such fairies years must come,
 May yours fall soft and slow
 As, shaken by a bee's low hum,
 The rose-leaves waver, sweetly dumb,
 Down to their mates below!

THE DISCOVERY

I WATCHED a moorland torrent run Down through the rift itself had made, Golden as honey in the sun,
 Of darkest amber in the shade.

In this wild glen at last, methought,
 The magic's secret I surprise;
 Here Celia's guardian fairy caught The changeful splendors of her eyes.

All else grows tame, the sky's one blue,
 The one long languish of the rose,
 But these, beyond prevision new,
 Shall charm and startle to the close.

WITH A SEASHELL

SHELL, whose lips, than mine more cold, Might with Dian's ear make bold, Seek my Lady's; if thou win
 To that portal, shut from sin,
 Where commissioned angels' swords Startle back unholy words, Thou a miracle shalt see Wrought by it and wrought in thee;
 Thou, the dumb one, shalt recover Speech of poet, speech of lover.
 If she deign to lift you there, Murmur what I may not dare;
 In that archway, pearly-pink
 As the Dawn's untrodden brink, Murmur, "Excellent and good, Beauty's best in every mood,
 Never common, never tame, Changeful fair as windwaved flame" — Nay, I maunder; this she hears Every day with mocking ears,
 With a brow not sudden-stained With the flush of bliss restrained, With no tremor of the pulse More than feels the dreaming dulse
 In the midmost ocean's caves,
 When a tempest heaps the waves.
 Thou must woo her in a phrase Mystic as the opal's blaze, Which pure maids alone can see When their lovers constant be.
 I with thee a secret share,
 Half a hope, and half a prayer,
 Though no reach of mortal skill Ever told it all, or will;
 Say, "He bids me — nothing more — Tell you what you guessed before!"

THE SECRET

I HAVE a fancy: how shall I bring it Home to all mortals wherever they be?
 Say it or sing it? Shoe it or wing it,
 So it may outrun or outfly Me, Merest cocoon-web whence it broke free?

Only one secret can save from disaster,
 Only one magic is that of the Master:

Set it to music; give it a tune, — Tune the brook sings you, tune the breeze brings you,
 Tune the wild columbines nod to in June!

This is the secret: so simple, you see!
 Easy as loving, easy as kissing, Easy as — well, let me ponder — as miss-
 ing,
 Known, since the world was, by scarce two or three.

IV. HUMOR AND SATIRE

FITZ ADAM'S STORY

[The greater part of this poem was written many years ago as part of a larger one, to be called The Nooning, made up of tales in verse, some of them grave, some comic. It gives me a sad pleasure to remember that I was encouraged in this project by my friend the late Arthur Hugh Clough.]

Thus Lowell in the note which he prefixed to this poem when printing it in Heartsease and Rue. In his Letters are some more detailed references to the design of The Nooning. As far back as 1849, when issuing a new edition of his Poems, he wrote to Mr. Briggs: "My next volume, I think, will show an advance. It is to be called The Nooning. Now guess what it will be. The name suggests pleasant thoughts, does it not? But I shall not tell you anything about it yet, and you must not mention it." A little later he wrote to the same correspondent: "Maria invented the title for me, and is it not a pleasant one? My plan is this. I am going to bring together a party of half a dozen old friends at Elmwood. They go down to the river and bathe, and then one proposes that they shall go up into a great willow-tree (which stands at the end of the causeway near our house, and has seats in it) to take their nooning. There they agree that each shall tell a story or recite a poem of some sort. In the tree they find a countryman already resting himself, who enters into the plan and tells a humorous tale, with touches of Yankee character and habits in it. I am to read my poem of the Voyage of Leif to Vinland, in which I mean to bring my hero straight into Boston Bay, as befits a Bay-state poet. Two of my poems are already written — one The Fountain of Youth (no connection with any other firm), and the other an Address to the Muse, by the Transcendentalist of the party. . . . In The Nooning I shall have not even a glance towards Reform." Apparently Lowell regarded the book as imminent, but the death of his daughter Rose early in 1850 and the subsequent journey to Europe seem to have deferred the execution of his plans, and the book, as we know, never had a whole, though there were several fragments of it published. He held tenaciously, however, to his plan. In June, 1853, he wrote again to Mr. Briggs: "I have The Nooning to finish — which shall turn out well;" and thirteen years later he wrote to Mr. Norton: "I have been working hard, and if my liver will let me alone, as it does now, am likely to go on all winter. And on what, do you suppose? I have taken up one of the unfinished tales of The Nooning, and it grew to a poem of near seven hundred lines! [plainly this poem of Fitz Adam's Story]. It is mainly descriptive. First, a sketch of the narrator, then his 'prelude,' then his 'tale.' I describe an old inn and its landlord, bar-room, etc. It is very homely, but right from nature. I have lent it to Child and hope he will like it, for if he does not I shall feel discouraged. It was very interesting to take up a thread dropt so long ago, and curious as a phenomenon of memory to find how continuous it had remained in my mind, and how I could go on as if I had let it fall only yesterday."

A scheme so long persisted in and returned to so often could scarcely be wholly unknown, and in a letter to Professor James B. Thayer written in December, 1868, we find Lowell answering a query he had put: "And The Nooning. Sure enough, where is it? The June Idyl [renamed Under the Willows] (written in '51 or '52) is a part of what I had written as the induction to it. The description of spring in one of the Biglow Papers is another fragment of the same, tagged with rhyme for the nonce. So is a passage in Mason and Slidell beginning

"Oh, strange new world."

The Voyage to Vinland, the Pictures from Appledore, and Fitz Adam's Story were written for The Nooning, as originally planned. So, you see, I had made some progress. Perhaps it will come by and by — not in the shape I meant at first, for something broke my life in two, and I cannot piece it together again. Besides, the Muse asks all of a man, and for many years I have been unable to give myself up as I would." Fragments of an Unfinished Poem, p. 158, is another bit of flotsam from The Nooning.

THE next whose fortune 't was a tale to tell

Was one whom men, before they thought, loved well,

And after thinking wondered why they did,
For half he seemed to let them, half forbid,

And wrapped him so in humors, sheath on sheath,

'T was hard to guess the mellow soul beneath;

But, once divined, you took him to your heart,

While he appeared to bear with you as part

Of life's impertinence, and once a year Betrayed his true self by a smile or tear, Or rather something sweetly-shy and loath, Withdrawn ere fully shown, and mixed of both.

A cynic? Not precisely: one who thrust Against a heart too prone to love and trust, Who so despised false sentiment he knew Scarce in himself to part the false and true,

And strove to hide, by roughening-o'er the skin,

Those cobweb nerves he could not dull within.

Gentle by birth, but of a stem decayed,
He shunned life's rivalries and hated trade;
On a small patrimony and larger pride,
He lived uneaseful on the Other Side (So he called Europe), only coming West To give his Old-World appetite new zest;
Yet still the New World spooked it in his veins,

A ghost he could not lay with all his pains;
For never Pilgrims' offshoot scapes control Of those old instincts that have shaped his soul.

A radical in thought, he puffed away
With shrewd contempt the dust of usage gray,

Yet loathed democracy as one who saw,
In what he longed to love, some vulgar flaw,

And, shocked through all his delicate reserves,

Remained a Tory by his taste and nerves.
His fancy's thrall, he drew all ergoes thence,

And thought himself the type of common sense;

Misliking women, not from cross or whim,
But that his mother shared too much in him,

And he half felt that what in them was grace

Made the unlucky weakness of his race.
 What powers he had he hardly cared to know,
 But sauntered through the world as through a show;
 A critic fine in his haphazard way,
 A sort of mild La Bruyère on half-pay.
 For comic weaknesses he had an eye Keen as an acid for an alkali, Yet you could feel, through his sardonic tone,
 He loved them all, unless they were his own.
 You might have called him, with his humorous twist,
 A kind of human entomologist:
 As these bring home, from every walk they take,
 Their hat-crowns stuck with bugs of curious make,
 So he filled all the lining of his head
 With characters impaled and ticketed,
 And had a cabinet behind his eyes
 For all they caught of mortal oddities.
 He might have been a poet—many worse—
 But that he had, or feigned, contempt of verse; Called it tattooing language, and held rhymes
 The young world's lullaby of ruder times.
 Bitter in words, too indolent for gall,
 He satirized himself the first of all,
 In men and their affairs could find no law,
 And was the ill logic that he thought he saw.

Scratching a match to light his pipe anew,
 With eyes half shut some musing whiffs he drew
 And thus began: "I give you all my word, I think this mock-Decameron absurd; Boccaccio's garden! how bring that to pass
 In our bleak clime save under double glass?
 The moral east-wind of New England life Would snip its gay luxuriance like a knife:
 Mile-deep the glaciers brooded here, they say,
 Through æons numb; we feel their chill to-day.
 These foreign plants are but half-hardy still,
 Die on a south, and on a north wall chill.

Had we stayed Puritans! They had some heat, (Though whence derived I have my own conceit,) But you have long ago raked up their fires;
 Where they had faith, you've ten sham Gothic spires.
 Why more exotics? Try your native vines,
 And in some thousand years you may have wines;
 Your present grapes are harsh, all pulps and skins,
 And want traditions of ancestral bins
 That saved for evenings round the polished board Old lava-fires, the sun-steeped hillside's hoard.
 Without a Past, you lack that southern wall O'er which the vines of Poesy should crawl; Still they're your only hope; no midnight oil Makes up for virtue wanting in the soil;
 Manure them well and prune them; 't won't be France, Nor Spain, nor Italy, but there's your chance.
 You have one story-teller worth a score Of dead Boccaccios,—nay, add twenty more,— A hawthorn asking spring's most dainty breath,
 And him you're freezing pretty well to death.
 However, since you say so, I will tease
 My memory to a story by degrees, Though you will cry, 'Enough!' I'm well-nigh sure, Ere I have dreamed through half my overture.
 Stories were good for men who had no books, (Fortunate race!) and built their nests like rooks In lonely towers, to which the Jongleur brought His pedler's-box of cheap and tawdry thought, With here and there a fancy fit to see Wrought in quaint grace in golden filigree,— Some ring that with the Muse's finger yet Is warm, like Aucassin and Nicolette;

The morning newspaper has spoilt his trade,
(For better or for worse, I leave unsaid,)
And stories now, to suit a public nice, Must be half epigram, half pleasant vice.

“All tourists know Shebagog County:
there

The summer idlers take their yearly stare, Dress to see Nature in a well-bred way,
As 't were Italian opera, or play, Encore the sunrise (if they 're out of bed),
And pat the Mighty Mother on the head: These have I seen, — all things are good to
see, —

And wondered much at their complacency.
This world's great show, that took in getting-up

Millions of years, they finish ere they sup; Sights that God gleams through with soultingling force

They glance approvingly as things of
course,

Say, 'That's a grand rock,' 'This a pretty
fall,'

Not thinking, 'Are we worthy?' What if all

The scornful landscape should turn round and say,

'This is a fool, and that a popinjay' ?
I often wonder what the Mountain thinks Of French boots creaking o'er his breathless brinks,

Or how the Sun would scare the chattering
crowd,

If some fine day he chanced to think aloud.
I, who love Nature much as sinners can,
Love her where she most grandeur shows,
— in man:

Here find I mountain, forest, cloud, and
sun,

River and sea, and glows when day is done; Nay, where she makes grotesques, and moulds in jest

The clown's cheap clay, I find unfading zest.

The natural instincts year by year retire, As deer shrink northward from the settler's
fire,

And he who loves the wild game-flavor
more

Than city-feasts, where every man's a bore To every other man, must seek it where

The steamer's throb and railway's iron blare

Have not yet startled with their punctual
stir

The shy, wood-wandering brood of Character.

“There is a village, once the county town,

Through which the weekly mail rolled dustily down,

Where the courts sat, it may be, twice a
year,

And the one tavern reeked with rustic
cheer;

Cheeshogquesumscot erst, now Jethro hight,

Red-man and pale-face bore it equal spite.
The railway ruined it, the natives say,

That passed unwisely fifteen miles away,
And made a drain to which, with steady ooze, Filtered away law, stage-coach, trade, and news.

The railway saved it; so at least think those

Who love old ways, old houses, old repose Of course the Tavern stayed: its genial host Thought not of flitting more than did the post

On which high-hung the fading signboard creaks, Inscribed, 'The Eagle Inn, by Ezra

Weeks.'

“If in life's journey you should ever find

An inn medicinal for body and mind,
'T is sure to be some drowsy-looking house

Whose easy landlord has a bustling spouse:
He, if he like you, will not long forego

Some bottle deep in cobwebbed dust laid
low,

That, since the War we used to call the
'Last,'

Has dozed and held its lang-syne memories
fast:

From him exhales that Indian-summer air
Of hazy, lazy welcome everywhere,

While with her toil the napery is white,
The china dustless, the keen knife-blades

bright,
Salt dry as sand, and bread that seems as though

'T were rather sea-foam baked than vulgar dough.

"In our swift country, houses trim and white Are pitched like tents, the lodging of a night;
 Each on its bank of baked turf mounted high Perches impatient o'er the roadside dry, While the wronged landscape coldly stands aloof, Refusing friendship with the upstart roof.
 Not so the Eagle; on a grass-green swell That toward the south with sweet concessions fell It dwelt retired, and half had grown to be As aboriginal as rock or tree.
 It nestled close to earth, and seemed to brood O'er homely thoughts in a half-conscious mood, As by the peat that rather fades than burns
 The smouldering grandam nods and knits by turns, Happy, although her newest news were old Ere the first hostile drum at Concord rolled.
 If paint it e'er had known, it knew no more Than yellow lichens spattered thickly o'er That soft lead-gray, less dark beneath the eaves Which the slow brush of wind and weather leaves.
 The ample roof sloped backward to the ground,
 And vassal lean-tos gathered thickly round, Patched on, as sire or son had felt the need,
 Like chance growths sprouting from the old roof's seed, Just as about a yellow-pine-tree spring
 Its rough-barked darlings in a filial ring.
 But the great chimney was the central thought Whose gravitation through the cluster wrought;
 For 't is not styles far-fetched from Greece or Rome,
 But just the Fireside, that can make a home;
 None of your spindling things of modern style,
 Like pins stuck through to stay the card-built pile,
 It rose broad shouldered, kindly, debonaire,
 Its warm breath whitening in the October air,

While on its front a heart in outline showed The place it filled in that serene abode.

"When first I chanced the Eagle to explore,

Ezra sat listless by the open door;
 One chair careened him at an angle meet,
 Another nursed his hugely-slippered feet;
 Upon a third reposed a shirt-sleeved arm,
 And the whole man diffused tobacco's charm.

'Are you the landlord?' 'Wahl, I guess I be,'

Watching the smoke, he answered leisurely.

He was a stoutish man, and through the breast

Of his loose shirt there showed a brambly chest;

Streaked redly as a wind-foreboding morn,
 His tanned cheeks curved to temples closely shorn;

Clean-shaved he was, save where a hedge of gray

Upon his brawny throat leaned every way About an Adam's-apple, that beneath Bulged like a boulder from a brambly heath.
 The Western World's true child and nursing he,

Equipt with aptitudes enough for three:

No eye like his to value horse or cow,
 Or gauge the contents of a stack or mow;
 He could foretell the weather at a word,
 He knew the haunt of every beast and bird,
 Or where a two-pound trout was sure to lie, Waiting the flutter of his home-made fly;
 Nay, once in autumns five, he had the luck

To drop at fair-play range a ten-tined buck;

Of sportsmen true he favored every whim,
 But never cockney found a guide in him;
 A natural man, with all his instincts fresh,
 Not buzzing helpless in Reflection's mesh,
 Firm on its feet stood his broad-shouldered mind,

As bluffly honest as a northwest wind;
 Hard-headed and soft-hearted, you'd scarce meet

A kindlier mixture of the shrewd and sweet;

Generous by birth, and ill at saying 'No,' Yet in a bargain he was all men's foe,
 Would yield no inch of vantage in a trade,
 And give away ere nightfall all he made.

“‘Can I have lodging here?’ once more I said.

He blew a whiff, and, leaning back his
head,

‘You come a piece through Bailey’s woods,
I s’pose,

Acrost a bridge where a big swamp-oak grows?

It don’t grow, neither; it’s ben dead ten
year,

Nor th’ ain’t a livin’ creetur, fur nor near,
Can tell wut killed it; but I some misdoubt
’T was borers, there’s sech heaps on ’em about.

You did n’ chance to run ag’in’st my son,
A long, slab-sided youngster with a gun?

He’d oughto ben back more’n an hour
ago,

An’ brought some birds to dress for supper — sho!

There he comes now. ‘Say, Obed, wut ye got?

(He’ll hev some upland plover like as not.)
Wal, them’s real nice uns, an’ ll eat A 1,

Ef I can stop their bein’ over-done;
Nothin’ riles me (I pledge my fastin’ word)

Like cookin’ out the natur’ of a bird; (Obed, you pick ’em out o’ sight an’ sound,

Your ma’am don’t love no feathers cluttrin’
round;)

Jes’ scare ’em with the coals, — thet’s my idee.’

Then, turning suddenly about on me, ‘Wal, Square, I guess so. Callilate to stay?

I’ll ask Mis’ Weeks; ’bout thet it’s herv to say.’

“Well, there I lingered all October
through,

In that sweet atmosphere of hazy blue,
So leisurely, so soothing, so forgiving,

That sometimes makes New England fit for living.

I watched the landscape, erst so granite glum,

Bloom like the south side of a ripening plum,

And each rock-maple on the hillside make His ten days’ sunset doubled in the lake;

The very stone walls draggling up the hills Seemed touched, and wavered in their roundhead wills.

Ah! there’s a deal of sugar in the sun!
Tap me in Indian summer, I should run

A juice to make rock-candy of, — but then We get such weather scarce one year in ten.

“There was a parlor in the house, a room To make you shudder with its prudish
gloom.

The furniture stood round with such an air, There seemed an old maid’s ghost in every chair,

Which looked as it had scuttled to its place

And pulled extempore a Sunday face, Too smugly proper for a world of sin,

Like boys on whom the minister comes in.
The table, fronting you with icy stare,

Strove to look witless that its legs were
bare,

While the black sofa with its horse-hair pall

Gloomed like a bier for Comfort’s funeral.
Each piece appeared to do its chilly best

To seem an utter stranger to the rest,
As if acquaintanceship were deadly sin,

Like Britons meeting in a foreign inn.
Two portraits graced the wall in grimmest
truth,

Mister and Mistress W. in their youth, — New England youth, that seems a sort of pill,

Half wish-I-dared, half Edwards on the
Will,

Bitter to swallow, and which leaves a trace Of Calvinistic colic on the face.

Between them, o’er the mantel, hung in state

Solomon’s temple, done in copperplate; Invention pure, but meant, we may presume,

To give some Scripture sanction to the room.

Facing this last, two samplers you might
see,

Each, with its urn and stiffly-weeping tree,
Devoted to some memory long ago

More faded than their lines of worsted woe; Cut paper decked their frames against the flies,

Though none e’er dared an entrance who were wise,

And bushed asparagus in fading green Added its shiver to the franklin clean.

“When first arrived, I chilled a half-hour there,

Nor dared deflower with use a single chair;
I caught no cold, yet flying pains could find For weeks in me,—a rheumatism of mind.
One thing alone imprisoned there had

power
To hold me in the place that long half-
hour:

A scutcheon this, a helm-surmounted shield,
Three griffins argent on a sable field;
A relic of the shipwrecked past was here,
And Ezra held some Old-World lumber
dear.

Nay, do not smile; I love this kind of thing,
These cooped traditions with a broken wing, This freehold nook in Fancy's pipe-blown ball,

This less than nothing that is more than all!

Have I not seen sweet natures kept alive
Amid the humdrum of your business hive, Undowered spinsters shielded from all harms,

By airy incomes from a coat of arms?"

He paused a moment, and his features took

The flitting sweetness of that inward look I hinted at before; but, scarcely seen,
It shrank for shelter 'neath his harder mien,
And, rapping his black pipe of ashes clear,
He went on with a self-derisive sneer:

"No doubt we make a part of God's design,

And break the forest-path for feet divine;
To furnish foothold for this grand prevision Is good, and yet—to be the mere transition,

That, you will say, is also good, though I Scarce like to feed the ogre By-and-by.
Raw edges rasp my nerves; my taste is wooded

By things that are, not going to be, good, Though were I what I dreamed two lustres
gone,

I'd stay to help the Consummation on, Whether a new Rome than the old more
fair,

Or a deadflat of rascal-ruled despair;
But my skull somehow never closed the suture

That seems to knit yours firmly with the future,

So you'll excuse me if I'm sometimes fain To tie the Past's warm nightcap o'er my brain;

I'm quite aware 'tis not in fashion here,
But then your northeast winds are so severe!

"But to my story: though 'tis truly
naught

But a few hints in Memory's sketchbook
caught,

And which may claim a value on the score Of calling back some scenery now no more.
Shall I confess? The tavern's only Lar Seemed (be not shocked!) its homely-featured bar.

Here dozed a fire of beechen logs, that bred Strange fancies in its embers golden-red,
And nursed the loggerhead whose hissing dip,

Timed by nice instinct, creamed the mug of flip

That made from mouth to mouth its genial
round,

Nor left one nature wholly winter-bound;
Hence dropt the tinkling coal all mellow-ripe

For Uncle Reuben's talk-extinguished pipe; Hence rayed the heat, as from an indoor
sun,

That wooed forth many a shoot of rustic fun.

Here Ezra ruled as king by right divine;
No other face had such a wholesome shine,
No laugh like his so full of honest cheer;
Above the rest it crowed like Chanticleer.

"In this one room his dame you never saw,

Where reigned by custom old a Salic law;
Here coatless lolled he on his throne of oak,
And every tongue paused midway if he spoke.

Due mirth he loved, yet was his sway severe;
No blear-eyed driveller got his stagger
here;

'Measure was happiness; who wanted more,
Must buy his ruin at the Deacon's store;'

None but his lodgers after ten could stay, Nor after nine on eves of Sabbath-day.

He had his favorites and his pensioners,
The same that gypsy Nature owns for hers: Loose-ended souls, whose skills bring scanty
gold,

And whom the poor-house catches when they're old;

Rude country-minstrels, men who doctor kine,

Or graft, and, out of scions ten, save nine;
 Creatures of genius they, but never meant To keep step with the civic regiment.
 These Ezra welcomed, feeling in his mind Perhaps some motions of the vagrant kind;
 These paid no money, yet for them he drew Special Jamaica from a tap they knew,
 And, for their feelings, chalked behind the
 door

With solemn face a visionary score.
 This thawed to life in Uncle Reuben's throat

A torpid shoal of jest and anecdote, Like those queer fish that doze the droughts
 away,

And wait for moisture, wrapped in sun-baked clay;

This warmed the one-eyed fiddler to his task,

Perched in the corner on an empty cask, By whose shrill art rapt suddenly, some boor

Rattled a double-shuffle on the floor;
 'Hull's Victory' was, indeed, the favorite
 air,

Though 'Yankee Doodle' claimed its proper share.

"T was there I caught from Uncle Reuben's lips,
 In dribbling monologue 'twixt whiffs and sips,

The story I so long have tried to tell;
 The humor coarse, the persons common, —
 well,

From Nature only do I love to paint, Whether she send a satyr or a saint;
 To me Sincerity's the one thing good, Soiled though she be and lost to maiden-hood.

Quompegan is a town some ten miles south From Jethro, at Nagumscot river-mouth,
 A seaport town, and makes its title good With lumber and dried fish and eastern wood.

Here Deacon Bitters dwelt and kept the Store,

The richest man for many a mile of shore;
 In little less than everything dealt he,
 From meeting-houses to a chest of tea;
 So dextrous therewithal a flint to skin,
 He could make profit on a single pin;
 In business strict, to bring the balance true
 He had been known to bite a fig in two,
 And change a board-nail for a shingle-nail.

All that he had he ready held for sale,
 His house, his tomb, whate'er the law allows,
 And he had gladly parted with his spouse.
 His one ambition still to get and get,
 He would arrest your very ghost for debt.
 His store looked righteous, should the Parson come,

But in a dark back-room he peddled rum,
 And eased Ma'am Conscience, if she e'er would scold,

By christening it with water ere he sold.
 A small, dry man he was, who wore a queue,
 And one white neckcloth all the week-days
 through, —

On Monday white, by Saturday as dun As that worn homeward by the prodigal son.
 His frosted earlocks, striped with foxy
 brown,

Were braided up to hide a desert crown;
 His coat was brownish, black perhaps of yore;

In summer-time a banyan loose he wore;
 His trousers short, through many a season
 true,

Made no pretence to hide his stockings blue;
 A waistcoat buff his chief adornment was,
 Its porcelain buttons rimmed with dusky brass.

A deacon he, you saw it in each limb,
 And well he knew to deacon-off a hymn,
 Or lead the choir through all its wandering
 woes

With voice that gathered unction in his nose,

Wherein a constant snuffle you might hear,
 As if with him 't were winter all the year.
 At pew-head sat he with decorous pains,
 In sermon-time could foot his weekly gains, Or, with closed eyes and heaven-abstracted
 air,

Could plan a new investment in long-
 prayer.

A pious man, and thrifty too, he made The psalms and prophets partners in his trade,

And in his orthodoxy straitened more
 As it enlarged the business at his store; He honored Moses, but, when gain he planned,

Had his own notion of the Promised Land.

"Soon as the winter made the sledding
 good,
 From far around the farmers hauled him
 wood.

For all the trade had gathered 'neath his thumb.
 He paid in groceries and New England rum, Making two profits with a conscience clear, — Cheap all he bought, and all he paid with dear.
 With his own mete-wand measuring every load,
 Each somehow had diminished on the road;
 An honest cord in Jethro still would fail
 By a good foot upon the Deacon's scale,
 And, more to abate the price, his gimlet eye Would pierce to cat-sticks that none else could spy;
 Yet none dared grumble, for no farmer yet But New Year found him in the Deacon's debt.

"While the first snow was mealy under feet,
 A team drawled creaking down Quompegan street.
 Two cords of oak weighed down the grinding sled,
 And cornstalk fodder rustled overhead;
 The oxen's muzzles, as they shouldered through,
 Were silver-fringed; the driver's own was blue
 As the coarse frock that swung below his knee.
 Behind his load for shelter waded he;
 His mittened hands now on his chest he beat,
 Now stamped the stiffened cowhides of his feet, Hushed as a ghost's; his armpit scarce could hold
 The walnut whipstock slippery-bright with cold.
 What wonder if, the tavern as he past,
 He looked and longed, and stayed his beasts at last,
 Who patient stood and veiled themselves in steam While he explored the bar-room's ruddy gleam?

"Before the fire, in want of thought profound,

There sat a brother-townsman weather-bound:
 A sturdy churl, crisp-headed, bristly-eared,
 Red as a pepper; 'twixt coarse brows and beard
 His eyes lay ambushed, on the watch for fools, Clear, gray, and glittering like two bay-edged pools;
 A shifty creature, with a turn for fun,
 Could swap a poor horse for a better one, — He'd a high-stepper always in his stall;
 Liked far and near, and dreaded there-withal.
 To him the in-comer, 'Perez, how d' ye do?'
 'Jest as I 'm mind to, Obed; how do you?'
 Then, his eyes twinkling such swift gleams as run Along the levelled barrel of a gun Brought to his shoulder by a man you know Will bring his game down, he continued,
 'So, I s'pose you're haulin' wood? But you're too late;
 The Deacon's off; Old Splitfoot could n't wait;
 He made a bee-line las' night in the storm
 To where he won't need wood to keep him warm.
 'Fore this he's treasurer of a fund to train Young imps as missionaries; hopes to gain That way a contract that he has in view For fireproof pitchforks of a pattern new.
 It must have tickled him, all drawbacks weighed,
 To think he stuck the Old One in a trade;
 His soul, to start with, was n't worth a carrot, And all he'd left 'ould hardly serve to swear at.'

"By this time Obed had his wits thawed out,
 And, looking at the other half in doubt,
 Took off his fox-skin cap to scratch his head, Donned it again, and drawled forth, 'Mean he's dead?'
 'Jesso; he's dead and t' other d that fol-lers

With folks that never love a thing but dollars.

He pulled up stakes last evening, fair and
square,

And ever since there's been a row Down
There.

The minute the old chap arrived, you see,
Comes the Boss-devil to him, and says
he,

"What are you good at? Little enough,
I fear;

We callitate to make folks useful here."

"Well," says old Bitters, "I expect I can Seale a fair load of wood with e'er a man."

"Wood we don't deal in; but perhaps you'll suit,

Because we buy our brimstone by the foot: Here, take this measurin'-rod, as smooth as
sin,

And keep a reckonin' of what loads comes
in.

You'll not want business, for we need a lot

To keep the Yankees that you send us hot;

At firin' up they're barely half as spry As Spaniards or Italians, though they're
dry;

At first we have to let the draught on stronger,

But, heat 'em through, they seem to hold it longer."

"Bitters he took the rod, and pretty soon

A teamster comes, whistling an ex-psalm tune.

A likelier chap you would n't ask to see,
No different, but his limp, from you or
me'—

'No different, Perez! Don't your memory fail?

Why, where in thunder was his horns and tail?

'They're only worn by some old-fashioned pokes;

They mostly aim at looking just like folks.
Sech things are scarce as queues and top-boots here;

'T would spoil their usefulness to look too
queer.

Ef you could always know 'em when they come,

They'd get no purchase on you: now be mum.

On come the teamster, smart as Davy Crockett,

Jinglin' the red-hot coppers in his pocket, And clost behind, ('t was gold-dust, you 'd ha' sworn,)

A load of sulphur yallowe 'n seed-corn;
To see it wasted as it is Down There Would make a Friction-Match Co. tear its hair!

"Hold on!" says Bitters, "stop right where you be;

You can't go in aouthout a pass from me."

"All right," says t' other, "only step round smart;

I must be home by noon-time with the cart."

Bitters goes round it sharp-eyed as a rat, Then with a scrap of paper on his hat Pretends to cipher. "By the public staff, That load scarce rises twelve foot and a half."

"There's fourteen foot and over," says the driver,

"Worth twenty dollars, ef it's worth a stiver;

Good fourth-proof brimstone, that'll make
'em squirm,—

I leave it to the Headman of the Firm;

After we masure it, we always lay

Some on to allow for settlin' by the way.

Imp and full-grown, I've carted sulphur
here,

And gi'n fair satisfaction, thirty year."

With that they fell to quarrellin' so loud

That in five minutes they had drawn a crowd,

And afore long the Boss, who heard the row,

Comes elbowin' in with "What's to pay here now?"

Both parties heard, the measurin'-rod he takes,

And of the load a careful survey makes.

"Sence I have bossed the business here," says he,

"No fairer load was ever seen by me."

Then, turnin' to the Deacon, "You mean cus,

None of your old Quompegan tricks with us!

They won't do here: we're plain old-fashioned folks,

And don't quite understand that kind o' jokes.

I know this teamster, and his pa afore him,

And the hard-working Mrs. D. that bore
him;

He won't n't soil his conscience with a lie, Though he might get the custom-house thereby.

Here, constable, take Bitters by the queue,
And clap him into furnace ninety-two,
And try this brimstone on him; if he's
bright,

He'll find the measure honest afore night.
He is n't worth his fuel, and I'll bet
The parish oven has to take him yet!"

"This is my tale, heard twenty years ago

From Uncle Reuben, as the logs burned
low,

Touching the walls and ceiling with that bloom

That makes a rose's calyx of a room.

I could not give his language, where-through ran

The gamy flavor of the bookless man Who shapes a word before the fancy cools, As lonely Crusoe improvised his tools.

I liked the tale, — 't was like so many told By Rutebeuf and his brother Trouvères
bold;

Nor were the hearers much unlike to theirs,

Men unsophisticate, rude-nerved as bears.
Ezra is gone and his large-hearted kind,

The landlords of the hospitable mind;

Good Warriner of Springfield was the last;

An inn is now a vision of the past;

One yet-surviving host my mind recalls, —

You'll find him if you go to Trenton Falls."

THE ORIGIN OF DIDACTIC POETRY

WHEN wise Minerva still was young

And just the least romantic,

Soon after from Jove's head she flung

That preternatural antic,

'T is said, to keep from idleness

Or flirting, those twin curses,

She spent her leisure, more or less,

In writing po——, no, verses.

How nice they were! to rhyme with far

A kind star did not tarry;

The metre, too, was regular

As schoolboy's dot and carry;

And full they were of pious plums.

So extra-super-moral, —

For sucking Virtue's tender gums

Most tooth-enticing coral.

A clean, fair copy she prepares,

Makes sure of moods and tenses,

With her own hand, — for prudence spares

A man-(or woman-)-nensis;

Complete, and tied with ribbons proud,

She hinted soon how cosy a Treat it would be to read them loud

After next day's Ambrosia.

The Gods thought not it would amuse

So much as Homer's Odyssees,

But could not very well refuse

The properest of Goddesses;

So all sat round in attitudes

Of various dejection,

As with a hem! the queen of prudes

Began her grave prelection.

At the first pause Zeus said, "Well
sung! —

I mean — ask Phœbus, — he knows."

Says Phœbus, "Zounds! a wolf's among Admetus's merinos!

Fine! very fine! but I must go;

They stand in need of me there;

Excuse me!" snatched his stick, and so

Plunged down the gladdened ether.

With the next gap, Mars said, "For me

Don't wait, — naught could be finer,

But I'm engaged at half past three, —

A fight in Asia Minor!"

Then Venus lisped, "I'm sorely tried,

These duty-calls are vip'rous;

But I must go; I have a bride

To see about in Cyprus."

Then Bacchus, — "I must say good-by,

Although my peace it jeopardis;

I meet a man at four, to try

A well-broke pair of leopards."

His words woke Hermes. "Ah!" he said,

"I so love moral theses!"

Then winked at Hebe, who turned red,

And smoothed her apron's creases.

Just then Zeus snored, — the Eagle drew

His head the wing from under;

Zeus snored, — o'er startled Greece there flew

The many-volumed thunder.
 Some augurs counted nine, some, ten;
 Some said 't was war, some, famine,
 And all, that other-minded men Would get a precious —.

Proud Pallas sighed, "It will not do; Against the Muse I've sinned, oh!"
 And her torn rhymes sent flying through Olympus's back window.
 Then, packing up a peplus clean,
 She took the shortest path thence,
 And opened, with a mind serene,
 A Sunday-school in Athens.

The verses? Some in ocean swilled, Killed every fish that bit to 'em;
 Some Galen caught, and, when distilled, Found morphine the residuum;
 But some that rotted on the earth Sprang up again in copies,
 And gave two strong narcotics birth, Didactic verse and poppies.

Years after, when a poet asked
 The Goddess's opinion,
 As one whose soul its wings had tasked
 In Art's clear-aired dominion,
 "Discriminate," she said, "betimes;
 The Muse is unforgiving;
 Put all your beauty in your rhymes,
 Your morals in your living."

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN

This poem appeared in The Atlantic for January, 1868, and Lowell's own criticism on it is frank. He wrote to Mr. Thayer: "You will find some verses of mine in the next Atlantic, the conception of which tickles me — but half spoiled (and in verse half is more than whole) in the writing;" and in a similar vein he wrote to Mr. Fields, the editor: "The trouble with The Flying Dutchman is not in what I left out, but in what I could n't get in. Let us be honest with each other, my dear Lorenzo de' Medici, if we can't be with anybody else. The conception of the verses is good; the verses are bad."

Don't believe in the Flying Dutchman?
 I've known the fellow for years;
 My button I've wrenched from his clutch,
 man:
 I shudder whenever he nears!

He's a Rip van Winkle skipper,
 A Wandering Jew of the sea,
 Who sails his bedevilled old clipper
 In the wind's eye, straight as a bee.

Back topsails! you can't escape him;
 The man-ropes stretch with his weight,
 And the queerest old toggeries drape him,
 The Lord knows how long out of date!

Like a long-disembodied idea, (A kind of ghost plentiful now,) He stands there; you fancy you see a Coeval of Teniers or Douw.

He greets you; would have you take letters:

You scan the addresses with dread,
 While he mutters his donners and wetters, — They're all from the dead to the dead!

You seem taking time for reflection, But the heart fills your throat with a jam,
 As you spell in each faded direction
 An ominous ending in dam.

Am I tagging my rhymes to a legend?
 That were changing green turtle to mock:
 No, thank you! I've found out which wedge-end
 Is meant for the head of a block.

The fellow I have in my mind's eye Plays the old Skipper's part here on shore,
 And sticks like a burr, till he finds I Have got just the gauge of his bore.

This postman 'twixt one ghost and t' other,
 With last dates that smell of the mould,
 I have met him (O man and brother, Forgive me!) in azure and gold.

In the pulpit I've known of his preaching,
 Out of hearing behind the time,
 Some statement of Balaam's impeaching, Giving Eve a due sense of her crime.

I have seen him some poor ancient thrash-
 ing
 Into something (God save us!) more dry, With the Water of Life itself washing
 The life out of earth, sea, and sky.

O dread fellow-mortal, get newer Despatches to carry, or none !
 We're as quick as the Greek and the Jew
 were
 At knowing a loaf from a stone.

Till the couriers of God fail in duty,
 We sha'n't ask a mummy for news,
 Nor sate the soul's hunger for beauty With your drawings from casts of a Muse.

CREDIDIMUS JOVEM REGNARE

O DAYS endeared to every Muse,
 When nobody had any Views,
 Nor, while the cloudscape of his mind
 By every breeze was new designed, Insisted all the world should see Camels or whales where none there be !
 O happy days, when men received From sire to son what all believed,
 And left the other world in bliss,
 Too busy with bedevilling this !

Beset by doubts of every breed
 In the last bastion of my creed,
 With shot and shell for Sabbath-chime,
 I watch the storming-party climb, Panting (their prey in easy reach),
 To pour triumphant through the breach In walls that shed like snowflakes tons Of missiles from old-fashioned guns,
 But crumble 'neath the storm that pours
 All day and night from bigger bores.
 There, as I hopeless watch and wait
 The last life-crushing coil of Fate, Despair finds solace in the praise
 Of those serene dawn-rosy days Ere microscopes had made us heirs To large estates of doubts and snares,
 By proving that the title-deeds,
 Once all-sufficient for men's needs,
 Are palimpsests that scarce disguise
 The tracings of still earlier lies, Themselves as surely written o'er An older fib erased before.

So from these days I fly to those That in the landlocked Past repose, Where no rude wind of doctrine shakes From bloom-flushed boughs untimely flakes;
 Where morning's eyes see nothing strange,

No crude perplexity of change,
 And morrows trip along their ways Secure as happy yesterdays.
 Then there were rulers who could trace Through heroes up to gods their race, Pledged to fair fame and noble use By veins from Odin filled or Zeus, And under bonds to keep divine
 The praise of a celestial line.
 Then priests could pile the altar's sods,
 With whom gods spake as they with gods,
 And everywhere from haunted earth Broke springs of wonder, that had birth In depths divine beyond the ken
 And fatal scrutiny of men; Then hills and groves and streams and
 seas
 Thrilled with immortal presences, Not too ethereal for the scope Of human passion's dream or hope.

Now Pan at last is surely dead,
 And King No-Credit reigns instead, Whose officers, morosely strict,
 Poor Fancy's tenantry evict, Chase the last Genius from the door,
 And nothing dances any more.
 Nothing ? Ah, yes, our tables do, Drumming the Old One's own tattoo,
 And, if the oracles are dumb,
 Have we not mediums ? Why be glum ?

Fly thither ? Why, the very air Is full of hindrance and despair !
 Fly thither ? But I cannot fly;
 My doubts enmesh me if I try,
 Each Liliputian, but, combined, Potent a giant's limbs to bind.
 This world and that are growing dark;
 A huge interrogation mark,
 The Devil's crook episcopal,
 Still borne before him since the Fall, Blackens with its ill-omened sign
 The old blue heaven of faith benign.
 Whence ? Whither ? Wherefore ? How ?
 Which ? Why ?

All ask at once, all wait reply.
 Men feel old systems cracking under 'em;
 Life saddens to a mere conundrum Which once Religion solved, but she Has lost — has Science found ? — the key.

What was snow-bearded Odin, trow,
 The mighty hunter long ago,
 Whose horn and hounds the peasant hears

Still when the Northlights shake their spears ?

Science hath answers twain, I've heard;
Choose which you will, nor hope a third;
Whichever box the truth be stowed in,
There 's not a sliver left of Odin.
Either he was a pinchbrowed thing,
With scarcely wit a stone to fling,
A creature both in size and shape Nearer than we are to the ape,
Who hung sublime with brat and spouse
By tail prehensile from the boughs,
And, happier than his maimed descendants,
The culture-curtailed independents,
Could pluck his cherries with both paws,
And stuff with both his big-boned jaws;
Or else the core his name enveloped Was from a solar myth developed,
Which, hunted to its primal shoot, Takes refuge in a Sanskrit root, Thereby to instant death explaining The little poetry remaining.

Try it with Zeus, 't is just the same;
The thing evades, we hug a name;
Nay, scarcely that, — perhaps a vapor Born of some atmospheric caper.
All Lempiere's fables blur together In cloudy symbols of the weather,
And Aphrodite rose from frothy seas
But to illustrate such hypotheses.
With years enough behind his back, Lincoln will take the selfsame track,
And prove, hulled fairly to the cob,
A mere vagary of Old Prob.
Give the right man a solar myth,
And he'll confute the sun therewith.

They make things admirably plain,
But one hard question will remain:
If one hypothesis you lose,
Another in its place you choose,
But, your faith gone, O man and brother, Whose shop shall furnish you another ?
One that will wash, I mean, and wear,
And wrap us warmly from despair ?
While they are clearing up our puzzles,
And clapping prophylactic muzzles
On the Actæon's hounds that sniff Our devious track through But and If,
Would they 'd explain away the Devil
And other facts that won't keep level, But rise beneath our feet or fail,
A reeling ship's deck in a gale !
God vanished long ago, iwis,

A mere subjective synthesis;
A doll, stuffed out with hopes and fears,
Too homely for us pretty dears,
Who want one that conviction carries,
Last make of London or of Paris.
He gone, I felt a moment's spasm,
But calmed myself with Protoplasm,
A finer name, and, what is more,
As enigmatic as before;
Greek, too, and sure to fill with ease Minds caught in the Symplegades Of soul and sense, life's two conditions, Each baffled with its own omniscience.
The men who labor to revise Our Bibles will, I hope, be wise,
And print it without foolish qualms
Instead of God in David's psalms: Noll had been more effective far Could he have shouted at Dunbar,
"Rise, Protoplasm !" No dourest Scot Had waited for another shot.

And yet I frankly must confess A secret unforgivingness,
And shudder at the saving chrism Whose best New Birth is Pessimism; My soul — I mean the bit of phosphorus That fills the place of what that was for us —
Can't bid its inward bores defiance
With the new nursery-tales of science.
What profits me, though doubt by doubt,
As nail by nail, be driven out,
When every new one, like the last,
Still holds my coffin-lid as fast ?
Would I find thought a moment's truce, Give me the young world's Mother Goose With life and joy in every limb, The chimney-corner tales of Grimm !

Our dear and admirable Huxley Cannot explain to me why ducks lay,
Or, rather, how into their eggs Blunder potential wings and legs
With will to move them and decide Whether in air or lymph to glide.
Who gets a hair's-breadth on by showing That Something Else set all agoing ?
Farther and farther back we push From Moses and his burning bush; Cry, "Art Thou there ?" Above, below,
All Nature mutters yes and no !
'T is the old answer: we're agreed Being from Being must proceed,

Life be Life's source. I might as well Obey the meeting-house's bell,
 And listen while Old Hundred pours Forth through the summer-opened doors, From old and young. I hear it yet, Swelled by bass-viol and clarinet,
 While the gray minister, with face Radiant, let loose his noble bass.
 If Heaven it reached not, yet its roll Waked all the echoes of the soul,
 And in it many a life found wings
 To soar away from sordid things.
 Church gone and singers too, the song Sings to me voiceless all night long,
 Till my soul beckons me afar, Glowing and trembling like a star.
 Will any scientific touch With my worn strings achieve as much?

I don't object, not I, to know My sires were monkeys, if 't was so;
 I touch my ear's collusive tip
 And own the poor-relationship.
 That apes of various shapes and sizes Contained their germs that all the prizes Of senate, pulpit, camp, and bar win May give us hopes that sweeten Darwin.
 Who knows but from our loins may spring (Long hence) some winged sweet-throated thing
 As much superior to us
 As we to Cynocephalus?

This is consoling, but, alas,
 It wipes no dimness from the glass Where I am flattening my poor nose, In hope to see beyond my toes.
 Though I accept my pedigree, Yet where, pray tell me, is the key That should unlock a private door To the Great Mystery, such no more?
 Each offers his, but one nor all Are much persuasive with the wall That rises now, as long ago, Between I wonder and I know, Nor will vouchsafe a pin-hole peep At the veiled Isis in its keep.
 Where is no door, I but produce My key to find it of no use.
 Yet better keep it, after all,
 Since Nature's economical,
 And who can tell but some fine day (If it occur to her) she may,
 In her good-will to you and me,
 Make door and lock to match the key?

TEMPORA MUTANTUR

This poem, written not long after Lowell's return from a journey in Europe and printed in The Nation, called out many angry retorts. The reader will find a vigorous letter by Lowell to Mr. Joel Benton, restating his position, in The Century for November, 1891, and reprinted in Letters II. 155-160.

THE world turns mild; democracy, they
 say,
 Rounds the sharp knobs of character away,
 And no great harm, unless at grave expense
 Of what needs edge of proof, the moral
 sense;
 For man or race is on the downward path Whose fibra grows too soft for honest wrath,
 And there's a subtle influence that springs
 From words to modify our sense of things.
 A plain distinction grows obscure of late:
 Man, if he will, may pardon; but the State Forgets its function if not fixed as Fate.
 So thought our sires: a hundred years
 ago,
 If men were knaves, why, people called them so,
 And crime could see the prison-portal bend
 Its brow severe at no long vista's end.
 In those days for plain things plain words would serve;
 Men had not learned to admire the graceful swerve Wherewith the Æsthetic Nature's genial mood
 Makes public duty slope to private good;
 No muddled conscience raised the saving
 doubt;
 A soldier proved unworthy was drummed
 out,
 An officer cashiered, a civil servant
 (No matter though his piety were fervent) Disgracefully dismissed, and through the land
 Each bore for life a stigma from the brand Whose far-heard hiss made others more averse
 To take the facile step from bad to worse.
 The Ten Commandments had a meaning
 then,
 Felt in their bones by least considerate
 men,

Because behind them Public Conscience
stood,
And without wincing made their mandates
good.

But now that "Statesmanship" is just a way
To dodge the primal curse and make it
pay,

Since office means a kind of patent drill
To force an entrance to the Nation's till,
And speculation something rather less Risky than if you spelt it with an s ; Now that to steal by law is grown an art, Whom rogues the sires, their milder sons call smart,

And "slightly irregular" dilutes the shame
Of what had once a somewhat blunter
name.

With generous curve we draw the moral
line:

Our swindlers are permitted to resign;
Their guilt is wrapped in deferential names,
And twenty sympathize for one that blames.
Add national disgrace to private crime, Confront mankind with brazen front sublime,

Steal but enough, the world is unsevere, — Tweed is a statesman, Fisk a financier; Invent a mine, and be — the Lord knows
what;

Secure, at any rate, with what you've got.

The public servant who has stolen or lied,
If called on, may resign with honest pride:
As unjust favor put him in, why doubt Disfavor as unjust has turned him out ?
Even if indicted, what is that but fudge
To him who counted in the elective judge ?
Whitewashed, he quits the politician's strife

At ease in mind, with pockets filled for
life:

His "lady" glares with gems whose vulgar blaze

The poor man through his heightened taxes pays,

Himself content if one huge Kohinoor Bulge from a shirt-front ampler than before,

But not too candid, lest it haply tend To rouse suspicion of the People's Friend.
A public meeting, treated at his cost, Resolves him back more virtue than he lost;

With character regilt he counts his gains;

What's gone was air, the solid good remains;

For what is good, except what friend and foe

Seem quite unanimous in thinking so,
The stocks and bonds which, in our age of loans,

Replace the stupid pagan's stocks and stones ?

With choker white, wherein no cynic eye Dares see idealized a hempen tie,
At parish-meetings he conducts in prayer,
And pays for missions to be sent elsewhere;

On 'Change respected, to his friends endeared,

Add but a Sunday-school-class, he's revered,

And his too early tomb will not be dumb
To point a moral for our youth to come.

IN THE HALF-WAY HOUSE

At twenty we fancied the blest Middle-Ages

A spirited cross of romantic and grand,
All templars and minstrels and ladies and pages,

And love and adventure in Outre-Mer
land;

But ah, where the youth dreamed of building a minster,

The man takes a pew and sits reckoning his pelf,

And the Graces wear fronts, the Muse thins to a spinster,

When Middle-Age stares from one's glass at oneself !

II

Do you twit me with days when I had an Ideal,

And saw the sear future through spectacles green ?

Then find me some charm, while I look round and see all

These fat friends of forty, shall keep me nineteen;

Should we go on pining for chaplets of laurel

Who've paid a perruquier for mending our thatch,

Or, our feet swathed in baize, with our Fate pick a quarrel, If, instead of cheap bay-leaves, she sent a dear scratch?

We called it our Eden, that small patentbaker,
When life was half moonshine and half Mary Jane;
But the butcher, the baker, the candlestick-maker! —
Did Adam have duns and slip down a back-lane?
Nay, after the Fall did the modiste keep coming With last styles of fig-leaf to Madam Eve's bower?
Did Jubal, or whoever taught the girls thrumming,
Make the patriarchs deaf at a dollar the hour?

As I think what I was, I sigh Desunt non- nulla!
Years are creditors Sheridan's self could not bilk;
But then, as my boy says, "What right has a fullah
To ask for the cream, when himself spilt the milk?"
Perhaps when you're older, my lad, you'll discover The secret with which Auld Lang Syne there is gilt, — Superstition of old man, maid, poet, and lover, —
That cream rises thickest on milk that was spilt!

We sailed for the moon, but, in sad disillusion, Snug under Point Comfort are glad to make fast,
And strive (sans our glasses) to make a confusion
'Twixt our rind of green cheese and the moon of the past.
Ah, Might-have-been, Could-have-been,
Would-have-been! rascals, He's a genius or fool whom ye cheat at two-score,

And the man whose boy-promise was likened to Pascal's Is thankful at forty they don't call him bore!

VI

With what fumes of fame was each confident pate full!
How rates of insurance should rise on the Charles!
And which of us now would not feel wisely grateful,
If his rhymes sold as fast as the Emblems of Quarles?
E'en if won, what's the good of Life's medals and prizes?
The rapture's in what never was or is
gone;
That we missed them makes Helens of plain Ann Elizys,
For the goose of To-day still is Memory's swan.

And yet who would change the old dream for new treasure?
Make not youth's sourest grapes the best wine of our life?
Need he reckon his date by the Almanac's measure
Who is twenty life-long in the eyes of his wife?
Ah, Fate, should I live to be nonagenarian, Let me still take Hope's frail I. O. U.'s upon trust,
Still talk of a trip to the Islands Macarian, And still climb the dream-tree for — ashes and dust!

AT THE BURNS CENTENNIAL

JANUARY, 1859

I

A HUNDRED years! they're quickly fled,
With all their joy and sorrow;
Their dead leaves shed upon the dead,
Their fresh ones sprung by morrow And still the patient seasons bring Their change of sun and shadow;
New birds still sing with every spring,
New violets spot the meadow.

II

A hundred years ! and Nature's powers
 No greater grown nor lessened !
 They saw no flowers more sweet than
 ours,
 No fairer new moon's crescent.
 Would she but treat us poets so,
 So from our winter free us,
 And set our slow old sap aflow
 To sprout in fresh ideas !

III

Alas, think I, what worth or parts Have brought me here competing,
 To speak what starts in myriad hearts With Burns's memory beating !
 Himself had loved a theme like this;
 Must I be its entomber ?
 No pen save his but 's sure to miss Its pathos or its humor.

IV

As I sat musing what to say,
 And how my verse to number,
 Some elf in play passed by that way,
 And sank my lids in slumber;
 And on my sleep a vision stole,
 Which I will put in metre,
 Of Burns's soul at the wicket-hole Where sits the good Saint Peter.

The saint, methought, had left his post That day to Holy Willie, Who swore, " Each ghost that comes shall toast
 In brunstane, will he, nill he;
 There's nane need hope with phrases fine
 Their score to wipe a sin frae;
 I'll chalk a sign, to save their tryin', —
 A hand  and 'Vide infra !' "

VI

Alas ! no soil 's too cold or dry
 For spiritual small potatoes, Scrimped natures, spry the trade to ply
 Of diaboli advocatus;
 Who lay bent pins in the penance-stool Where Mercy plumps a cushion, Who 've just one rule for knave and fool,
 It saves so much confusion !

So when Burns knocked, Will knit his brows,
 His window gap made scanter,
 And said, " Go rouse the other house;
 We lodge no Tam O'Shanter ! "
 " We lodge ! " laughed Burns. " Now well
 I see
 Death cannot kill old nature; No human flea but thinks that he May speak for his Creator !

VIII

" But, Willie, friend, don't turn me forth, Auld Cloutie needs no gauger;
 And if on earth I had small worth,
 You 've let in worse I 'se wager ! "
 " Na, nane has knockit at the yett But found me hard as whunstane;
 There 's chances yet your bread to get Wi Auld Nick, gaugin' brunstane."

IX

Meanwhile, the Unco' Guid had ta'en Their place to watch the process, Flattening in vain on many a pane Their disembodied noses.
 Remember, please, 't is all a dream;
 One can't control the fancies Through sleep that stream with wayward
 gleam,
 Like midnight's boreal dances.

Old Willie's tone grew sharp 's a knife:
 " In primis, I indite ye,
 For makin' strife wi' the water o' life,
 And preferrin' aqua vite ! "
 Then roared a voice with lusty din, Like a skipper's when 't is blowy,
 " If that 's a sin, I 'd ne'er got in,
 As sure as my name 's Noah ! "

Baulked, Willie turned another leaf, —
 " There 's many here have heard ye,
 To the pain and grief o' true belief, Say hard things o' the clergy ! " Then rang a clear tone over all, —
 " One plea for him allow me:
 I once heard call from o'er me, 'Saul, Why persecutest thou me ?' "

XII

To the next charge vexed Willie turned,
And, sighing, wiped his glasses:
"I'm much concerned to find ye yearned O'er-warmly tow'rd the lasses!"
Here David sighed; y poor Willie's face Lost all its self-possession:
"I leave this case to God's own grace; It baffles my discretion!"

XIII

Then sudden glory round me broke,
And low melodious surges Of wings whose stroke to splendor woke Creation's farthest verges;
A cross stretched, ladder-like, secure From earth to heaven's own portal, Whereby God's poor, with footing sure, Climbed up to peace immortal.

XIV

I heard a voice serene and low (With my heart I seemed to hear it,) Fall soft and slow as snow on snow, Like grace of the heavenly spirit;
As sweet as over new-born son
The croon of new-made mother,
The voice begun, "Sore tempted one!"
Then, pausing, sighed, "Our brother!"

"If not a sparrow fall, unless
The Father sees and knows it, Think! reck's He less his form express,
The soul his own deposit?
If only dear to Him the strong,
That never trip nor wander, Where were the throng whose morning
song Thrills his blue arches yonder?"

XVI

"Do souls alone clear-eyed, strong-kneed,
To Him true service render,
And they who need his hand to lead,
Find they his heart untender?
Through all your various ranks and fates
He opens doors to duty,
And he that waits there at your gates Was servant of his Beauty.

XVII

"The Earth must richer sap secrete, (Could ye in time but know it!)

Must juice concrete with fiercer heat, Ere she can make her poet;
Long generations go and come,
At last she bears a singer,
For ages dumb of senses numb
The compensation-bringer!

"Her cheaper broods in palaces
She raises under glasses,
But souls like these, heav'n's hostages,
Spring shelterless as grasses:
They share Earth's blessing and her bane,
The common sun and shower;
What makes your pain to them is gain,
Your weakness is their power.

XIX

"These larger hearts must feel the rolls Of stormier-waved temptation;
These star-wide souls between their poles Bear zones of tropic passion.
He loved much! — that is gospel good,
Howe'er the text you handle;
From common wood the cross was hewed,
By love turned priceless sandal.

XX

"If scant his service at the kirk, He paters heard and aves
From choirs that lurk in hedge and birk, From blackbird and from mavis;
The cowering mouse, poor unroofed thing In him found Mercy's angel;
The daisy's ring brought every spring
To him Love's fresh evangel!

"Not he the threatening texts who deals Is highest 'mong the preachers,
But he who feels the woes and weals
Of all God's wandering creatures.
He doth good work whose heart can find
The spirit 'neath the letter;
Who makes his kind of happier mind, Leaves wiser men and better.

"They make Religion be abhorred Who round with darkness gulf her,
And think no word can please the Lord Unless it smell of sulphur.
Dear Poet-heart, that childlike guessed The Father's loving kindness.

Come now to rest! Thou didst his
hest,
If haply 't was in blindness!"

XXIII

Then leapt heaven's portals wide apart,
And at their golden thunder
With sudden start I woke, my heart Still throbbing-full of wonder.
"Father," I said, "'t is known to Thee How Thou thy Saints preparest;
But this I see, — Saint Charity Is still the first and fairest!"

XXIV

Dear Bard and Brother! let who may Against thy faults be railing, (Though far, I pray, from us be they That never had a failing!)
One toast I'll give, and that not long,
Which thou wouldst pledge if present, —
To him whose song, in nature strong, Makes man of prince and peasant!

IN AN ALBUM

THE misspelt scrawl, upon the wall
By some Pompeian idler traced, In ashes packed (ironic fact!)
Lies eighteen centuries uneffaced, While many a page of bard and sage,
Deemed once mankind's immortal gain, Lost from Time's ark, leaves no more mark Than a keel's furrow through the main.

O Chance and Change! our buzz's range Is scarcely wider than a fly's;
Then let us play at fame to-day,
To-morrow be unknown and wise;
And while the fair beg locks of hair,
And autographs, and Lord knows what, Quick! let us scratch our moment's match,
Make our brief blaze, and be forgot!

Too pressed to wait, upon her slate Fame writes a name or two in doubt;
Scarce written, these no longer please,
And her own finger rubs them out:
It may ensue, fair girl, that you Years hence this yellowing leaf may see,
And put to task, your memory ask In vain, "This Lowell, who was he?"

AT THE COMMENCEMENT DINNER, 1866IN ACKNOWLEDGING A TOAST TO THE SMITH PROFESSOR

I RISE, Mr. Chairman, as both of us know, With the impromptu I promised you three weeks ago,
Dragged up to my doom by your might and my mane,
To do what I vowed I'd do never again;
And I feel like your good honest dough when posset
By a stirring, impertinent devil of yeast.
"You must rise," says the leaven. "I can't," says the dough;
"Just examine my bumps, and you'll see it's no go."
"But you must," the tormentor insists,
"'t is all right;
You must rise when I bid you, and, what's more, be light."

'T is a dreadful oppression, this making men speak
What they're sure to be sorry for all the next week;
Some poor stick requesting, like Aaron's, to bud
Into eloquence, pathos, or wit in cold blood, As if the dull brain that you vented your spite on Could be got, like an ox, by mere poking, to Brighton.

They say it is wholesome to rise with the
sun,
And I dare say it may be if not over-
done;
(I think it was Thomson who made the remark
'T was an excellent thing in its way — for a lark;)
But to rise after dinner and look down the meeting
On a distant (as Gray calls it) prospect of Eating,
With a stomach half full and a cerebrum hollow
As the tortoise-shell ere it was strung for Apollo,
Under contract to raise anerithmon gelasma

With rhymes so hard hunted they gasp with the asthma,
And jokes not much younger than Jethro's phylacteries,
Is something I leave you yourselves to characterize.

I've a notion, I think, of a good dinner speech,
Tripping light as a sandpiper over the beach,
Swerving this way and that as the wave of the moment

Washes out its slight trace with a dash of whim's foam on 't,
And leaving on memory's rim just a sense Something graceful had gone by, a live present tense;

Not poetry, — no, not quite that, but as
good,
A kind of winged prose that could fly if it would.

It is a time for gay fancies as fleeting and vain

As the whisper of foam-beads on fresh-poured champagne, Since dinners were not perhaps strictly designed

For manœuvring the heavy dragoons of the
mind.

When I hear your set speeches that start with a pop,

Then wander and maunder, too feeble to stop,

With a vague apprehension from popular rumor

There used to be something by mortals called humor,

Beginning again when you thought they
were done,

Respectable, sensible, weighing a ton,
And as near to the present occasions of
men

As a Fast Day discourse of the year eighteen
ten,

— well, I sit still, and my sentiments smother,

For am I not also a bore and a brother?

And a toast, — what should that be? Light, airy, and free,

The foam-Aphrodite of Bacchus's sea,
A fancy-tinged bubble, an orb'd rainbow-
stain,

That floats for an instant 'twixt goblet and
brain;

A breath-born perfection, half something,
half naught,

And breaks if it strike the hard edge of a
thought.

Do you ask me to make such? Ah no, not so simple;

Ask Apelles to paint you the ravishing dimple

Whose shifting enchantment lights Venus's cheek,

And the artist will tell you his skill is to seek;

Once fix it, 't is naught, for the charm of it rises

From the sudden bopeeps of its smiling surprises.

I've tried to define it, but what mother's son

Could ever yet do what he knows should be done?

My rocket has burst, and I watch in the air Its fast-fading heart's-blood drop back in despair;

Yet one chance is left me, and, if I am quick,

I can palm off, before you suspect me, the stick.

Now since I've succeeded — I pray do not frown —

To Ticknor's and Longfellow's classical gown,

And profess four strange languages, which,
luckless elf,

I speak like a native (of Cambridge) myself,

Let me beg, Mr. President, leave to propose A sentiment treading on nobody's toes,

And give, in such ale as with pump-handles we brew,

Their memory who saved us from all talking Hebrew, —

A toast that to deluge with water is good, For in Scripture they come in just after the flood:

I give you the men but for whom, as I guess, sir,

Modern languages ne'er could have had a professor,

The builders of Babel, to whose zeal the lungs

Of the children of men owe confusion of tongues;
And a name all-embracing I couple there-
with,
Which is that of my founder — the late Mr. Smith.

AN ass munched thistles, while a nightingale
From passion's fountain flooded all the vale.
"Hee-haw!" cried he, "I hearken," as who knew
For such ear-largess humble thanks were due.
"Friend," said the winged pain, "in vain you bray,
Who tunnels bring, not cisterns, for my lay;
None but his peers the poet rightly hear, Nor mete we listeners by their length of ear."

V. EPIGRAMS

1.

IN life's small things be resolute and great To keep thy muscle trained: know'st thou when Fate Thy measure takes, or when she'll say to
thee,
"I find thee worthy; do this deed for me"?

2.

A camel-driver, angry with his drudge, Beating him, called him hunchback; to the hind Thus spake a dervish: "Friend, the Eternal Judge
Dooms not his work, but ours, the crooked
mind."

3.

Swiftly the politic goes: is it dark? — he borrows a lantern;
Slowly the statesman and sure, guiding his steps by the stars.

4.

"Where lies the capital, pilgrim, seat of who governs the Faithful?"
"Thither my footsteps are bent: it is where Saadi is lodged."

LAST POEMS

THE following note was prefixed to this group when published in 1895: "This little volume contains those of the poems which Mr.
Lowell wrote in his last years which, I believe, he might have wished to preserve. Three of them were published before his death. Of the rest, two appear here for the first time.

C. E. N."

HOW I CONSULTED THE ORACLE OF THE GOLDFISHES

WHAT know we of the world immense Beyond the narrow ring of sense?
What should we know, who lounge about The house we dwell in, nor find out, Masked by a wall, the secret cell
Where the soul's priests in hiding dwell?
The winding stair that steals aloof
To chapel-mysteries 'neath the roof?

It lies about us, yet as far From sense sequestered as a star
New launched its wake of fire to trace In secreties of unprobed space, Whose beacon's lightning-pinioned spears Might earthward haste a thousand years Nor reach it. So remote seems this World undiscovered, yet it is A neighbor near and dumb as death,
So near, we seem to feel the breath

Of its hushed habitants as they Pass us unchallenged, night and day.

Never could mortal ear nor eye
By sound or sign suspect them nigh, Yet why may not some subtler sense Than those poor two give evidence?
Transfuse the ferment of their being Into our own, past hearing, seeing,
As men, if once attempered so,
Far off each other's thought can know?
As horses with an instant thrill Measure their rider's strength of will?
Comes not to all some glimpse that brings Strange sense of sense-escaping things?
Wraiths some transfigured nerve divines?
Approaches, premonitions, signs, Voices of Ariel that die out In the dim No Man's Land of Doubt?

Are these Night's dusky birds? Are these Phantasmas of the silences

Outer or inner? — rude heirlooms
 From grovellers in the cavern-glooms, Who in unhuman Nature saw Misshapen foes with tusk and claw,
 And with those night-fears brute and blind Peopled the chaos of their mind,
 Which, in ungovernable hours,
 Still make their bestial lair in ours?

Were they, or were they not? Yes;
 no;

Uncalled they come, unbid they go,
 And leave us fumbling in a doubt Whether within us or without The spell of this illusion be That witches us to hear and see As in a twi-life what it will,
 And hath such wonder-working skill That what we deemed most solid-wrought Turns a mere figment of our thought,
 Which when we grasp at in despair
 Our fingers find vain semblance there,
 For Psyche seeks a corner-stone Firmer than aught to matter known.

Is it illusion? Dream-stuff? Show Made of the wish to have it so?
 'T were something, even though this were
 all:

So the poor prisoner, on his wall Long gazing, from the chance designs Of crack, mould, weather-stain, refines
 New and new pictures without cease, Landscape, or saint, or altar-piece:
 But these are Fancy's common brood Hatched in the nest of solitude;
 This is Dame Wish's hourly trade,
 By our rude sires a goddess made.
 Could longing, though its heart broke, give Trances in which we chiefly live?
 Moments that darken all beside,
 Tearfully radiant as a bride?
 Beckonings of bright escape, of wings Purchased with loss of baser things?
 Blithe trancies from all control Of Hylë, outings of the soul?

The worm, by trustful instinct led,
 Draws from its womb a slender thread,
 And drops, confiding that the breeze Will waft it to unpastured trees:
 So the brain spins itself, and so Swings boldly off in hope to blow Across some tree of knowledge, fair

With fruitage new, none else shall share:
 Sated with wavering in the Void,
 It backward climbs, so best employed,
 And, where no proof is nor can be,
 Seeks refuge with Analogy; Truth's soft half-sister, she may tell Where lurks, seld-sought, the other's well:
 With metaphysic midges sore,
 My Thought seeks comfort at her door,
 And, at her feet a suppliant cast, Evokes a spectre of the past.
 Not such as shook the knees of Saul,
 But winsome, golden-gay withal, —
 Two fishes in a globe of glass,
 That pass, and waver, and re-pass,
 And lighten that way, and then this,
 Silent as meditation is.

With a half-humorous smile I see In this their aimless industry,
 These errands nowhere and returns Grave as a pair of funeral urns, This ever-seek and never-find,
 A mocking image of my mind.
 But not for this I bade you climb Up from the darkening deeps of time:
 Help me to tame these wild day-mares
 That sudden on me unawares.
 Fish, do your duty, as did they
 Of the Black Island far away
 In life's safe places, — far as you From all that now I see or do.
 You come, embodied flames, as when I knew you first, nor yet knew men;
 Your gold renews my golden days,
 Your splendor all my loss repays.

'T is more than sixty years ago Since first I watched your to-and-fro;
 Two generations come and gone
 From silence to oblivion,
 With all their noisy strife and stress Lulled in the grave's forgivingness, While you unquenchably survive Immortal, almost more alive.
 I watched you then a curious boy,
 Who in your beauty found full joy,
 And, by no problem-debts distressed, Sate at life's board a welcome guest.
 You were my sister's pets, not mine;
 But Property's dividing line
 No hint of dispossession drew On any map my simplese knew;
 O golden age, not yet dethroned!
 What made me happy, that I owned;

ou were my wonders, you my Lars, darkling days my sun and stars, and over you entranced I hung, too young to know that I was young.
 amazing with still unsated bliss, my fancies took some shape like this:
 I have my world, and so have you, tiny universe for two,
 bubble by the artist blown,
 scarcely more fragile than our own, here you have all a whale could wish, happy as Eden's primal fish.
 Anna is dropt you thrice a day from some kind heaven not far away, and still you snatch its softening crumbs, or, more than we, think whence it comes.
 No toil seems yours but to explore your cloistered realm from shore to shore; sometimes you trace its limits round, sometimes its limpid depths you sound, or hover motionless midway, like gold-red clouds at set of day; belong you whirl with sudden whim off to your globe's most distant rim, there, greated by the watery lens, methinks no dragon of the fens dashed huger scales against the sky, housed by Sir Bevis or Sir Guy, and the one eye that meets my view, endless and strangely largening, too, like that of conscience in the dark, seems to make me its single mark.
 What a benignant lot is yours that have an own All-out-of-doors, no words to spell, no sums to do, no Nepos and no parlyvoo!
 How happy you without a thought of such cross things as Must and Ought,— too the happiest of boys to see and share your golden joys!"

thought the child, in simpler words, of you his funny flocks and herds;
 now, an old man, I bid you rise from the fine sight behind the eyes, and, lo, you float and flash again in the dark cistern of my brain.
 But o'er your visioned flames I brood with other mien, in other mood;
 you are no longer there to please, but to stir argument, and tease my thought with all the ghostly shapes from which no moody man escapes.

Diminished creature, I no more Find Fairyland beside my door,
 But for each moment's pleasure pay
 With the quart d'heure of Rabelais!

I watch you in your crystal sphere,
 And wonder if you see and hear Those shapes and sounds that stir the wide Conjecture of the world outside;
 In your pent lives, as we in ours,
 Have you surmises dim of powers,
 Of presences obscurely shown,
 Of lives a riddle to your own,
 Just on the senses' outer verge,
 Where sense-nerves into soul-nerves merge,
 Where we conspire our own deceit Confederate in deft Fancy's feat,
 And the fooled brain befools the eyes
 With pageants woven of its own lies?
 But are they lies? Why more than those Phantoms that startle your repose, Half seen, half heard, then flit away,
 And leave you your prose-bounded day?

The things ye see as shadows I Know to be substance; tell me why My visions, like those haunting you, May not be as substantial too.
 Alas, who ever answer heard From fish, and dream-fish too? Absurd!
 Your consciousness I half divine,
 But you are wholly deaf to mine.
 Go, I dismiss you; ye have done
 All that ye could; our silk is spun:
 Dive back into the deep of dreams,
 Where what is real is what seems!
 Yet I shall fancy till my grave Your lives to mine a lesson gave;
 If lesson none, an image, then,
 Impeaching self-conceit in men Who put their confidence alone In what they call the Seen and Known.
 How seen? How known? As through your glass

Our wavering apparitions pass Perplexingly, then subtly wrought
 To some quite other thing by thought.
 Here shall my resolution be:
 The shadow of the mystery Is haply wholesomer for eyes That cheat us to be overwise,
 And I am happy in my right To love God's darkness as His light.

TURNER'S OLD TÊMÉRAIRE

UNDER A FIGURE SYMBOLIZING THE CHURCH

THOU wast the fairest of all man-made
things;
The breath of heaven bore up thy cloudy
wings,
And, patient in their triple rank,
The thunders crouched about thy flank, Their black lips silent with the doom of kings.

The storm-wind loved to rock him in thy pines,
And swell thy vans with breath of great designs;
Long-wildered pilgrims of the main
By thee relaid their course again, Whose prow was guided by celestial signs.

How didst thou trample on tumultuous
seas,
Or, like some basking sea-beast stretched at ease,
Let the bull-fronted surges glide Caressingly along thy side, Like glad hounds leaping by the hunts-man's knees!

Heroic feet, with fire of genius shod,
In battle's ecstasy thy deck have trod, While from their touch a fulgor ran Through plank and spar, from man to
man,
Welding thee to a thunderbolt of God.

Now a black demon, belching fire and steam, Drags thee away, a pale, dismantled
dream,
And all thy desecrated bulk Must landlocked lie, a helpless hulk,
To gather weeds in the regardless stream.

Woe's me, from Ocean's sky-horizoned
air
To this! Better, the flame-cross still afire,
Shot-shattered to have met thy doom Where thy last lightnings cheered the
gloom,
Than here be safe in dangerless despair.

Thy drooping symbol to the flagsta-
clings,
Thy rudder soothes the tide to lazy rings, Thy thunders now but birthdays greet,
Thy planks forget the martyrs' feet, Thy masts what challenges the sea-wind brings.

Thou a mere hospital, where humawrecks,
Like winter-flies, crawl those renownedecks,
Ne'er trodden save by captive foes,
And wonted sternly to impose God's will and thine on bowed imperinecks!

Shall nevermore, engendered of thy fame
A new sea-eagle heir thy conqueror name
And with commissioned talons wrench From thy supplanter's grimy clench His sheath of steel, his wings of smoland flame?

This shall the pleased eyes of our childre-
see;
For this the stars of God long even-
we;
Earth listens for his wings; the Fates Expectant lean; Faith cross-propt waits, And the tired waves of Thought's insurgent sea.

ST. MICHAEL THE WEIGHER

STOOD the tall Archangel weighing All man's dreaming, doing, saying,
All the failure and the pain,
All the triumph and the gain,
In the unimagined years,
Full of hopes, more full of tears,
Since old Adam's hopeless eyes Backward searched for Paradise, And, instead, the flame-blade saw Of inexorable Law.

Waking, I beheld him there,
With his fire-gold, flickering hair,
In his blinding armor stand,
And the scales were in his hand:
Mighty were they, and full well They could poise both heaven and hel-
"Angel," asked I humbly then,
"Weighest thou the souls of men?"

That thine office is, I know."
 "Nay," he answered me, "not so;
 But I weigh the hope of Man Since the power of choice began,
 In the world, of good or ill."
 Then I waited and was still.

In one scale I saw him place
 All the glories of our race, Cups that lit Belshazzar's feast, Gems, the lightning of the East, Kublai's sceptre, Cæsar's sword,
 Many a poet's golden word,
 Many a skill of science, vain
 To make men as gods again.

In the other scale he threw Things regardless, outcast, few,
 Martyr-ash, arena sand,
 Of St. Francis' cord a strand, Beechen cups of men whose need Fasted that the poor might feed, Disillusions and despairs
 Of young saints with grief-grayed hairs, Broken hearts that brake for Man.

Marvel through my pulses ran Seeing then the beam divine Swiftly on this hand decline, While Earth's splendor and renown Mounted light as thistle-down.

A VALENTINE

LET others wonder what fair face Upon their path shall shine,
 And, fancying half, half hoping, trace Some maiden shape of tenderest grace
 To be their Valentine.

Let other hearts with tremor sweet One secret wish enshrine
 That Fate may lead their happy feet Fair Julia in the lane to meet
 To be their Valentine.

But I, far happier, am secure;
 I know the eyes benign,
 The face more beautiful and pure Than Fancy's fairest portraiture That mark my Valentine.

More than when first I singled thee,
 This only prayer is mine,—

That, in the years I yet shall see,
 As, darling, in the past, thou 'lt be My happy Valentine.

AN APRIL BIRTHDAY — AT SEA

ON this wild waste, where never blossom
 came,
 Save the white wind-flower in the billow's cap,
 Or those pale disks of momentary flame, Loose petals dropped from Dian's careless lap,
 What far fetched influence all my fancy fills,
 With singing birds and dancing daffodils?

Why, 't is her day whom jocund April
 brought,
 And who brings April with her in her
 eyes;
 It is her vision lights my lonely thought, Even as a rose that opes its hushed surprise
 In sick men's chambers, with its glowing breath Plants Summer at the glacier edge of Death.

Gray sky, sea gray as mossy stones on graves;—
 Anon comes April in her jollity;
 And dancing down the bleak vales 'tween the waves,
 Makes them green glades for all her flowers and me.
 The gulls turn thrushes, charmed are sea and sky
 By magic of my thought, and know not why.

Ah, but I know, for never April's shine, Nor passion gust of rain, nor all her flowers
 Scattered in haste, were seen so sudden fine
 As she in various mood, on whom the powers
 Of happiest stars in fair conjunction smiled
 To bless the birth of April's darling child.

LOVE AND THOUGHT

WHAT hath Love with Thought to do ?
Still at variance are the two.
Love is sudden, Love is rash, Love is like the levin flash, Comes as swift, as swiftly goes,
And his mark as surely knows.

Thought is lumpish, Thought is slow, Weighing long 'tween yes and no;
When dear Love is dead and gone, Thought comes creeping in anon,
And, in his deserted nest,
Sits to hold the crowner's quest.

Since we love, what need to think ?
Happiness stands on a brink Whence too easy 't is to fall Whither 's no return at all;
Have a care, half-hearted lover, Thought would only push her over !

THE NOBLER LOVER

If he be a nobler lover, take him !
You in you I seek, and not myself; Love with men 's what women choose to make him,
Seraph strong to soar, or fawn-eyed elf:
All I am or can, your beauty gave it, Lifting me a moment nigh to you,
And my bit of heaven, I fain would save
it—
Mine I thought it was, I never knew.

What you take of me is yours to serve
you,

All I give, you gave to me before;
Let him win you ! If I but deserve you,
I keep all you grant to him and more:
You shall make me dare what others dare
not,

You shall keep my nature pure as snow,
And a light from you that others share
not

Shall transfigure me where'er I go.

Let me be your thrall ! However lowly Be the bondsman's service I can do, Loyalty shall make it high and holy;
Naught can be unworthy, done for you.

Men shall say, " A lover of this fashion Such an icy mistress well beseems." Women say, " Could we deserve such passion,
We might be the marvel that he dreams."

ON HEARING A SONATA OF BEETHOVEN'S PLAYED IN THE NEXT ROOM

UNSEEN Musician, thou art sure to please, For those same notes in happier days I heard

Poured by dear hands that long have never stirred

Yet now again for me delight the keys:
Ah me, to strong illusions such as these What are Life's solid things ? The walls that gird

Our senses, lo, a casual scent or word Levels, and 't is the soul that hears and sees !

Play on, dear girl, and many be the years Ere some grayhaired survivor sit like
me

And, for thy largess pay a meed of tears Unto another who, beyond the sea Of Time and Change, perhaps not sadly hears

A music in this verse undreamed by thee !

VERSES

INTENDED TO GO WITH A POSSET DISH TO MY DEAR LITTLE GODDAUGHTER, 1882

It is of interest to know that the goddaughter was a child of Leslie Stephen.

IN good old times, which means, you know,
The time men wasted long ago,
And we must blame our brains or mood
If that we squander seems less good,
In those blest days when wish was act
And fancy dreamed itself to fact, Godfathers used to fill with guineas
The cups they gave their pickaninnies, Performing functions at the chrism Not mentioned in the Catechism.
No millionaire, poor I fill up With wishes my more modest cup, Though had I Amalthea's horn

It should be hers the newly born.
 Nay, shudder not! I should bestow it So brimming full she could n't blow it.
 Wishes are n't horses: true, but still There are worse roadsters than goodwill.
 And so I wish my darling health,
 And just to round my couplet, wealth,
 With faith enough to bridge the chasm Twixt Genesis and Protoplasm,
 And bear her o'er life's current vext
 From this world to a better next,
 Where the full glow of God puts out Poor reason's farthing candle, Doubt.
 've wished her healthy, wealthy, wise,
 What more can godfather devise?
 But since there's room for countless wishes
 In these old-fashioned posset dishes, I'll wish her from my plenteous store
 Of those commodities two more,
 Her father's wit, veined through and through
 With tenderness that Watts (but whew!
 Celia's aflame, I mean no stricture On his Sir Josh-unpassing picture) — I wish her next, and 't is the soul Of all I've dropt into the bowl,
 Her mother's beauty — nay, but two So fair at once would never do.
 Then let her but the half possess, Troy was besieged ten years for less.
 Now if there's any truth in Darwin,
 And we from what was, all we are win,
 I simply wish the child to be A sample of Heredity, Enjoying to the full extent Life's best, the Unearned Increment Which Fate her Godfather to flout Gave him in legacies of gout.
 Thus, then, the cup is duly filled;
 Walk steady, dear, lest all be spilled.

ON A BUST OF GENERAL GRANT

"This poem is the last, so far as is known, written by Mr. Lowell. He laid it aside for revision, leaving two of the verses incomplete.
 In a pencilled fragment of the poem the first verse appears as follows: —

: Strong, simple, silent, such are Nature's Laws."

In the final copy, from which the poem is now printed, the verse originally stood: —

'Strong, steadfast, silent are the laws.'

but 'steadfast' is crossed out, and 'simple' written above.

"A similar change is made in the ninth verse of the stanza, where 'simpleness' is substituted for 'steadfastness.' The change from 'steadfast' to 'simple' was not made, probably through oversight, in the first verse of the second stanza. There is nothing to indicate what epithet Mr. Lowell would have chosen to complete the first verse of the third stanza.
 C. E. N."

STRONG, simple, silent are the [steadfast]
 laws

That sway this universe, of none withstood, Unconscious of man's outcries or applause,
 Or what man deems his evil or his good;
 And when the Fates ally them with a cause That wallows in the sea-trough and seems
 lost,

Drifting in danger of the reefs and sands Of shallow counsels, this way, that way,
 tost,

Strength, silence, simpleness, of these three strands

They twist the cable shall the world hold fast

To where its anchors clutch the bed-rock of the Past.

Strong, simple, silent, therefore such was
 he

Who helped us in our need; the eternal law
 That who can saddle Opportunity

Is God's elect, though many a mortal flaw May minish him in eyes that closely see,

Was verified in him: what need we say Of one who made success where others failed,

Who, with no light save that of common
 day,

Struck hard, and still struck on till Fortune quailed,

But that (so sift the Norns) a desperate van

Ne'er fell at last to one who was not wholly
 man.

A face all prose where Time's [benignant] haze

Softens no raw edge yet, nor makes all fair
 With the beguiling light of vanished days;

This is relentless granite, bleak and bare, Roughhewn, and scornful of æsthetic phrase; Nothing is here for fancy, naught for

 dreams,

The Present's hard uncompromising light

Accents all vulgar outlines, flaws, and seams,

Yet vindicates some pristine natural right O'ertopping that hereditary grace

Which marks the gain or loss of some timefondled race.

So Marius looked, methinks, and Cromwell so,

Not in the purple born, to those they led Nearer for that and costlier to the foe, New moulders of old forms, by nature bred

The exhaustless life of manhood's seeds to show,

Let but the ploughshare of portentous
times

Strike deep enough to reach them where they lie:

Despair and danger are their fostering climes,

And their best sun bursts from a stormy
sky:

He was our man of men, nor would abate
The utmost due manhood could claim of fate.

Nothing ideal, a plain-people's man
At the first glance, a more deliberate ken Finds type primeval, theirs in whose veins

ran

Such blood as quelled the dragon in his den,

Made harmless fields, and better worlds began:

He came grim-silent, saw and did the deed
That was to do; in his master-grip

Our sword flashed joy; no skill of words could breed

Such sure conviction as that close-clamped lip;

He slew our dragon, nor, so seemed it,
knew

He had done more than any simplest man might do.

Yet did this man, war-tempered, stern as steel

Where steel opposed, prove soft in civil sway;

The hand hilt-hardened had lost tact to feel

The world's base coin, and glozing knaves made prey

Of him and of the entrusted Commonweal;
So Truth insists and will not be denied.

We turn our eyes away, and so will Fame,
As if in his last battle he had died

Victor for us and spotless of all blame, Doer of hopeless tasks which praters shirk,

One of those still plain men that do the world's rough work.

APPENDIX

I. INTRODUCTION TO THE SECOND SERIES OF BIGLOW PAPERS

[Lowell took occasion, when collecting in a book the several numbers of the second series of "Biglow Papers," which had appeared in the "Atlantic Monthly," to prefix an essay which not only gave a personal narrative of the origin of the whole scheme, but particularly dwelt upon the use in literature of the homely dialect in which the poems were couched. In this Cambridge Edition it has seemed expedient to print the Introduction here rather than in immediate connection with the poems themselves.]

THOUGH prefaces seem of late to have fallen under some reproach, they have at least this advantage, that they set us again on the feet of our personal consciousness and rescue us from the gregarious mock-modesty or cowardice of that w which shrills feebly throughout modern literature like the shrieking of mice in the walls of a house that has passed its prime. Having a few words to say to the many friends whom the "Biglow Papers" have won me, I shall accordingly take the freedom of the first person singular of the personal pronoun. Let each of the good-natured unknown who have cheered me by the written communication of their sympathy look upon this Introduction as a private letter to himself.

When, more than twenty years ago, I wrote the first of the series, I had no definite plan and no intention of ever writing another. Thinking the Mexican war, as I think it still, a national crime committed in behoof of Slavery, our common sin, and wishing to put the feeling of those who thought as I did in a way that would tell, I imagined to myself such an upcountry man as I had often seen at antislavery gatherings, capable of district-school English, but always instinctively falling back into the natural stronghold of his homely dialect when heated to the point of self-forgetfulness. When I began to carry out my conception and to write in my assumed character, I found myself in a strait between two perils. On the one hand, I was in danger of being carried beyond the limit of my own opinions, or at least of that temper with which every man should speak his mind in print, and on the other I feared the risk of seeming to vulgarize a deep and sacred conviction. I needed on occasion to rise above the level of mere patois, and for this purpose conceived the Rev. Mr. Wilbur, who should express the more cautious element of the New England character and its pedartry, as Mr.

Biglow should serve for its homely common-sense vivified and heated by conscience. The parson was to be the complement rather than the antithesis of his parishioner, and I felt or fancied a certain humorous element in the real identity of the two under a seeming incongruity. Mr. Wilbur's fondness for scraps of Latin, though drawn from the life, I adopted deliberately to heighten the contrast. Finding soon after that I needed some one as a mouth-piece of the mere drollery, for I conceive that true humor is never divorced from moral conviction, I invented Mr. Sawin for the clown of my little puppet-show. I meant to embody in him that half-conscious unmorality which I had noticed as the recoil in gross natures from a puritanism that still strove to keep in its creed the intense savor which had long gone out of its faith and life. In the three I thought I should find room enough to express, as it was my plan to do, the popular feeling and opinion of the time. For the names of two of my characters, since I have received some remonstrances from very worthy persons who happen to bear them, I would say that they were purely fortuitous, probably mere unconscious memories of sign-boards or directories. Mr. Sawin's sprang from the accident of a rhyme at the end of his first epistle, and I purposely christened him by the impossible surname of Birdofredum not more to stigmatize him as the incarnation of "Manifest Destiny," in other words, of national recklessness as to right and wrong, than to avoid the chance of wounding any private sensitiveness.

The success of my experiment soon began not only to astonish me, but to make me feel the responsibility of knowing that I held in my hand a weapon instead of the mere fencing-stick I had supposed. Very far from being a popular author under my own name, so far, indeed, as to be almost unread, I found the verses of my pseudonym copied everywhere; I saw them pinned up in workshops; I heard them quoted and their authorship debated; I once even, when rumor had at length caught up my name in one of its eddies, had the satisfaction of overhearing it demonstrated, in the pauses of a concert, that I was utterly incompetent to have written anything of the kind. I had read too much not to know the utter worthlessness of contemporary reputation, especially as regards satire, but I knew also that by giving a certain amount of influence it also had its worth, if that influence were used on the right side. I had learned, too, that the first requisite of good writing is to have an earnest and definite purpose, whether æsthetic or moral, and that even good writing, to please long, must have more than an average amount either of imagination or common-sense. The first of these falls to the lot of scarcely one in several generations; the last is within the reach of many in every one that passes; and of this an author may fairly hope to become in part the mouthpiece. If I put on the cap and bells and made myself one of the court-fools of King Demos, it was less to make his majesty laugh than to win a passage to his royal ears for certain serious things which I had deeply at heart. I say this because there is no imputation that could be more galling to any man's self-respect than that of being a mere jester. I endeavored, by generalizing my satire, to give it what value I could beyond the passing moment and the immediate application. How far I have succeeded I cannot tell, but I have had better luck than I ever looked for in seeing my verses survive to pass beyond their nonage.

In choosing the Yankee dialect, I did not act without forethought. It had long seemed to me that the great vice of American writing and speaking was a studied want of simplicity, that we were in danger of coming to look on our mother-tongue as a dead language, to be sought in the grammar and dictionary rather than in the heart, and that our only chance of escape was by seeking it at its living sources among those who were, as Scottow says of Major-General Gibbons, "divinely illiterate." President Lincoln, the only really great public man whom these latter days have seen, was great also in this, that he was master—witness his speech at Gettysburg—of a truly masculine English, classic, because it was of no special period, and level at once to the highest and lowest of his countrymen. I learn from the highest authority that his favorite reading was in Shakespeare and Milton, to which, of course, the Bible should be added. But whoever should read the debates in Congress might fancy himself present at a meeting of the city council of some city of Southern Gaul in the decline of the Empire, where barbarians with a Latin varnish emulated each other in being more than Ciceronian. Whether it be want of culture, for the highest outcome of that is simplicity, or for whatever reason, it is certain that very few American writers or speakers wield their native language with the directness, precision, and force that are common as the day in the mother country. We use it like Scotsmen, not as if it belonged to us, but as if we wished to prove that we belonged to it, by showing our intimacy with its written rather than with its spoken dialect. And yet all the while our popular idiom is racy with life and vigor and originality, buxsome (as Milton used the word) to our new occasions, and proves itself no mere graft by sending up new suckers from the old root in spite of us. It is only from its roots in the living generations of men that a language can be reinforced with fresh vigor for its needs; what may be called a literate dialect grows ever more and more pedantic and foreign, till it becomes at last as unfitting a vehicle for living thought as monkish Latin. That we should all be made to talk like books is the danger with which we are threatened by the Universal Schoolmaster, who does his best to enslave the minds and memories of his victims to what he esteems the best models of English composition, that is to say, to the writers whose style is faultily correct and has no blood-warmth in it. No language after it has faded into diction, none that cannot suck up the feeding juices secreted for it in the rich mother-earth of common folk, can bring forth a sound and lusty book. True vigor and heartiness of phrase do not pass from page to page, but from man to man, where the brain is kindled and the lips supplied by downright living interests and by passion in its very throes. Language is the soil of thought, and our own especially is a rich leaf-mould, the slow deposit of ages, the shed foliage of feeling, fancy, and imagination, which has suffered an earth-change, that the vocal forest, as Howell called it, may clothe itself anew with living green. There is death in the dictionary; and, where language is too strictly limited by convention, the ground for expression to grow in is limited also; and we get a potted literature. Chinese dwarfs instead of healthy trees.

But while the schoolmaster has been busy starching our language and smoothing it flat with the mangle of a supposed classical authority, the newspaper reporter has been doing even more harm by stretching and swelling it to suit his occasions. A dozen years ago I began a list, which I have added to from time to time, of some of the changes which may be fairly laid at his door. I give a few of them as showing their tendency, all the more dangerous that their effect, like that of some poisons, is insensibly cumulative, and that they are sure at last of effect among a people whose chief reading is the daily paper. I give in two columns the old style and its modern equivalent.

Old Style.	New Style.
Was hanged.	Was launched into eternity.
When the halter was put round his neck.	When the fatal noose was adjusted about the neck of the unfortunate victim of his own unbridled passions.
A great crowd came to see.	A vast concourse was assembled to witness.
Great fire.	Disastrous conflagration.
The fire spread.	The conflagration extended its devastating career.
House burned.	Edifice consumed.
The fire was got under.	The progress of the devouring element was arrested.
Man fell.	Individual was precipitated.
A horse and wagon ran against.	A valuable horse attached to a vehicle driven by J. S., in the employment of J. B., collided with.
The frightened horse.	The infuriated animal.
Sent for the doctor.	Called into requisition the services of the family physician.
The mayor of the city in a short speech welcomed.	The chief magistrate of the metropolis, in well-chosen and eloquent language, frequently interrupted by the plaudits of the surging multitude, officially tendered the hospitalities. I shall, with your permission, beg leave to offer some brief observations. Commenced his rejoinder. Tendered him a banquet. One of those omnipresent characters who, as if in pursuance of some previous arrangement, are certain to be encountered in the vicinity when an accident occurs, ventured the suggestion.

I shall say a few words.
Began his answer.
Asked him to dine.
A bystander advised.

He died.

He deceased, he passed out of existence, his spirit quitted its earthly habitation, winged its way to eternity, shook off its burden, etc.

In one sense this is nothing new. The school of Pope in verse ended by wire-drawing its phrase to such thinness that it could bear no weight of meaning whatever. Nor is fine writing by any means confined to America. All writers without imagination fall into it of necessity whenever they attempt the figurative. I take two examples from Mr. Merivale's "History of the Romans under the Empire," which, indeed, is full of such. "The last years of the age familiarly styled the Augustan were singularly barren of the literary glories from which its celebrity was chiefly derived. One by one the stars in its firmament had been lost to the world; Virgil and Horace, etc., had long since died; the charm which the imagination of Livy had thrown over the earlier annals of Rome had ceased to shine on the details of almost contemporary history; and if the flood of his eloquence still continued flowing, we can hardly suppose that the stream was as rapid, as fresh, and as clear as ever." I will not waste time in criticising the bad English or the mixture of metaphor in these sentences, but will simply cite another from the same author which is even worse. "The shadowy phantom of the Republic continued to flit before the eyes of the Cæsar. There was still, he apprehended, a germ of sentiment existing, on which a scion of his own house, or even a stranger, might boldly throw himself and raise the standard of patrician independence." Now a ghost may haunt a murderer, but hardly, I should think, to scare him with the threat of taking a new lease of its old tenement. And fancy the scion of a house in the act of throwing itself upon a germ of sentiment to raise a standard! I am glad, since we have so much in the same kind to answer for, that this bit of horticultural rhetoric is from beyond sea. I would not be supposed to condemn truly imaginative prose. There is a simplicity of splendor, no less than of plainness, and prose would be poor indeed if it could not find a tongue for that meaning of the mind which is behind the meaning of the words. It has sometimes seemed to me that in England there was a growing tendency to curtail language into a mere convenience, and to defecate it of all emotion as thoroughly as algebraic signs. This has arisen, no doubt, in part from that healthy national contempt of humbug which is characteristic of Englishmen, in part from that sensitiveness to the ludicrous which makes them so shy of expressing feeling, but in part also, it is to be feared, from a growing distrust, one might almost say hatred, of whatever is super-material. There is something sad in the scorn with which their journalists treat the notion of there being such a thing as a national ideal, seeming utterly to have forgotten that even in the affairs of this world the imagination is as much matter-of-fact as the understanding. If we were to trust the impression made on us by some of the cleverest and most characteristic of their periodical literature, we should think England hopelessly stranded on the good-humored cynicism of well-to-do middle-age, and should fancy it an enchanted nation, doomed to sit forever with its feet under the mahogany in that after-dinner mood which follows conscientious repletion, and which it is ill-manners to disturb with any topics more exciting than the quality of the wines. But there are already symptoms that a large class of Englishmen are getting weary of the dominion of consols and divine common-sense, and to believe that eternal three per cent is not the chief end of man, nor the highest and only kind of interest to which the powers and opportunities of England are entitled.

The quality of exaggeration has often been remarked on as typical of American character, and especially of American humor. In Dr. Petri's Gedringtes Handbuch der Fremdwörter, we are told that the word humbug is commonly used for the exaggerations of the North-Americans. To be sure, one would be tempted to think the dream of Columbus half fulfilled, and that Europe had found in the West a nearer way to Orientalism, at least in diction. But it seems to me that a great deal of what is set down as mere extravagance is more fitly to be called intensity and picturesqueness, symptoms of the imaginative faculty in full health and strength, though producing, as yet, only the raw and formless material in which poetry is to work. By and by, perhaps, the world will see it fashioned into poem and picture, and Europe, which will be hard pushed for originality ere long, may have to thank us for a new sensation. The French continue to find Shakespeare exaggerated because he treated English just as our country-folk do when they speak of a "steep price," or say that they "freeze to" a thing. The first postulate of an original literature is that a people should use their language instinctively and unconsciously, as if it were a lively part of their growth and personality, not as the mere torpid boon of education or inheritance. Even Burns contrived to write very poor verse and prose in English. Vulgarisms are often only poetry in the egg. The late Mr. Horace Mann, in one of his public addresses, commented at some length on the beauty and moral significance of the French phrase s'orienter, and called on his young friends to practise upon it in life. There was not a Yankee in his audience whose problem had not always been to find out what was about east, and to shape his course accordingly. This charm which a familiar expression gains by being commented, as it were, and set in a new light by a foreign language, is curious and instructive. I cannot help thinking that Mr. Matthew Arnold forgets this a little too much sometimes when he writes of the beauties of French style. It would not be hard to find in the works of French Academicians phrases as coarse as those he cites from Burke, only they are veiled by the unfamiliarity of the language. But, however this may be, it is certain that poets and peasants please us in the same way by translating words back again to their primal freshness, and infusing them with a delightful strangeness which is anything but alienation. What, for example, is Milton's "edge of battle" but a doing into English of the Latin acies? Was die Gans gedacht das der Schwan vollbracht, what the goose but thought, that the swan full brought (or, to de-Saxonize it a little, what the goose conceived, that the swan achieved), and it may well be that the life, invention, and vigor shown by our popular speech, and the freedom with which it is shaped to the instant want of those who use it, are of the best omen for our having a swan at last. The part I have taken on myself is that of the humbler bird.

But it is affirmed that there is something innately vulgar in the Yankee dialect. M. Sainte-Beuve says, with his usual neatness: "Je définis un patois une ancienne langue qui a eu des malheurs, ou encore une langue toute jeune et qui n'a pas fait fortune." The first part of his definition applies to a dialect like the Provençal, the last to the Tuscan before Dante had lifted it into a classic, and neither, it seems to me, will quite fit a patois, which is not properly a dialect, but rather certain archaisms, proverbial phrases, and modes of pronunciation, which maintain themselves among the uneducated side by side with the finished and universally accepted language. Norman French, for example, or Scotch down to the time of James VI., could hardly be called patois, while I should be half inclined to name the Yankee a lingo rather than a dialect. It has retained a few words now fallen into disuse in the mother country, like to tarry, to progress, fleshy, fall, and some others, it has changed the meaning of some, as in freshet; and it has clung to what I suspect to have been the broad Norman pronunciation of e (which Molière puts into the mouth of his rustics) in such words as sarvant, perfect, vartoo, and the like. It maintains something of the French sound of a also in words like chämber, dänger (though the latter had certainly begun to take its present sound so early as 1636, when I find it sometimes spelt dainger). But in general it may be said that nothing can be found in it which does not still survive in some one or other of the English provincial dialects. There is, perhaps, a single exception in the verb to sleeve. To sleeve silk means to divide or ravel out a thread of silk with the point of a needle till it becomes floss. (A.-S. slifan, to cleave = divide.) This, I think, explains the "sleeveless errand" in "Troilus and Cressida" so inadequately, sometimes so ludicrously darkened by the commentators. Is not a "sleeveless errand" one that cannot be unravelled, incomprehensible, and therefore bootless?

I am not speaking now of Americanisms properly so called, that is, of words or phrases which have grown into use here either through necessity, invention, or accident, such as a carry, a one-horse affair, a prairie, to vamose. Even these are fewer than is sometimes taken for granted. But I think some fair defence may be made against the charge of vulgarity. Properly speaking, vulgarity is in the thought, and not in the word or the way of pronouncing it. Modern French, the most polite of languages, is barbarously vulgar if compared with the Latin out of which it has been corrupted, or even with Italian. There is a wider gap, and one implying greater boorishness, between ministerium and métier, or sapiens and sachant, than between druv and drove or agin and against, which last is plainly an arrant superlative. Our rustic coverlid is nearer its French original than the diminutive coverlet, into which it has been ignorantly corrupted in politer speech. I obtained from three cultivated Englishmen at different times three diverse pronunciations of a single word, — cowcumber, cocumber, and cucumber. Of these the first, which is Yankee also, comes nearest to the nasality of concombre. Lord Ossory assures us that Voltaire saw the best society in England, and Voltaire tells his countrymen that handkerchief was pronounced hankercher. I find it so spelt in Hakluyt and elsewhere. This enormity the Yankee still persists in, and as there is always a reason for such deviations from the sound as represented by the spelling, may we not suspect two sources of derivation, and find an ancestor for kercher in couverture rather than in cou vrechef? And what greater phonetic vagary (which Dryden, by the way, called fegary) in our lingua rustica than this ker for couvre? I copy from the fly-leaves of my books, where I have noted them from time to time, a few examples of pronunciation and phrase which will show that the Yankee often has antiquity and very respectable literary authority on his side. My list might be largely increased by referring to glossaries, but to them every one can go for himself, and I have gathered enough for my purpose.

I will take first those cases in which something like the French sound has been preserved in certain single letters and diphthongs. And this opens a curious question as to how long this Gallicism maintained itself in England

Sometimes a divergence in pronunciation has given us two words with different meanings, as in genteel and jaunty, which I find coming in toward the close of the seventeenth century, and wavering between genteel and janteé. It is usual in America to drop the u in words ending in our — a very proper change recommended by Howell two centuries ago, and carried out by him so far as his printers would allow. This and the corresponding changes in musique, music, and the like, which he also advocated, show that in his time the French accent indicated by the superfluous letters (for French had once nearly as strong an accent as Italian) had gone out of use. There is plenty of French accent down to the end of Elizabeth's reign. In Daniel we have riches' and counsel', in Bishop Hall comet', chapêlain, in Donne pictures', virtue', presence', mortal', merit', hainous', giant', with many more, and Marston's satires are full of them. The two latter, however, are not to be relied on, as they may be suspected of Chaucerizing. Herrick writes baptime. The tendency to throw the accent backward began early. But the incongruities are perplexing, and perhaps mark the period of transition. In Warner's "Albion's England" we have creator' and crêature' side by side with the modern creator and creature. E'nvoy and e'nvying occur in Campion (1602), and yet envy' survived Milton. In some cases we have gone back again nearer to the French, as in rev enue for revenue. I had been so used to hearing imbecile pronounced with the accent on the first syllable, which is in accordance with the general tendency in such matters, that I was surprised to find imbec'ile in a verse of Wordsworth. The dictionaries all give it so. I asked a highly cultivated Englishman, and he declared for imbec'el'. In general it may be assumed that accent will finally settle on the syllable dictated by greater ease and therefore quickness of utterance. Blas'phemous, for example, is more rapidly pronounced than blasphem'ous, to which our Yankee clings, following in this the usage of many of the older poets. Amer'ican is easier than Ameri'can, and therefore the false quantity has carried the day, though the true one may be found in George Herbert, and even so late as Cowley.

To come back to the matter in hand. Our "uplandish man" retains the soft or thin sound of the u in some words, such as rule, truth (sometimes also pronounced trüth, not trooth), while he says noo for new, and gives to view and few so indescribable a mixture of the two sounds with a slight nasal tincture that it may be called the Yankee shibboleth. Voltaire says that the English pronounce true as if it rhymed with view, and this is the sound our rustics give to it. Spenser writes dew (dew) which can only be pronounced with the Yankee nasality. In rule the least sound of a precedes the u. I find reule in Pecoock's "Repressor." He probably pronounced it rayoolé, as the old French word from which it is derived was very likely to be sounded at first, with a reminiscence of its original regula. Tindal has rueler, and the Coventry Plays have preudent. In the "Parlyament of Byrdes" I find reule. As for noo, may it not claim some sanction in its derivation, whether from nouveau or neuf, the ancient sound of which may very well have been noof, as nearer novus? Beef would seem more like to have come from buffe than from bœuf, unless the two were mere varieties of spelling. The Saxon few may have caught enough from its French cousin peu to claim the benefit of the same doubt as to sound; and our slang phrase a few (as "I licked him a few") may well appeal to un peu for sense and authority. Nay, might not lick itself turn out to be the good old word lam in an English disguise, if the latter should claim descent as, perhaps, he fairly might, from the Latin lambere? The New England ferce for fierce, and perce for pierce (sometimes heard as fairce and pairce), are also Norman. For its antiquity I cite the rhyme of verse and pierce in Chapman and Donne, and in some commendatory verses by a Mr. Berkenhead before the poems of Francis Beaumont. Our pairlous for perilous is of the same kind, and is nearer Shakespeare's parlous than the modern pronunciation. One other Gallicism survives in our pronunciation. Perhaps I should rather call it a semi-Gallicism, for it is the result of a futile effort to reproduce a French sound with English lips. Thus for joint, employ, royal, we have juynt, emply, ryle, the last differing only from rile (roil) in a prolongation of the y sound. I find royal so pronounced in the "Mirror for Magistrates." In Walter de Bibbesworth I find solives Englished by gistes. This, it is true, may have been pronounced jeests, but the pronunciation jystes must have preceded the present spelling, which was no doubt adopted after the radical meaning was forgotten, as analogical with other words in oi. In the same way after Norman-French influence had softened the l out of would (we already find woud for veut in N. F. poems), should followed the example, and then an l was foisted into could, where it does not belong, to satisfy the logic of the eye, which has affected the pronunciation and even the spelling of English more than is commonly supposed. I meet with cyster for oyster as early as the fourteenth century. I find viage in Bishop Hall and Middleton the dramatist, bile for boil in Donne and Chrononhotontologos, line for loin in Hall, ryall and chyse (for choice), dystrye for destroy, in the Coventry Plays. In Chapman's "All Fools" is the misprint of employ for imply, fairly inferring an identity of sound in the last syllable. Indeed, this pronunciation was habitual till after Pope, and Rogers tells us that the elegant Gray said naïse for noise just as our rustics still do. Our cornish (which I find also in Herrick) remembers the French better than cornice does. While clinging more closely to the Anglo-Saxon in dropping the g from the end of the present participle, the Yankee now and then pleases himself with an experiment in French nasality in words ending in n. It is not, so far as my experience goes, very common, though it may formerly have been more so. Caping, for instance, I never heard save in jest, the habitual form being kepp'n. But at any rate it is no invention of ours. In that delightful old volume, "Ane Compendious Buke of Godly and Spirituall Songs," in which I know not whether the piety itself or the simplicity of its expression be more charming, I find burding, garding, and cousing, and in the State Trials uncerting used by a gentleman. I confess that I like the n better than the ng.

Of Yankee preterites I find risse and rize for rose in Beaumont and Fletcher, Middleton and Dryden, clim in Spenser, chees (chose) in Sir John Mandevill, give (gave) in the Coventry Plays, shet (shut) in Golding's Ovid, het in Chapman and in Weever's Epitaphs, thriv and smilt in Drayton, quit in Ben Jonson and Henry More, and pled in the Paston Letters, nay, even in the fastidious Landor. Rid for rode was anciently common. So likewise was see for saw, but I find it in no writer of authority (except Golding), unless Chaucer's seie and Gower's sigh were, as I am inclined to think, so sounded. Shew is used by Hector Boece, Giles Fletcher, Drummond of Hawthornden, and in the Paston Letters. Similar strong preterites, like snew, threw, and even mew, are not without example. I find sew for sewed in "Piers Ploughman." Indeed, the anomalies in English preterites are perplexing. We have probably transferred flow from flow (as the preterite of which I have heard it) to fly because we had another preterite in fled. Of weak preterites the Yankee retains growed, blowed, for which he has good authority, and less often knowed. His sat is merely a broad sounding of sat, no more inelegant than the common got for gat, which he further degrades into gut. When he says darst, he uses a form as old as Chaucer.

The Yankee has retained something of the long sound of the a in such words as axe, wax, pronouncing them exe, wex (shortened from aix, waix). He also says hev and hed (have, had) for have and had. In most cases he follows an Anglo-Saxon usage. In aix for axe he certainly does. I find wex and aishes (ashes) in Pecock, and exe in the Paston Letters. Golding rhymes wax with wexe and spells challenge chelenge. Chaucer wrote hendy. Dryden rhymes can with men, as Mr. Biglow would. Alexander Gill, Milton's teacher, in his "Logonomia" cites hez for hath as peculiar to Lincolnshire. I find hayth in Collier's "Bibliographical Account of Early English Literature" under the date 1584, and Lord Cromwell so wrote it. Sir Christopher Wren wrote belcony. Our fact is only the O. F. faict. Thaim for them was common in the sixteenth century. We have an example of the same thing in the double form of the verb thrash, thresh. While the New-Englander cannot be brought to say instead for instid (commonly 'stid where not the last word in a sentence), he changes the i into e in red for rid, tell for till, hender for hinder, rense for rins. I find red in the old interlude of "Ther-sytes," tell in a letter of Daborne to Henslowe, and also, I shudder to mention it, in a letter of the great Duchess of Marlborough, Atossa herself! It occurs twice in a single verse of the Chester Plays,

"Tell the day of dome, tell the beames blow."

From the word blow (in another sense) is formed blowth, which I heard again this summer after a long interval. Mr. Wright¹ explains it as meaning "a blossom." With us a single blossom is a blow, while blowth means the blossoming in general. A farmer would say that there was a good blowth on his fruit-trees. The word retreats farther inland and away from the railways, year by year. Wither rhymes hinder with slender, and Shakespeare and Lovelace have renched for rinsed. In "Gammer Gurton" and "Mirror for Magistrates" is sence for since; Marlborough's Duchess so writes it, and Donne rhymes since with Amiens and patience, Bishop Hall and Otway with pretence, Chapman with citizens, Dryden with providence. Indeed, why should not sithence take that form? Dryden's wife (an earl's daughter) has tell for till, Margaret, mother of Henry VII., writes seche for such, and our ef finds authority in the old form yeffe.

E sometimes takes the place of u, as jedge, tredge, bresh. I find tredge in the interlude of "Jack Jugler," bresh in a citation by Collier from "London Cries" of the middle of the seventeenth century, and resche for rush (fifteenth century) in the very valuable "Volume of Vocabularies" edited by Mr. Wright. Resce is one of the Anglo-Saxon forms of the word in Bosworth's A.-S. Dictionary. Golding has shet. The Yankee always shortens the u in the ending ture, making ventur, natur, pictur, and so on. This was common, also, among the educated of the last generation. I am inclined to think it may have been once universal, and I certainly think it more elegant than the vile vencher, naycher, pickcher, that have taken its place, sounding like the invention of a lexicographer to mitigate a sneeze. Nash in his "Pierce Penniless" has ventur, and so spells it, and I meet it also in Spenser, Drayton, Ben Jonson, Herrick, and Prior. Spenser has tort'rest, which can be contracted only from tortur and not from torcher. Quarles rhymes nature with creator, and Dryden with satire, which he doubtless pronounced according to its older form of satyr. Quarles has also torture and mortar. Mary Boleyn writes kreatur. I find pikter in Izaak Walton's autograph will.

I shall now give some examples which cannot so easily be ranked under any special head. Gill charges the Eastern counties with kiver for cover, and ta for to. The Yankee pronounces both too and to like ta (like the tau in touch) where they are not emphatic. When they are, both become tu. In old spelling, to is the common (and indeed correct) form of too, which is only to with the sense of in addition. I suspect that the sound of our too has caught something from the French tout, and it is possible that the old too too is not a reduplication, but a reminiscence of the feminine form of the same word (toute) as anciently pronounced, with the e not yet silenced. Gill gives a Northern origin to geoun for gown and wound for wound (vulnus). Lovelace has waund, but there is something too dreadful in suspecting Spenser (who borealised in his pastorals) of having ever been guilty of geoun! And yet some delicate mouths even now are careful to observe the Hibernicism of ge-ard for guard, and *ge-ur*l for girl. Sir Philip Sidney (credite posteri!) wrote furr for far. I would hardly have believed it had I not seen it in fac-simile. As some consolation, I find furder in Lord Bacon and Donne, and Wither rhymes far with cur. The Yankee, who omits the final d in many words, as do the Scotch, makes up for it by adding one in geound. The purist does not feel the loss of the d sensibly in lawn and yon, from the former of which it has dropped again after a wrongful adoption (retained in laundry), while it properly belongs to the latter. But what shall we make of git, yit, and yis? I find yis and git in Warner's "Albion's England," yet rhyming with wit, admit, and fit in Donne, with wit in the "Revenger's Tragedy," Beaumont, and Suckling, with writ in Dryden, and latest of all with wit in Sir Hanbury Williams. Prior rhymes fitting and begetting. Worse is to come. Among others, Donne rhymes again with sin, and Quarles repeatedly with in. Ben for been, of which our dear Whittier is so fond, has the authority of Sackville, "Gammer Gurton" (the work of a tishop), Chapman, Dryden, and many more, though bin seems to have been the common form. Whittier's accenting the first syllable of rom'ance finds an accomplice in Drayton among others, and, though manifestly wrong, is analogous with Rom'ans. Of other Yankeeisms, whether of form or pronunciation, which I have met with I add a few at random. Pecock writes sowdiers (sogers, soudoyers), and Chapman and Gill sodder. This absorption of the l is common in various dialects, especially in the Scottish. Pecock writes also biyende, and the authors of "Jack Jugler" and "Gammer Gurton" yender. The Yankee includes "yon" in the same category, and says "hither an' yen," or "to and fro." (Cf. German jenseits.) Pecock and plenty more have wrastle. Tindal has agynste, gretter, shett, ondone, deby'te, and cace. "Jack Jugler" has scacely (which I have often heard, though skurce is the common form), and Donne and Dryden make great rhyme with set. In the inscription on Caxton's tomb I find ynd for end, which the Yankee more often makes eend, still using familiarly the old phrase "right anend" for "continuously." His "stret (straight) along" in the same sense, which I thought peculiar to him, I find in Pecock. Tindal's deby'te for deputy is so perfectly Yankee that I could almost fancy the brave martyr to have been deacon of the First Parish at Jaalam Centre. "Jack Jugler" further gives us playsent and sartayne. Dryden rhymes certain with parting, and Chapman and Ben Jonson use certain, as the Yankee always does, for certainly. The "Coventry Mysteries" have occapied, massage, nateralle, matral (material), and meracles,—all excellent Yankeeisms. In the "Quatre fils, Aymon" (1504),¹ is vertus for virtuous. Thomas Fuller called volume volum, I suspect, for he spells it volumne. However, per contra, Yankees habitually say colume for colum. Indeed, to prove that our ancestors brought their pronunciation with them from the Old Country, and have not wantonly debased their mother tongue, I need only to cite the words scriptur, Israll, alhists, and cherfulness from Governor Bradford's "History." So the good man wrote them, and so the good descendants of his fellow-exiles still pronounce them. Brampton Gurdon writes shet in a letter to Winthrop. Purtend (pretend) has crept like a serpent into the "Paradise of Dainty Devices;" purvide, which is not so bad, is in Chaucer. These, of course, are universal vulgarisms, and not peculiar to the Yankee. Butler has a Yankee phrase, and pronunciation too, in "To which these carr'ings-on did tend." Langham or Laneham, who wrote an account of the festivities at Kenilworth in honor of Queen Bess, and who evidently tried to spell phonetically, makes sorrows into sororz. Herrick writes hollow for halloo, and perhaps pronounced it (horresco suggerens!) hollo, as Yankees do. Why not, when it comes from holà? I find ffelaschyppe (fellowship) in the Coventry Plays. Spenser and his queen neither of them scrupled to write afore, and the former feels no inelegance even in chaw and idee. 'Fore was common till after Herrick. Dryden has do's for does, and his wife spells worse wosce. Afeared was once universal. Warner has ery for ever a; nay, he also has illy, with which we were once ignorantly reproached by persons more familiar with Murray's Grammar than with English literature. And why not illy? Mr. Bartlett says it is "a word used by writers of an inferior class, who do not seem to perceive that ill is itself an adverb, without the termination ly," and quotes Dr. Messer, President of Brown University, as asking triumphantly, "Why don't you say welly?" I should like to have had Dr. Messer answer his own question. It would be truer to say that it was used by people who still remembered that ill was an adjective, the shortened form of evil, out of which Shakespeare and the translators of the Bible ventured to make evilly. This slurred evil is "the dram of eale" in "Hamlet." I find illy in Warner. The objection to illy is not an etymological one, but simply that it is contrary to good usage,—a very sufficient reason. Ill as an adverb was at first a vulgarism, precisely like the rustic's when he says, "I was treated bad." May not the reason of this exceptional form be looked for in that tendency to dodge what is hard to pronounce, to which I have already alluded? If the letters were distinctly uttered, as they should be, it would take too much time to say ill-ly, well-ly, and it is to be observed that we have avoided *smally*¹ and tally in the same way, though we add ish to them without hesitation in smallish and tallish. We have, to be sure, dully and fully, but for the one we prefer stupidly, and the other (though this may have come from eliding the y before as) is giving way to full. The uneducated, whose utterance is slower, still make adverbs when they will by adding like to all manner of adjectives. We have had big charged upon us, because we use it where an Englishman would now use great. I fully admit that it were better to distinguish between them, allowing to big a certain contemptuous quality; but as for authority, I want none better than that of Jeremy Taylor, who, in his noble sermon "On the Return of Prayer," speaks of "Jesus, whose spirit was meek and gentle up to the greatness of the bigge example." As for our double negative, I shall waste no time in quoting instances of it, because it was once as universal in English as it still is in the neo-Latin languages, where it does not strike us as vulgar. I am not sure that the loss of it is not to be regretted. But surely I shall admit the vulgarity of slurring or altogether eliding certain terminal consonants? I admit that a clear and sharp-cut enunciation is one of the crowning charms and elegancies of speech. Words so uttered are like coins fresh from the mint, compared with the worn and dingy drudges of long service, — I do not mean American coins, for those look less badly the more they lose of their original ugliness. No one is more painfully conscious than I of the contrast between the rifle-crack of an Englishman's yes and no, and the wet-fuse drawl of the same monosyllables in the mouths of my countrymen. But I do not find the dropping of final consonants disagreeable in Allan Ramsay or Burns, nor do I believe that our literary ancestors were sensible of that inelegance in the fusing them together of which we are conscious. How many educated men pronounce the t in chestnut? how many say pentise for penthouse, as they should. When a Yankee skipper says that he is "boun' for Gloster" (not Gloucester, with the leave of the Universal Schoolmaster),² he but speaks like Chaucer or an old ballad-singer, though they would have pronounced it boon. This is one of the cases where the d is surreptitious, and has been added in compliment to the verb bind, with which it has nothing to do. If we consider the root of the word (though of course I grant that every race has a right to do what it will with what is so peculiarly its own as its speech), the d has no more right there than at the end of gone, where it is often put by children, who are our best guides to the sources of linguistic corruption, and the best teachers of its processes. Cromwell, minister of Henry VIII., writes worle for world. Chapman has wan for wand, and lawn has rightfully displaced laund, though with no thought, I suspect, of etymology. Rogers tells us that Lady Bathurst sent him some letters written to William III. by Queen Mary, in which she addresses him as "Dear Husband." The old form expoun', which our farmers use, is more correct than the form with a barbarous d tacked on which has taken its place. Of the kind opposite to this, like our gownd for gown, and the London cockney's wind for wine, I find drownd for drown in the "Misfortunes of Arthur" (1584), and in Swift. And, by the way, whence came the long sound of wind which our poets still retain, and which survives in "winding" a horn, a totally different word from "winding" a kite-string? We say behind and hinder (comparative) and yet to hinder. Shakespeare pronounced kind kind, or what becomes of his play on that word and kin in "Hamlet"? Nay, did he not even (shall I dare to hint it?) drop the final d as the Yankee still does? John Lilly plays in the same way on kindred and kindness.

But to come to some other ancient instances. Warner rhymes bounds with crowns, grounds with towns, text with sex, worst with crust, interrupts with cups; Drayton, defects with sex; Chapman, amends with cleanse; Webster, defects with checks; Ben Jonson, minds with combines; Marston, trust and obsequious, clothes and shows; Dryden gives the same sound to clothes, and has also winds with designs. Of course, I do not affirm that their ears may not have told them that these were imperfect rhymes (though I am by no means sure even of that), but they surely would never have tolerated any such had they suspected the least vulgarity in them. Prior has the rhyme first and trust, but puts it into the mouth of a landlady. Swift has stunted and burnt it, an intentionally imperfect rhyme, no doubt, but which I cite as giving precisely the Yankee pronunciation of burned. Donne couples in unhallowed wedlock after and matter, thus seeming to give to both the true Yankee sound; and it is not uncommon to find after and daughter. Worse than all, in one of Dodsley's Old Plays we have onions rhyming with minions, — I have tears in my eyes while I record it. And yet what is viler than the universal Misses (Mrs.) for Mistress? This was once a vulgarity, and in "The Miseries of Inforced Marriage" the rhyme (printed as prose in Dodsley's Old Plays by Collier),

"To make my young mistress Delighting in kisses," is put into the mouth of the clown. Our people say Injun for Indian. The tendency to make this change where i follows d is common. The Italian giorno and French jour from diurnus are familiar examples. And yet Injun is one of those depravations which the taste challenges peremptorily, though it have the authority of Charles Cotton—who rhymes “Indies” with “cringes”—and four English lexicographers, beginning with Dr. Sheridan, bid us say invidgeous. Yet after all it is no worse than the debasement which all our terminations in tion and tience have undergone, which yet we hear with resignashun and payslunce, though it might have aroused both impat-i-ence and indigna-ti-on in Shakespeare’s time. When George Herbert tells us that if the sermon be dull,

² Though I find Worcester in the Mirror for Magistrates.

the prolongation of the word seems to convey some hint at the longanimity of the virtue. Consider what a poor curtail we have made of Ocean. There was something of his heave and expanse in o-ce-an, and Fletcher knew how to use it when he wrote so fine a verse as the second of these, the best deep-sea verse I know,—

“In desperate storms stem with a little rudder
The tumbling ruins of the ocean.”

Oceanus was not then wholly shorn of his divine proportions, and our modern oshun sounds like the gush of small-beer in comparison. Some other contractions of ours have a vulgar air about them. More ’n for more than, as one of the worst, may stand for a type of such. Yet our old dramatists are full of such obscurities (elisions that can hardly be called) of the th, making whē’r of whether, whē’r of whither, hē’r of hither, bro’r of brother, smo’r of smother, mo’r of mother, and so on. And dear Brer Rabbit, can I forget him? Indeed, it is this that explains the word rare (which has Dryden’s support), and which we say of meat where an Englishman would use underdone. I do not believe, with the dictionaries, that it had ever anything to do with the Icelandic hrar (raw), as it plainly has not in rareripe, which means earlier ripe,—President Lincoln said of a precocious boy that “he was a rareripe.” And I do not believe it, for this reason, that the earliest form of the word with us was, and the commoner now in the inland parts still is, so far as I can discover, raredone. Golding has “egs reere-rosted,” which, whatever else it mean, cannot mean raw-roasted. I find rather as a monosyllable in Donne, and still better, as giving the sound, rhyming with fair in Warner. There is an epigram of Sir Thomas Browne in which the words rather than make a monosyllable:—

“What furie is ’t to take Death’s part And rather than by Nature, die by Art!”

The contraction more ’n I find in the old play “Fuimus Troes,” in a verse where the measure is so strongly accented as to leave it beyond doubt,—

* A golden crown whose heirs More than half the world subdue.”

It may be, however, that the contraction is in “th’ orld.” It is unmistakable in the “Second Maiden’s Tragedy :”—

“It were but folly,

Dear soul, to boast of more than I can perform.”

Is our gin for given more violent than mar’l for marvel, which was once common, and which I find as late as Herrick? Nay, Herrick has gin (spelling it gen), too, as do the Scotch, who agree with us likewise in preferring chimly to chimney.

I will now leave pronunciation and turn to words or phrases which have been supposed peculiar to us, only pausing to pick up a single dropped stitch, in the pronunciation of the word supreme, which I had thought native till I found it in the well-languaged Daniel. I will begin with a word of which I have never met with any example in any English writer of authority. We express the first stage of withering in a green plant suddenly cut down by the verb to wilt. It is, of course, own cousin of the German welken, but I have never come upon it in literary use, and my own books of reference give me faint help. Graff gives welhen, marcescere, and refers to weih (weak), and conjecturally to A.-S. hwelan. The A.-S. wealwian (to wither) is nearer, but not so near as two words in the Icelandic, which perhaps put us on the track of its ancestry,—velgi, tepefacere (and velki, with the derivative), meaning contaminare. Wilt, at any rate, is a good word, illing, as it does, a sensible gap between drooping and withering, and the imaginative phrase “he wilted right down,” like “he caved right in,” is a true Americanism. Wilt occurs in English provincial glossaries, but is explained by with, which with us it does not mean. We have a few words such as cache, cohog, carry (portage), shoot (chute), timber (forest), bushwhack (to pull a boat along by the bushes on the edge of a stream), buckeye (a picturesque word for the horse-chestnut); but how many can we be said to have fairly brought into the language, as Alexander Gill, who first mentions Americanisms, meant it when he said, “Sed et ab Americanis nonnulla mutuamur ut MAIZ et CANOA”? Very few, I suspect, and those mostly by borrowing from the French, German, Spanish, or Indian.¹ “The Dipper” for the “Great Bear” strikes me as having a native air. Bogus, in the sense of worthless, is undoubtedly ours, but is, I more than suspect, a corruption of the French bagasse (from low Latin bagasea), which travelled up the Mississippi from New Orleans, where it was used for the refuse of the sugar-cane. It is true, we have modified the meaning of some words. We use freshet in the sense of flood, for which I have not chanced upon any authority. Our New England cross between Ancient Pistol and Dugald Dalgetty, Captain Underhill, uses the word (1638) to mean a current, and I do not recollect it elsewhere in that sense. I therefore leave it with a ? for future explorers. Crick for creek I find in Captain John Smith and in the dedication of Fuller’s “Holy Warre,” and run, meaning a small stream, in Waymouth’s “Voyage” (1605). Humans for men, which Mr. Bartlett includes in his “Dictionary of Americanisms,” is Chapman’s habitual phrase in his translation of Homer. I find it also in the old play of "The Hog hath lost his Pearl." Dogs for andirons is still current in New England, and in Walter de Bibleworth I find chiens glossed in the margin by andirons. Gunning for shooting is in Drayton. We once got credit for the poetical word full for autumn, but Mr. Bartlett and the last edition of Webster's Dictionary refer us to Dryden. It is even older, for I find it in Drayton, and Bishop Hall has autumn fall. Middleton plays upon the word: "May'st thou have a reasonable good spring, for thou art like to have many dangerous foul falls." Daniel does the same, and Coleridge uses it as we do. Gray uses the archaism picked for peaked, and the word smudge (as our backwoodsman do) for a smothered fire. Lord Herbert of Chesham (more properly perhaps than even Sidney, the last preux chevalier) has "the Emperor's folks" just as a Yankee would say it. Loan for lend, with which we have hitherto been blackened, I must retort upon the mother island, for it appears so long ago as in "Albion's England." Fleshy, in the sense of stout, may claim Ben Jonson's warrant, and I find it also so lately as in Franklin's "Lucian." Chore is also Jonson's word, and I am inclined to prefer it to chare and char, because I think that I see a more natural origin for it in the French jour — whence it might come to mean a day's work, and thence a job — than anywhere else.¹ At onst for at once I thought a corruption of our own, till I found it in the Chester Plays. I am now inclined to suspect it no corruption at all, but only an erratic and obsolete superlative at onest. To progress was flung in our teeth till Mr. Pickering retorted with Shakespeare's "doth progress down thy cheeks." I confess that I was never satisfied with this answer, because the accent was different, and because the word might here be reckoned a substantive quite as well as a verb. Mr. Bartlett (in his dictionary above cited) adds a surrebuter in a verse from Ford's "Broken Heart." Here the word is clearly a verb, but with the accent unhappily still on the first syllable. Mr. Bartlett says that he "cannot say whether the word was used in Bacon's time or not." It certainly was, and with the accent we give to it. Ben Jonson, in the "Alchemist," has this verse,

¹ This was written twenty years ago, and now (1890) I cannot open an English journal without coming upon an Americanism.

"Progress' so from extreme unto extreme," and Sir Philip Sidney,

"Progressing then from fair Turias' golden place."

Surely we may now sleep in peace, and our English cousins will forgive us, since we have cleared ourselves from any suspicion of originality in the matter! Even after I had convinced myself that the chances were desperately against our having invented any of the Americanisms with which we are faulted and which we are in the habit of voicing, there were one or two which had so prevalently indigenous an accent as to stagger me a little. One of these ¹ The Rev. A. L. Mayhew of Wadham College, Oxford, has convinced me that I was astray in this.

was "the biggest thing out." Alas, even this slender comfort is denied me. Old Gower has

"So harde an herte was none oute,"

and

"That such merveile was none oute."

He also, by the way, says "a sight of flowres" as naturally as our up-country folk would say it. Poor for lean, thirds for dower, and dry for thirsty I find in Middleton's plays. Dry is also in Skelton and in the "World" (1754). In a note on Middleton, Mr. Dyce thinks it needful to explain the phrase I can't tell (universal in America) by the gloss I could not say. Middleton also uses snecked, which I had believed an Americanism till I saw it there. It is, of course, only another form of snatch, analogous to theek and thatch (cf. the proper names Dekker and Thacher), break (brack) and breach, make (still common with us) and match. 'Long on for occasioned by ("who is this 'long on?") occurs constantly in Gower and likewise in Middleton. 'Cause why is in Chaucer. Raising (an English version of the French leaven) for yeast is employed by Gayton in his "Festivous Notes on Don Quixote." I have never seen an instance of our New England word emptins in the same sense, nor can I divine its original. Gayton has limekill; also shuts for shutters, and the latter is used by Mrs. Hutchinson in her "Life of Colonel Hutchinson." Bishop Hall, and Purchas in his "Pilgrims," have chist for chest, and it is certainly nearer cista, as well as to its form in the Teutonic languages, whence probably we got it. We retain the old sound from cist, but chest is as old as Chaucer. Lovelace says wropt for wrapt. "Musicianer" I had always associated with the militia-musters of my boyhood, and too hastily concluded it an abomination of our own, but Mr. Wright calls it a Norfolk word, and I find it to be as old as 1642 by an extract in Collier. "Not worth the time of day," had passed with me for native till I saw it in Shakespeare's "Pericles." For slick (which is only a shorter sound of sleek, like crick and the now universal britches for breeches) I will only call Chapman and Jonson. "That's a sure card!" and "That's a stinger!" both sound like modern slang, but you will find the one in the old interlude of "Thersytes" (1537), and the other in Middleton. "Right here," a favorite phrase with our orators and with a certain class of our editors, turns up passim in the Chester and Coventry plays. Mr. Dickens found something very ludicrous in what he considered our neologism right away. But I find a phrase very like it, and which I would gladly suspect to be a misprint for it, in "Gammer Gurton:" —

"Lyght it and bring it tile away."

But tile is the true word in this case. After all, what is it but another form of straightway? Cussedness, meaning wickedness, malignity, and cuss, a sneaking, ill-natured fellow, in such phrases as "He done it out o' pure cussedness," and "He is a natral cuss," have been commonly thought Yankeeisms. To vent certain contemptuously indignant moods they are admirable in their rough-and-ready way. But neither is our own. Cursydnesse, in the same sense of malignant wickedness, occurs in the Coventry Plays, and cuss may perhaps claim to have come in with the Conqueror. At least the term is also French. Saint Simon uses it and confesses its usefulness. Speaking of the Abbé Dubois, he says, "Qui étoit en plein ce qu'un mauvais françois appelle un sacre, mais qui ne se peut guère exprimer autrement." "Not worth a cuss," though supported by "not worth a damn," may be a mere corruption, since "not worth a ress" is in "Piers Ploughman." "I don't see it," was the popular slang a year or two ago, and seemed to spring from the soil; but no, it is in Cibber's "Careless Husband." Green sauce for vegetables I meet in Beaumont and Fletcher, Gayton, and elsewhere. Our rustic pronunciation salce (for either the diphthong au was anciently pronounced ah, or else we have followed abundant analogy in changing it to the latter sound, as we have in chance, dance, and so many more) may be the older one, and at least gives some hint at its ancestor salsa. Warn, in the sense of notify, is, I believe, now peculiar to us, but Peacock so employs it. I find primmer (primer, as we pronounce it) in Beaumont and Fletcher, and a "square eater" too (compare our "square meal"), heft for weight, and "muchness" in the "Mirror for Magistrates," bankbill in Swift and Fielding, and as for that I might say passim. To cotton to is, I rather think, an Americanism. The nearest approach to it I have found is cotton together, in Congreve's "Love for Love." To cotton or cotten, in another sense, is old and common. Our word means to cling, and its origin, possibly, is to be sought in another direction, perhaps in A.-S. cvead, which means mud, clay (both proverbially clinging), or better yet, in the Icelandic qvoda (otherwise kóð), meaning resin and glue, which are kar' étjónn, sticky substances. To spit cotton is, I think, American, and also, perhaps, to flax for to beat. To the halves still survives among us, though apparently obsolete in England. It means either to let or to hire a piece of land, receiving half the profit in money or in kind (partibus locare). I mention it because in a note by some English editor, to which I have lost my reference, I have seen it wrongly explained. The editors of Nares cite Burton. To put, in the sense of to go, as Put! for Be-gone! would seem our own, and yet it is strictly analogous to the French se mettre à la voie, and the Italian mettersi in via. Indeed, Dante has a verse,

"Io sarei [for mì sarei] già messo per to sentiero," which, but for the indignity, might be translated,

"I should, ere this, have put along the way."

I deprecate in advance any share in General

Banks's notions of international law, but we may all take a just pride in his exuberant eloquence as something distinctively American. When he spoke a few years ago of "letting the Union slide," even those who, for political purposes, reproached him with the sentiment, admired the indigenous virtue of his phrase. Yet I find "let the world slide" in Heywood's "Edward IV.;" and in Beaumont and Fletcher's "Wit without Money," Valentine says,

"Will you go drink,
And let the world slide?"

So also in Sidney's "Arcadia,"

"Let his dominion slide."

In the one case it is put into the mouth of a clown, in the other, of a gentleman, and was evidently proverbial. It has even higher sanction, for Chaucer writes,

"Well nigh all other curés lei he slide."

Mr. Bartlett gives "above one's bend" as an Americanism; but compare Hamlet's "to the top of my bent." In his tracks for immediately has acquired an American accent, and passes where he can for a native, but is an importation nevertheless; for what is he but the Latin e vestigio, or at best the Norman French enes-lespas, both which have the same meaning? Hotfoot (provincial also in England), I find in the old romance of "Tristan,"

"Si s'en parti CHAUT PAS."

Like for as is never used in New England, but is universal in the South and West. It has on its side the authority of two kings (ego sum rex Romanorum et supra grammaticam), Henry VIII. and Charles I. This were ample, without throwing into the scale the scholar and poet Daniel. Them was used as a nominative by the majesty of Edward VI., by Sir P. Hoby, and by Lord Paget (in Froude's "History"). I have never seen any passage adduced where guess was used as the Yankee uses it. The word was familiar in the mouths of our ancestors, but with a different shade of meaning from that we have given it, which is something like rather think, though the Yankee implies a confident certainty by it when he says, "I guess I du!" There are two examples in Otway, one of which ("So in the struggle, I guess the note was lost") perhaps might serve our purpose, and Coleridge's

"I guess 't was fearful there to see"

certainly comes very near. But I have a higher authority than either in Selden, who, in one of his notes to the "Polyolbion," writes, "The first inventor of them (I guess you dislike not the addition) was one Berthold Swartz." Here he must mean by it, "I take it for granted," Robert Greene, in his "Quip for an Upstart Courtier," makes Cloth-breeches say, "but I gesse your maistership never tried what true honor meant." In this case the word seems to be used with a meaning precisely like that which we give it. Another peculiarity almost as prominent is the beginning sentences, especially in answer to questions, with "well." Put before such a phrase as "How d'e do?" it is commonly short, and has the sound of wul, but in reply it is deliberative, and the various shades of meaning which can be conveyed by difference of intonation, and by prolonging or abbreviating, I should vainly attempt to describe. I have heard ooo-ahl, wahl, ahl, wäl, and something nearly approaching the sound of the le in able. Sometimes before "I" it dwindles to a mere l, as "l I dunno." A friend of mine (why should I not please myself, though I displease him, by brightening my page with the initials of the most exquisite of humorists, J. H.?) told me that he once heard five "wells," like pioneers, precede the answer to an inquiry about the price of land. The first was the ordinary wul, in deference to custom; the second, the long, perpendg ooahl, with a falling inflection of the voice; the third, the same, but with the voice rising, as if in despair of a conclusion, into a plaintively nasal whine; the fourth, wulh, ending in the aspirate of a sigh; and then, fifth, came a short, sharp wäl, showing that a conclusion had been reached. I have used this latter form in the "Biglow Papers," because, if enough nasality be added, it represents most nearly the average sound of what I may call the interjection.

A locution prevails in the Southern and Middle States which is so curious that, though never heard in New England, I will give a few lines to its discussion, the more readily because it is extinct elsewhere. I mean the use of allow in the sense of affirm, as "I allow that 's a good horse." I find the word so used in 1558 by Anthony Jenkinson in Hakluyt: "Come they sowe not, neither doe eate any bread, mocking the Christians for the same, and disabling our strengthe, saying we live by eating the topp of a weede, and drinke a drinke made of the same. allowing theyr great devouring of flesh and drinking of milke to be the increase of theyr strength." That is, they undervalued our strength, and affirmed their own to be the result of a certain diet. In another passage of the same narrative the word has its more common meaning of approving or praising: "The said king, much allowing this declaration, said." Ducange quotes Bracton sub voce ADLOCARE for the meaning "to admit as proved," and the transition from this to "affirm" is by no means violent. Izaak Walton has "Lebault allows waterfrogs to be good meat," and here the word is equivalent to affirms. At the same time, when we consider some of the meanings of allow in old English, and of allowen in old French, and also remember that the verbs prize and praise are from one root, I think we must admit allaudare to a share in the paternity of allow. The sentence from Hakluyt would read equally well, "contemning our strengthe, . . . and praising (or valuing) their great eating of flesh as the cause of their increase in strength." After all, if we confine ourselves to allocare, it may turn out that the word was somewhere and somewhen used for to bet, analogously to put up, put down, post (cf. Spanish apostar), and the like. I hear boys in the street continually saying, "I bet that 's a good horse," or what not, meaning by no means to risk anything beyond their opinion in the matter.

The word improve, in the sense of "to occupy, make use of, employ," as Dr. Pickering defines it, he long ago proved to be no neologism. He would have done better, I think, had he substituted profit by for employ. He cites Dr. Franklin as saying that the word had never, so far as he knew, been used in New England before he left it in 1723, except in Dr. Mather's "Remarkable Providences," which he oddly calls a "very old book." Franklin, as Dr. Pickering goes on to show, was mistaken. Mr. Bartlett in his "Dictionary" merely abridges Pickering. Both of them should have confined the application of the word to material things, its extension to which is all that is peculiar in the supposed American use of it. For surely "Complete Letter-Writers" have been "improving this opportunity" time out of mind. I will illustrate the word a little further, because Pickering cites no English authorities. Skelton has a passage in his "Phyllip Sparowe," which I quote the rather as it contains also the word allowed, and as it distinguishes improve from employ:—

"His [Chaucer's] Englysh well allowed,
So as it is improved,
For as it is employd,
There is no Englysh voyd."

Here the meaning is to profit by. In Fuller's "Holy Warre" (1647), we have "The Egyptians standing on the firm ground, were thereby enabled to improve and enforce their darts to the utmost." Here the word might certainly mean to make use of. Mrs. Hutchinson (Life of Colonel H.) uses the word in the same way: "And therefore did not emprove his interest to engage the country in the quarrell." Swift in one of his letters says: "There is not an acre of land in Ireland turned to half its advantage; yet it is better improved than the people." I find it also in "Strength out of Weakness" (1652), and Plutarch's "Morals" (1714), but I know of only one example of its use in the purely American sense, and that is "a very good improvement for a mill" in the "State Trials" (Speech of the Attorney-General in the Lady Ivy's case, 1684). In the sense of employ, I could cite a dozen old English authorities.

In running over the fly-leaves of those delightful folios for this reference, I find a note which reminds me of another word, for our abuse of which we have been deservedly ridiculed. I mean lady. It is true I might cite the example of the Italian donna ¹ (domina), which has been treated in the same way by a whole nation, and not, as lady among us, by the uncultivated only. It perhaps grew into use in the half-democratic republics of Italy in the same way and for the same reasons as with us. But I admit that our abuse of the word is villainous. I know of an orator who once said in a public meeting where bonnets preponderated, that "the ladies were last at the cross and first at the tomb"! But similar sins were committed before our day and in the mother country. In the "Harleian Miscellany" (vol. v. p. 455) I find "this lady is my servant; the hedger's daughter Ioan." In the "State Trials" I learn of "a gentlewoman that lives cook with" such a one, and I hear the Lord High Steward speaking of the wife of a waiter at a bagnio as a gentlewoman! From the same authority, by the way, I can state that our vile habit of chewing tobacco had the somewhat unsavory example of Titus Oates, and I know by tradition from an eye-witness that the elegant General Burgoyne partook of the same vice. Howell, in one of his letters (dated 26 August, 1623), speaks thus of another "institution" which many have thought American: "They speak much of that boisterous Bishop of Halverstadt (for so they term him here), that, having taken a place where there were two Monasteries of Nuns and Friars, he caus'd divers featherbeds to be rip'd, and all the feathers to be thrown in a great Hall, whither the Nuns and Friars were thrust naked with their bodies oil'd and pitch'd, and to tumble among the feathers." Howell speaks as if the thing were new to him, and I know not if the "boisterous" Bishop was the inventor of it, but I find it practised in England before our Revolution.

Before leaving the subject, I will add a few comments made from time to time on the margin of Mr. Bartlett's excellent "Dictionary," to which I am glad thus publicly to acknowledge my many obligations. "Avails" is good old English, and the vails of Sir Joshua Reynolds's porter are famous. Averse from, averse to, and in connection with them the English vulgarism "different to:" the corrupt use of to in these cases, as well as in the Yankee "he lives to Salem," "to home," and others, must be a very old one, for in the one case it plainly arose from confounding the two French prepositions à (from Latin ad and ab), and in the other from translating the first of them. I once thought "different to" a modern vulgarism, and Mr. Thackeray, on my pointing it out to him in "Henry Esmond," confessed it to be an anachronism. Mr. Bartlett refers to "the old writers quoted in Richardson's Dictionary" for "different to," though in my edition of that work all the examples are with from. But I find to used invariably by Sir R. Hawkins in Hakluyt. Banjo is a negro corruption of O. E. bandore. Bind-weed can hardly be modern, for wood-bind is old and radically right, intertwining itself through bindan and windan with classic stems. Bobolink: is this a contraction for Bob o' Lincoln? I find bobolynes, in one of the poems attributed to Skelton, where it may be rendered giddy-pate, a term very fit for the bird in his ecstasies. Cruel for great is in Hakluyt. Bowling-alley is in Nash's "Pierce Penilesse." Curious, meaning nice, occurs continually in old writers, and is as old as Pecoock's "Repressor." Droger is O. E. drugger. Educational is in Burke. Feeze is only a form of fizz. To fix, in the American sense, I find used by the Commissioners of the United Colonies so early as 1675, "their arms well fixed and fit for service." To take the foot in the hand is German; so is to go under. Gundalow is old; I find gundelo in Hakluyt, and gundello in Booth's reprint of the folio Shakespeare of 1623. Gonoff is O. E. gnoffe. Heap is in "Piers Ploughman" ("and other names an keep"), and in Hakluyt ("seeing such a heap of their enemies ready to devour them"). To liquor is in the "Puritan" ("call 'em in, and liquor 'em a little"). To loaf: this, I think, is unquestionably German. Laufen is pronounced lofen in some parts of Germany, and I once heard one German student say to another, Ich lauf: (lofe) hier bis du wiederkehrest, and he began accordingly to saunter up and down, in short, to loaf. To mull, Mr. Bartlett says, means "to soften, to dispirit," and quotes from "Margaret," — "There has been a pretty considerable mulling going on among the doctors," — where it surely cannot mean what he says it does. We have always heard mulling used for stirring, bustling, sometimes in an underhand way. It is a metaphor derived probably from mulling wine, and the word itself must be a corruption of mell, from O. F. mesler. Pair of stairs is in Hakluyt. To pull up stakes is in Curwen's Journal, and therefore pre-Revolutionary. I think I have met with it earlier. Raise: under this word Mr. Bartlett omits "to raise a house," that is, the frame of a wooden one, and also the substantive formed from it, a raisin. Retire for go to bed is in Fielding's "Amelia." Setting-poles cannot be new, for I find "some set [the boats] with long poles" in Hakluyt. Shoulder-hitters: I find that shoulder-striker is old, though I have lost the reference to my authority. Snag is no new word, though perhaps the Western application of it is so; but I find in Gill the proverb, "A bird in the bag is worth two on the snag." Dryden has swoop and to rights. Trail: Hakluyt has "many wayes traled by the wilde beastes."

I subjoin a few phrases not in Mr. Bartlett's book which I have heard. Bald-headed: "to go it bald-headed;" in great haste, as where one rushes out without his hat. Bogue: "I don't git much done 'thout I bogue right in along 'th my men." Carry: a portage. Cat-nap: a short doze. Cat-stick: a small stick. Chowder-head: a muddle-brain. Cling-john: a soft cake of rye. Cocoa-nut: the head. Cokees: applied to the people of certain settlements in Western Pennsylvania, from their use of the archaic form Quo' he. Dunnow'z I know: the nearest your true Yankee ever comes to acknowledging ignorance. Essence-pedler: a skunk. First-rate and a half. Fish-flakes, for drying fish: O. E. fleck (cratis). Gander-party: a social gathering of men only. Gawnicus: a dolt. Hawkins's whetstone: rum; in derision of one Hawkins, a well-known temperance-lecturer. Hyper: to bustle: "I mus' hyper about an' git tea." Keeler-tub: one in which dishes are washed. ("And Greasy Joan doth keel the pot.") Lap-tea: where the guests are too many to sit at table. Last of pea-time: to be hard-up. Löse-laid (loose-laid): a weaver's term, and probably English; weak-willed. Malahack: to cut up hastily or awkwardly. Moonglade: a beautiful word: for the track of moonlight on the water. Off-ox: an unmanageable, cross-grained fellow. Old Driver, Old Splitfoot: the Devil. Onhitch: to pull trigger (cf. Spanish disparar). Popular: conceited. Rote: sound of surf before a storm. Rot-gut: cheap whiskey; the word occurs in Heywood's "English Traveller" and Addison's "Drummer," for a poor kind of drink. Seem: it is habitual with the New-Englander to put this verb to strange uses, as "I can't seem to be suited," "I could n't seem to know him." Sidehill, for hillside. State-house: this seems an Americanism, whether invented or derived from the Dutch Stadhuis, I know not. Strike and string: from the game of ninepins; to make a strike is to knock down all the pins with one ball, hence it has come to mean fortunate, successful. Swampers: men who break out roads for lumberers. Tormented: euphemism for damned, as, "not a tormented cent." Virginia fence, to make a: to walk like a drunken man.

It is always worth while to note down the erratic words or phrases which one meets with in any dialect. They may throw light on the meaning of other words, on the relationship of languages, or even on history itself. In so composite a language as ours they often supply a different form to express a different shade of meaning, as in viol and fiddle, thrid and thread, smother and smoulder, where the l has crept in by a false analogy with would. We have given back to England the excellent adjective lengthy, formed honestly like earthy, drouthy, and others, thus enabling their journalists to characterize our President's messages by a word civilly compromising between long and tedious, so as not to endanger the peace of the two countries by wounding our national sensitiveness to British criticism. Let me give two curious examples of the antiseptic property of dialects at which I have already glanced. Dante has dindi as a childish or low word for danari (money), and in Shropshire small Roman coins are still dug up which the peasants call dinders. This can hardly be a chance coincidence, but seems rather to carry the word back to the Roman soldiery. So our farmers say chuk, chuk, to their pigs, and ciacco is one of the Italian words for hog. When a countryman tells us that he "fell all of a heap," I cannot help thinking that he unconsciously points to an affinity between our word tumble, and the Latin tumulus, that is older than most others.

¹ Which, whether in that form, or under its aliases witch-grass and cooch-grass, points us back to its original Saxon quick.

I believe that words, or even the mere intonation of them, have an astonishing vitality and power of propagation by the root, like the gardener's pest, quitch-grass,¹ while the application or combination of them may be new. It is in these last that my countrymen seem to me full of humor, invention, quickness of wit, and that sense of subtle analogy which needs only refining to become fancy and imagination. Prosaic as American life seems in many of its aspects to a European, bleak and bare as it is on the side of tradition, and utterly orphaned of the solemn inspiration of antiquity, I cannot help thinking that the ordinary talk of unlettered men among us is fuller of metaphor and of phrases that suggest livelier images than that of any other people I have seen. Very many such will be found in Mr. Bartlett's book, though his short list of proverbs at the end seem to me, with one or two exceptions, as un-American as possible. Most of them have no character at all but coarseness, and are quite too long-skirted for working proverbs, in which language always "takes off its coat to it," as a Yankee would say. There are plenty that have a more native and puckery flavor, seedlings from the old stock often, and yet new varieties. One hears such not seldom among us Easterners, and the West would yield many more. "Mean enough to steal acorns from a blind hog;" "Cold as the north side of a Jenocary gravestone by starlight;" "Hungry as a graven image;" "Pop'lar as a hen with one chicken;" "A hen's time ain't much;" "Quicker 'n greased lightnin';" "Ther's sech a thing ez bein' tu" (our Yankee paraphrase of μῆνιν ἄγειν); hence the phrase tooin' round, meaning a supererogatory activity like that of flies; "Stingy enough to skim his milk at both ends;" "Hot as the Devil's kitchen;" "Handy as a pocket in a shirt;" "He's a whole team and the dog under the wagon;" "All deacons are good, but there's odds in deacons" (to deacon berries is to put the largest atop); "So thievish they hev to take in their stone walls nights;"² may serve as specimens. "I take my tea barfoot," said a backwoodsman when asked if he would have cream and sugar. (I find barfoot, by the way, in the Coventry Plays.) A man speaking to me once of a very rocky clearing said, "Stone's got a pretty heavy mortgage on that land," and I overheard a guide in the woods say to his companions who were urging him to sing, "Wal, I did sing once, but toons gut invented, an' thet spilt my trade." Whoever has driven over a stream by a bridge made of slabs will feel the picturesque force of the epithet slab-bridged applied to a fellow of shaky character. Almost every county has some good die-sinker in phrase, whose mintage passes into the currency of the whole neighborhood. Such a one described the county jail (the one stone building where all the dwellings are of wood)

² And, by the way, the Yankee never says "o' nights," but uses the older adverbial form, analogous to the German nachts.

as "the house whose underpinnin' come up to the eaves," and called hell "the place where they did n't rake up their fires nights." I once asked a stage-driver if the other side of a hill were as steep as the one we were climbing: "Steep? chain lightnin' could n' go down it 'thout puttin' the shoe on!" And this brings me back to the exaggeration of which I spoke before. To me there is something very taking in the negro "so black that charcoal made a chalk-mark on him," and the wooden shingle "painted so like marble that it sank in water," as if its very consciousness or its vanity had been overpersuaded by the cunning of the painter. I heard a man, in order to give a notion of some very cold weather, say to another that a certain Joe, who had been taking mercury, found a lump of quicksilver in each boot, when he went home to dinner. This power of rapidly dramatizing a dry fact into flesh and blood and the vivid conception of Joe as a human thermometer strike me as showing a poetic sense that may be refined into faculty. At any rate there is humor here, and not mere quickness of wit, — the deeper and not the shallower quality. The tendency of humor is always towards overplus of expression, while the very essence of wit is its logical precision. Captain Basil Hall denied that our people had any humor, deceived, perhaps, by their gravity of manner. But this very seriousness is often the outward sign of that humorous quality of the mind which delights in finding an element of identity in things seemingly the most incongruous, and then again in forcing an incongruity upon things identical. Perhaps Captain Hall had no humor himself, and if so he would never find it. Did he always feel the point of what was said to himself? I doubt it, because I happen to know a chance he once had given him in vain. The Captain was walking up and down the veranda of a country tavern in Massachusetts while the coach changed horses. A thunder-storm was going on, and, with that pleasant European air of indirect self-compliment in condescending to be surprised by American merit, which we find so conciliating, he said to a countryman lounging against the door, "Pretty heavy thunder you have here." The other, who had divined at a glance his feeling of generous concession to a new country, drawled gravely, "Waal, we du, considerin' the number of inhabitants." This, the more I analyze it, the more humorous does it seem. The same man was capable of wit also, when he would. He was a cabinet-maker, and was once employed to make some commandment-tables for the parish meeting-house. The parson, a very old man, annoyed him by looking into his workshop every morning, and cautioning him to be very sure to pick out "clear mahogany without any knots in it." At last, wearied out, he retorted one day: "Wal, Dr. B., I guess ef I was to leave the nots out o' some o' the c'man'ments, 't 'ould soot you full 'uz wal!"

If I had taken the pains to write down the proverbial or pithy phrases I have heard, or if I had sooner thought of noting the Yankeeisms I met with in my reading, I might have been able to do more justice to my theme. But I have done all I wished in respect to pronunciation, if I have proved that where we are vulgar, we have the countenance of very good company. For, as to the jus et norma loquendi, I agree with Horace and those who have paraphrased or commented him, from Boileau to Gray. I think that a good rule for style is Galiani's definition of sublime oratory, — "l'art de tout dire sans être mis à la Bastille dans un pays où il est défendu de rien dire." I profess myself a fanatical purist, but with a hearty contempt for the speech-gilders who affect purism without any thorough, or even pedagogic, knowledge of the engendure, growth, and affinities of the noble language about whose mésalliances they profess (like Dean Alford) to be so solicitous. If they had their way —! "Doch es sey," says Lessing, "dass jene gothische Höflichkeit eine unentbehrliche Tugend des heutigen Umganges ist. Soll sie darum unsere Schriften eben so schaal und falsch machen als unsern Umgang?" And Drayton was not far wrong in affirming that

" 'T is possible to climb,
To kindle, or to slake, Although in Skelton's rhyme."

Cumberland in his Memoirs tells us that when, in the midst of Admiral Rodney's great sea-fight, Sir Charles Douglas said to him, "Behold, Sir George, the Greeks and Trojans contending for the body of Patroclus!" the Admiral answered, peevishly, "Damn the Greeks and damn the Trojans! I have other things to think of." After the battle was won, Rodney thus to Sir Charles, "Now, my dear friend, I am at the service of your Greeks and Trojans, and the whole of Homer's Iliad, or as much of it as you please!" I had some such feeling of the impertinence of our pseudo-classicality when I chose our homely dialect to work in. Should we be nothing, because somebody had contrived to be something (and that perhaps in a provincial dialect) ages ago? and to be nothing by our very attempt to be that something, which they had already been, and which therefore nobody could be again without being a bore? Is there no way left, then, I thought, of being natural, of being naïf, which means nothing more than native, of belonging to the age and country in which you are born? The Yankee, at least, is a new phenomenon; let us try to be that. It is perhaps a pis aller, but is not No Thoroughfare written up everywhere else? In the literary world, things seemed to me very much as they were in the latter half of the last century. Pope, skimming the cream of good sense and expression wherever he could find it, had made, not exactly poetry, but an honest, salable butter of worldly wisdom which pleasantly lubricated some of the drier morsels of life's daily bread, and, seeing this, scores of harmlessly insane people went on for the next fifty years coaxing his buttermilk with the regular up and down of the pentameter churn. And in our day do we not scent everywhere, and even carry away in our clothes against our will, that faint perfume of musk which Mr. Tennyson has left behind him, or worse, of Heine's patchouli? And might it not be possible to escape them by turning into one of our narrow New England lanes, shut in though it were by bleak stone walls on either hand, and where no better flowers were to be gathered than goldenrod and hardhack?

Beside the advantage of getting out of the beaten track, our dialect offered others hardly inferior. As I was about to make an endeavor to state them, I remembered something that the clear-sighted Goethe had said about Hebel's "Allemanische Gedichte," which, making proper deduction for special reference to the book under review, expresses what I would have said far better than I could hope to do: "Allen diesen innern guten Eigenschaften kommt die behagliche naive Sprache sehr zu statten. Man findet mehrere sinnlich bedeutende und wohlklingende Worte . . . von einem, zwei Buchstaben, Abbrivationen, Contractionen, viele kurze, leichte Sylben, neue Reime, welches, mehr als man glaubt, ein Vortheil für den Dichter ist. Diese Elemente werden durch glückliche Constructionen und lebhaft Formen zu einem Styl zusammengedrängt der zu diesem Zwecke vor unserer Büchersprache grosse Vorzüge hat." Of course I do not mean to imply that I have come near achieving any such success as the great critic here indicates, but I think the success is there, and to be plucked by some more fortunate hand.

Nevertheless, I was encouraged by the approval of many whose opinions I valued. With a feeling too tender and grateful to be mixed with any vanity, I mention as one of these the late A. H. Clough, who more than any one of those I have known (no longer living), except Hawthorne, impressed me with the constant presence of that indefinable thing we call genius. He often suggested that I should try my hand at some Yankee Pastorals, which would admit of more sentiment and a higher tone without foregoing the advantage offered by the dialect. I have never completed anything of the kind, but, in this Second Series, both my remembrance of his counsel and the deeper feeling called up by the great interests at stake, led me to venture some passages nearer to what is called poetical than could have been admitted without incongruity into the former series. The time seemed calling to me, with the old poet, —

"Leave, then, your wonted prattle, The oaten reed forbear;
For I hear a sound of battle,
And trumpets rend the air!"

The only attempt I had ever made at anything like a pastoral (if that may be called an attempt which was the result almost of pure accident) was in "The Courtin'." While the introduction to the First Series was going through the press, I received word from the printer that there was a blank page left which must be filled. I sat down at once and improvised another fictitious "notice of the press," in which, because verse would fill up space more cheaply than prose, I inserted an extract from a supposed ballad of Mr. Biglow. I kept no copy of it, and the printer, as directed, cut it off when the gap was filled. Presently I began to receive letters asking for the rest of it, sometimes for the balance of it. I had none, but to answer such demands, I patched a conclusion upon it in a later edition. Those who had only the first continued to importune me. Afterward, being asked to write it out as an autograph for the Baltimore Sanitary Commission Fair, I added other verses, into some of which I infused a little more sentiment in a homely way, and after a fashion completed it by sketching in the characters and making a connected story. Most likely I have spoiled it, but I shall put it at the end of this Introduction, to answer once for all those kindly importunings.

As I have seen extracts from what purported to be writings of Mr. Biglow, which were not genuine, I may properly take this opportunity to say, that the two volumes now published contain every line I ever printed under that pseudonym, and that I have never, so far as I can remember, written an anonymous article (elsewhere than in the "North American Review" and the "Atlantic Monthly," during my editorship of it) except a review of Mrs. Stowe's "Minister's Wooing," and, some twenty years ago, a sketch of the antislavery movement in America for an English journal.

A word more on pronunciation. I have endeavored to express this so far as I could by the types, taking such pains as, I fear, may sometimes make the reading harder than need be. At the same time, by studying uniformity I have sometimes been obliged to sacrifice minute exactness. The emphasis often modifies the habitual sound. For example, for is commonly fer (a shorter sound than fur for far), but when emphatic it always becomes for, as "wut for!" So too is pronounced like to (as it was anciently spelt), and to like ta (the sound as in the tau of touch), but too, when emphatic, changes into tue, and to, sometimes, in similar cases, into toe, as, "I didn' hardly know wut toe du!" Where vowels come together, or one precedes another following an aspirate, the two melt together, as was common with the older poets who formed their versification on French or Italian models. Drayton is thoroughly Yankee when he says "I 'xpect," and Pope when he says, "t'inspire." With becomes sometimes 'ith, 'üth, or 'th, or even disappears wholly where it comes before the, as, "I went along th' Square" (along with the Squire), the are sound being an archaism which I have noticed also in choir, like the old Scottish quhair.¹

(Herriek has, "Of flowers ne'er sucked by th' theeving bee.") Without becomes athout and 'thout. Afterwards always retains its locative s, and is pronounced always ahterwurds', with a strong accent on the last syllable. This oddity has some support in the erratic towards' instead of towards, which we find in the poets and sometimes hear. The sound given to the first syllable of to'wards, I may remark, sustains the Yankee lengthening of the o in to. At the beginning of a sentence, ahterwurds has the accent on the first syllable; at the end of one, on the last; as, "ah'terwurds he tol' me," "he tol' me ah'terwurds." The Yankee never makes a mistake in his aspirates. U changes in many words to e, always in such, brush, tush, hush, rush, blush, seldom in much, oftener in trust and crust, never in mush, gust, bust, tumble, or (?) flush, in the latter case probably to avoid confusion with flesh. I have heard flush with the ɛ sound, however. For the same reason, I suspect, never in gush (at least, I never heard it), because we have already one gesh for gash. A and i short frequently become e short. U always becomes o in the prefix un (except unto), and o in return changes to u short in uv for of, and in some words beginning with om. T and d, b and p, v and w, remain intact. So much occurs to me in addition to what I said on this head in the preface to the former volume.

Of course in what I have said I wish to be understood as keeping in mind the difference between provincialisms properly so called and slang. Slang is always vulgar, because it is not a natural but an affected way of talking, and all mere tricks of speech or writing are offensive. I do not think that Mr. Biglow can be fairly charged with vulgarity, and I should have entirely failed in my design, if I had not made it appear that high and even refined sentiment may coexist with the shrewd and more comic elements of the Yankee character. I believe that what is essentially vulgar and mean-spirited in politics seldom has its source in the body of the people, but much rather among those who are made timid by their wealth or selfish by their love of power. A democracy can afford much better than an aristocracy to follow out its convictions, and is perhaps better qualified to build those convictions on plain principles of right and wrong, rather than on the shifting sands of expediency. I had always thought "Sam Slick" a libel on the Yankee character, and a complete falsification of Yankee modes of speech, though, for aught I know, it may be true in both respects so far as the British provinces are concerned. To me the dialect was native, was spoken all about me when a boy, at a time when an Irish day-laborer was as rare as an American one now. Since then I have made a study of it so far as opportunity allowed. But when I write in it, it is as in a mother tongue, and I am carried back far beyond any studies of it to long-ago nooning in my father's hay-fields, and to the talk of Sam and Job over their jug of blackstrap under the shadow of the ash-tree which still dapples the grass whence they have been gone so long.

But life is short, and prefaces should be. And so, my good friends, to whom this introductory epistle is addressed, farewell. Though some of you have remonstrated with me, I shall never write any more "Biglow Papers," however great the temptation,—great especially at the present time,—unless it be to complete the original plan of this Series by bringing out Mr. Sawin as an "original Union man." The very favor with which they have been received is a hindrance to me, by forcing on me a self-consciousness from which I was entirely free when I wrote the First Series. Moreover, I am no longer the same careless youth, with nothing to do but live to myself, my books, and my friends, that I was then. I always hated politics, in the ordinary sense of the word, and I am not likely to grow fonder of them, now that I have learned how rare it is to find a man who can keep principle clear from party and personal prejudice, or can conceive the possibility of another's doing so. I feel as if I could in some sort claim to be an emeritus, and I am sure that political satire will have full justice done it by that genuine and delightful humorist, the Rev. Petroleum V. Nasby. I regret that I killed off Mr. Wilbur so soon, for he would have enabled me to bring into this preface a number of learned quotations, which must now go a-begging, and also enabled me to dispersonalize myself into a vicarious egotism. He would have helped me likewise in clearing myself from a charge which I shall briefly touch on, because my friend Mr. Hughes has found it needful to defend me in his preface to one of the English editions of the "Biglow Papers." I thank Mr. Hughes heartily for his friendly care of my good name, and were his Preface accessible to my readers here (as I am glad it is not, for its partiality makes me blush), I should leave the matter where he left it. The charge is of profanity, brought in by persons who proclaimed African slavery of Divine institution, and is based (so far as I have heard) on two passages in the First Series—

"An' you've gut to git up airy, Ef you want to take in God,"

and,

and on some Scriptural illustrations by Mr. Sawin.

Now, in the first place, I was writing under an assumed character, and must talk as the person would whose mouthpiece I made myself. Will any one familiar with the New England countryman venture to tell me that he does not speak of sacred things familiarly? that Biblical allusions (allusions, that is, to the single book with whose language, from his church-going habits, he is intimate) are not frequent on his lips? If so, he cannot have pursued his studies of the character on so many long-ago muster-fields and at so many cattle-shows as I. But I scorn any such line of defence, and will confess at once that one of the things I am proud of in my countrymen is (I am not speaking now of such persons as I have assumed Mr. Sawin to be) that they do not put their Maker away far from them, or interpret the fear of God into being afraid of Him. The Talmudists had conceived a deep truth when they said, that "all things were in the power of God, save the fear of God;" and when people stand in great dread of an invisible power, I suspect they mistake quite another personage for the Deity. I might justify myself for the passages criticised by many parallel ones from Scripture, but I need not. The Reverend Homer Wilbur's note-books supply me with three apposite quotations. The first is from a Father of the Roman Church, the second from a Father of the Anglican, and the third from a Father of Modern English poetry. The Puritan divines would furnish me with many more such. St. Bernard says, Sapiens nummularius est Deus: nummum fictum non recipiet; "A cunning money-changer is God; he will take in no base coin." Latimer says, "You shall perceive that God, by this example, shaketh us by the noses and taketh us by the ears." Familiar enough, both of them, one would say! But I should think Mr. Biglow had verily stolen the last of the two maligned passages from Dryden's "Don Sebastian," where I find

"And beg of Heaven to charge the bill on me!"

And there I leave the matter, being willing to believe that the Saint, the Martyr, and even the Poet, were as careful of God's honor as my critics are ever likely to be.

IV. NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIONS

Page 111. On any pot that ever drew tea.

When Mr. Garrison visited Edinburgh in 1846, a handsome silver tea-set was presented to him by his friends in that city. On the arrival of this gift at the Boston custom-house, it was charged with an enormous entrance duty, which would have been remitted if the articles had ever been used. It was supposed that if the owner had not been the leader of the unpopular abolitionists, this heavy impost would not have been laid on a friendly British tribute to an eminent American.

On the occasion of the murder of Rev. Elijah P. Lovejoy, editor of an anti-slavery newspaper at Alton, Illinois, an indignation meeting was held in Boston, at which Mr. Austin, Attorney-General of Massachusetts, made a violent pro-slavery speech, which called forth a crushing reply from Wendell Phillips, who thenceforth became a main pillar of abolitionism.

 When she acts as a censor, she privately blows
 A censor of vanity, 'neath her own nose.

I am indebted to Mr. Frank Beverly Williams for these illustrative notes.

FIRST SERIES

This series of the Biglow Papers relates to the Mexican War. It expresses the sentiment of New England, and particularly of Massachusetts, on that conflict, which in its aim and conduct had little of honor for the American Republic. The war was begun and prosecuted in the interest of Southern slaveholders. It was essential to the vitality of slavery that fresh fields should constantly be opened to it. Agriculture was almost the sole industry in which slaves could be profitably employed. That their labor should be wasteful and careless to preserve the productive powers of the soil was inevitable. New land was ever in demand, and the history of slavery in the United States is one long series of struggles for more territory. It was with this end in view that a colony of roving, adventurous Americans, settled in the thinly populated and poorly governed region now known as Texas, revolted from the Mexican government and secured admission to the Union, thus bringing on the war with Mexico. The Northern Whigs had protested against annexation, but after the war began their resistance grew more and more feeble. In the vain effort to retain their large Southern constituent, they sacrificed justice to expediency and avoided an issue that would not be put down. The story of the Mexican War is the story of the gradual decline of the great Whig party, and of the growth of that organization, successively known as the Liberty, Free-Soil, and Republican party, whose policy was the exclusion of slavery from all new territory. One more victory was granted to the Whigs in 1848. After that their strength failed rapidly. Northern sentiment was being roused to a sense of righteous indignation by Southern aggressions and the fervid exhortations of Garrison and his co-workers in the anti-slavery cause. Few, however, followed Garrison into disloyalty to the Constitution. The greater number preferred to stay in the Union and use such lawful political means as were available for the restriction of slavery. Their wisdom was demonstrated by the election of Abraham Lincoln twelve years after the Mexican War closed.

The act of May 13, 1846, authorized President Polk to employ the militia, and call out 50,000 volunteers, if necessary. He immediately called for the full number of volunteers, asking Massachusetts for 777 men. On May 26 Governor Briggs issued a proclamation for the enrolment of the regiment. As the President's call was merely a request and not an order, many Whigs and the Abolitionists were for refusing it. The Liberator for June 5 severely censured the governor for complying, and accused him of not carrying out the resolutions of the last Whig Convention, which had pledged the party "to present as firm a front of opposition to the institution as was consistent with their allegiance to the Constitution."

An allusion to the governor's call for troops (cf. note to p. 181) as well as to the vote on the War Bill. On May 11, 1846, the President sent to the House of Representatives his well-known message declaring the existence of war brought on "by the act of Mexico," and asking for a supply of $10,000,000. Of the seven members from Massachusetts, all Whigs, two, Robert C. Winthrop, of Boston, and Amos Abbott, of Andover, voted for the bill. The Whigs throughout the country, remembering the fate of the party which had opposed the last war with England, sanctioned the measure as necessary for the preservation of the army, then in peril by the unauthorized acts of the President.

Ha'n't they sold your colored seamen?

Ha'n't they made your env'ys w'iz?

South Carolina, Louisiana, and several other Southern States at an early date passed acts to prevent free persons of color from entering their jurisdictions. These acts bore with particular severity upon colored seamen, who were imprisoned, fined, or whipped, and often sold into slavery. On the petition of the Massachusetts Legislature, Governor Briggs, in 1844, appointed Mr. Samuel Hoar agent to Charleston, and Mr. George Hubbard to New Orleans, to act on behalf of oppressed colored citizens of the Bay State. Mr. Hoar was expelled from South Carolina by order of the Legislature of that State, and Mr. Hubbard was forced by threats of violence to leave Louisiana. The obnoxious acts remained in force until after the Civil War.

Propositions to secede were not uncommon in New England at this time. The rights of the States had been strongly asserted on the acquisition of Louisiana in 1803, and on the admission of the State of that name in 1812. Among the resolutions of the Massachusetts Legislature adopted in 1845, relative to the proposed annexation of Texas, was one declaring that "such an act of admission would have no binding force whatever on the people of Massachusetts."

John Quincy Adams, in a discourse before the New York Historical Society, in 1839, claimed a right for the States "to part in friendship with each other . . . when the fraternal spirit shall give way," etc. The Garrisonian wing of the Abolitionists notoriously advocated secession. There were several other instances of an expression of this sentiment, but for the most part they were not evoked by opposition to slavery.

The Massachusetts regiment, though called for May 13, 1846, was not mustered into the United States' service till late in January of the next year. The officers, elected January 5, 1847, were as follows: Caleb Cushing, of Newburyport, Colonel; Isaac H. Wright, of Roxbury, Lieutenant-Colonel; Edward W. Abbott, of Andover, Major. Shortly before the troops embarked for the South, on the evening of Saturday, January 23, 1847, a public meeting was held in Faneuil Hall, where an elegant sword was presented to Mr. Wright by John A. Bolles, on behalf of the subscribers. Mr. Bolles' speech on this occasion is the one referred to.

Page 184. Mister Bolles.

Mr. John Augustus Bolles was the author of a prize essay on a Congress of Nations, published by the American Peace Society, an essay on Usury and Usury Laws, and of various articles in the North American Review and other periodicals. He was also the first editor of the Boston Journal. In 1843 he was Secretary of State for Massachusetts.

Page 185. Rantoul.

Mr. Robert Rantoul (1805-1852), a prominent lawyer and a most accomplished gentleman, was at this time United States District Attorney for Massachusetts. In 1851 he succeeded Webster in the Senate, but remained there a short time only. He was a Representative in Congress from 1851 till his death. Although a Democrat, Mr. Rantoul was strongly opposed to slavery.

Page 185. Achokin' on 'em.

Mr. Rantoul was an earnest advocate of the abolition of capital punishment. Public attention had recently been called to his views by some letters to Governor Briggs on the subject, written in February, 1846.

George Nixon Briggs was the Whig Governor of Massachusetts from 1844 to 1851. The campaign referred to here is that of 1847. Governor Briggs was renominated by acclamation and supported by his party with great enthusiasm. His opponent was Caleb Cushing, then in Mexico, and raised by President Polk to the rank of Brigadier-General. Cushing was defeated by a majority of 14,060.

John Paul Robinson (1799-1864) was a resident of Lowell, a lawyer of considerable ability, and a thorough classical scholar. He represented Lowell in the State Legislature in 1829, 1830, 1831, 1833, and 1842, and was Senator from Middlesex in 1836. Late in the gubernatorial contest of 1847 it was rumored that Robinson, heretofore a zealous Whig, and a delegate to the recent Springfield Convention, had gone over to the Democratic or, as it was then styled, the "Loco" camp. The editor of the Boston Palladium wrote to him to learn the truth, and Robinson replied in an open letter avowing his intention to vote for Cushing.

Page 189. "Our country, however bounded."

Mr. R. C. Winthrop, M. C., in a speech at Faneuil Hall, July 4, 1845, said in deprecation of secession: "Our country — bounded by the St. John's and the Sabine, or however otherwise bounded or described, and be the measurements more or less — still our country — to be cherished in all our hearts, to be defended by all our hands." The sentiment was at once taken up and used effectively by the "Cotton" Whigs, those who inclined to favor the Mexican War.

Page 190. The Liberator.

The Liberator was William Lloyd Garrison's anti-slavery paper, published from 1831 to 1865. The "heresies" of which Mr. Wilbur speaks were Garrison's advocacy of secession, his well-known and eccentric views on "no government," woman suffrage, etc.

Page 191. Scott.

General W. Scott was mentioned as a possible Whig candidate for the Presidency in the summer of 1847, but was soon overshadowed by General Taylor.

Page 192. Palfrey.

December 6, 1847, Mr. R. C. Winthrop, of Boston, the Whig candidate for Speaker of the House in the Thirtieth Congress, was elected after three ballots. Mr. John Gorham Palfrey, elected a Whig member from Boston, and Mr. Joshua Giddings, of Ohio, refused to vote for Winthrop, and remained firm to the last in spite of the intensity of public opinion in their party. The election of a Whig Speaker in a manner depended on their votes. Had they supported Winthrop, he could have been elected on the second ballot. At the third he could not have been elected without them had not Mr. Levin, a Native American member, changed his vote, and Mr. Holmes, a Democrat from South Carolina, left the hall. Mr. Palfrey refused to vote for Mr. Winthrop because he was assured the latter would not, through his power over the committees, exert his influence to arrest the war and obstruct the extension of slavery into new territory. So bold and decided a stand at so critical a time excited great indignation for a time among the "Cotton" Whigs of Boston.

In April, 1848, an attempt was made to abduct seventy-seven slaves from Washington in the schooner Pearl, under the conduct of Captain Drayton and Sayres, or Sayers, his mate. The slaves were speedily recaptured and sold South, while their brave defenders barely escaped with their lives from an infuriated mob. The Abolitionists in Congress determined to evoke from that body some expression of sentiment on the subject. On the 20th of April Senator Hale introduced a resolution implying but not expressing sympathy with the oppressed. It stirred the slaveholders to unusual intemperance of language. Calhoun was "amazed that even the Senator from New Hampshire had so little regard for the Constitution," and, forgetting his usual dignity, declared he "would as soon argue with a maniac from Bedlam" as with Mr. Hale. Mr. Foote, of Mississippi, was, perhaps, the most violent of all. He denounced any attempt of Congress to legislate on the subject of slavery as "a nefarious attempt to commit grand larceny." He charged Mr. Hale with being "as guilty as if he had committed highway robbery," and went on to say, "I invite him to visit Mississippi, and will tell him beforehand, in all honesty, that he could not go ten miles into the interior before he would grace one of the tallest trees of the forest with a rope around his neck, with the approbation of all honest and patriotic citizens; and that, if necessary, I should myself assist in the operation."

Mr. Hale stood almost alone with his resolution, which was soon arrested by an adjournment. A similar resolution failed in the House.

Drayton and Sayres were convicted by the District Court and sentenced to long terms of imprisonment. In 1852 Senator Sumner secured for them an unconditional pardon from President Fillmore.

After his defeat by Taylor he was in 1849 returned to the Senate to fill out his unexpired term. He was Buchanan's Secretary of State until the famous message of December, 1860, when he resigned.

The revolution in France was hailed with delight in the United States as a triumph of freedom and popular government. In Congress the event gave opportunity for much sounding declamation, in which the Southern members participated with as much enthusiasm as those from the North. At the same time when the Abolitionists sought to turn all this philosophy to some more practical application nearer home, the attempt was bitterly denounced at Washington and by the Democratic press generally. A striking instance of this inconsistency is afforded by a speech of Senator Foote. "The age of tyrants and slavery," said he, in allusion to France, "is drawing to a close. The happy period to be signalized by the universal emancipation of man from the fetters of civil oppression, and the recognition in all countries of the great principles of popular sovereignty, equality, and brotherhood, is at this moment visibly commencing." A few days later, when Mr. Mann, the attorney for Drayton and Sayres, quoted these very words in palliation of his clients' offence, he was peremptorily checked by the judge for uttering "inflammatory" words that might "endanger our institutions."

In the campaign of 1848 the Whigs determined to have substantially no platform or programme at all, in order to retain the Southern element in their party. Accordingly a colorless candidate was selected in the person of General Zachary Taylor, who, it was said, had never voted or made any political confession of faith. He was nominated as the "people's candidate," and men of all parties were invited to support him. He refused to pledge himself to any policy or enter into any details, unless on some such obsolete issue as that of a National Bank. After it became apparent that his followers were chiefly Whigs, he declared himself a Whig also, "although not an ultra one." He particularly avoided compromising himself on the slavery question. When, in the beginning of 1847, Mr. J. W. Taylor, of the Cincinnati Signal, questioned him on the Wilmot Proviso, he answered in such vague phrases that the confused editor interpreted them first as favoring and finally as opposing the measure. This declaration, together with the candidate's announcement that he was a Whig, was taken in the North to mean that he was opposed to the extension of slavery. The fact that he was a Southerner and a slaveholder was sufficient to reassure the South.

August 8, 1846, the President addressed a message to both Houses asking for $2,000,000 to conclude a peace with Mexico and recompense her for her proposed cession of territory. On the same day McKay, of North Carolina, introduced a bill into the lower House for this purpose. David Wilmot, of Pennsylvania, a Democrat and a zealous friend of annexation, moved as a proviso that slavery should forever be excluded from the new territory. The motion was suddenly and unexpectedly carried by a vote of 83 to 54. It did not come to a vote in the Senate, for John Davis, of Massachusetts, talked it to death by a long speech in its favor. Nevertheless it became at once a burning question in both North and South. The more pronounced antislavery men of the former section tried to make it the political test in the coming campaign. The refusal of the Whig party to take up the question caused large accessions to the old Liberty party, now known as the Free-Soil, and later to become the Republican party.

Page 212. Ashland, etc.

It hardly need be said that Ashland was the home of Henry Clay; North Bend, of Harrison; Marshfield, of Webster; Kinderhook, of Van Buren; and Baton Rouge, of General Taylor.

Page 214. Mashfiel' speech.

The speech here referred to is the one delivered by Webster at Marshfield, September 1, 1848. While he affirmed that the nomination of Taylor was "not fit to be made," he nevertheless declared that he would vote for him, and advised his friends to do the same. "The sagacious, wise, and far-seeing doctrine of availability," said he, "lay at the root of the whole matter."

Page 214. Choate.

Into none of his political addresses did Rufus Choate throw so much of his heart and soul as into those which upheld the failing policy of the Whig party from 1848 to 1852.

Page 215. Buffalo.

On August 9, 1848, the convention containing the consolidated elements of constitutional opposition to the extension of slavery met at Buffalo. The party, calling itself the Free-Soil party now, declared its platform to be "no more slave States and no more slave territory." Martin Van Buren and Charles Francis Adams were the candidates selected. Van Buren was chosen because it was thought he might attract Democratic votes. His opposition to the extension of slavery was not very energetic. In his letter accepting the nomination he commended the convention for having taken no decisive stand against slavery in the District of Columbia.

The slaveholding States early legislated to forbid education and free religious meetings to slaves and free people of color. Stroud's Sketch of the Slave Laws (Philadelphia, 1827) shows that the principal acts of this character date from the period between 1740 and 1770. This was long before the oldest anti-slavery societies were organized. Thus these laws cannot be represented as having been the result of impetinent and intemperate agitation on the part of Northern Abolitionists. They were frequently defended on this ground in the heat of the anti-slavery conflict.

In 1861 a magnificent scheme was devised for bolstering up the Confederate government's credit. The planters signed agreements subscribing a certain portion of the next cotton and tobacco crop to the government. Using this as a basis for credit, the government issued bonds and placed about $15,000,000 in Europe, chiefly in England. A much greater loan might have been negotiated had it not suddenly appeared that the agreements made by the planters were almost worthless. By the end of the year the plan was quietly and completely abandoned. The English bondholders had the audacity to apply for aid to the United States after the war.

Page 226. Mem'nger.

Charles Gustavus Memminger, although he had opposed nullification, was one of the leaders in the secession movement which began in his own State, South Carolina. On the formation of the Confederate government he was made Secretary of the Treasury. Although not without experience in the management of his State's finances he showed little skill in his new position.

Page 226. Cornfiscatin' all debts.

After the failure of the Produce Loan and one or two other measures on a similarly grand scale, the Confederate government resorted to simpler means. Chief among these were the acts confiscating the property of and all debts due to alien enemies. No great number of reputable persons in the South could resolve to compound or wipe out debts involving their personal honor, so the results of the scheme were meagre.

Page 228. MASON AND SLIDELL.

In the latter part of 1861 President Davis undertook to send agents or commissioners to England and France to represent the Southern cause. The men chosen were James M. Mason, of Virginia, and John Slidell, of Louisiana. On the 12th of October they left Charleston, eluded the blockading squadron, and landed at Havana. Thence they embarked for St. Thomas on the British mail-steamer Trent. On the way the Trent was stopped by Captain Wilkes, of the American man-of-war San Jacinto, and the Confederate agents were transferred as prisoners to the latter vessel. The British Government at once proclaimed the act "a great outrage," and sent a peremptory demand for the release of the prisoners and reparation. At the same time, without waiting for any explanation, it made extensive preparations for hostilities. It seemed and undoubtedly was expedient for the United States to receive Lord Russell's demand as an admission that impressment of British seamen found on board neutral vessels was unwarrantable. Acting on the demand as an admission of the principle so long contended for by the United States, Mr. Seward disavowed the act of Wilkes and released the commissioners. But it was held then and has since been stoutly maintained by many jurists that the true principles of international law will not justify a neutral vessel in transporting the agents of a belligerent on a hostile mission. On the analogy of despatches they should be contraband. The difficulty of amicable settlement at that time, however, lay not so much in the point of law as in the intensity of popular feeling on both sides of the Atlantic.

One month after Sumter was attacked, on May 13, 1861, the Queen issued a proclamation of neutrality, according belligerent rights to the Confederacy. This was done even before Mr. Adams, the new minister from the Lincoln administration, could reach England. Commercial interest cannot excuse so precipitate a recognition. It cannot be regarded as anything but a deliberate expression of unfriendliness towards the United States. It coldly contemplated the dissolution of the Union, favored the establishment of an independent slave-empire, and by its moral support strengthened the hands of the Rebellion and prolonged the war.

It is notorious that Confederate cruisers were built, equipped, and even partially manned in England in open disregard of the international law respecting neutrals. Mr. Adams protested constantly and emphatically against this, but in vain for the time. No notice was taken officially of the matter until it was forced on the British government in 1864. The subsequent negotiations concerning the Alabama claims, the Treaty of Washington in 1871, and the Geneva award to the United States of some fifteen million dollars, are too well known to require any mention.

In 1837 an insurrection broke out in Canada, and armed bodies of men styling themselves "patriots" were in open rebellion against the government. In spite of the President's message exhorting citizens of the United States not to interfere, and in defiance of the troops sent to Buffalo to carry out his orders, numbers of sympathizers from New York crossed the Niagara River and gave assistance to the insurgents. The British authorities would have been warranted in seizing the American vessel Caroline, which was used to transport citizens to the Canadian shore, had the seizure been made in flagrante delicto, or out of our territorial waters. But in crossing to the American side of the river and taking the offending vessel from her moorings these authorities committed a grave breach of neutrality. After five years of negotiation the English government finally apologized and made reparation for the injury.

Mr. W. H. Seward, Lincoln's Secretary of State, was at the outbreak of the Rebellion an earnest advocate of conciliation. He seemed to think that if war could be averted for a time, until the people of the seceding States perceived the true intention of the administration to be the preservation of the Union, not the promoting of Abolitionism, the Southern movement would fail. In this belief he frequently declared that the trouble would all be over in sixty days.

On the 21st of July, 1861, the Union troops under General McDowell were completely routed by Beauregard at Bull Run in Virginia. The North was finally convinced that the South was equipped for and determined on a desperate struggle, while the victory gave immense encouragement to the insurgents.

The "Scriptural" view, according to the mind of Mr. Sawin, would have been that of Jeremiah S. Black, who saw in the case of Onesimus St. Paul's express approval of the Fugitive Slave Law of 1850.

Page 244. Debow.

De Bow's Commercial Review, published in New Orleans, Louisiana, was for some years before the war very bitter against the North, its institutions, and its society in general.

Page 244. Simms an' Maury.

William Gilmore Simms, the South Carolina novelist and poet, is here referred to. Matthew Fontaine Maury, of Virginia, naval officer and hydrographer, was a man of some scientific attainments. He was the author of several works on the physical geography of the sea, navigation, and astronomy. Both men were born in the same year, 1806.

Page 245. Arms an' cannon.

John B. Floyd, while Secretary of War in Mr. Buchanan's Cabinet, was detected in the act of stripping Northern arsenals of arms and ammunition to supply the South. He began this work as early as December, 1859, and it is not known to what extent he carried it. Pollard, a Southern historian, says the South entered the war with 150,000 small-arms of the most approved modern pattern, all of which it owed to the government at Washington. Floyd resigned because some forts and posts in the South were not given up to the rebels.

Page 245. Admittin' we wuz nat'lly right.

President Buchanan's message of the first Monday of December, 1860, declared "the long-continued and intemperate interference of the Northern people with the question of slavery in the Southern States" had at last produced its natural effect; disunion was impending, and if those States could not obtain redress by constitutional means, secession was justifiable and the general government had no power to prevent it. The effect these utterances had in spreading and intensifying the spirit of secession is incalculable.

During the larger part of the war great apprehension of attempts on the part of foreign powers to interfere prevailed in the Northern States. With the exception of Russia and Denmark, all Europe inclined toward the South. Our form of government was not favored by them, and they were not unwilling to see its failure demonstrated by a complete disruption. For a long time it was very generally believed that the South would be victorious in the end. Had the Confederacy at any time had a bright prospect of success, it is likely that England or France might have offered to interfere. Indeed, the success of the French scheme to set up a military empire in Mexico in defiance of the Monroe doctrine entirely depended on the contingency of a victory for secession. Napoleon therefore was urgent for mediation. The subject was suggested several times by the French foreign minister in his correspondence with Mr. Seward, and was pressed on the British Government by France.

The Border States, by contiguity to the North and natural unfitness for a very profitable system of slave-labor, were slow to take a definite stand. President Lincoln's policy was to proceed cautiously at first, keep the slavery question in the background, and enlist the sympathies of these States by appeals to their attachment to the Union. Although the people of Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, and Missouri were pretty evenly divided, the State governments were kept from seceding. Without the support of the Republican Congressmen from this section, Lincoln could not have carried out his abolition policy.

The battle of Hampton Roads, at the entrance of Chesapeake Bay in Virginia, is remarkable for the revolution in naval warfare which it began. The utter worthlessness of wooden against armored vessels was suddenly and convincingly demonstrated. On the 8th of March, 1862, the Confederate armored ram Virginia, formerly Merrimac, made terrible havoc among the old wooden men-of-war stationed about Fortress Monroe. But at nine o'clock that night the little Monitor steamed into the Roads to the assistance of the shattered Federal navy. The next day's battle is one of the romances of war. Had Mr. Wilbur waited for the next Southern mail before writing this letter, the Devil might have had less credit given him.

In the period from 1830 to 1840, the sudden and healthy increase of immigration and the flattering industrial prospect induced many Western and Southern States to make lavish expenditures for internal improvements. Their credit was good and they borrowed too largely. After the financial crisis of 1837, insolvency stared them in the face. A number repudiated, among whom Mississippi in particular was heavily indebted. Her securities were largely held in England. It added nothing to the credit of the Confederacy that Jefferson Davis had been an earnest advocate of repudiation.

Page 252. Roanoke, Bufort, Millspring.

The loss of Roanoke Island, on the coast of North Carolina, February 8, 1862, was a severe one to the South. The first harbor on the Southern coast was that of Port Royal, South Carolina, in the centre of the sea-island cotton district. This point the North fixed on as the best for a base of operations, and on October 29, 1861, a fleet of fifty vessels, including thirty-three transports, was sent against it. A fierce attack was begun on November 7, and on the next day the two forts, Walker and Beauregard, capitulated. Without encountering further opposition the Federal troops took possession of the town of Beaufort, on an island in the harbor. January 19, 1862, the Confederates under Crittenden were defeated with considerable loss at Millspring, Kentucky, by General G. H. Thomas.

Page 252. Recognition.

Recognition of independence by the European powers, particularly France and England, would of course have been of the greatest value to the South. It is said that Mr. Reebuck's motion in the House of Commons to recognize the Confederate States would have passed but for the timely news of Gettysburg. Certainly if it had, France would not have been slow to follow. It is difficult to overestimate the disastrous effect such events would have had on the Northern cause.

Page 253. Your Belmonts, Vallandighams, Woodses.

Mr. August Belmont, of New York, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee from 1860 to 1872, although opposed to secession, still attributed the cause and the responsibility for the continuance of the war to the Republican Administration. He led his party in clamoring for peace and conciliation, especially in 1864, and bitterly opposed reconstruction. Clement L. Vallandigham, of Dayton, Ohio, was the most conspicuous and noisy one of the Peace Democrats during the war. His treasonable and seditious utterances finally led to his banishment to the South in May, 1863. Thence he repaired to Canada, where he remained while his party made him their candidate in the next gubernatorial campaign, in which he was ignominiously defeated. The Woodses were the brothers Benjamin and Fernando Wood, prominent Democrats of New York city. The former was editor of the Daily News and a Representative in Congress. The latter was several times Mayor of New York, and for twelve years a Representative in Congress.

Page 253. C'lumbus.

After the fall of Fort Donelson, Columbus, Kentucky, was no longer tenable, and Beauregard ordered General Polk to evacuate it. March 3, 1862, a scouting party of Illinois troops, finding the post deserted, occupied it, and when Sherman approached the next day he found the Union flag flying over the town.

Page 253. Donelson.

The capture of Fort Donelson, in Tennessee, February 16, 1862, by General Grant, was one of several Union successes in the West, whose value was almost entirely neutralized by McClellan's dilatory conduct of the Army of the Potomac. General John B. Floyd's precipitate retreat from the fort as the Union forces approached was afterwards represented in one of his official reports as an heroic exploit.

Page 256. Taney.

Roger B. Taney, of Maryland, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States from 1836 to 1864. He is chiefly notable for the Dred Scott decision, in 1857, in which he held that a negro was not a "person" in the contemplation of the Constitution, and hence "had no rights a white man was bound to respect;" that the Constitution recognized property in slaves, and that this ownership was as much entitled to protection in the Territories as any other species of property. According to this, all legislation by Congress on slavery, except in its aid, was unconstitutional.

Henry Clay was the "great compromiser." The aim of his life was the preservation of the Union even at the cost of extending slave territory. The three compromises for which he is famous were the Missouri in 1820, the Tariff in 1833, and the California or "Omnibus" Compromise in 1850, the most conspicuous feature of which was the Fugitive Slave Law.

Page 257. S. J. Court.

At the beginning of Lincoln's administration, five of the Supreme Court Justices, an absolute majority, were from the South, and had always been State-rights Democrats.

Page 259. The Law-'n'-Order Party of ole Cincinnati.

In Cincinnati, on March 24, 1862, Wendell Phillips, while attempting to deliver one of his lectures on slavery and the war, was attacked by a mob and very roughly handled.

Page 267. Gov'nor Seymour.

Horatio Seymour (1810-1886), of Utica, New York, was one of the most prominent and respected men in the Democratic party, and a bitter opponent of Lincoln. He had at this time been recently elected Governor of New York on a platform that denounced almost every measure the government had found it necessary to adopt for the suppression of the Rebellion. His influence contributed not a little to the encouragement of that spirit which inspired the Draft Riot in the city of New York in July, 1863.

Page 268. Pres'dunt's proclamation.

In the autumn of 1862 Mr. Lincoln saw that he must either retreat or advance boldly against slavery. He had already proceeded far enough against it to rouse a dangerous hostility among Northern Democrats, and yet not far enough to injure the institution or enlist the sympathy of pronounced anti-slavery men. He determined on decisive action. On September 22, 1862, he issued a monitory proclamation giving notice that on the first day of the next year he would, in the exercise of his war-power, emancipate all slaves of those States or parts of States in rebellion, unless certain conditions were complied with. This proclamation was at once violently assailed by the Democrats, led by such men as Seymour, and for a time the opposition threatened disaster to the administration. The elections in the five leading free States — New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois — went against the Republicans. But with the aid of New England, the West, and, not least of all, the Border Slave States, the President was assured a majority of about twenty in the new House to carry out his abolition policy.

The incident furnishing the occasion for this poem was a Virginia duel, or rather a free fight. Mr. H. R. Pollard, of the Richmond Examiner, had some difficulty with Messrs. Coleman and N. P. Tyler, of the Enquirer, concerning the public printing. On Friday, January 5, 1866, all three gentlemen met in the rotunda of the Virginia Capitol, and proceeded to settle their dispute by an appeal to revolvers. Six shots were fired, but no damage resulted, except to a marble statue of Washington.

John Letcher (1813-1884), a Virginia lawyer and politician, was several times in Congress, and was Governor of his State from 1860 to 1864. John B. Floyd (1805-1863) was Governor of Virginia from 1849 to 1852, Secretary of War in Buchanan's Cabinet, and a brigadier in the Confederate service. William Smith, of King George County, Virginia, was the proprietor of an old line of coaches running through Virginia and the Carolinas. He was called "Extra billy" because he charged extra for every package, large or small, which his passengers carried. Mr. Smith himself, however, attributed his nickname to his extra service to the State. He was several times a Congressman, twice Governor of Virginia, and a Confederate Brigadier-General.

Page 281. Seward.

Under the influence of Mr. Seward, President Andrew Johnson developed a policy of reconstruction directly opposed to the views of Congress and the mass of the Republican party. He believed in punishing individuals, if necessary, but that all the States ought to be re-installed at once in the position they had occupied in 1860. The guarantees against disloyalty he proposed to exact from the South were few and feeble. Congress, on the other hand, determined to keep the subdued States in a position somewhat resembling that of territories and under military surveillance until it could be satisfied that four years' war would not be without good results. Its chief aim was to secure the safety of the negro, who had been freed by the thirteenth Amendment in December, 1865. These differences of plan led to a protracted and bitter contest between the executive and legislative departments, culminating in the unsuccessful attempt to impeach Johnson in March, 1868. The Congressional policy was carried out over the President's vetoes. Among other conditions the Southern States were required to ratify the fourteenth and fifteenth Amendments, giving citizenship and suffrage to the blacks, before being qualified for readmission to the Union.

Page 283. Mac.

General George B. McClellan was one of the leaders of the Northern Democracy during the war, and the presidential nominee against Lincoln in 1864.

Page 284. Johnson's speech an' veto message.

The Civil Rights Act of March, 1866, had just been the occasion of an open rupture between Congress and the President. The bill, conferring extensive rights on freedmen, passed both Houses, but was vetoed by Johnson. It was quickly passed again over his veto.

Page 284. A temp'ry party can be based on 't.

Johnson's plan of reconstruction did, indeed, furnish the material for the next Democratic platform in the presidential campaign of 1868.

John Tyler, who had been chosen Vice-President in 1840, succeeded to the Presidency on the death of Harrison one month after the inauguration. He abandoned the policy of the party that elected him, and provoked just such a contest with it as Johnson did.

[Lowell entered this poem in his several editions as addressed to J. F. H., initials which meant nothing to the general public, but recalled to the contemporaries of his college days a Virginian gentleman, a graduate of Harvard of the class of 1840, greatly endeared by his temper and gifts to his early associates and especially to Lowell. Not long after his graduation he went to Germany to study; he disappeared from sight, turning up at odd times in odd places. He did much various study and had much varied experience. After many years he returned home. When the war broke out he joined the Confederate army as a surgeon, and died worn out with hard service in 1862.]

["To show you that I am not unable to go along with you in the feeling expressed in your letter, I will copy a few verses out of my common-place book.

Yes, faith is a goodly anchor
When the skies are blue and clear;
At the bows it hangs right stalwart With a sturdy iron cheer.

But when the ship goes to pieces,
And the tempests are all let loose,
It rushes plumb down to the sea-depths,
'Mid slimy sea-weed and ooze.

Better then one spar of memory,
One broken plank of the past,
For our human hearts to cling to,
Adrift in the whirling vast.

To the spirit the cross of the spirit,
To the flesh its blind despair,
Clutching fast the thin-worn locket
With its threads of gossamer hair.

O friend! thou reasonest bravely, Thy preaching is wise and true;
But the earth that stops my darling's ears Makes mine insensate, too.

That little shoe in the corner,
So worn and wrinkled and brown,
With its emptiness confutes you,
And argues your wisdom down.

"But enough, dear Sydney, of death and sorrow. They are not subjects which I think it profitable or wise to talk about, think about, or write about often. Death is a private tutor. We have no fellow-scholars, and must lay our lessons to heart alone." Lowell to Sydney Howard Gay, March 17, 1850.]

["Now for Ruskin's criticisms. As to words,

I am something of a purist, though I like best the word that best says the thing. (You know I have studied lingo a little.) I am fifty-one years old, however, and have in one sense won my spurs. I claim the right now and then to knight a plebeian word for good service in the field. But it will almost always turn out that it has after all good blood in its veins, and can prove its claim to be put in the saddle. Rote is a familiar word all along our seaboard to express that dull and continuous burden of the sea heard inland before or after a great storm. The root of the word may be in rumpere, but it is more likely in rotare, from the identity of this sea-music with that of the rote—a kind of hurdy-gurdy with which the jongleurs accompanied their song. It is one of those Elizabethan words which we New-Englanders have preserved along with so many others. It occurs in the 'Mirror for Magistrates,' 'the sea's rote,' which Nares, not understanding, would change to rore! It is not to be found in any provincial glossary, but I caught it alive at Beverly and the Isles of Shoals. Like 'mobbled queen,' 'tis 'good.'

"Whiff Ruskin calls 'an American elevation of English lower word.' Not a bit of it. I have always thought 'the whiff and wind of his fell sword' in 'Hamlet' rather fine than otherwise. Ben also has the word. Downshod means shod with down. I doubted about this word myself—but I wanted it. As to misgave, the older poets used it as an active verb, and I have done with it as all poets do with language. My meaning is clear, and that is the main point. His objection to 'spume-sliding down the baffled decuman' I do not understand. I think if he will read over his 'ridiculous Germanism' (p. 13 seq.) with the context he will see that he has misunderstood me. (By the way, 'in our life alone doth Nature live' is Coleridge's, not Wordsworth's.) I never hesitate to say anything I have honestly felt because some one may have said it before, for it will always get a new color from the new mind, but here I was not saying the same thing by a great deal. Nihil in intellectu quod non prius in sensu would be nearer—though not what I meant. Nature (inanimate), which is the image of the mind, sympathizes with all our moods. I would have numbered the lines as Ruskin suggests, only it looks as if one valued them too much. That sort of thing should be posthumous. You may do it for me, my dear Charles, if my poems survive me. Two dropt stitches I must take up which I notice on looking over what I have written. Ruskin surely remembers Carlyle's 'whiff of grape-shot.' That is one. The other is that rote may quite as well be from the Icelandic hriota = to snore; but my studies more and more persuade me that where there is in English a Teutonic and a Romance root meaning the same thing, the two are apt to melt into each other so as to make it hard to say from which our word comes." . . . Letters II., pp. 65-67.]

[The correspondence concerning this poem with the original form of the verses is here given in detail.]

TO R. W. GILDER.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
LONDON, September 4, 1881.

Dear Mr. Gilder, — Your telegram scared me, for, coming at an unusual hour, I thought it brought ill news from Washington. My relief on finding it innocent has perhaps made me too good-natured towards the verses I send you, but I have waited sixty-two years for them, and am willing to wait as many more (not here) before they are printed. Do what you like with them. They mean only my hearty good-will towards you and my hope for your success in your new undertaking. . . .

Faithfully yours, J. R. LOWELL.

If I could see the proofs, very likely I could better it — they sober one and bring one to his bearings. Perhaps the metaphysical (or whatever they are) stanzas — what I mean is moralizing — were better away. Perhaps too many compound epithets — but I had to give up "visionary" in order to save "legendary," which was essential. Perhaps a note, saying that so long as the author can remember, a pair of these birds (give ornithological name — muscipapa?) have built on jutting brick in an archway leading to the house at Elmwood — or does everybody know what a phæbe is? I am so old that I am accustomed to people's being ignorant of whatever you please.

PHÆBE

Ere pales in heaven the morning star,
A bird, the loneliest of its kind,
Hears Dawn's faint footfall from afar
While all its mates are dumb and blind.

It is a wee sad-colored thing,
As shy and secret as a maid,
That, ere in choir the robins ring,
Pipes its own name like one afraid.

It seems pain-prompted to repeat
The story of some ancient ill,
But Phæbe! Phæbe! sadly sweet
Is all it says, and then is still.

It calls and listens. Earth and sky,
Hushed by the pathos of its fate,
Listen, breath held, but no reply Comes from its doom-divided mate.

Phæbe! it calls and calls again,
And Ovid, could he but have heard,
Had hung a legendary pain
About the memory of the bird;

A pain articulate so long
In penance of some mouldered crime
Whose ghost still flies the Furies' throng
Down the waste solitudes of Time;

Or waif from young Earth's wonder-hour
When gods found mortal maidens fair,
And will malign was joined with power
Love's kindly laws to overbear.

Phæbe! is all it has to say
In plaintive cadence o'er and o'er,
Like children that have lost their way
And know their names, but nothing more.

Is it a type, since nature's lyre
Vibrates to every note in man,
Of that insatiable desire,
Meant to be so, since life began?

Or a flegged satire, sent to rasp Their jaded sense, who, tired so soon With shifting life's doll-dresses, grasp, Gray-bearded babies, at the moon?

I, in strange lands at gray of dawn
Wakeful, have heard that fruitless plaint
Through Memory's chambers deep withdrawn
Renew its iterations faint.

So nigh! yet from remotest years
It seems to draw its magic, rife
With longings unappeased and tears
Drawn from the very source of life.

TO THE SAME.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
LONDON, September 5, 1881.

Dear Mr. Gilder, — I sent off the verses yesterday, and now write in great haste to say that in my judgment the stanza beginning "Or waif from young Earth's," etc., were better away. Also for "doom-divided" print "doom-dissevered." I have not had time to mull over the poem as I should like.

Faithfully yours, J. R. LOWELL.

P. S. I may write in a day or two suppressing more, after I have had time to think.

TO THE SAME.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
LONDON, September 6, 1881.

Dear Mr. Gilder, — I bother you like a boy with his first essay in verse. I wrote yesterday to ask the omission of a stanza — but last night, being sleepless, as old fellows like me are too often apt to be, I contrived to make a stanza which had been tongue-tied say what I wished.

Let it go thus,

Waif of the young World's wonder-hour
.....
..... to overbear, (comma).

Then go on —

Like Progne, did it feel the stress
And coil of the prevailing words
Close round its being and compress
Man's ampler nature to a bird's?

This manages the transition, which was ~~wanted~~ in. Perhaps this might follow: —

One only memory left of all
The motley crowd of vanished scenes,
Hers — and vain impulse to recall
By repetition what it means.

Faithfully yours,
J. R. LOWELL.

TO THE SAME.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
LONDON, September 8, 1881.

Dear Mr. Gilder, — This is positively the last! I wish to omit the stanza beginning "Or a winged satire," etc. I have been convinced by a friend whom I have consulted that it was a cuckoo's egg in my nest. Item. The verse that bothered me most of all was this:

Listen, breath held, but no reply, etc.

I wished to have a distinct pause after "listen," in accordance with the sense. Somehow I could not get the right, and "breath held" was clearly the wrong one, awkward, and with the same vowel sound in both halves. Print —

Listen : no whisper of reply
Is heard of doom-dissevered mate.

No; that won't do, either, with its assonance of "heard" and "dissevered" — so, though I prefer "dissevered" for sense, I will go back to the original word "divided," which I suppose was instinctive.

This is positively my last dying speech and confession. You need fear nothing more from me. I fancy you ducking your head for fear of another rap every time the postman comes.

I hope you will like my little poem, and tell me so if you don't. Kindest regards to Mrs. Gilder.

Faithfully yours,
J. R. LOWELL.

TO THE SAME.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
LONDON, September 12, 1881.

... As I am writing, I add that if you think (as I am half inclined)

No whisper of reply
Comes from its doom-dissevered mate better than the other reading, print it so.

Faithfully yours,
J. R. LOWELL.

P. S. We are sadly anxious to-day about the President.

TO THE SAME.

HOTEL DANIELI, VENICE, October 24, 1881.

... Thank you for the printed copy. Of course I am disgusted with it. Print somehow is like a staring plaster-cast compared with the soft and flowing outlines, the modest nudity of the manuscript clay. But it is a real pleasure to me that you like it.

"Robins ring" is right, and whenever you spend a June night at Elmwood (as I hope you will so soon as I am safe there once more) you will recognize its truth. There are hundreds of 'em going at once, like the bells here last night (Sunday), with a perfect indecency of disregard for rhythm or each other. Mr. Burroughs, I hear, has been criticising my knowledge of out-doors. God bless his soul! I had been living in the country thirty years (I fancy it must be) before he was born, and if anybody ever lived in the open air it was I. So be at peace. By the way, I took Progne merely because she was changed into a little bird. I should have preferred a male, and was thinking of a fellow (transformed, I think by Medea), but can't remember his name. While I am about it I question "wee." Is it English? I had no dictionary at hand. But there is one atrocity — "moldered." Why do you give in to these absurdities? Why abscond in to this petty creek from the great English main of orthography? 'Tis not quite so bad as "I don't know as" for "I don't know that," but grazes it and is of a piece with putting one's knife in one's mouth.]
